

MISSISSIPPI CODE 1972

Annotated

COURT RULES

MISSISSIPPI RULES ANNOTATED

2012 EDITION

For additional copies, please visit our online bookstore at www.lexisnexis.com/bookstore or call customer service at 800-533-1637

Item # 44510

LexisNexis®

LexisNexis and the Knowledge Burst logo are registered trademarks of Reed Elsevier Properties Inc., used under license.
© 2012 LexisNexis, a division of Reed Elsevier Inc. All rights reserved.

Digitized by the Internet Archive
in 2013

http://archive.org/details/govlawmscode1972court

MISSISSIPPI CODE

1972

ANNOTATED

ADOPTED AS THE OFFICIAL CODE OF THE
STATE OF MISSISSIPPI
BY THE
1972 SESSION OF THE LEGISLATURE

COURT RULES

2012 Edition

Prepared by the Editorial Staff of the Publisher

LexisNexis®

QUESTIONS ABOUT THIS PUBLICATION?

For EDITORIAL QUESTIONS concerning this publication, or REPRINT PERMISSION, please call:
800-833-9844

For CUSTOMER SERVICE ASSISTANCE concerning replacement pages, shipments, billing or other matters please call:

Customer Service Department at	800-833-9844
Outside the United States and Canada	518-421-3000
FAX	518-421-3854

For INFORMATION ON OTHER MATTHEW BENDER PUBLICATIONS, please call:

Your account manager or	800-223-1940
Outside the United States and Canada	518-487-3000

Copyright © 2012
by
THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI
and
Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.
a member of the LexisNexis Group

All rights reserved.

LexisNexis and the Knowledge Burst logo are registered trademarks, and Michie is a trademark of Reed Elsevier Properties, Inc., used under license. Matthew Bender is a registered trademark of Matthew Bender Properties, Inc.

4459023

ISBN 978-0-7698-5208-9

Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.
701 E. Water Street, Charlottesville, VA 22902-5389
www.lexisnexis.com

(Pub.44510)

PREFACE

Use of 2012 Edition; format.

The 2012 Edition of the Mississippi Court Rules Annotated is a publication of LexisNexis. It has been edited, annotated and indexed by the staff of the publishers. It is published in soft cover and is replaced annually. All changes and additions to the Rules, the official Comments and Notes, and the Forms are reflected in each year's edition and the annotations are reviewed and updated, providing the user with the most current and useful information.

This edition includes the rules of the State and local courts, as well as the rules of federal courts in and for the State of Mississippi. The Table of Contents in this edition contains a complete listing of all of the Rules. In addition, each set of Rules contains its own table of contents and index.

The Court Rules are intended to accompany the Mississippi Code of 1972 Annotated. The format and style of the Code has been adhered to as closely as possible for purposes of consistency and for the convenience of the users of the Rules.

Scope of rules and annotations.

This edition includes all changes and additions to the Rules, the official Comments and Notes, and the Forms that have taken place since their initial issuance up to and including August 2, 2012. In addition, notes construing the Rules have been taken from the reports of decisions of the local and federal courts in cases arising in Mississippi since the issuance of the Rules.

To better serve our customers by making our annotations more current, LexisNexis has changed the sources that are read to create annotations for this publication. Rather than waiting for cases to appear in printed reporters, we now read court decisions as they are released by the courts. A consequence of this more current reading of cases, as they are posted online on LexisNexis, is that the most recent cases annotated may not yet have print reporter citations. These will be provided as they become available through later publications.

This publication contains annotations taken from decisions of the Mississippi Supreme Court and Court of Appeals and decisions of the appropriate federal courts. These cases will be printed in the following reporters:

Southern Reporter, 3rd Series
United States Supreme Court Reports
Supreme Court Reporter
United States Supreme Court Reports, Lawyers' Edition, 2nd Series
Federal Reporter, 3rd Series
Federal Supplement, 2nd Series
Federal Rules Decisions
Bankruptcy Reporter

Additionally, annotations have been taken from the following sources:

American Law Reports, 6th Series

American Law Reports, Federal Series
Mississippi College Law Review
Mississippi Law Journal

Finally, published opinions of the Attorney General and opinions of the Ethics Commission have been examined for annotations.

Among the annotations are Editor's notes inserted by the publisher's editorial staff to explain references, call attention to obvious errors, inconsistencies or ambiguities in the Rules, the official Comments, Notes, and Forms, and to alert users to suggested new rules and introduce major changes. Also, when necessary brackets have been inserted around material in the text to correct misspellings, punctuation or language errors and incorrect references to the Rules, sections of the Code, titles of positions, or names of institutions.

Amendments, additions, changes, and revisions of rules.

Amendments, additions, changes, and revisions received since the March 2012 Supplement of the Mississippi Court Rules are to the following:

Appellate Rules of Procedure

Rule 6, 22, 28, 29, 31, 32, and 46

Information, suggestions, comments, and questions.

Visit the LexisNexis website at http://www.lexisnexis.com for an online bookstore, technical support, customer service, and other company information.

For further information or assistance, please call us toll free at (800) 833-9844, fax us toll free at (800) 643-1280, email us at customer.support@bender.com, or write to: Mississippi Editor, LexisNexis, 701 E. Water Street, Charlottesville, VA 22902-5389.

October 2012 LexisNexis

USER'S GUIDE

This guide is designed to help both lawyer and layperson get the most out of the Mississippi Court Rules Annotated. Information about key features of the Court Rules and suggestions for their more effective use are given under the following headings:

—General Information
—Analyses
—Attorney General Opinions
—Cross References
—Editor's Notes
—Index
—Judicial Decisions
—Research and Practice References

If you have a question not addressed by the User's Guide, or comments about the Court Rules, you may contact us by calling us toll free at (800) 833-9844, faxing us toll free at (800) 643-1280, e-mailing us at customer.support@bender.com, or writing to Mississippi Editor, LexisNexis, 701 E. Water Street, Charlottesville, VA 22902-5389.

GENERAL INFORMATION

The Mississippi Court Rules are published by LexisNexis in a fully-annotated softcover volume, which is replaced annually and supplemented semi-annually.

The Court Rules volume contains statewide rules of procedure of the state courts, the local rules of the United States district courts and bankruptcy courts for Mississippi, and the rules of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. Rules are received from the courts and are edited only for stylistic consistency.

ANALYSES

Each set of rules is preceded by an analysis. The analysis details the scope of the set and enables the user to see at a glance the content of the unit without resorting to a page-by-page examination of the Rules volume or supplement.

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

Opinions of the attorney general for the state of Mississippi have been read for constructions of Mississippi law. Notes describing the subject matter of the opinions have been placed under relevant rules under the heading "Attorney General Opinions." The citation at the end of each note includes the name of the person requesting the opinion, the date of the opinion, and the opinion number.

CROSS REFERENCES

Cross references refer the user to other statutes or rules that may affect a rule or give it context. Cross references do not cite all related rules, as these can be identified by using the indexes following each set of rules.

EDITOR'S NOTES

Editor's notes are notes prepared by the Publisher that contain information about important or unusual features of a rule not apparent from the rule's text, or special circumstances surrounding enactment or amendment of the rule.

INDEX

Each set of rules is immediately followed by an index. As accurate and thorough as the indexes are, there is no such thing as an index that is affordable, convenient, and perfect. Your best defense against index wild goose chases is familiarity with indexing techniques. To that end, an explanatory foreword to the index appears in the first volume of the Index to the Mississippi Code of 1972 Annotated.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Every reported case from the Supreme Court of Mississippi, the Court of Appeals of Mississippi, federal district courts for Mississippi, the federal Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals and the United States Supreme Court has been read for constructions of Mississippi law. These constructions are noted under pertinent rules, under the heading "Judicial Decisions." Where a decision has been reviewed by a higher court, subsequent judicial history and disposition is noted in the case note if such disposition has any bearing on the annotated material. Where two or more decisions state the same rule of law, the case citations may be cumulated under one case note.

Case notes are grouped together under headings called "catchlines." The catchlines identify the basic subject matter of the case notes and assist the user in locating pertinent notes.

RESEARCH AND PRACTICE REFERENCES

Citations to references in American Jurisprudence, American Jurisprudence Pleading and Practice, American Jurisprudence Proof of Facts, American Jurisprudence Trials, American Law Reports, First through Sixth Series, ALR Federal, Corpus Juris Secundum, various treatises and practice guides, and Mississippi law journals are given under this heading, wherever the references appear to discuss the rule under which the citation appears, or a topic related to the rule.

These citations are intended only as a starting point for library research. The Mississippi law journals include Mississippi Law Journal and Mississippi College Law Review.

Contents

Page

Rules of Civil Procedure 1
Index 423
Rules of Evidence 439
Index 807
Rules of Appellate Procedure 815
Index 969
Uniform Rules of Circuit and County Court Practice 979
Index 1163
Uniform Chancery Court Rules 1173
Index 1241
Uniform Rules of Procedure for Justice Court 1247
Index 1261
Uniform Rules of Youth Court Practice 1265
Index 1347
Rules of Professional Conduct 1357
Index 1481
Rules of Discipline for the Mississippi State Bar 1489
Index 1535
Rules Governing Admission to the Mississippi Bar 1537
Index 1575
Rules and Regulations for Mandatory Continuing Legal Education 1579
Index 1591
Code of Judicial Conduct 1593
Index 1661
Rules of the Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance 1665
Index 1679
Rules and Regulations for Mandatory Continuing Judicial Education ... 1681
Index 1689
Rules and Regulations Governing Certified Court Reporters 1691
Index 1717
Court Annexed Mediation Rules for Civil Litigation 1719
Index 1729
Rules and Regulations for Certification and Continuing Education for Mississippi Court Administrators 1731
Index 1735
Rules for Electronic and Photographic Coverage of Judicial Proceedings 1737
Index 1743
Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure with Fifth Circuit Rules and Internal Operating Procedures 1745
Index 1851
Rules for Judicial-Conduct and Judicial-Disability Proceedings 1877
Index 1903
Uniform Local Rules of the United States District Courts for the Northern and Southern Districts of Mississippi 1913

Index 1997
Uniform Local Rules of the United States Bankruptcy Courts for the Northern and Southern Districts of Mississippi 2011
Index 2087

QUICK ACCESS GUIDE

To use the Quick Access Guide bend the book so that the black margin markers are visible and follow the pointer to the page with the corresponding margin marker.

Rules of Civil Procedure ..... (p. 1) ▶

Rules of Evidence ..... (p. 439) ▶

Rules of Appellate Procedure ..... (p. 815) ▶

Uniform Rules of Circuit and County Court Practice ..... (p. 979) ▶

Uniform Chancery Court Rules ..... (p. 1173) ▶

Uniform Rules of Procedure for Justice Court ..... (p. 1247) ▶

Uniform Rules of Youth Court Practice ..... (p. 1265) ▶

Rules of Professional Conduct ..... (p. 1357) ▶

Rules of Discipline for the Mississippi State Bar ..... (p. 1489) ▶

Rules Governing Admission to the Mississippi State Bar ..... (p. 1537) ▶

Rules and Regulations for Mandatory Continuing Legal Education ..... (p. 1579) ▶

Code of Judicial Conduct ..... (p. 1593) ▶

Rules of the Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance (p. 1665) ▶

QUICK ACCESS GUIDE (continued)

To use the Quick Access Guide bend the book so that the black margin markers are visible and follow the pointer to the page with the corresponding margin marker.

Rules and Regulations for Mandatory Continuing Judicial Education ..... (p. 1681) ▶

Rules and Regulations Governing Certified Court Reporters ... (p. 1691) ▶

Court Annexed Mediation Rules for Civil Litigation ..... (p. 1719) ▶

Rules and Regulations for Certification and Continuing Education for Mississippi Court Administrators ..... (p. 1731) ▶

Rules for Electronic and Photographic Coverage of Judicial Proceedings ..... (p. 1737) ▶

Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure and Fifth Circuit Rules and Internal Operating Procedures ..... (p. 1745) ▶

Fifth Circuit Rules Governing Complaints of Judicial Misconduct or Disability ..... (p. 1877) ▶

Uniform Local Rules of the United States District Courts for the Northern and Southern Districts of Mississippi ..... (p. 1913) ▶

Uniform Local Rules of the United States Bankruptcy Courts for the Northern and Southern Districts of Mississippi ..... (p. 2011) ▶

MISSISSIPPI RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE

Adopted Effective January 1, 1982

ORDER ADOPTING THE MISSISSIPPI RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE.

CHAPTER I. SCOPE OF RULES—ONE FORM OF ACTION

Rule
1. Scope of rules.
2. One form of action.

CHAPTER II. COMMENCEMENT OF ACTION: SERVICE OF PROCESS, PLEADINGS, MOTIONS, AND ORDERS

3. Commencement of action.
4. Summons.
5. Service and filing of pleadings and other papers.
6. Time.

CHAPTER III. PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS

7. Pleadings allowed; form of motions.
8. General rules of pleading.
9. Pleading special matters.
10. Form of pleadings.
11. Signing of pleadings and motions.
12. Defenses and objections — when and how presented — by pleading or motion — motion for judgment on the pleadings.
13. Counter-claim and cross-claim.
14. Third-party practice.
15. Amended and supplemental pleadings.
16. Pre-trial procedure.
16A. Motions for recusal of judges.

CHAPTER IV. PARTIES

17. Parties plaintiff and defendant; capacity.
18. Joinder of claims and remedies.
19. Joinder of persons needed for just adjudication.
20. Permissive joinder of parties.
21. Misjoinder and nonjoinder of parties.
22. Interpleader.
23. Class actions. [Omitted].
23.1. Derivative actions by shareholders. [Omitted].
23.2. Actions relating to unincorporated associations. [Omitted].
24. Intervention.
25. Substitution of parties.

CHAPTER V. DEPOSITIONS AND DISCOVERY

26. General provisions governing discovery.
27. Depositions before action or pending appeal.
28. Persons before whom depositions may be taken.
29. Stipulations regarding discovery procedure.
30. Depositions upon oral examination.
31. Depositions upon written questions.
32. Use of depositions in court proceedings.
33. Interrogatories to parties.

Rule
34. Production of documents and things and entry upon land for inspection and other purposes.
35. Physical and mental examinations of persons.
36. Requests for admission.
37. Failure to make or cooperate in discovery: sanctions.

CHAPTER VI. TRIALS

38. Jury trial of right.
39. Trial by jury or by the court. [Omitted].
40. Assignment of cases for trial.
41. Dismissal of actions.
42. Consolidation: separate trials.
43. Taking of testimony.
44. Proof of documents.
44.1. Determination of foreign law. [Omitted].
45. Subpoena.
46. Exceptions unnecessary.
47. Jurors.
48. Juries and jury verdicts.
49. General verdicts and special verdicts.
50. Motions for a directed verdict and for judgment notwithstanding the verdict.
51. Instructions to jury.
52. Findings by the court.
53. Masters, referees, and commissioners.

CHAPTER VII. JUDGMENT

54. Judgments; costs.
55. Default.
56. Summary judgment.
57. Declaratory judgments.
58. Entry of judgment.
59. New trials; amendment of judgments.
60. Relief from judgment or order.
61. Harmless error.
62. Stay of proceedings to enforce a judgment.
63. Disability of a judge.

CHAPTER VIII. PROVISIONAL AND FINAL REMEDIES AND SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS

64. Seizure of person or property.
65. Injunctions.
65.1. Security: proceedings against sureties.
66. Receivers.
67. Deposit in court.
68. Offer of judgment.
69. Execution.
70. Judgment for specific acts; vesting title.
71. Process in behalf of and against persons not parties.
71A. Eminent domain. [Reserved].

CHAPTER IX. APPEALS

72 to 76. [Omitted].

Rule

CHAPTER X. COURTS AND CLERKS

77. Courts and clerks.
78. Motion practice.
79. Books and records kept by the clerk and entries therein.
80. Stenographic report or transcript as evidence. [Omitted].
81. Applicability of rules.

CHAPTER XI. GENERAL PROVISIONS

82. Jurisdiction and venue.
83. Local court rules.
84. Forms.
85. Title.

APPENDIX A. FORMS

Form
1A. Summons.
1AA. Summons.
1B. Notice and acknowledgement for service by mail.
1C. Summons by publication.
1D. Rule 81 Summons.
1DD. Rule 81 Summons.
1E. Waiver of process.
2. Complaint on a promissory note.
3. Complaint on covenant or agreement.
4. Complaint for specific performance.
5. Complaint on an open account.
6. Complaint on account stated.
7. Complaint for goods sold and delivered.
8. Complaint for work and labor done.
9. Complaint for money lent.
10. Complaint for money paid by mistake.
11. Complaint for money had and received.
12. Complaint for money paid by plaintiff for defendant.
13. Complaint on a policy of life insurance.
14. Complaint on a policy of fire insurance.
15. Complaint for negligence or wantonness.
16. Complaint for assault and battery.
17. Complaint for false imprisonment.
18. Complaint for malicious prosecution.
19. Complaint for fraud.
20. Complaint on a warranty.
21. Complaint for conversion.
22. Motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12 (b).
23. Answer presenting defenses under Rule 12 (b).
24. Motion to bring in third-party defendant.
25. Third-party complaint.
26. Motion to intervene as a defendant under Rule 24.
27. Motion to drop defendant or for severance of claims.
28. Motion by defendant for severance of claims of several plaintiffs.
29. Motion by plaintiff to add defendant.
30. Motion by defendant to bring in additional defendant.
31. Motion by defendant to add additional plaintiff.
32. Answer to complaint set forth in Form 11 with counter-claim for interpleader.
33. Plaintiff's motion for substitution — Deceased party defendant.

Form
34. Pre-trial order.
35. Motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or in the alternative, for new trial.
36. Application to clerk for entry of default and supporting affidavit.
37. Docket of entry of default.
38. Default judgment entered by court.

APPENDIX B. STATUTES AFFECTED

APPENDIX C. TIME TABLE FOR PROCEEDINGS UNDER THE MISSISSIPPI RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE

Cross References — Practice and procedure provisions common to courts, see Mississippi Code of 1972 §§ 11-1-1 et seq.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Practice References. USCS Federal Rules of Civil Procedure Set (Matthew Bender).

Edward I. Niles, Federal Civil Procedure, Third Edition (Michie).

ORDER ADOPTING THE MISSISSIPPI RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE.

SUPREME COURT OF MISSISSIPPI

Pursuant to the inherent authority vested in this Court by the Constitution of the State of Mississippi, as discussed in Cecil Newell, Jr. v. State of Mississippi, 308 So.2d 71 (Miss.1975), to promote justice, uniformity, and the efficiency of courts, the rules attached hereto are adopted and promulgated as Rules of Practice and Procedure in all Chancery, Circuit, and County Courts of this State in all civil actions filed on and after January 1, 1982, any and all statutes and court rules previously adopted to the contrary notwithstanding, and in the event of a conflict between these rules and any statute or court rule previously adopted these rules shall control.

The Clerk of this Court is authorized and directed to spread this order and the rules attached hereto at large on the minutes of the Court, and the Clerk is further authorized and directed to forward a certified copy thereof to West Publishing Company for publication in a forthcoming edition of Southern Reporter, Mississippi Cases, the official publication of decisions of this Court.

ORDERED, this the 26th day of May, 1981.

FOR THE COURT
Neville Patterson,
Chief Justice

CHAPTER I. SCOPE OF RULES—ONE FORM OF ACTION

Rule 1. Scope of rules.

These rules govern procedure in the circuit courts, chancery courts, and county courts in all suits of a civil nature, whether cognizable as cases at law or in equity, subject to certain limitations enumerated in Rule 81; however, even those enumerated proceedings are still subject to these rules where no statute applicable to the proceedings provides otherwise or sets forth procedures inconsistent with these rules. These rules shall be construed to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action.

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 1 is to state the scope and applicability of the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure and the basic philosophical principle for their judicial construction.

Rule 1 must be considered together with Rule 81 to determine the applicability of the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure to civil practice in Mississippi. Generally, all civil actions in the circuit, chancery, and county courts are subject to the application of the rules; exceptions are listed in Rule 81. The excepted civil actions are governed by procedures stated in the statutes pertaining to those actions.

It is intended that these rules be applied as liberally to civil actions as is judicially feasible, whether in actions at law or in equity. However, nothing in the rules should be interpreted as abridging or modifying the traditional separations of jurisdiction between the law courts and equity courts in Mississippi.

The rules apply irrespective of the nature of the parties to the action, including the state of Mississippi or any political subdivision thereof. It is established law in Mississippi that where a statute permits the state or a subdivision thereof to be brought into court as a litigant, it is subject to the same procedural rules as is any other party. Humphreys County v. Cashin, 128 Miss. 236, 90 So. 888 (1922), Bolivar County v. Bank of Cleveland, 170 Miss. 555, 561, 155 So. 176, 177 (1934) (Ethridge, J., dissenting).

The salient provision of Rule 1 is the statement that "These rules shall be construed to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action." There probably is no provision in these rules more important than this mandate: It reflects the spirit in which the rules were conceived and written and in which they should be interpreted. The primary purpose of procedural rules should be to promote the ends of justice; these rules reflect the view that this goal can be best accomplished by the establishment of a single form of action, known as a "civil action," thereby uniting the procedures in law and equity through a simplified procedure that minimizes technicalities and places considerable discretion in the trial judge for construing the rules in a manner that will secure their objectives.

Properly utilized, the rules will tend to discourage battles over mere form and to sweep away needless procedural controversies that either delay a trial on the merits or deny a party his day in court because of technical deficiencies. The mandate in the final sentence of Rule 1 is only one of a number of similar admonitions scattered throughout the rules directing that the rules be interpreted liberally in order that the procedural framework in which litigation is conducted promotes the ends of justice and facilitates decisions on the merits, rather than determinations on technicalities. See, e. g., Miss. Code Ann. § 11-5-13 (1972) (statute setting forth requirements of bill of complaint). Perhaps the most important of these statements is the provision of Rule 61 which directs that "the court at every stage of the proceeding must disregard any error or defect in the proceeding which does not affect the substantial rights of the parties."

The keystone to the effective functioning of the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure is, obviously, the discretion of the trial court. The rules grant considerable power to the judge and only provide general guidelines as to the manner in which it should be exercised. Accordingly, judges must view the rules with a firm understanding of the philosophy of the rules and must exercise a wise and sound discretion to effectuate the objective of the simplified procedure. The rules will remain a workable system only so long as trial judges exercise their discretion intelligently on a case-by-case basis; application of arbitrary rules of law to particular situations will have a debilitating effect on the overall system.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Applicability.

In general.

Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure were not mere suggestions or recommendations. Compliance was a requirement toward the end of securing the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action. Ensuring compliance with the rules was necessary, as a rule which is not enforced is no rule. Therefore, the suit of a widow who took no action of record for seven years was required to be dismissed under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(d). Ill. Cent. R.R. Co. v. Moore, 994 So. 2d 723 (Miss. 2008).

Because the Mississippi Employment Security Commission (MESC) was not a circuit, chancery or county court, the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure, particularly Miss. R. Civ. P. 6(e), were not applicable to its administrative hearings or appeals. Miss. Empl. Sec. Comm'n v. Parker, 903 So. 2d 42 (Miss. 2005).

In an action relating to waste disposal, a transfer to a chancery court was improper because equitable claims were not added until after the transfer, and the action had been pending in the circuit court for five years before the transfer was requested. Georgia-Pacific Corp. v. Mooney, 909 So. 2d 1081 (Miss. 2005).

Parties agreed that under the trial court's method of computation, service was complete on third party defendant one on day 130, and on third party defendant two on day 131. However, the appellate court found that although there was no good cause shown for the delay in service, the delay was relatively slight, and there was good cause for allowing the litigation to proceed; on the specific facts of the case, that was enough, and the trial court properly denied the third party defendants' motions to dismiss. Tunek v. Windham, 897 So. 2d 186 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 896 So. 2d 373 (Miss. 2005).

The Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure do not apply to administrative proceedings. Mississippi Real Estate Appraiser Licensing & Certification Bd. v. James, 730 So. 2d 1135 (Miss. 1999).

Applicability.

As the rules of civil procedure applied in all courts, and the rules controlled in the event of a conflict between a rule of procedure and a statute, the appellate court did not err in holding that a special master appointed under Miss. R. Civ. P. 53 was not subject to the oath in Miss. Code Ann. § 11-21-17. Dunaway v. Morgan, 918 So. 2d 872 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

When complaint seeking equitable relief was filed by the heirs of the original plaintiff more than 60 years after a chancellor's decree determined that the original plaintiff and his partner each owned a one-half interest in the land, and the heirs alleged that the original decree was a mistake or accident under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(2), the heirs' complaint was time-barred. R. N. Turnbow Oil Invs. v. McIntosh, 873 So. 2d 960 (Miss. 2004).

Rules of civil procedure did not apply to proceedings before the State Oil & Gas Board. State Oil & Gas Bd. v. McGowan, 542 So. 2d 244 (Miss. 1989).

Proceedings in an election contest before a political party's executive committee are not civil proceedings in a court of record, and hence Rules of Civil Procedure have no application; with respect to proceedings before special tribunal, Rules of Civil Procedure control only to extent that governing statute is silent. Shannon v. Henson, 499 So. 2d 758 (Miss. 1986).

Rule 2. One form of action.

There shall be one form of action to be known as "civil action."

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 2 is to eliminate the term "cause of action" from the lexicon of Mississippi civil practice. By substituting for "cause of action" the phrases "claim" or "claim for relief," these rules will give the courts of Mississippi the freedom and authority to deal pragmatically with any aggregate of operative facts which give rise to a right enforceable in the courts, consistent with the jurisdiction of the courts.

The prescription in Rule 2 that there shall be one form of action may be the most fundamental rule of all. A number of important consequences follow from Rule 2: Forms of action are abolished; most distinctions between chancery procedure and law procedure are eliminated; the significance of the term "cause of action," which formerly was a matter of serious dispute, has been eliminated. These rules will provide a procedural framework for all litigation in the trial courts of Mississippi. Except in certain limited instances enumerated in Rule 81, the civil action prescribed by these rules is the proper medium for exercising any civil power the chancery, circuit, or county courts in Mississippi may possess.

Rule 2 does not affect the various remedies that previously have been available in the courts of Mississippi. The abolition of the forms of action furnishes a single, uniform procedure by which a litigant may present his claim in an orderly manner to a court empowered to give him whatever relief is appropriate and just; the substantive and remedial principles that applied prior to the advent of these rules are not changed. What was an action at law before these rules is still an action founded on legal principles and what was a bill in equity before these rules is still a civil action founded on principles of equity.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Chancery court did not err in denying a motion filed by the mother of a decedent's child to set aside or amend an order disbursing funds, including attorneys' fees, from the settlement of a wrongful death action because the chancery court lacked jurisdiction to hear the motion; because the matter was not brought by complain but merely by a motion contested among the attorneys of the minor parties in the underlying action, tit would have been inappropriate procedurally for the chancellor to transfer the issue of attorneys' fees to the circuit court. In re Estate of Williams, 40 So. 3d 1282 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

In determining if a suit was barred by res judicata, identity of the cause of action was examined in light of Miss. R. Civ. P. 2, which required the court to look past the legal bases asserted and rely more on the factual and transactional relationship between the original action and the subsequent action. Parties and courts were to distinguish between what body of fact constituted a claim and what legal theories attached to that body of fact. Hill v. Carroll County, 17 So. 3d 1081 (Miss. 2009).

CHAPTER II. COMMENCEMENT OF ACTION: SERVICE OF PROCESS, PLEADINGS, MOTIONS, AND ORDERS

Rule 3. Commencement of action.

(a) Filing of complaint. A civil action is commenced by filing a complaint with the court. A costs deposit shall be made with the filing of the complaint, such deposit to be in the amount required by the applicable Uniform Rule governing the court in which the complaint is filed.

The amount of the required costs deposit shall become effective immediately upon promulgation of the applicable Uniform Court Rule and its approval by the Mississippi Supreme Court.

(b) Motion for security for costs. The plaintiff may be required on motion of the clerk or any party to the action to give security within sixty days after an order of the court for all costs accrued or to accrue in the action. The person making such motion shall state by affidavit that the plaintiff is a nonresident of the state and has not, as affiant believes, sufficient property in this state out of which costs can be made if adjudged against him; or if the plaintiff be a resident of the state, that he has good reason to believe and does believe, that such plaintiff cannot be made to pay the costs of the action if adjudged against him. When the affidavit is made by a defendant it shall state that affiant has, as he believes, a meritorious defense and that the affidavit is not made for delay; when the affidavit is made by one not a party defendant it shall state that it is not made at the instance of a party defendant. If the security be not given, the suit shall be dismissed and execution issued for the costs that have accrued; however, the court may, for good cause shown, extend the time for giving such security.

(c) Proceeding in forma pauperis. If a pauper's affidavit is filed in the action the costs deposit and security for costs may be waived. The court may, however, on the motion of any party, on the motion of the clerk of the court, or on its own initiative, examine the affiant as to the facts and circumstances of his pauperism.

(d) Accounting for costs. Within sixty days of the conclusion of an action, whether by dismissal or by final judgment, the clerk shall prepare an itemized statement of costs incurred in the action and shall submit the statement to the parties or, if represented, to their attorneys. If a refund of costs deposit is due, the clerk shall include payment with the statement; if additional costs are due, a bill for same shall accompany the statement. (Amended effective September 1, 1987; amended effective June 24, 1992.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective June 24, 1992, Rule 3(a) was amended to provide that before they are effective, the amounts of required costs deposits must be promulgated by Uniform Court Rule and approved by the Mississippi Supreme Court. 598-602 So. 2d XXI (West Miss. Cas. 1992).

Effective September 1, 1987, Rule 3(e) was amended by providing that the amount required as a deposit for filing suit shall be the amount required by the Uniform Rule governing the court in which the action is filed. 508-511 So. 2d XXV (West Miss. Cas. 1988).

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 3(a) is to establish a precise date for fixing the commencement of a civil action. The first step in a civil action is the filing of the complaint with the clerk or judge. Accord Bacon v. Gardner, 23 Miss. 60 (1851); see Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-33 (1972). Service of process upon the defendant is not essential to commencement of the action.

Ascertaining the precise date of commencement is important in determining whether an action has been brought prematurely, see Euclid-Mississippi v. Western Cas. & Sur. Co., 249 Miss. 547, 163 So.2d 676 (1964); whether it is barred by a statute of limitations, see Maddux v. Jones, 51 Miss. 631 (1875); and which of two or more courts in which actions involving the same parties and issues have been instituted should retain the case for disposition, absent special consideration; see Euclid-Mississippi v. Western Cas. & Sur. Co., supra. See also, Bacon v. Gardner, supra (statute of limitations not tolled when plaintiff filed complaint but requested that process not be issued); accord, Erving's Hatcheries, Inc. v. Garrott, 250 Miss. 701, 168 So.2d 52 (1964).

The provisions in Rule 3 pertaining to costs are intended to make uniform the assessing, accounting for, and refunding of costs. It is intended that there be no local variations from the costs deposit provision of Rule 3 (a); Rule 3 (b) provides ample latitude for requiring additional costs, and accords with prior Mississippi practice. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-53-5 (1972).

Rule 3 (c) accords with Miss. Code Ann. § 11-53-17 (1972) in allowing indigents to sue without depositing security for costs; however, the indigent affiant may be examined as to his financial condition and the court may, if the allegation of indigence is false, dismiss the action. Accord, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-53-19 (1972).

Rule 3 (d) requires that clerks promptly account for costs in all actions. It is intended that this provision will make uniform the procedure for refunding costs. Costs are an expense of individual parties — not their attorneys. Accordingly, unused costs deposits are to be promptly returned to the parties on a case-by-case basis. Accord, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-53-9 (1972).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Parties.

In general.

Chancery court did not err in denying a motion filed by the mother of a decedent's child to set aside or amend an order disbursing funds, including attorneys' fees, from the settlement of a wrongful death action because the chancery court lacked jurisdiction to hear the motion; because the matter was not brought by complain but merely by a motion contested among the attorneys of the minor parties in the underlying action, tit would have been inappropriate procedurally for the chancellor to transfer the issue of attorneys' fees to the circuit court. In re Estate of Williams, 40 So. 3d 1282 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Appellant inmate's attempt to assert a claim under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 was without merit because he never filed any such complaint or any corresponding summons; he only filed various motions and documents, and under Miss. R. Civ. P. 3(a), a party had to file a complaint to institute an action. Dobbs v. State, 6 So. 3d 1088 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), reversed by, remanded by 6 So. 3d 1085, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 165 (Miss. 2009).

Where an attorney appealed the denial of unemployment benefits, it was error to find that the attorney's appeal was untimely based on the failure to include a civil cover sheet, because the attorney demonstrated good cause for an extension of the filing deadline since the cover sheet requirement did not bar the otherwise timely notice of appeal. Cummings v. Miss. Dep't of Empl. Sec., 980 So. 2d 340 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Defendants' removal motion was timely filed because service of process was not an absolute prerequisite for removal and the notice of removal was filed after the complaint. Bell v. Am. Gen. Fin., Inc., 267 F. Supp. 2d 582 (S.D. Miss. 2003).

Plaintiff's filing of complaint by mail did not extend statute of limitation on actions for assault and battery and intentional infliction of emotional distress by three days; dismissal of action on grounds of limitation was not error when the complaint was not received by the trial court clerk until after the statute of limitation had run. Slaydon v. Hansford, 830 So. 2d 686 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Subsection (a) of this rule and Rule 4(h) operate to the extent that the commencement date of an action is the date of filing, and that date obtains for statute of limitations purposes whenever the action is not dismissed, including those instances in which the action would have been dismissed but for an extension of time. Crumpton v. Hegwood, 740 So. 2d 292 (Miss. 1999).

Parties.

In a dispute concerning adjoining landowners' rights to property along a river, the appellate court limited review to the chancellor's decision regarding the parties who were actually named as appellants and appellees in the notice of appeal. Comeaux v. Freeman, 918 So. 2d 780 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Rule 4. Summons.

(a) Summons: issuance. Upon filing of the complaint, the clerk shall forthwith issue a summons.

(1) At the written election of the plaintiff or the plaintiff's attorney, the clerk shall:

(A) Deliver the summons to the plaintiff or plaintiff's attorney for service under subparagraphs (c)(1) or (c)(3) or (c)(4) or (c)(5) of this rule.

(B) Deliver the summons to the sheriff of the county in which the defendant resides or is found for service under subparagraph (c)(2) of this rule.

(C) Make service by publication under subparagraph (c)(4) of this rule.

(2) The person to whom the summons is delivered shall be responsible for prompt service of the summons and a copy of the complaint. Upon request of the plaintiff, separate or additional summons shall issue against any defendants.

(b) Same: form. The summons shall be dated and signed by the clerk, be under the seal of the court, contain the name of the court and the names of the parties, be directed to the defendant, state the name and address of the plaintiff's attorney, if any, otherwise the plaintiff's address, and the time within which these rules require the defendant to appear and defend, and shall notify him that in case of his failure to do so judgment by default will be rendered against him for the relief demanded in the complaint. Where there are multiple plaintiffs or multiple defendants, or both, the summons, except where service is made by publication, may contain, in lieu of the names of all parties, the name of the first party on each side and the name and address of the party to be served. Summons served by process server shall substantially conform to Form 1A. Summons served by sheriff shall substantially conform to Form 1AA.

(c) Service:

(1) By process server. A summons and complaint shall, except as provided in subparagraphs (2) and (4) of this subdivision, be served by any person who is not a party and is not less than 18 years of age. When a summons and complaint are served by process server, an amount not exceeding that statutorily allowed to the sheriff for service of process may be taxed as recoverable costs in the action.

(2) By sheriff. A summons and complaint shall, at the written request of a party seeking service or such party's attorney, be served by the sheriff of the county in which the defendant resides or is found, in any manner prescribed by subdivision (d) of this rule. The sheriff shall mark on all summons the date of the receipt by him, and within thirty days of the date of such receipt of the summons the sheriff shall return the same to the clerk of the court from which it was issued.

(3) By mail.

(A) A summons and complaint may be served upon a defendant of any class referred to in paragraph (1) or (4) of subdivision (d) of this rule by mailing a copy of the summons and of the complaint (by first-class mail, postage prepaid) to the person to be served, together with two copies of a notice and acknowledgment conforming substantially to Form 1-B and a return envelope, postage prepaid, addressed to the sender.

(B) If no acknowledgment of service under this subdivision of this rule is received by the sender within 20 days after the date of mailing, service of such summons and complaint may be made in any other manner permitted by this rule.

(C) Unless good cause is shown for not doing so, the court shall order the payment of the costs of personal service by the person served if such person does not complete and return within 20 days after mailing the notice and acknowledgment of receipt of summons.

(D) The notice and acknowledgment of receipt of summons and complaint shall be executed under oath or affirmation.

(4) By publication.

(A) If the defendant in any proceeding in a chancery court, or in any proceeding in any other court where process by publication is authorized by statute, be shown by sworn complaint or sworn petition, or by a filed affidavit, to be a nonresident of this state or not to be found therein on diligent inquiry and the post office address of such defendant be stated in the complaint, petition, or affidavit, or if it be stated in such sworn complaint or petition that the post office address of the defendant is not known to the plaintiff or petitioner after diligent inquiry, or if the affidavit be made by another for the plaintiff or petitioner, that such post office address is unknown to the affiant after diligent inquiry and he believes it is unknown to the plaintiff or petitioner after diligent inquiry by the plaintiff or petitioner, the clerk, upon filing the complaint or petition, account or other commencement of a proceeding, shall promptly prepare and publish a summons to the defendant to appear and defend the suit. The summons shall be substantially in the form set forth in Form 1-C.

(B) The publication of said summons shall be made once in each week during three successive weeks in a public newspaper of the county in which the complaint or petition, account, cause or other proceeding is pending if there be such a newspaper, and where there is no newspaper in the county the notice shall be posted at the courthouse door of the county and published as above provided in a public newspaper in an adjoining county or at the seat of government of the state. Upon completion of publication, proof of the prescribed publication shall be filed in the papers in the cause. The defendant shall have thirty (30) days from the date of first publication in which to appear and defend. Where the post office address of a defendant is given, the street address, if any, shall also be stated unless the complaint, petition, or affidavit above mentioned, avers that after diligent search and inquiry said street address cannot be ascertained.

(C) It shall be the duty of the clerk to hand the summons to the plaintiff or petitioner to be published, or, at his request, and at his expense, to hand it to the publisher of the proper newspaper for publication. Where the post office address of the absent defendant is stated, it shall be the duty of the clerk to send by mail (first class mail, postage prepaid) to the address of the defendant, at his post office, a copy of the summons and complaint and to note the fact of issuing the same and mailing the copy, on the general docket, and this shall be the evidence of the summons having been mailed to the defendant.

(D) When unknown heirs are made parties defendant in any proceeding in the chancery court, upon affidavit that the names of such heirs are unknown, the plaintiff may have publication of summons for them and such proceedings shall be thereupon in all respects as are authorized in the case of a nonresident defendant. When the parties in interest are unknown, and affidavit of that fact be filed, they may be made parties by publication to them as unknown parties in interest.

(E) Where summons by publication is upon any unmarried infant, mentally incompetent person, or other person who by reason of advanced age, physical incapacity or mental weakness is incapable of managing his own estate, summons shall also be had upon such other person as shall be required to receive a copy of the summons under paragraph (2) of subdivision (d) of this rule.

(5) Service by certified mail on person outside state. In addition to service by any other method provided by this rule, a summons may be served on a person outside this state by sending a copy of the summons and of the complaint to the person to be served by certified mail, return receipt requested. Where the defendant is a natural person, the envelope containing the summons and complaint shall be marked "restricted delivery." Service by this method shall be deemed complete as of the date of delivery as evidenced by the return receipt or by the returned envelope marked "Refused."

(d) Summons and complaint: person to be served. The summons and complaint shall be served together. Service by sheriff or process server shall be made as follows:

(1) Upon an individual other than an unmarried infant or a mentally incompetent person,

(A) by delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to him personally or to an agent authorized by appointment or by law to receive service of process; or

(B) if service under subparagraph (1)(A) of this subdivision cannot be made with reasonable diligence, by leaving a copy of the summons and complaint at the defendant's usual place of abode with the defendant's spouse or some other person of the defendant's family above the age of sixteen years who is willing to receive service, and by thereafter mailing a copy of the summons and complaint (by first class mail, postage prepaid) to the person to be served at the place where a copy of the summons and of the complaint were left. Service of a summons in this manner is deemed complete on the 10th day after such mailing.

(2)(A) upon an unmarried infant by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to any one of the following: the infant's mother, father, legal guardian (of either the person or the estate), or the person having care of such infant or with whom he lives, and if the infant be 12 years of age or older, by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to both the infant and the appropriate person as designated above.

(B) upon a mentally incompetent person who is not judicially confined to an institution for the mentally ill or mentally deficient or upon any other person who by reason of advanced age, physical incapacity or mental weakness is incapable of managing his own estate by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to such person and by delivering copies to his guardian (of either the person or the estate) or conservator (of either the person or the estate) but if such person has no guardian or conservator, then by delivering copies to him and copies to a person with whom he lives or to a person who cares for him.

(C) upon a mentally incompetent person who is judicially confined in an institution for the mentally ill or mentally retarded by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to the incompetent person and by delivering copies to said incompetent's guardian (of either the person or the estate) if any he has. If the superintendent of said institution or similar official or person shall certify by certificate endorsed on or attached to the summons that said incompetent is mentally incapable of responding to process, service of summons and complaint on such incompetent shall not be required. Where said confined incompetent has neither guardian nor conservator, the court shall appoint a guardian ad litem for said incompetent to whom copies shall be delivered.

(D) where service of a summons is required under (A), (B) and (C) of this subparagraph to be made upon a person other than the infant, incompetent, or incapable defendant and such person is a plaintiff in the action or has an interest therein adverse to that of said defendant, then such person shall be deemed not to exist for the purpose of service and the requirement of service in (A), (B) and (C) of this subparagraph shall not be met by service upon such person.

(E) if none of the persons required to be served in (A) and (B) above exist other than the infant, incompetent or incapable defendant, then the court shall appoint a guardian ad litem for an infant defendant under the age of 12 years and may appoint a guardian ad litem for such other defendant to whom a copy of the summons and complaint shall be delivered. Delivery of a copy of the summons and complaint to such guardian ad litem shall not dispense with delivery of copies to the infant, incompetent or incapable defendant where specifically required in (A), and (B) of this subparagraph.

(3) Upon an individual confined to a penal institution of this state or of a subdivision of this state by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to the individual, except that when the individual to be served is an unmarried infant or mentally incompetent person the provisions of subparagraph (d)(2) of this rule shall be followed.

(4) Upon a domestic or foreign corporation or upon a partnership or other unincorporated association which is subject to suit under a common name, by delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to an officer, a managing or general agent, or to any other agent authorized by appointment or by law to receive service of process.

(5) Upon the State of Mississippi or any one of its departments, officers or institutions, by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to the Attorney General of the State of Mississippi.

(6) Upon a county by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to the president or clerk of the board of supervisors.

(7) Upon a municipal corporation by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to the mayor or municipal clerk of said municipal corporation.

(8) Upon any governmental entity not mentioned above, by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to the person, officer, group or body responsible for the administration of that entity or by serving the appropriate legal officer, if any, representing the entity. Service upon any person who is a member of the "group" or "body" responsible for the administration of the entity shall be sufficient.

(e) Waiver. Any party defendant who is not an unmarried minor, or mentally incompetent may, without filing any pleading therein, waive the service of process or enter his or her appearance, either or both, in any action, with the same effect as if he or she had been duly served with process, in the manner required by law on the day of the date thereof. Such waiver of service or entry of appearance shall be in writing dated and signed by the defendant and duly sworn to or acknowledged by him or her, or his or her signature thereto be proven by two (2) subscribing witnesses before some officer authorized to administer oaths. Any guardian or conservator may likewise waive process on himself and/or his ward, and any executor, administrator, or trustee may likewise waive process on himself in his fiduciary capacity. However, such written waiver of service or entry of appearance must be executed after the day on which the action was commenced and be filed among the papers in the cause and noted on the general docket.

(f) Return. The person serving the process shall make proof of service thereof to the court promptly. If service is made by a person other than a sheriff, such person shall make affidavit thereof. If service is made under paragraph (c)(3) of this rule, return shall be made by the sender's filing with the court the acknowledgment received pursuant to such subdivision. If service is made under paragraph (c)(5) of this rule, the return shall be made by the sender's filing with the court the return receipt or the returned envelope marked "Refused." Failure to make proof of service does not affect the validity of the service.

(g) Amendment. At any time in its discretion and upon such terms as it deems just, the court may allow any process or proof of service thereof to be amended, unless it clearly appears that material prejudice would result to the substantial rights of the party against whom the process is issued.

(h) Summons: time limit for service. If a service of the summons and complaint is not made upon a defendant within 120 days after the filing of the complaint and the party on whose behalf such service was required cannot show good cause why such service was not made within that period, the action shall be dismissed as to that defendant without prejudice upon the court's own initiative with notice to such party or upon motion. (Amended effective May 1, 1982; March 1, 1985; February 1, 1990; July 1, 1998; January 3, 2002.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective July 1, 1998, Rule 4(f) was amended to state that the person serving process shall promptly make proof of service thereof to the court.

Effective February 1, 1990, Rule 4(c)(4)(B) was amended by striking the word "calendar" following the word and figure "thirty (30)"; Rule 4(c)(4) was amended by adding subsection (E); Rule 4(c)(5) was amended by changing the title to reflect service by certified mail; Rule 4(d)(2)(A) was amended by substituting the word "person" for "individual" in reference to the one having care of the infant. 553-556 So. 2d XXXIII (West Miss. Cas. 1990).

Effective March 1, 1985, a new Rule 4 was adopted. 459-462 So. 2d XVIII (West Miss. Cas. 1985).

Effective May 1, 1982, Rule 4 was amended. 410-416 So. 2d XXI (West Miss. Cas. 1982).

COMMENT

The original version of Rule 4, effective as of January 1, 1982, was amended by the Mississippi Supreme Court on March 5, 1982. The amending order deleted the entire text of Rule 4 and substituted the prior statutory procedure for service of the summons. On December 28, 1984, the Supreme Court adopted a new Rule 4, effective March 1, 1985. Forms applicable to the new Rule 4 were adopted on May 2, 1985. This comment pertains to new Rule 4 and its forms.

After an action is commenced, the clerk is required to issue a separate summons for each defendant except in the case of summons by publication. The plaintiff or his attorney has the right, by written election, to determine whether each summons shall be delivered to the plaintiff or his attorney for service by process server or delivered by the clerk to the sheriff of the county in which the defendant resides or may be found. Where service is by publication, the clerk shall hand the summons to the plaintiff or to his attorney, or, if so requested by either of them, the clerk shall hand it to the publisher of the proper newspaper for publication.

Forms 1A, 1AA, 1B and 1C are provided as suggested forms for the various summons. All summonses used pursuant to Rule 4 must be in substantial conformity with these forms.

Various "Processes" provided for by statute, other than the summons and subpoena (the subpoena is governed by Rule 45), will continue to be governed by statute.

Rule 4(a)(2) requires that a copy of the complaint be served with the summons. Rule 4(b) requires that the summons form notify defendant that his failure to appear will result in a judgment by default against defendant for the relief demanded in the complaint. Although the "judgment by default will be rendered" language may be an overstatement, the language is included in Rule 4 for two reasons. First, the language is part of Federal Rule 4(b), and an effort has been made to maintain procedural conformity between the Mississippi and federal systems where possible. Second, the strong language is deemed more likely to encourage defendants to appear to protect their interests.

Rule 4(b) provides that where there are multiple plaintiffs or defendants, the summons may name just the first party on each side, together with the name and address of the party to be served. However, the complaint, which must accompany the summons, will provide the names of all parties to the action.

Exhibits to the complaint form a part of the complaint and in most cases should be attached to the complaint [See Rule 10(d)]. However, in cases where unusually lengthy exhibits are attached to the complaint, plaintiff may elect not to attach copies of the lengthy exhibits to the copies of the complaint served, but instead may attach a statement to the effect that such exhibits are not attached because of their size and that the exhibits are available for inspection and copying.

Rule 4(c)(1) provides for service by a process server and Rule 4(c)(2) provides for service by a sheriff. There is no limit to the territorial jurisdiction of a process server who may serve the summons anywhere in the world. A sheriff, however, may serve the summons only within his county. However, the mere service of the summons and complaint does not, of itself, resolve all questions as to jurisdiction over the person of the defendant, and any such questions may be raised at appropriate times.

A party using a process server may pay such person any amount that is agreed upon. However, only that amount statutorily allowed to the sheriff under Miss. Code Ann. § 25-7-19 (Supp. 1984) may be taxed as recoverable costs in the action.

Plaintiff is given the option under Rule 4(c)(3) of obtaining service by first-class mail. Defendant's failure to complete and return one copy of the "Notice and Acknowledgment for Service by Mail" may trigger the cost-shifting provisions of Rule 4(c)(3)(B). The provisions for service by first-class mail are modeled upon Federal Rule 4(c)(2)(C)(ii). The completion and return of Form 1B (Notice and Acknowledgment for Service by Mail) does not operate as a waiver of objections to jurisdiction. All jurisdictional objections are preserved whether Form 1B is completed and returned from inside or outside the State.

Rule 4(c)(4) provides for service of summons by publication and generally tracks the previous statutory requirements for summons by publication under Miss. Code Ann. § 13-3-19 et seq. (1972). However, a few major changes should be noted. Under Rule 4(c)(4)(B), "[t]he defendant shall have thirty (30) days from the date of first publication in which to appear and defend." The thirty days from first publication is a shorter time in which one must respond than was previously provided by statute.

Publication under this rule is deemed complete with the third publication in those instances where the time of an event is related to completion of publication. However, it should be noted that this is not deemed to alter the time for response by defendant.

It should be noted that there will be instances under Rule 4(c)(4)(E) where service by publication is appropriate for persons under disability, but service of the summons and complaint upon the "other person" required to be served under Rule 4(d)(2) will not be appropriate by publication because the "other person" may be found within the State of Mississippi.

Rule (4)(c)(4)(C) continues the previous statutory requirement that the clerk send a copy of the summons (and now also of the complaint) by first-class mail to the address of the defendant. The mailing provides further opportunity to give defendant notice of the action. If the defendant's post office address is unknown to plaintiff after diligent inquiry, then the mailing of the summons and complaint is not required.

Rule 4(c)(5) provides for "Service by Certified Mail on Person Outside State" by sending a copy of the summons and complaint to the person to be served by certified mail, return receipt requested. The certified mail procedure is not available to serve a person within the state. It is an alternative form of service because a person outside of the state may also be served under Rule 4(c)(1), 4(c)(3) or 4(c)(4).

The Rule 4(c)(5) procedure supplants the circuitous procedures previously available to obtain in personam jurisdiction against nonresidents. E.g. Miss. Code Ann. § 13-3-63 (1972). However, the criteria for subjecting nonresidents to the jurisdiction of Mississippi courts are those established by the legislature.

Rule 4(d) provides the methods by which the summons and complaint may be served by a sheriff or process server. The basics of service follow generally the previous statutory practice under Miss. Code Ann. § 13-3-33 et seq. (1972). However, there are differences which must be noted. Rule 4(d)(1)(A) tracks previous statutory practice by providing that reasonable diligence be made to deliver a copy of the complaint and summons to the person personally or to his authorized agent. Where the summons and complaint cannot be delivered to the defendant personally, the copies may be delivered at defendant's usual place of abode by leaving the same with defendant's spouse or some other person of the defendant's family above the age of sixteen years who is willing to receive service. The corresponding Federal Rule 4(d)(1) has no such requirement. A new procedural safeguard has been added to this mode of "residence service." A copy of the summons and complaint must thereafter be mailed (first-class mail, postage prepaid) to the person to be served at the place where a copy of the summons and complaint were left. Such "residence service" of a summons is not deemed complete until the 10th day after such mailing.

Rule 4(2)(A) provides for service upon an unmarried infant and makes several changes from previous practice. The unmarried infant must only be served a copy of the summons and complaint if twelve years of age or older (previously there was no age limitation). The rule now specifies that the guardian served may be the guardian of either the person or of the estate of the unmarried minor, and such service is now permitted upon "the individual having care of such infant or with whom he lives" in addition to the infant's mother, father or legal guardian. This rule is not intended to depart from the basic concepts of traditional Mississippi practice which must still be followed. See: Section 232, Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice. The record, exclusive of server's return, should reflect facts sufficient to establish service upon the proper person.

Rule 4(e) provides for waiver of service of the summons and complaint and tracks the provisions of Miss. Code Ann. § 13-3-71(1) (Supp. 1984). The waiver must be dated and signed by the defendant after the day on which the action is commenced. A waiver may be executed without a summons having been issued since for purposes of Rule 4(e) "commencing the action" means merely filing the complaint. Although the Statutory provisions of Miss. Code Ann. § 13-3-71(2) (Supp. 1984) dealing with when causes are triable after waiver by a fiduciary are not mentioned in Rule 4(e), such provisions are not in conflict with Rule 4(e) and continue in effect.

Rule 4(f) provides that the person serving the process shall promptly file a return of service with the court. Prior to revision in 1997, the rule sanctioned making the return at any time before the person served was required to respond. The failure to promptly file a return may precipitate a default or defeat a defendant's right to remove the case. The purpose of the requirement for prompt filing is to avoid these problems that may arise when a defendant is unable to verify the date of service by examining the return of service in the court records.

Rule 4(h) provides that service upon a defendant must be made within 120 days after the filing of the complaint or the cause will be dismissed without prejudice as to that defendant unless good cause can be shown as to why service could not be made.

[Comment adopted effective March 1, 1986; amended effective February 1, 1990; July 1, 1998; April 13, 2000.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction.
Applicability.
Commencement of action.
Defenses.
Dismissal.
Due process.
Filing of amended complaint as summons.
Good cause.
Jurisdiction.
Notice In annexation cases.
Service of process.
Statute of limitations.
Waiver.

Construction.

Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) states that if the 120-day period elapses without service of process being effected, the action shall be dismissed upon the court's own initiative with notice to such party or upon motion and the comments state that the complaint will be dismissed unless good cause can be shown as to why service cannot be made; the rule therefore provides that the plaintiff will have an opportunity to show good cause after the 120-day period elapses. Webster v. Webster, 834 So. 2d 26 (Miss. 2002).

Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) does not require that a motion for additional time for service of process be filed within 120 days of the filing of the complaint. Webster v. Webster, 834 So. 2d 26 (Miss. 2002).

It is apparent from reading the text of this rule that while the word "complaint" sometimes refers to a duplicate copy, the word "summons" means an original, not a duplicate or photocopy. Bilbo v. Thigpen, 647 So. 2d 678 (Miss. 1994).

Legislature created Public Employees' Retirement System in the juridical form of a corporation; as such, System was subject to service of process under subdivision (d)(4) of this rule as a "domestic corporation," rather than under subdivision (d)(5) as a "department" or "institution" of the State. Public Employees' Retirement Sys. v. Dillon, 538 So. 2d 327 (Miss. 1988).

Applicability.

In a medical malpractice action, on remand from a first appeal denying an amended complaint, the trial court granted summary judgment for defendants based on the two-year limitations period. However, upon a petition for rehearing, the appellate court held that based on the unique facts of the case, the amended complaint should have been treated as an original complaint as to the added parties; since the amended complaint was filed prior to the expiration of the statute of limitations (exactly two years after the alleged negligence), and a summons, along with the amended complaint, was served upon the added parties within the time period required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h), the trial judge erred in granting summary judgment for defendants. Wilner v. White, 929 So. 2d 343 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), reversed by 929 So. 2d 315, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 267 (Miss. 2006).

Party who is granted permission to intervene pursuant to M.R.C.P. Rule 24(b)(2) is not required to issue a summons and complaint pursuant to Rule 4; rather, service pursuant to Rule 5, of motion to intervene accompanied by complaint, is sufficient service. Breland v. Smith-Johnson, Inc., 501 So. 2d 389 (Miss. 1987).

Commencement of action.

Rule 3(a) and subsection (h) of this rule operate to the extent that the commencement date of an action is the date of filing, and that date obtains for statute of limitations purposes whenever the action is not dismissed, including those instances in which the action would have been dismissed but for an extension of time. Crumpton v. Hegwood, 740 So. 2d 292 (Miss. 1999).

Defenses.

A moving party has a choice of making a M.R.C.P. 4(h) objection to process by filing a M.R.C.P. 12(b)(4) or (5) motion prior to filing a responsive pleading, by asserting other general affirmative defenses, or by filing them simultaneously therewith; the M.R.C.P. 4(h) defense is waived only after the filing of an answer or affirmative defenses if the defense is not asserted prior to or simultaneously within the answer. Rains v. Gardner, 731 So. 2d 1192 (Miss. 1999).

Dismissal.

Trial judge correctly dismissed a personal injury case with prejudice because plaintiff did not show good cause for the failure to serve defendant, under Miss. R. App. P. 4(h), and, as of the date of entry of the order granting the motion to set aside the order granting additional time to serve process and dismissing the complaint with prejudice, the three-year limitations period prescribed by Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-49 had long since passed. Johnson v. Thomas, 982 So. 2d 405 (Miss. 2008).

Dismissal of a medical malpractice case under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41 was appropriate where no action was taken for four years, a first doctor was not served in the time required under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4, a patient failed to use other means of service available, service was not effectuated until the statute of limitations had expired, and proof of service was not filed until after the case was dismissed; there was no need to show contumacious conduct because there was a clear record of delay, and no lesser sanctions would have better served the interests of justice since the passage of time might have altered the evidence. Hensarling v. Holly, 972 So. 2d 716 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 973 So. 2d 244, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 2008).

Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) does not state that notice be given to a party prior to a court's consideration of the dismissal of the case, only that the court notify the party of the dismissal itself; therefore, the notice provided to a patient in a medical malpractice case in an order of dismissal was enough. Hensarling v. Holly, 972 So. 2d 716 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 973 So. 2d 244, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 2008).

Burden is on a plaintiff to show good cause as to why service is not made within the 120 days allowed. Hensarling v. Holly, 972 So. 2d 716 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 973 So. 2d 244, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 2008).

Leaving a process server a two-day window to accomplish service of process without receiving some express assurance that process would in fact be served within two days leaves a plaintiff vulnerable to having the complaint dismissed if process is not timely served under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h). Davis v. South Sunflower County Hosp., 956 So. 2d 1103 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Trial court properly granted an insurer's motion to dismiss plaintiff's pro se negligence action against the insurer and its insured where the record failed to confirm that plaintiff served either defendant, as plaintiff's statement alone did not satisfy Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h); although the record contained certified mail receipts for mailings sent by plaintiff to defendants, all of the receipts were dated after the case was dismissed by the trial judge. Sanders v. Robertson, 954 So. 2d 493 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a multi-party suit filed by plaintiffs who alleged various silica-related personal injuries, the original complaint listed the incorrect agent for service of process for defendant; the documents were returned and plaintiffs made no further attempt to serve the complaint, and according to Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h), dismissal of the action was required, and thus the trial court erred by denying the defendant's motion to dismiss. Bacou-Dalloz Safety, Inc. v. Hall, 938 So. 2d 820 (Miss. 2006).

Plaintiff's personal injury suit against two manufacturers was dismissed because plaintiff failed to effect service upon them within the 120-day period mandated in Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) while the suit was pending in a Mississippi state court prior to removal to federal court; plaintiff's service upon the manufacturers 123 days after filing the complaint was untimely, and plaintiff failed to offer any reason for the late service. Riley v. Ga. Pac. Corp., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1440 (N.D. Miss. Jan. 5, 2006), dismissed by 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1623 (N.D. Miss. Jan. 5, 2006).

Trial court's dismissal of an action for failure to serve process as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4 is not a "matter of form" for purposes of the savings statute, Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-69. Additionally, if service of process is not made upon a defendant in compliance with Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h), the limitations period beings to run again at the end of 120 days. Owens v. Mai, 891 So. 2d 220 (Miss. 2005).

Where one defendant manufacturer was served by mail under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(c)(5), but the process served was not addressed to any particular person as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(4), and an employee who signed for the delivery was not authorized to receive process; and as to a second defendant manufacturer, the postal service erroneously allowed the properly addressed certified mail to be signed for by a mail clerk who was not authorized; and the third defendant manufacturer was timely and properly served, defendants moved for relief from entry of default and default judgment on the basis that they were not properly served with process. The court concluded that service of process was not effective as to either of the defendants; the entries of default and of the default judgment are void, having been entered without jurisdiction over those parties. Brown v. Bristol-Myers Squibb Co., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27445 (S.D. Miss. Nov. 30, 2002).

Claim of negligent operation against a 16-year-old driver was properly dismissed as plaintiffs never attempted to serve the driver's parents when they served the lawsuit on the driver. Davis v. Seymour, 868 So. 2d 1061 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Issue on appeal was one of whether the receptionist, through custom and practice, had a de facto appointment to receive service of process for the physician, requiring a consideration of the principles of agency law; no live testimony was offered on the motion to dismiss, but the affidavit of the receptionist established that the process server never identified herself, or identified the contents of subject envelope containing the complaint and the summons, and that the receptionist's duties were simply to check patients in and out, and therefore, the evidence was insufficient to hold that the receptionist was the agent of the physician. Cooley v. Brawner, 881 So. 2d 300 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 882 So. 2d 772 (Miss. 2004).

Prisoner's suit challenging the constitutionality of an amendment to the parole statutes did not have to be dismissed due to the absence of any proof of service of process, since the State participated in the appeal, thereby waiving proper service under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(e). McClurg v. State, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 592 (Miss. Ct. App. June 24, 2003), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 413 (Miss. Ct. App. Apr. 13, 2004), substituted opinion at 870 So. 2d 681, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 572 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a case alleging medical negligence arising from an emergency appendectomy performed by a doctor on the parents' minor child, although the doctor had actual notice of the complaint because the father had served the doctor with the parents' complaint, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in dismissing the parents' complaint for failure to serve process within 120 days in accordance with Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) because the parents, who were pro se litigants, had to, but failed to strictly comply with Rule 4(h). Perry v. Andy, 858 So. 2d 143 (Miss. 2003).

By filing a motion seeking dismissal of the complaint, the defendant did not make a general appearance in the case and thus did not waive any defects in the serving of process, including its untimeliness under subsection (h). Rains v. Gardner, 719 So. 2d 768 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998), aff'd, 731 So. 2d 1192 (Miss. 1999).

The joinder of a statute of limitations defense in a motion to dismiss for the untimeliness of service of process under subsection (h) did not constitute a waiver of the defendant's right to pursue relief under subsection (h). Rains v. Gardner, 719 So. 2d 768 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998), aff'd, 731 So. 2d 1192 (Miss. 1999).

Trial court did not err in dismissing medical malpractice action, where service was made only after plaintiffs filed their amended complaint, more than a year after filing their initial complaint and well after 120-day period following initial complaint, and plaintiffs failed to show good cause for the delay. Watters v. Stripling, 675 So. 2d 1242 (Miss. 1996).

Due process.

Husband was denied due process by adjudication of child custody and support matters in his absence, where summons with which he was served was a M.R.C.P. Rule 4 alias summons, which did not set a time, date and place for hearing on complaint; proper procedure would have been to serve husband with motion for modification and a Rule 81 summons, setting a time and date for hearing. Powell v. Powell, 644 So. 2d 269 (Miss. 1994).

Filing of amended complaint as summons.

Trial court erred in dismissing, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12, a purchaser's action to recover for defects in a mobile home; the purchaser's act of filing an amended complaint within the relevant statute of limitations, Miss. Code Ann. § 63-17-159(6), was sufficient to defeat defendants' motion to dismiss, as the amended complaint, filed pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15, provided defendants with the required notice under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4. King v. Am. RV Ctrs., Inc., 862 So. 2d 558 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Good cause.

In a case arising from an automobile accident, a trial court did not err in finding that plaintiff had failed to properly serve defendant and that she had not demonstrated good cause. Plaintiff failed to effectuate service of process within 120 days of filing her complaint, and her motion requesting additional time to serve was untimely filed; plaintiff unsuccessfully argued that she acted diligently and claimed defendant moving to Colorado, marrying, and changing her last name was an understandable mitigating circumstance. Shaver v. Blackwell, 43 So. 3d 1155 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 49 So. 3d 106, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 481 (Miss. 2010).

Motion to quash process and dismiss under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b) based on a failure to comply with Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) was properly denied because good cause was shown where there was a diligent effort to try and effectuate service; appellee tried in vain to locate an address for appellant, and she immediately contacted the Mississippi Secretary of State after seeing appellant on television promoting a company. Jenkins v. Oswald, 3 So. 3d 746 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court properly granted a hospital's motion to dismiss a medical malpractice suit, finding no good cause for the failure of a patient's family to serve a summons upon the hospital during the 120-day time period, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h), and finding that the two-year statute of limitations, under Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-36(2), had expired. Lucas v. Baptist Mem. Hosp. - N. Miss., Inc., 997 So. 2d 226 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In a medical malpractice/wrongful death case, defendant doctor's motion to dismiss for failure to timely effect service of process under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) was properly denied because the trial court found good cause for the failure where plaintiff's counsel retained local counsel, who was to effect service of process; where local counsel failed to do so; where counsel learned of local counsel's failure on day 118, took immediate action, and effected service on day 121; and where local counsel withdrew from the case. Foss v. Williams, 993 So. 2d 378 (Miss. 2008).

Once a party has received a first extension of time under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) in which to serve process, a second or subsequent extension of time to effectuate service of process may be granted by a trial court only upon a showing of good cause; in other words, once the initial 120-day period after filing the complaint has elapsed, good cause is required to avoid dismissal. While Miss. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1) provides for an enlargement of time for cause shown, when reading the two Rules together, it is apparent that Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) requires good cause after the expiration of 120 days. Johnson v. Thomas, 982 So. 2d 405 (Miss. 2008).

Trial judge did not abuse his discretion by voiding his order granting a second extension of time to serve process because (1) Miss. R. App. P. 4(h) required good cause after the expiration of 120 days; (2) the trial judge never was given the opportunity to perform his affirmative responsibility to accord the absent party just consideration, as required by Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 3.3(d), cmt., because plaintiff's attorney did not present to the trial judge the facts known to her, such as defendant being represented by an attorney, the identity of that attorney, defendant's previous filing of a motion to dismiss, and the settlement negotiations between the attorneys; and (3) the trial judge did not have all the material facts before him when granting the second extension of time. Johnson v. Thomas, 982 So. 2d 405 (Miss. 2008).

Trial judge did not abuse his discretion in finding that the fact that the investigator for plaintiff's attorney was out of the office for a substantial period of time was not good cause for the failure to serve defendant, under Miss. R. App. P. 4(h). Johnson v. Thomas, 982 So. 2d 405 (Miss. 2008).

Dismissal of plaintiffs' medical malpractice action was reversed, and the action was remanded for trial, because the circuit court erred when it did not find good cause for plaintiffs' failure to serve the doctor within the mandated time for service of process; plaintiffs had reason to believe that the process server successfully served the doctor (the process server completed a return and indicated as much), the communications from the doctor's attorneys suggested that the doctor had notice of the suit, and because the doctor's attorneys indicated that the doctor was involved in a bankruptcy proceeding, even if they knew the process server improperly served the doctor, plaintiffs would not have taken further action due to the automatic stay involved with the doctor's bankruptcy. Spurgeon v. Egger, 989 So. 2d 901 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 993 So. 2d 832, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 388 (Miss. 2008).

Circuit court's judgment dismissing the hospital from the beneficiaries' wrongful death suit was supported by substantial evidence where, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h), the original plaintiff did not cause process to issue for the hospital, the original plaintiff did not ask for an extension of time to serve the hospital, and the hospital did not attempt to evade process. Long v. Mem'l Hosp. at Gulfport, 969 So. 2d 35 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court properly dismissed a negligence action due to failure to effect service of process within the 120-day period set by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h), notwithstanding a paralegal's alleged "honest mistake" in calculating the date, because simple inadvertence or mistake of counsel constituted neither good cause nor excusable neglect. Shelton v. Lift, Inc., 967 So. 2d 1254 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a medical malpractice action, a patient did not show good cause why she failed to serve process on a hospital within the 120-day period outlined in Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h); although the process server took 31 days to serve the hospital, the patient waited until 118 days after the complaint was filed to bring the documents to the process server, and thus it was largely the patient's own failure to act diligently that resulted in the untimely service. Davis v. South Sunflower County Hosp., 956 So. 2d 1103 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a son's negligence action against his father, the son failed to show good cause for why process was not served on the father until nine months after the expiration of the 120-day period in Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) where: (1) the events pertaining to the father's attempts to evade service of process arose after the 120-day period for serving process; (2) the son only attempted to serve process one time during the 120-day period; and (3) the son failed to show that he exercised due diligence by moving for additional time to effect service prior to the expiration of the 120-day period. Whitten v. Whitten, 956 So. 2d 1093 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Mississippi supreme court has interpreted Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) to stand for the proposition that a plaintiff must serve a defendant with process within 120 days or show good cause why service was not made; the supreme court has held that to establish "good cause," the plaintiff must demonstrate at least as much as would be required to show excusable neglect, as to which simple inadvertence or mistake of counsel or ignorance of the rules usually does not suffice. Sanders v. Robertson, 954 So. 2d 493 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Motion for extension of time filed after expiration of initial time under Miss. R.

Civ. P. 6(b)(2) was properly denied, even though the trial court did not at first address good cause, as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h); the trial court cured its own error by finding good cause had not been shown and the statute of limitations had expired. Heard v. Remy, 937 So. 2d 939 (Miss. 2006).

Trial court did not err in dismissing complaint where plaintiff's failed to demonstrate good cause, as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h), for failing to serve process within 120 days of filing complaint where the justification offered by plaintiff's for the first extension of time, did not exactly match the justification offered on appeal, the Supreme Court of MIssissippi also found the representations of counsel to have been less than forthright with regard to the claimed reason's for the second extension, and regarding the third extension, the court was given no evidence or indication that plaintiffs used reasonable diligence to serve process prior to their attorney's death. Montgomery v. SmithKline Beecham Corp., 910 So. 2d 541 (Miss. 2005).

Where second motion to extend time in which to serve process stated that plaintiff's law firm had withdrawn but not returned the file and the firm who took the file back had no reason to know that service had not been made prior to the withdrawal, the representations of counsel were less than forthright because counsel had in fact been counsel of record since its inception, and as counsel of record, maintained all the duties and obligations to the client. Montgomery v. SmithKline Beecham Corp., 910 So. 2d 541 (Miss. 2005).

Dismissal of civil suit was reversed and remanded because the circuit court did not make a finding pertaining to whether good cause existed for the claimant's failure to serve the driver with in the 120-day rule, when the circuit court merely held that the driver's motion to dismiss was well taken and should be granted, and the claimant did make several attempts to locate and serve the driver within the 120-day period, searching through both telephone and utility directories and repeatedly engaging process servers. Page v. Crawford, 883 So. 2d 609 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Court erred in denying a truck driver's motion to dismiss plaintiff's personal injury action because plaintiff offered no explanation or cause, good or bad, for the failure to serve the truck driver within the 120-day period required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h). Triple 'C' Transp., Inc. v. Dickens, 870 So. 2d 1195 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court properly granted the patient's motion for an extension of time in which to serve defendants where the trial court found good cause for why service was not made within 120 days as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h); neither physician asserted that the trial court had abused its discretion, and the record supported the trial court's findings of good cause. Medlin v. Hazlehurst Emergency Physicians, — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 10 (Miss. Jan. 15, 2004), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1297 (Miss. Sept. 23, 2004), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1298 (Miss. Sept. 23, 2004), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1299 (Miss. Sept. 23, 2004), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1301 (Miss. Sept. 23, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 889 So. 2d 496, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1196 (Miss. 2004).

The fact that a resident defendant has not been timely served with process does not justify removal by the non-resident defendants; whenever federal jurisdiction in a removal case depends upon complete diversity, the existence of diversity is determined from the fact of citizenship of the parties named and not from the fact of service. Lauderdale v. Merck & Co., 219 F. Supp. 2d 747 (N.D. Miss. 2002).

Good faith negotiations between an injured bus passenger and a transit authority did not constitute good cause for failure to effect timely service of process on the transit authority within 120 days after the passenger filed his complaint as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) because reliance on indefinite good faith negotiations subverted the purpose of the rule which was to bring claims to a court for judicial review in a timely manner; however, the trial court's involuntary dismissal of the case was modified to be without prejudice. Holmes v. Coast Transit Auth., 815 So. 2d 1183 (Miss. 2002).

Attorney's failure to monitor the status of the claimant's personal injury lawsuit against a casino was not good cause for the attorney's failure to effect service within 120 days; dismissal with prejudice was appropriate because the statute of limitations had run. In re Holtzman, 823 So. 2d 1180 (Miss. 2002).

Determination of whether good cause existed under subsection (h) was a discretionary ruling by the trial court and entitled to deferential review of whether the trial court had abused its discretion and whether there was substantial evidence supporting the determination. LeBlanc v. Allstate Ins. Co., 809 So. 2d 674 (Miss. 2002).

Substantial evidence supports the chancellor's finding of fact that there was no good cause for a two-year delay in service of process where the plaintiff never requested an extension of time from the court and failed to communicate with those who knew where to find the defendant. Young v. Hooker, 753 So. 2d 456 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

The plaintiff failed to show good cause for his failure to serve the defendant within 120 days after the filing of the complaint where the complaint was filed on October 25, 1996, service was not attempted until February 21, 1997 and, although it was contended that service was thwarted by the defendant and others, the plaintiff knew where to find the defendant and failed to serve him during the 120 day period. Bang v. Pittman, 749 So. 2d 47 (Miss. 1999).

Jurisdiction.

Husband in a divorce proceeding claimed that the chancery court lacked personal jurisdiction; however, the husband, by his conduct, was deemed to have submitted to jurisdiction. Pace v. Pace, 16 So. 3d 734 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Chancery court had no jurisdiction to enter money judgment against husband served through notice by publication, where he made neither an answer nor a general appearance. Hamm v. Hall, 693 So. 2d 906 (Miss. 1997).

Where process was served on non-resident defendants by posting summons on door of their weekend home in Mississippi, trial court lacked jurisdiction over them due to insufficient service of process. Alpaugh v. Moore, 568 So. 2d 291 (Miss. 1990), (decided under prior version of this rule).

Issues of alimony and child support could not be considered in absence of personal service of process under subdivision (c)(5) of this rule, or defendant's general appearance. O'Neill v. O'Neill, 515 So. 2d 1208 (Miss. 1987).

Summons issued under subdivision (c)(4)(C) of this rule was insufficient to confer personal jurisdiction over non-resident defendant, for purposes of rendering a monetary judgment against him, absent his appearance. Noble v. Noble, 502 So. 2d 317 (Miss. 1987).

Notice In annexation cases.

Objectors to the annexation contended that the city failed to prove that adequate notice was given. However, in the affidavit filed by the city, the affiant specifically stated the exact locations and dates of his postings of notice of the hearings in his affidavit as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(f) and Miss. Code Ann. § 21-1-15 and Miss. Code Ann. § 21-1-31; the chancellor did not commit manifest error by allowing the detailed affidavit to constitute adequate proof of notice. Weeks v. City of Clinton (In re City of Clinton), 920 So. 2d 452 (Miss. 2006).

Service of process.

When a lender failed to comply with Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(c)(4)(A) by attesting that it had performed a diligent inquiry before performing service by publication on a borrower, a default judgment entered against the borrower was void; thus, the chancery court erred in refusing to set the void judgment aside under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(4). Turner v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust Co., 65 So. 3d 336 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Nephew was properly noticed in the estate proceeding because the chancery court's docket showed that a summons was issued to both the nephew and his mother, giving them notice of the probate of a decedent's estate, and that the summonses were returned. Walton v. Walton, 52 So. 3d 468 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Trial court erred by finding that defendant was properly served because the service of process upon defendant by certified mail, which was returned to sender marked "unclaimed/refused" failed to comply with Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(c)(5) since "unclaimed" and "refused" had two entirely different meanings, and there was no way to know which meaning applied in the case; a returned envelope marked "unclaimed" is insufficient to satisfy service requirements under Rule 4(c)(5) because the designation of "unclaimed/refused" renders impossible a determination whether the mailing was refused or unclaimed. Bloodgood v. Leatherwood, 25 So. 3d 1047 (Miss. 2010).

Chancellor lacked jurisdiction over the divorce action because the husband was improperly served with a Miss. R. Civ. P. 81 summons, rather than the required Miss. R. Civ. P. 4 summons. For that reason, the chancellor's judgment of divorce was void, as were all determinations therein, including the chancellor's awards of alimony, child custody, and child support; therefore, the chancellor erred in refusing to set aside the judgment pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b). Clark v. Clark, 43 So. 3d 496 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 49 So. 3d 106, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 467 (Miss. 2010).

Under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(c)(4), proper service upon a non-resident defendant requires that notice be published and, a copy of the summons and complaint mailed to the defendant's last known address; process is not complete until a copy has been mailed. Covington v. Griffin, 19 So. 3d 805 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

There was no error with the chancellor's ruling that appellee was not properly served with process when the complaint was not mailed to her last known addresses until after the chancery clerk entered a default; while the clerk eventually did mail a copy of the summons and complaint, the chancellor found they were not mailed until after the entry of default. It was not sufficient, as appellants argued, that appellee found out about the proceeding approximately two weeks before default judgment was entered against her; improper service of process, coupled with appellee's failure to appear rendered the default judgment against her void. Covington v. Griffin, 19 So. 3d 805 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Applying Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c), the patient's proposed amended complaint did arise out of the same transaction, but there was no evidence that the medical company received any notice of the institution of the present medical negligence action until after the time period for service of process had expired. Thus, the patient failed to meet the requirements of Rule 15(c) and seeing as the company was not a defendant in the case, it was not error for the circuit court to refuse to allow the patient to serve the company with process, and Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) was inapplicable. Johnson v. Lee, 17 So. 3d 1140 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Chancery court was not required, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 40(b), to send a husband notice of a divorce hearing because the husband did not respond to the chancery court regarding the action, after he was personally served with process, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h), within 120 days of the filing of the complaint by a wife. Carlisle v. Carlisle, 11 So. 3d 142 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Buyer failed to effect proper service on a German seller because the buyer did not comply with the Hague Convention on the Service Abroad of Judicial and Extra judicial Documents in Civil and Commercial Matters, Nov. 15, 1965, 20 U.S.T. 361, 362 T.I.A.S. No. 6638, with service by mail on the seller and the buyer failed to show that a sister corporation in the U.S. was an alter ego of the buyer to establish that it was a domestic agent for valid service of process under Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(e) and Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(4). Delta Constructors, Inc. v. Roediger Vacuum, GmbH, 259 F.R.D. 245 (S.D. Miss. 2009).

Trial court properly dismissed a patient's medical malpractice action against a nonresident physician because the patient failed to comply with the dictates of Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(c)(5) by failing to mark the mailed envelope containing the summons and complaint "restricted delivery." Worthy v. Trainor, 11 So. 3d 1267 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Chancery court erred in entering a default judgment against a construction corporation in homeowners' action for slander of title because the homeowners mailed process to an attorney as the corporation's agent when, in fact, the corporation's owner was actually the corporation's registered agent for service of process under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(d). Tucker v. Williams, 7 So. 3d 961 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Where the process issued to defendants was deficient and not in substantial compliance with Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(b), a pro se response by one defendant might have constituted an appearance under Miss. R. Civ. P. 55, but was not a valid answer because it did not comport with the filing requirement of Miss. R. Civ. P. 5(d). Fletcher v. Limeco Corp., 996 So. 2d 773 (Miss. 2008), remanded by 32 So. 3d 429, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 182 (Miss. 2010).

In an action arising from alleged defects in plaintiff purchasers' manufactured home, the trial court lacked jurisdiction to issue a default judgment pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 55(b) against defendant bank, a nonresident corporation, because defendant was never properly served with process under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(c)(5) and (d)(4) where the uncontested evidence showed that the person who signed for the process was a mailroom clerk who was not defendant's agent for service of process. Flagstar Bank v. Danos, 46 So. 3d 348 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), reversed en banc by 46 So. 3d 298, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 457 (Miss. 2010).

Service was effected under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(1)(A) when defendant California resident turned away, not accepting the summons and complaint, and the server then left the papers on the ground stating he had been served, thus, since service was 7 months before he removed the action filed by plaintiff Mississippi resident, remand was proper due to the untimely removal under 28 U.S.C.S. § 1446(b); just as under Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(e)(2), "in hand" delivery was not required. Slaieh v. Zeineh, 539 F. Supp. 2d 864 (S.D. Miss. 2008).

In a case in which a former employee served her amended complaint on an unnamed employee at her former employer's office on September 13, 2007, that service was not effective. The employer's notice of removal was timely because process was not effected until it was delivered to the employer's Board of Directors on October 5, 2007, and the removal was made on October 24, 2007. Benson v. Family Health Ctr., Inc., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12025 (S.D. Miss. Jan. 30, 2008), transfer denied by 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 121048 (S.D. Miss. Mar. 26, 2008), affirmed by 339 Fed. Appx. 486, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 17458 (5th Cir. Miss. 2009); Humes-Pollett v. Family Health Ctr., Inc., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12098 (S.D. Miss. Jan. 30, 2008), transfer denied by 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 121043 (S.D. Miss. Mar. 26, 2008), affirmed by 339 Fed. Appx. 490, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 17474 (5th Cir. Miss. 2009).

While plaintiffs erred in naming a sheriff's department as a defendant in a personal injury suit, the trial court erred in denying plaintiffs' motion for leave to amend the complaint pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c) to add a county as a defendant where, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(6), plaintiffs' notice of claim letter put the proper county official on notice that, except for the mistake of naming the wrong party, the action would have been brought against the county. Mieger v. Pearl River County, 986 So. 2d 1025 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 987 So. 2d 451, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 371 (Miss. 2008).

Circuit court did not err when it concluded that defendant doctor's office assistant did not have apparent authority to accept service of process on the doctor's behalf, where the process server did not identify himself as a process server and did not ask whether the office assistant could accept process for the doctor, and the office assistant did not realize that the process server attempted to serve the doctor through her until the doctor read the contents of the envelope. Spurgeon v. Egger, 989 So. 2d 901 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 993 So. 2d 832, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 388 (Miss. 2008).

Sheriff's service on physician's receptionist in medical malpractice suit was not sufficient to satisfy service of process requirements because the receptionist was not an authorized agent to accept service of process. Johnson v. Rao, 952 So. 2d 151 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court properly granted a university's motion to dismiss plaintiff's personal injury complaint where service of process was made on the president of the university, rather than on the Attorney General of the State of Mississippi, as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(5); plaintiff did not serve the Attorney General until after the expiration of the 120-day period mandated by Rule 4(h). Jones v. Miss. State Univ., 948 So. 2d 509 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(5) requires that service on a state institution be made by serving the Mississippi Attorney General. Jones v. Miss. State Univ., 948 So. 2d 509 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

There is no ambiguity in Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(5). Jones v. Miss. State Univ., 948 So. 2d 509 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Although a state hospital and a state mental health department were established and controlled by Miss. Code Ann. § 41-4-11(2) and Miss. Code Ann. § 41-4-5 and service of process was governed by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(5), requiring service upon the Attorney General, the entities waived the defenses of insufficient process and insufficient service of process because even though the defenses were properly and timely raised in their answer to a wrongful death action, their subsequent participation in litigation and their failure to pursue the defenses for two years waived the defenses. East Miss. State Hosp. v. Adams, 947 So. 2d 887 (Miss. 2007).

Where an estate mistakenly named a nursing home and personnel, and the estate failed to properly substitute any defendant for a fictitious party under Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(h), the amended complaint related back as to four of the defendants because they were the same owners and managers as the amended nursing home and had notice under Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c), but the amended complaint did not relate back as to two defendants that did not have notice of the original complaint; therefore, those two defendant's were not timely served under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h). Bedford Health Props., LLC v. Estate of Williams, 946 So. 2d 335 (Miss. 2006).

Worker's asbestos claim against a corporation for whom he had made products was dismissed for failure to timely serve the complaint within 120 days under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h), which in turn caused the statute of limitations in Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-49(1), (2), to resume running and expire, barring his claims under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Riley v. Ga. Pac. Corp., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1623 (N.D. Miss. Jan. 5, 2006), dismissed by 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1625 (N.D. Miss. Jan. 5, 2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying a motorist's motion to dismiss another driver's complaint in a personal injury matter arising out of a four-car accident because the other driver had made diligent attempts to complete service of process on the motorist; moreover, while the motorist was correct in his assertion that, for service by publication, Miss. R. Civ. P. 4 required that the proceeding must be in chancery court, or authorized by statute, his assertion that a defendant must be a nonresident of the state of Mississippi was incorrect. Bennett v. McCaffrey, 937 So. 2d 11 (Miss. 2006).

Tax sale of property was void because the three methods of service under Miss. Code Ann. § 27-43-3 were not satisfied; although two methods were completed, posting a notice of redemption on the owner's business was not one of the acceptable methods under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4. Viking Invs.,LLC v. Addison Body Shop, Inc., 931 So. 2d 679 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Trial court properly granted an extension of time for the plaintiff to serve process because Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) clearly did not apply to a motion for additional time filed within the initial 120 days. There was no requirement that during the initial 120-day period, a plaintiff had to show good cause in order to obtain additional time in which to serve process. Cross Creek Prods. v. Scafidi, 911 So. 2d 958 (Miss. 2005).

Where executrix filed a complaint to admit the decedent's will to probate in solemn form, a Miss. R. Civ. P. 81 matter, but decedent's brother was served notice pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 4, the trial court erred in admitting the will in solemn form, but had jurisdiction over the common form probate proceedings, and as decedent's brother did not contest the will within the two-year limitations period, the probate in common form was final and binding. In re Estate of Kelly v. Cuevas, 951 So. 2d 564 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), affirmed in part and reversed in part by 951 So. 2d 543, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 2007).

Denial of a motion to set aside a default judgment against an insurance company was reversed because the trial court lacked personal jurisdiction pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 4 over the insurance company; because, in this default case, proper service of process was not shown in the record, the default judgment was void. Lexington Ins. Co. v. Buckley, 925 So. 2d 859 (Miss. Ct. App. Sept. 6, 2005,), writ of certiorari denied by 927 So. 2d 750, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 181 (Miss. 2006).

Court properly dismissed a wife's medical malpractice action against a medical center because service was not made on the medical center until three days after the 120-day deadline imposed by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h). Waiting until the last day to serve process on the medical center did not constitute good cause. Powe v. Byrd, 892 So. 2d 223 (Miss. 2004).

Where one defendant manufacturer was served by mail under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(c)(5), but the process served was not addressed to any particular person as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(4), and an employee who signed for the delivery was not authorized to receive process; and as to a second defendant manufacturer, the postal service erroneously allowed the properly addressed certified mail to be signed for by a mail clerk who was not authorized; and the third defendant manufacturer was timely and properly served, defendants moved for relief from entry of default and default judgment on the basis that they were not properly served with process. The court concluded that service of process was not effective as to either of the defendants; the entries of default and of the default judgment are void, having been entered without jurisdiction over those parties. Brown v. Bristol-Myers Squibb Co., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27445 (S.D. Miss. Nov. 30, 2002).

Parties agreed that under the trial court's method of computation, service was complete on third party defendant one on day 130, and on third party defendant two on day 131. However, the appellate court found that although there was no good cause shown for the delay in service, the delay was relatively slight, and there was good cause for allowing the litigation to proceed; on the specific facts of the case, that was enough, and the trial court properly denied the third party defendants' motions to dismiss. Tunek v. Windham, 897 So. 2d 186 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 896 So. 2d 373 (Miss. 2005).

Court erred in denying a transport company and driver's motions to dismiss plaintiff's personal injury action because process was served on both defendants through certified mail, which constituted no service at all upon an in-state defendant pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(c)(5). Triple 'C' Transp., Inc. v. Dickens, 870 So. 2d 1195 (Miss. 2004).

Where defendant denied being served with process, there was no return of service in the record, and no entry in the docket book indicating that there ever was a return, a judgment finding him in contempt and ordering him to pay educational expenses was void. Morrison v. Miss. Dep't of Human Servs., 863 So. 2d 948 (Miss. 2004).

Pro se plaintiffs must strictly comply with Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h). Perry v. Andy, 858 So. 2d 143 (Miss. 2003).

Under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(4), an individual bringing a slip-and-fall action had not properly effected service on a motel management company by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to a motel manager where the manager was not an employee or agent of the management company or of any other properly named defendant company. Lee v. Pineapple Mgmt. Servs., 241 F. Supp. 2d 690 (S.D. Miss. 2002).

Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) does not require that a motion for additional time for service of process be filed within 120 days of the filing of the complaint. Webster v. Webster, 834 So. 2d 26 (Miss. 2002).

While an extension of time through the courts was not required under subsection (h), it was preferred; the 120-day rule had to be observed unless the party demonstrated that good cause existed to extend the time. Moore v. Boyd, 799 So. 2d 133 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Where plaintiff made extensive efforts to locate and serve defendant who had moved from the area, he established good cause for his failure to complete service within 120 days of filing complaint. Fortenberry v. Memorial Hosp., 676 So. 2d 252 (Miss. 1996).

Parties who were not already subject to the court's jurisdiction were required to be served pursuant this rule. Leaf River Forest Prods., Inc. v. Deakle, 661 So. 2d 188 (Miss. 1995).

Since plaintiff had not properly served defendant with complaint, plaintiff's entry of default was premature. Bilbo v. Thigpen, 647 So. 2d 678 (Miss. 1994).

Deputy sheriff appeared to have properly served process on physician in medical practice action, where summons and complaint were left with physician's office manager, who, by custom and practice, was vested with apparent authority to accept service of process on behalf of physician and other doctors in his office. Williams v. Kilgore, 618 So. 2d 51 (Miss. 1992).

Valid service of process was not made on physician in medical practice action, where, even if service had been made upon his wife, there was no evidence that a copy of the summons and complaint had subsequently been mailed to him at his residence, in accordance with rule. Williams v. Kilgore, 618 So. 2d 51 (Miss. 1992).

Service of process on divorce defendant while he was in Mississippi and attending court in another matter was proper, where there was no question but that he was wholly amenable to his wife's divorce action in Mississippi and thus he was not required to waive any right that he otherwise would have enjoyed. Chenier v. Chenier, 573 So. 2d 699 (Miss. 1990).

Statute of limitations.

Under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h), the trial court abused its discretion by denying school district's and bus driver's motion to set aside the order granting the extension of time because substantial evidence did not support a finding of good cause for the driver's failure to serve the school district and bus driver within the required 120-day period. Thus, the other driver was not entitled to an extension of time to effect service, the statute of limitations had expired, and the complaint was subject to dismissal with prejudice. Copiah County Sch. Dist. v. Buckner, 61 So. 3d 162 (Miss. 2011).

Although the filing of a personal injury lawsuit tolled the three-year statute of limitations under Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-49 four days before its expiration, the limitations period resumed running at the end of the service of process period under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) and, thus, dismissal with prejudice was proper where process was not served until six days after the expiration of the 120-day service period. Stutts v. Miller, 37 So. 3d 1 (Miss. 2010).

While the trial court erred by finding that defendant was served properly, dismissal was not warranted because plaintiff had to be afforded the opportunity to apply for additional time to serve process and to demonstrate whether the circumstances constituted good cause under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) for failing to serve defendant. Bloodgood v. Leatherwood, 25 So. 3d 1047 (Miss. 2010).

Trial court properly granted a hospital's motion to dismiss a medical malpractice suit, finding no good cause for the failure of a patient's family to serve a summons upon the hospital during the 120-day time period, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h), and finding that the two-year statute of limitations, under Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-36(2), had expired. Lucas v. Baptist Mem. Hosp. - N. Miss., Inc., 997 So. 2d 226 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Although the statute of limitations was three years for a legal malpractice action, a client's first complaint tolled the statute of limitations even though that complaint was not properly served, and a second complaint was subsequently filed. Parmley v. Pringle, 976 So. 2d 422 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a personal injury case removed from state court, a company's motion to dismiss was granted because the company was not served within the 120-day period provided for by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h), and the worker failed to re-file his complaint within the three-year period provided for in Miss. Code. Ann. § 15-1-49(1). Riley v. Ga. Pac. Corp., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1626 (N.D. Miss. Jan. 5, 2006).

When a passenger brought a suit against a driver in a matter arising out of a collision, but failed to serve the driver within the 120-day period, as required, the matter was properly dismissed with prejudice because the driver did not waive his defenses of insufficiency of process and insufficiency of service of process, and when the passenger failed to show good cause for not completing service within 120 days, the statute of limitations expired. Heard v. Remy, 937 So. 2d 939 (Miss. 2006).

Where: (1) an individual filed his personal injury complaint against a car maker with two days remaining in the limitations period, (2) the limitations period was tolled during the 120 days provided for by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) for service, (3) service was not made on the car maker until 123 days had passed, and (4) the statute of limitations period for filing suit resumed after the 120 days had ended, the individual's personal injury claims against the car maker were dismissed with prejudice because they were time-barred. Riley v. Ga. Pac. Corp., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1625 (N.D. Miss. Jan. 5, 2006), dismissed by 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1626 (N.D. Miss. Jan. 5, 2006).

Plaintiff's failure to effect timely service upon two manufacturers in his personal injury suit caused the applicable three-year statute of limitations to begin running after the 120-day period in Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) for effecting service elapsed; because the three-year statute of limitations expired a few days after the 120-day time frame for effecting service expired and plaintiff did not refile his complaint prior to the expiration of the statute of limitations, plaintiff's claims were time-barred. Riley v. Ga. Pac. Corp., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1440 (N.D. Miss. Jan. 5, 2006), dismissed by 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1623 (N.D. Miss. Jan. 5, 2006).

In November 1997, plaintiff brought suit for wrongful death, but the record reflected that she failed to properly serve process upon defendant within 120 days. Because process was not served within the 120-day period as provided by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h), the running of the statute of limitations resumed; further, the statute of limitations ran in March, 2000, some 14 months prior to defendant's motion to dismiss and some 19 months prior to plaintiff's filing of a second identical wrongful death action, and therefore, when plaintiff filed her second action, the three year statute of limitation set forth in Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-49 had run. Owens v. Mai, 891 So. 2d 220 (Miss. 2005).

Filing the complaint suspends the running of the statute of limitations regardless of whether service is made within the 120-day period set forth in Rule 4(h). Ball v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 34 F. Supp. 2d 424 (S.D. Miss. 1998).

Filing of complaint for medical malpractice, even without service of process, tolls statute of limitations governing medical malpractice actions for the 120 day period allowed in subdivision (h) of this rule. Fortenberry v. Memorial Hosp., 676 So. 2d 252 (Miss. 1996).

Filing of medical malpractice complaint without process being issued tolled applicable statute of limitations, where service of process was made within 120 days after filing of complaint. Erby v. Cox, 654 So. 2d 503 (Miss. 1995).

Waiver.

In a case arising from an automobile accident in which a trial court granted defendant's motion to dismiss or, in the alternative, for summary judgment because plaintiff had failed to properly serve her, plaintiff unsuccessfully argued that defendant waived her affirmative defense of insufficiency of process by actively participating in the litigation. During the course of the litigation: (1) defendant filed a motion to dismiss or, in the alternative, a motion for summary judgment; (2) she filed an answer to the complaint; and (3) she responded to plaintiff's request for production of documents; defendant's participation in litigation was minimal, and she had not waived her affirmative defense of insufficiency of process based on her minimal participation in litigation. Shaver v. Blackwell, 43 So. 3d 1155 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 49 So. 3d 106, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 481 (Miss. 2010).

Contractors waived the issue of insufficiency of service of process because they did not contest the sufficiency of service of process; the contractors did not claim that service was improper in their motion to set aside the default judgment that was entered against them, and they expressly admitted that they were served either under the Mississippi Long-Arm Statute or personally by certified mail. Woodkrest Custom Homes Inc. v. Cooper, 24 So. 3d 340 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In a medical malpractice suit, a hospital did not waive its affirmative defense of insufficient service of process by the failure of the hospital to include the affirmative defense in a subsequent motion for a change or venue or by its active participation in the litigation. Lucas v. Baptist Mem. Hosp. - N. Miss., Inc., 997 So. 2d 226 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In a negligence case, the defense of lack of personal jurisdiction was waived under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1) because an out-of-state resident made a general appearance when he sought relief from a default judgment without raising that objection; therefore, the case was improperly dismissed for a failure timely serve process. Courtney v. McCluggage, 991 So. 2d 642 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Custody award of the mother's and father's child to the father was appropriate, in part because the mother waived her jurisdictional arguments when she failed to timely seek resolution of the issue and when she participated in the hearing without first seeking an adjudication of her jurisdictional issue. Price v. McBeath, 989 So. 2d 444 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In a son's negligence action against his father, the father was deemed to have waived his right to assert insufficiency of process due to the son's failure to serve process on the father until nine months after the expiration of the 120-day period in Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) where the father assertedin sufficient service as a defense in his answer but then proceeded to participate in discovery, engage in settlement talks, and notice the son's deposition over the next two years and did not raise the service of process issue again until the statute of limitations on the son's claim expired. Whitten v. Whitten, 956 So. 2d 1093 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Eight-month period of inactivity, with regard to a defendant's assertion that he was not served within the 120-day period allowed under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h), presumptively constitutes a waiver of that defense when coupled with the defendant's participation in the litigation. Whitten v. Whitten, 956 So. 2d 1093 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

While an original motel owner was not properly served under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h), because it waited more than 12 months after an appearance was entered on its behalf to challenge service of process, the matter was waived and the owner's dismissal from the action was improper. Schustz v. Buccaneer, Inc., 850 So. 2d 209 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where waiver of process and entry of appearance form were signed on same day divorce was filed, but dated the following day, and where there were other irregularities, the case was reversed and remanded for further proceedings. Peterson v. Peterson, 648 So. 2d 54 (Miss. 1994).

Rule 5. Service and filing of pleadings and other papers.

(a) Service: When Required. Except as otherwise provided in these rules, every order required by its terms to be served, every pleading subsequent to the original complaint unless the court otherwise orders because of numerous defendants, every paper relating to discovery required to be served upon a party unless the court otherwise orders, every written motion other than one which may be heard ex parte, and every written notice, appearance, demand, offer of judgment, designation of record on appeal and similar paper shall be served upon each of the parties. No service need be made on parties in default for failure to appear except that pleadings asserting new or additional claims for relief against them shall be served upon them in the manner provided in Rule 4 for service of summons. In an action begun by seizure of property, in which no person need be or is named as defendant, any service required to be made prior to the filing of an answer, claim, or appearance shall be made upon the person having custody or possession of the property at the time of its seizure.

(b)(1) Service: How Made. Whenever under these rules service is required or permitted to be made upon a party who is represented by an attorney of record in the proceedings, the service shall be made upon such attorney unless service upon the party himself is ordered by the court. Service upon the attorney or upon a party shall be made by delivering a copy to him; or by transmitting it to him by electronic means; or by mailing it to him at his last known address, or if no address is known, by leaving it with the clerk of the court, or by transmitting it to the clerk by electronic means. Delivery of a copy within this rule means: handing it to the attorney or to the party; or leaving it at his office with his clerk or other person in charge thereof; or, if there is no on one in charge, leaving it in a conspicuous place therein; or, if the office is closed or the person to be served has no office, leaving it at his dwelling house or usual place of abode with some person of suitable age and discretion then residing therein. Service by electronic means is complete when the electronic equipment being used by the attorney or party being served acknowledges receipt of the material. If the equipment used by the attorney or party being served does not automatically acknowledge the transmission, service is not complete until the sending party obtains an acknowledgment from the recipient. Service by mail is complete upon mailing.

(2) Electronic Court System Service: How Made. Where a court has, by local rule, adopted the Mississippi Electronic Court System, service which is required or permitted under these rules shall be made in conformity with the Mississippi Electronic Court System procedures.

(c) Service: Numerous Defendants. In any action in which there are unusually large numbers of defendants, the court, upon motion or of its own initiative, may order that service of the pleadings of the defendants and replies thereto need not be made as between the defendants, and that any cross-claim, counter-claim, or matter constituting an avoidance or affirmative defense contained therein shall be deemed to be denied or avoided by all other parties and that the filing of any such pleading and service upon the plaintiff constitutes due notice of it to the parties. A copy of every such order shall be served upon the parties in such manner and form as the court directs.

(d) Filing. All papers after the complaint required to be served upon a party shall be filed with the court either before service or within a reasonable time thereafter but, unless ordered by the court, discovery papers need not be filed until used with respect to any proceeding. Proof of service of any paper shall be upon certificate of the person executing same.

(e)(1) Filing with the Court Defined. The filing of pleadings and other papers with the court as required by these rules shall be made by filing them with the clerk of the court, except that the judge may permit the papers to be filed with him, in which event he shall note thereon the filing date and forthwith transmit them to the office of the clerk.

(2) Electronic Filing with Court Defined. A court may, by local rule, allow pleadings and other papers to be filed, signed, or verified by electronic means in conformity with the Mississippi Electronic Court System procedures. Pleadings and other papers filed electronically in compliance with the procedures are written papers for purposes of these rules. (Amended effective March 1, 1989; Amended effective January 8, 2009, for the purpose of establishing a pilot program for Mississippi Electronic Court System.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective March 1, 1989, Rule 5(b) and Rule 5(e) were amended by authorizing the service and filing of pleadings and documents by electronic means. 536-538 So. 2d XXI (West Miss. Cas. 1989).

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 5 is to provide both an expedient method of exchanging written communications between parties and an efficient system of filing papers with the clerk. This rule presupposes that the court has already gained jurisdiction over the parties. A "pleading subsequent to the original complaint" which asserts a claim for relief against a person over whom the court has not at the time acquired jurisdiction must be served upon such person not a party along with a copy of a summons in the same manner as the copy of the summons and complaint is required to be served upon the original defendants. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-5-37 (1972) (answer may be made a cross-bill). However, where a plaintiff has settled his case, the service on him of a notice and motion to intervene is ineffectual to bring him back into court. This is consistent with Mississippi practice, although past procedure did not recognize intervention. See Hyman v. Cameron, 46 Miss. 725 (1872).

A motion which may be heard ex parte is not required to be served, but should be filed; see also M.R.C.P. 81(b). The enumeration of papers in Rule 5(a) which are required to be served is not exhaustive; also included are affidavits in support of or in opposition to a motion, Rule 6(d), and a motion for substitution of parties, Rule 25.

Discovery papers, referred to in Rule 5(a), embrace interrogatories, Rule 33, requests for admission, Rule 36, and requests for production, Rule 34. Responses served under the provisions of any of these rules must also be served on all parties.

The Administrative Office of Courts (AOC) is authorized to establish procedures for a comprehensive electronic case management and electronic filing system known as the Mississippi Electronic Court System (MEC). Please refer to the Administrative Procedures for Mississippi Electronic Court System on the Supreme Court's website at www. mssc.state.ms.us. While the use of the MEC is optional for the chancery, circuit, and county courts, the procedures must be followed where a court has adopted and implemented the MEC by local rule. Therefore, to the extent the MEC procedures address service and filing of pleadings and other papers, the procedures should be followed to satisfy Rule 5(e) and Rule 5(b). For purposes of Rule 5(e), the MEC procedures provide reasonable exceptions to the requirement of electronic filing

A secondary purpose of Rule 5(c) is to permit the court to alleviate some of the difficulties in actions where there are unusually large numbers of defendants. Rule 5(c) is the only instance in which the provisions of Rule 7(a) (pleadings allowed) are permitted to be relaxed. This relaxation extends only to replies to counterclaims and answers to cross-claims; other pleadings and all motions must still be served in the usual manner.

Rule 5(d) recognizes both the expense of making additional transcripts of recordings and duplicating exhibits or attachments to discovery papers, and the fact that the routine filing of such items can engulf the space in a clerk's office. Accordingly, papers produced in the course of discovery need not be filed with the court unless they are relevant to some proceeding or the court so directs, nor must all discovery papers be filed if only some of them are required for the disposition of some motion or proceeding. M.R.C.P. 5(d) differs from Federal Rule 5(d) in the preceding respect, but accords with the recommendations of the American Bar Association for correcting abuses in the discovery procedures. See Special Committee for the Study of Discovery Abuse, Section of Litigation, A.B.A., Report, at 1, 2 (1977).

Of further significance in Rule 5(d) is that, although service must be made within the times prescribed, filing is permitted to be made within a reasonable time thereafter. See Blank v. Bitker, 135 F.2d 962 (7th Cir. 1943). Instances requiring the pleading to be filed before it is served include Rule 3 (complaint) and any other pleading stating a claim for relief which it is necessary to serve with a summons. Pursuant to Rule 5(c) (numerous defendants) the filing of a pleading, coupled with service on the plaintiff, is notice to the parties. Rule 65(b) requires temporary restraining orders to be filed forthwith in the clerk's office.

To obtain immediate court action under Rule 5(e), a party may file his papers with the judge, if the latter permits, and obtain such order as the judge deems proper. Rule 5(e) should be read in conjunction with Rules 77(a) (courts always open), 77(b) (trials and hearings; orders in chambers), and 77(c) (clerk's office and orders by clerk).

Rule 5(b) has no application to service of summons; that subject is completely covered by Rule 4.

For general discussions of the federal rule analogous to M.R.C.P. 5, see 1 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 71-82 (1969), and 2 Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 5.01-5.11 (1975). (Comment amended December 11, 2008)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction.
Applicability.
Filing with court.
Proof of Mailing.
Service upon attorney.
Service upon party.

Construction.

Bill of peace was a pleading subsequent to initial complaint because it was derived from and part of original litigation; service on each individual plaintiff (defendants in the bill of peace) as in an independent, unrelated action was therefore not necessary, and service on plaintiffs' attorneys of record was sufficient. Leaf River Forest Prods., Inc. v. Deakle, 661 So. 2d 188 (Miss. 1995).

Applicability.

Although this rule is generally utilized after suit has been filed, mechanics of this rule could properly be used where notice was required by statute as a preliminary step to filing a lawsuit. Brocato v. Mississippi Publishers Corp., 503 So. 2d 241 (Miss. 1987).

Party who is granted permission to intervene pursuant to M.R.C.P. Rule 24(b)(2) is not required to issue a summons and complaint pursuant to Rule 4; rather, service pursuant to Rule 5, of motion to intervene accompanied by complaint, is sufficient service. Breland v. Smith-Johnson, Inc., 501 So. 2d 389 (Miss. 1987).

Filing with court.

Where the process issued to defendants was deficient and not in substantial compliance with Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(b), a pro se response by one defendant might have constituted an appearance under Miss. R. Civ. P. 55, but was not a valid answer because it did not comport with the filing requirement of Miss. R. Civ. P. 5(d). Fletcher v. Limeco Corp., 996 So. 2d 773 (Miss. 2008), remanded by 32 So. 3d 429, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 182 (Miss. 2010).

Where an attorney appealed the denial of unemployment benefits, it was error to find that the attorney's appeal was untimely based on the failure to include a civil cover sheet, because the attorney demonstrated good cause for an extension of the filing deadline since the cover sheet requirement did not bar the otherwise timely notice of appeal. Cummings v. Miss. Dep't of Empl. Sec., 980 So. 2d 340 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Under Miss. R. Civ. P. 5(d), only proof of service of discovery responses, and not the responses themselves, need be filed with the court, and a plaintiff's motion for judgment based on the defendant's failure to file discovery responses with the court was thus clearly frivolous and justified sanctions under Miss. R. Civ. P. 11(b). McIntosh v. Victoria Corp., 877 So. 2d 519 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

A pro se prisoner's motion for post-conviction relief is delivered for filing under the Uniform Post-Conviction Collateral Relief Act and the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure when the prisoner delivers the papers to prison authorities for mailing; further, prison authorities may initiate such procedures as are necessary to document reliably the date of such delivery, by means of a prison mail log of legal mail or other expeditious means, and henceforth, an inmate's certificate of service will not suffice as proof. Sykes v. State, 757 So. 2d 997 (Miss. 2000).

Petition was deemed "filed" when delivered to clerk of youth court, as there was no conflict between subdivision (e) of this rule and any provision of the Youth Court Act. Cortesi v. Washington County Dep't of Human Servs., 566 So. 2d 691 (Miss. 1990).

Proof of Mailing.

Plaintiff's testimony regarding his usual practice and procedure for mailing letters was insufficient to establish that notice was served in compliance with Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-36(15) and Miss. R. Civ. P. 5, in the absence of evidence showing that the required notice letter had actually been stamped and placed in the mail. Brewer v. Wiltcher, 22 So. 3d 1188 (Miss. 2009).

Service upon attorney.

In a partition action, appellant had notice of a public sale of the property because service of a copy of the order on appellant's attorney regarding the public sale of the property was sufficient for actual notice to appellant under Miss. R. Civ. P. 5(b)(1); the attorney was obligated to act in the capacity of counsel for appellant until allowed to withdraw by the chancellor. Polk v. Jones, 20 So. 3d 710 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Plaintiff's failure to serve defendant's attorney with a copy of a motion to extend the time to serve process under Miss. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1) was not a dereliction sufficient to justify setting aside the extension because such a motion could be heard ex parte under Miss. R. Civ. P. 5(a). Johnson v. Thomas, 982 So. 2d 423 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), reversed by 982 So. 2d 405, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 257 (Miss. 2008).

Letters did show that the father's attorney failed to serve notice of the subpoena immediately under Miss. R. Civ. P. 45, but the father's attorney's failure to follow correct procedure did not rise to the level of abuse of process. The trial court properly granted summary judgment in favor of the father and his attorney as to the abuse of process claim; moreover, the mother's argument that the father was required to hand deliver the notice to her attorney under Miss. R. Civ. P. 5(b) was without merit, as service was allowed by mail under the plain language of Miss. R. Civ. P. 5(b). Ayles v. Allen, 907 So. 2d 300 (Miss. 2005).

Where neither a motion requesting his formal withdrawal as counsel nor a court order permitting withdrawal were present in the record, the circuit court and opposing counsel were obligated to serve all motions and notices upon the plaintiff's attorney of record, and having failed to so do, a default judgment entered against the plaintiff was void. McClain v. White, 738 So. 2d 306 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Notice of filing of statement of evidence was not properly served on wife in divorce proceeding, where attorney on whom it was served had represented wife in Louisiana, but not Mississippi, and attorney had never appeared as an attorney of record for wife in either appellate court or the court below. Barber v. Barber, 608 So. 2d 1338 (Miss. 1992).

Court had continuing jurisdiction over parties to divorce, and therefore husband's subsequent complaint regarding wife's failure to provide child visitation only required giving of notice rather than actual service of process, and mailing of complaint to wife's attorney of record was sufficient under this rule. Cooley v. Cooley, 574 So. 2d 694 (Miss. 1991).

Service upon party.

Widow's seven-year delay in taking any action in her suit against her deceased husband's employer other than letters to the clerk that were not served on the employer as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 5, and an absence of good cause shown for the delay, required dismissal of her action pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(d). Ill. Cent. R.R. Co. v. Moore, 994 So. 2d 723 (Miss. 2008).

Trial court did not err in refusing to grant a default judgment based on defendant's alleged failure to answer the complaint within 30 days; defendant had placed the answer in the mail in a timely fashion and plaintiff could not refuse to accept it and then claim defendant had not answered. Slaydon v. Hansford, 830 So. 2d 686 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

The plaintiff complied with the notice requirements of subsection (b) when it mailed a notice of hearing upon its motion for default judgment to the defendant, rather than his attorney, where it knew that the defendant's first counsel of record had withdrawn but could not have known that the defendant had retained another attorney to represent him until after it had mailed the notice of the hearing directly to the defendant. Duckworth v. Strite, 748 So. 2d 794 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. Service of Process Via Computer or Fax. 30 A.L.R.6th 413.

Rule 6. Time.

(a) Computation. In computing any period of time prescribed or allowed by these rules, by order of court, or by any applicable statute, the day of the act, event, or default from which the designated period of time begins to run shall not be included. The last day of the period so computed shall be included, unless it is a Saturday, a Sunday, or a legal holiday, as defined by statute, or any other day when the courthouse or the clerk's office is in fact closed, whether with or without legal authority, in which event the period runs until the end of the next day which is not a Saturday, a Sunday, a legal holiday, or any other day when the courthouse or the clerk's office is closed. When the period of time prescribed or allowed is less than seven days, intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays shall be excluded in the computation. In the event any legal holiday falls on a Sunday, the next following day shall be a legal holiday.

(b) Enlargement. When by these rules or by notice given thereunder or by order of court an act is required or allowed to be done at or within a specified time, the court for cause shown may at any time in its discretion (1) with or without motion or notice order the period enlarged if request therefore is made before the expiration of the period originally prescribed or as extended by a previous order, or (2) upon motion made after the expiration of the specified period permit the act to be done where failure to act was the result of excusable neglect; but it may not extend the time for taking any action under Rules 50(b), 52(b), 59(b), 59(d), 59(e), 60(b), and 60(c) except to the extent and under the conditions therein stated.

(c) Unaffected by expiration of term. The period of time provided for the doing of any act or the taking of any proceeding is not affected or limited by the continued existence or expiration of a term of court. The existence or expiration of a term of court in no way affects the power of a court to do any act or take any proceeding in a civil action consistent with these rules.

(d) Motions. A written motion, other than one which may be heard ex parte, and notice of the hearing thereof shall be served not later than five days before the time fixed for the hearing, unless a different period is fixed by these rules or by order of the court. Such an order may for cause shown be made on ex parte application. When a motion is supported by affidavit, the affidavit shall be served with the motion; and, except as otherwise provided in Rule 59(c), opposing affidavits may be served not later than one day before the hearing, unless the court permits them to be served at some other time.

(e) Additional time after service by mail. Whenever a party has the right or is required to do some act or take some proceedings within a prescribed period after the service of a notice or other paper upon him and the notice or paper is served upon him by mail, three days shall be added to the prescribed period. This subdivision does not apply to responses to service of summons under Rule 4. (Amended effective March 1, 1989; amended effective June 24, 1992; amended effective July 1, 2008.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective June 24, 1992, Rule 6(a) was amended to provide that the legal holidays which cause a period of time to be enlarged are those defined by statute. 598-602 So. 2d XXII-XXIII (West Miss. Cas. 1992).

Effective March 1, 1989, Rule 6(a) was amended to abrogate the inclusion of time periods established by local court rules. 536-538 So. 2d XXI (West Miss. Cas. 1989).

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 6 is to provide reasonably flexible, general guidelines for the measurement of time periods under these rules. Rule 6(a) implements a new method for computing time by excluding Saturday or legal holidays from being the last day of a time period, and excluding intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays from the computation when the total time period is less than seven days.

It is not uncommon for clerks' offices and courthouses to be closed occasionally during what are normal working periods, whether by local custom or for a special purpose, such as attendance at a funeral. Rule 6(a) was drafted to obviate any harsh result that may otherwise ensue when an attorney, faced with an important filing deadline, discovers that the courthouse or the clerk's office is unexpectedly closed.

Under Rule 6(b), the court is given wide discretion to enlarge the various time periods both before and after the actual termination of the allotted time, certain enumerated cases being expected. Accord, e. g., Rogers v. Rogers, 290 So.2d 631 (Miss.), cert. denied 419 U.S. 837 [95 S. Ct. 65, 42 L.Ed.2d 64] (1974); Grand Lodge Colored K.P. v. Yelvington, 111 Miss. 352, 71 So. 576 (1916).

Importantly, such enlargement is to be made only for cause shown. If the application for additional time is made before the period expires, the request may be made ex parte; if it is made after the expiration of the period, notice of the motion must be given to other parties and the only cause for which extra time can be allowed is "excusable neglect." Excusable neglect is discussed and illustrated in 4 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 1165 (1969).

Rule 6(c) does not abolish court terms. This rule merely provides greater flexibility to the courts in attending the myriad functions they must perform, many of which were heretofore possible only during term time. The rule is also consistent with the provisions elsewhere herein that prescribe a specific number of days for taking certain actions rather than linking time expirations to the opening day, or final day, or any other day of a term of court; e. g., M.R.C.P. 6(d) (motions and notices of hearings thereon to be served not less than five days before time fixed for hearing), and M.R.C.P. 12(a) (defendant to answer within thirty days after service of summons and complaint).

Rule 6(d) is self-explanatory in requiring a minimum of five days notice for hearing motions.

Rule 6(e) is patterned after Miss. Code Ann. § 13-3-83 (1972) and adds nothing new to Mississippi practice.

[Amended effective August 11, 2005.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction.
Affidavits.
Computations.
Enlargement of time.
Excusable neglect.
Motions.
Notice.
Service by mail.

Construction.

Because the Mississippi Employment Security Commission (MESC) was not a circuit, chancery or county court, the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure, particularly Miss. R. Civ. P. 6(e), were not applicable to its administrative hearings or appeals. Miss. Empl. Sec. Comm'n v. Parker, 903 So. 2d 42 (Miss. 2005).

M.R.C.P. 6(b) is a general rule and is therefore subject to specific provisions of M.R.C.P. 56(b), and therefore trial judge correctly granted defendant leave to file dispositive motion because, under M.R.C.P. 56(b), a motion for summary judgment is proper at any time. Diogenes Editions, Inc. v. State ex rel. Board of Trustees of Insts. of Higher Learning, 700 So. 2d 316 (Miss. 1997).

Ten day time limit set forth in M.R.C.P. Rule 59(b) is jurisdictional and mandatory, and Rule 6(b) gives trial judge no discretion to enlarge this time period. Telford v. Aloway, 530 So. 2d 179 (Miss. 1988).

Affidavits.

Affidavit submitted more than two months after summary judgment hearing was late and was not allowed under either M.R.C.P. Rule 6(d) or Rule 56(c); moreover, Rule 56(e) did not allow a supplemental affidavit to be submitted after time set out in Rule 56(c) or Rule 6(d). Jones v. James Reeves Contractors, 701 So. 2d 774 (Miss. 1997).

Computations.

Under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h), the trial court abused its discretion by denying school district's and bus driver's motion to set aside the order granting the extension of time because substantial evidence did not support a finding of good cause for the driver's failure to serve the school district and bus driver within the required 120-day period. Applying the rules for computation of time under Miss. R. Civ. P. 6(a), the limitations period expired on November 10, 2008. Copiah County Sch. Dist. v. Buckner, 61 So. 3d 162 (Miss. 2011).

Architect sought to appeal a decision from the Mississippi State Board of Architecture that found that the architect had unlawfully engaged in the practice of architecture in Mississippi; the chancery court improperly dismissed the appeal because the time for appeal expired on a Saturday, and therefore when the notice and bond were filed the following Monday, the appeal was timely. Broady v. Miss. State Bd. of Architecture, 936 So. 2d 441 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Where the statute of limitations applicable to plaintiff's personal injury claims would have expired on a Sunday, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 6(a), the limitations period expired the following Monday. Riley v. Ga. Pac. Corp., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1440 (N.D. Miss. Jan. 5, 2006), dismissed by 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1623 (N.D. Miss. Jan. 5, 2006).

Pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 6(a) and 6(e), the claimant's time to appeal her case to the Mississippi Employment Security Commission Board of Review began on July 2, 2002, the day after the appeals referee mailed her decision to the claimant, and ended July 19, 2002, which reflected the addition of an additional three days for the claimant to respond, as required by Rule 6(e); therefore, the claimant's appeal was filed timely with the Board of Review. Miss. Empl. Sec. Comm'n v. Parker, 905 So. 2d 613 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Hearing on defendant's motion to compel discovery was not properly noticed, due to improper computation of time under this rule. Cunningham v. Mitchell, 549 So. 2d 955 (Miss. 1989).

Enlargement of time.

In a divorce case, a former husband's appeal was time-barred because it was not perfected within 10 days of a final judgment entered in January 2007; the husband's post-trial motions were untimely under Miss. R. Civ. P. 52 and Miss. R. Civ. P. 59, and a chancellor did not have the authority to extend the time for such. The January 2007 judgment was final because it attended to all of the issues before the chancellor, including the support of two minor children, the equitable distribution of marital assets and liabilities, whether to award a former wife alimony, and whether to award the former wife attorney's fees. Anderson v. Anderson, 8 So. 3d 264 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In a divorce case, a former husband's request for findings of fact was time-barred because it was filed more than 10 days after entry of a final judgment, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 52(b); the fact that a chancellor granted the request did not make the motion timely since the chancellor lacked authority to extend the time limitation. The chancellor's decision to grant the request and make additional findings was only harmless error. Anderson v. Anderson, 8 So. 3d 264 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Once a party has received a first extension of time under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) in which to serve process, a second or subsequent extension of time to effectuate service of process may be granted by a trial court only upon a showing of good cause; in other words, once the initial 120-day period after filing the complaint has elapsed, good cause is required to avoid dismissal. While Miss. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1) provides for an enlargement of time for cause shown, when reading the two Rules together, it is apparent that Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) requires good cause after the expiration of 120 days. Johnson v. Thomas, 982 So. 2d 405 (Miss. 2008).

It was arbitrary and capricious for a trial court to void an order granting plaintiff's motion under Miss. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1) to extend the time to serve process after the court learned of defendant's previous motion to dismiss where the court said that the motion to extend had been granted without having "all the information" before the court, but there was nothing in the motion to dismiss that would have provided the court with any additional information, other than the fact that the motion existed. Johnson v. Thomas, 982 So. 2d 423 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), reversed by 982 So. 2d 405, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 257 (Miss. 2008).

In a son's negligence action against his father, the son failed to show good cause for why process was not served on the father until nine months after the expiration of the 120-day period in Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) where: (1) the events pertaining to the father's attempts to evade service of process arose after the 120-day period for serving process; (2) the son only attempted to serve process one time during the 120-day period; and (3) the son failed to show that he exercised due diligence by moving for additional time to effect service prior to the expiration of the 120-day period. Whitten v. Whitten, 956 So. 2d 1093 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Motion for extension of time filed after expiration of initial time under Miss. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(2) was properly denied, even though the trial court did not at first address good cause, as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h); the trial court cured its own error by finding good cause had not been shown and the statute of limitations had expired. Heard v. Remy, 937 So. 2d 939 (Miss. 2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying a motorist's motion to dismiss another driver's complaint in a personal injury matter arising out of a four-car accident, because the other driver had made diligent attempts to complete service of process on the motorist, and she demonstrated good cause why extensions of time to complete service should be granted. Bennett v. McCaffrey, 937 So. 2d 11 (Miss. 2006).

Application under Miss. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1) to enlarge the time for service of process was granted in the absence of bad faith or prejudice to the adverse party. The plaintiff did not act in bad faith in failing to issue and serve summons; her excuse was that she was proceeding pro se. Ignorance of the court rules did not constitute bad faith and the defendant had shown absolutely no prejudice as a result of the delay. Cross Creek Prods. v. Scafidi, 911 So. 2d 958 (Miss. 2005).

Plaintiff's filing of complaint by mail did not extend by three days the statute of limitations on actions for assault and battery and intentional infliction of emotional distress; dismissal of action on grounds of limitation was not error when the complaint was not received by the trial court clerk until after the statute of limitations had run. Slaydon v. Hansford, 830 So. 2d 686 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Subsection (b) of this rule does not authorize a trial court to enlarge the 30-day period provided by § 41-29-176 for the filing of a petition to contest the forfeiture of property. Craigo v. North Mississippi Narcotics Unit, 762 So. 2d 349 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Time limit for serving a M.R.C.P. Rule 59 motion for reconsideration is 10 days after judgment, and that period may not be enlarged except by request made within time period provided and such request being granted by the court. Wright v. White, 693 So. 2d 898 (Miss. 1997).

Excusable neglect.

Where affidavits opposing a summary judgment motion were untimely, a trial court did not abuse its discretion by failing to grant a continuance because the proponents had almost two years after their complaint was filed to obtain expert testimony, and their failure to do so was inexcusable neglect. Maxwell v. Baptist Mem. Hospital-Desoto, Inc., 15 So. 3d 427 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying a written motion for continuance of a hearing on a wife's petition to increase alimony and a proceeding to hear the petition on the wife's evidence alone where the husband's attorney had not filed the motion until three days before the trial date even though the attorney had been aware of a schedule conflict for two months, neither the attorney nor the husband appeared in the trial court on the date of the hearing, the conflicting trial had been continued by opposing counsel and the husband's attorney merely returned to his office without contacting the trial court. Profilet v. Profilet, 826 So. 2d 91 (Miss. 2002).

Attorney's failure to monitor the status of the claimant's personal injury lawsuit against a casino was not good cause for the attorney's failure to effect service within 120 days; dismissal with prejudice was appropriate because the statute of limitations had run. In re Holtzman, 823 So. 2d 1180 (Miss. 2002).

Chancery court did not err in failing to grant a continuance requested by a former husband of a hearing on the former wife's petition to increase alimony; the motion for a continuance was filed three working days prior to the hearing date, and the husband failed to show excusable neglect. In re Profilet, — So. 2d —, 2001 Miss. App. LEXIS 270 (Miss. Ct. App. July 17, 2001), affirmed in part by, vacated by, remanded in part by 826 So. 2d 91, 2002 Miss. LEXIS 281 (Miss. 2002).

A motion for additional time to serve the defendant which cited "inadvertence and excusable neglect" as the basis for the failure to timely serve the defendant was sufficient to cover good cause under the notice pleading standard. Crumpton v. Hegwood, 740 So. 2d 292 (Miss. 1999).

Motions.

Trial court erred in sua sponte entering a default judgment against a city under Miss. R. Civ. P. 55 in a suit brought under the Mississippi Tort Claims Act, specifically Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(c); although the city did not timely answer plaintiff's amended complaint pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(a), the parties continued to engage in discovery for over four years and plaintiff had no intention of seeking of a default judgment. City of Jackson v. Presley, 942 So. 2d 777 (Miss. 2006).

The trial court committed no error in denying a motion for a continuance where the motion was not made until only three working days prior to trial, the movant showed no execusable neglect, and he had almost two months notice of the trial setting. Profilet v. Profilet (In re Marriage of Profilet), — So. 2d —, 2001 Miss. App. LEXIS 48 (Miss. Ct. App. Feb. 6, 2001).

The movant failed to comply with the notice provisions as supplied by subsection (d) of this rule where the notice of motion and the motion to dismiss were served by mail on August 15, filed August 17, and delivered unannounced to the opposing party's attorney's office at 5:00 p.m. on August 17, when the hearing was scheduled for 9:00 a.m. on August 19. L.W. v. C.W.B., 762 So. 2d 323 (Miss. 2000).

Trial court erred in granting plaintiff's motion for voluntary dismissal, and dismissing her complaint without prejudice, without giving defendant reasonable advance notice and an opportunity to be heard on the motion. Bolls v. Harris, 528 So. 2d 1128 (Miss. 1988).

Notice.

Plaintiff's failure to serve defendant's attorney with a copy of a motion to extend the time to serve process under Miss. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1) was not a dereliction sufficient to justify setting aside the extension because such a motion could be heard ex parte under Miss. R. Civ. P. 5(a). Johnson v. Thomas, 982 So. 2d 423 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), reversed by 982 So. 2d 405, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 257 (Miss. 2008).

Siblings did not submit their objections to the special commissioners' report in the form of a motion and did not notice a hearing, they simply objected to the special commissioners' recommendations and suggested alternative partition methods commensurate with their position; their document failed to include a written notice of a hearing and did not even include are quest for hearing; nothing in their document placed the chancellor on notice that the siblings desired a hearing on their objections. Miles v. Miles, 949 So. 2d 774 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 949 So. 2d 37, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 155 (Miss. 2007).

Failure of plaintiff to serve motorist did not constitute receipt by the insurance company of "other paper" and did not trigger the 30-day removal period, but service of discovery requests was "other paper" from which the insurance company first learned that the case was removable; therefore, the insurance company timely filed the Notice of Removal, since it was within 30 days from when they could first ascertain the case was removable, and it was within one year from the filing of the complaint. Jones v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 347 F. Supp. 2d 328 (S.D. Miss. 2004).

Plaintiff waived any objection he might have had to not being given timely notice of the hearing when he did not raise any objections during the proceedings or request a continuance when the chancellor announced that he would consider the motion for contempt and rule upon it. Yancey v. Yancey, 752 So. 2d 1006 (Miss. 1999).

Service by mail.

Respondent attorney's motion for additional time to plead, filed twenty-three days after formal disciplinary complaint was filed and mailed to her, was filed on the last day permitted. Terrell v. Mississippi Bar, 635 So. 2d 1377 (Miss. 1994).

CHAPTER III. PLEADINGS AND MOTIONS

Rule 7. Pleadings allowed; form of motions.

(a) Pleadings. There shall be a complaint and an answer; a reply to a counter-claim denominated as such; an answer to a cross-claim, if the answer contains a cross-claim; a third-party complaint, if a person who is not an original party is summoned under the provisions of Rule 14; and a third-party answer, if a third-party complaint is served. No other pleading shall be allowed, except that the court may order a reply to an answer or a third-party answer.

(b) Motions and other papers.

(1) An application to the court for an order shall be by motion which, unless made during a hearing or trial, shall be made in writing, shall state with particularity the grounds therefor, and shall set forth the relief or order sought. The requirement of writing is fulfilled if the motion is stated in a written notice of the hearing of the motion.

(2) The rules applicable to captions, signing, or other matters of form of pleadings apply to all motions and other papers provided for by these rules.

(c) Size of paper. All pleadings, motions and other papers, including depositions, shall be made on 8 ½″ by 11″ paper. The format for all depositions shall comply with the Guidelines for Court Reporters as provided in Mississippi Supreme Court Rule 11.

(d) Demurrers, pleas, etc., abolished. Demurrers, pleas, and exceptions for insufficiency of a pleading shall not be used.

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective November 19, 1992, Rule 7(c) was redesignated Rule 7(d), and a new Rule 7(c), requiring letter size paper for all pleadings, motions and other papers was adopted. 606-607 So. 2d XIX-XX (West Miss. Cas. 1993).

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 7 is to facilitate the court's ability to reach a just decision on the merits of a case by providing for a simple and elastic pleading and motion procedure which emphasizes substance rather than form. Rule 7(a) contemplates that in the normal situation of a claim and a defense the pleadings shall consist of only a complaint and an answer; under certain circumstances a reply may be ordered to an answer or a third-party answer. Affirmative defenses in the answer are deemed denied or avoided, and a reply is required if the answer contains a counter-claim denominated as such. Otherwise, a reply is unauthorized and may be stricken or disregarded. In no case may the pleading go beyond the reply. It should be noted that the general provision requiring or allowing a reply is subject to the qualification of Rule 5(c).

An answer is required where a cross-claim is set forth in a co-party's answer. Cf. Miss. Code Ann. § 11-5-37 (1972). If a party to an action proceeds under Rule 14 to bring in a third party, he must file a third-party complaint. If a third party is served, an answer is required of him. No reply is mandatory to an answer made to a cross-claim, unless it contains a counter-claim denominated as such. Although a third-party answer may contain a counter-claim denominated as such, Rule 7(a) does not provide for a mandatory reply thereto.

Rule 7(b)(1) provides that a motion must state with particularity the grounds therefore and the relief or order sought. See generally, V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice, §§ 399, 400 (2d ed. 1950). Reasonable specification is all that the requirement of particularity imposes. Good practice dictates that an ex parte order should be based on a written motion. The record will then show the basis for the ex parte order.

Rule 7(c) requires all filings and depositions to be made on short paper, and all depositions to comply with transcript requirements. The purpose of Rule 7(c) is to facilitate a system-wide transfer from legal size paper to letter size paper effective July 1, 1993. See Miss.Sup.Ct. Rules 11, 32, and Guideline for Court Reporters. Voluntary compliance with this Rule is to begin January 1, 1993; mandatory compliance will become effective July 1, 1993.

Rule 7(d) abolishes the use of demurrers and pleas and exceptions for insufficiency of pleadings. This is in accordance with Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-5-25, 11-5-45 and 11-7-59 (1972), but is contrary to Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-5-23 and 11-7-79 (1972). Under these rules, if a question concerning the legal sufficiency of a complaint is to be raised before answering on the merits, it should be done by a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, Rule 12(b)(6), or for judgment on the pleadings, Rule 12(c).

While demurrers are abolished, no penalty should attach, in light of Rule 1, to the denomination of a valid defense or objection as a demurrer. The defense or objection should be treated as though it had been accurately denominated as a motion for certain relief. Further, while it is desirable that pleadings be properly labeled in accordance with Rules 7(a) and 8(c), there should be no penalty for mislabeling. See Shell Petroleum Corp. v. Stueve, 25 F. Supp. 879 (D. Minn. 1938); Howard v. United States, 28 F. Supp. 985 (W.D. Wash. 1939); Equitable Life Assurance Society v. Kit, 26 F. Supp. 880 (E.D. Pa. 1939); 5 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 1196 (1969).

As to when a reply should be ordered by the court, see 2A Moore's Federal Practice ¶ 7.03 (2d ed. 1968), and 5 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 1185 (1969).

[Amended effective November 19, 1992.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction.
Construction with other rules.

Construction.

Where defendant in an automobile negligence case failed to file an answer to plaintiff's complaint but filed a counterclaim, the trial court did not err in granting plaintiff's motion to dismiss because the submission of a counterclaim without filing a responsive pleading was procedurally improper. A counterclaim was a claim asserted against a party in a responsive pleading pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 7(a); because defendant failed to file an answer to plaintiff's complaint, his counterclaim was not properly before the trial court. Keyes v. Berry, 995 So. 2d 861 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Siblings did not submit their objections to the special commissioners' report in the form of a motion and did not notice a hearing, they simply objected to the special commissioners' recommendations and suggested alternative partition methods commensurate with their position; their document failed to include a written notice of a hearing and did not even include are quest for hearing; nothing in their document placed the chancellor on notice that the siblings desired a hearing on their objections. Miles v. Miles, 949 So. 2d 774 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 949 So. 2d 37, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 155 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court correctly granted a convenience store's motion to reconsider the dismissal of an amended wrongful death action against the store because the motion to reconsider was an application to the court for an order pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1). Anderson v. R & D Foods, Inc., 913 So. 2d 394 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

The rule does not provide for a responsive pleading after the assertion of an affirmative defense. Smith v. Franklin Custodian Funds, Inc., 726 So. 2d 144 (Miss. 1998).

Defendants' timely filed motion to stay the requirement that they respond to plaintiffs' request for admissions was equivalent to a motion for an extension of time within which to respond, and the motion operated to prevent matters set forth in request from being deemed admitted. Schmidt v. City of Jackson, 494 So. 2d 348 (Miss. 1986).

Counter-claim denominated a "cross-petition" was sufficiently denominated a counter-claim that a reply was required under this rule. Shannon v. Henson, 499 So. 2d 758 (Miss. 1986).

Construction with other rules.

"Application in writing" for purposes of avoiding dismissal under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(d) was required to be in the form of a motion to the court under Miss. R. Civ. P. 7. Ill. Cent. R.R. Co. v. Moore, 994 So. 2d 723 (Miss. 2008).

Rule 8. General rules of pleading.

(a) Claims for relief. A pleading which sets forth a claim for relief, whether an original claim, counter-claim, cross-claim, or third-party claim, shall contain

(1) a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief, and,

(2) a demand for judgment for the relief to which he deems himself entitled. Relief in the alternative or of several different types may be demanded.

(b) Defenses: form of denials. A party shall state in short and plain terms his defenses to each claim asserted and shall admit or deny the averments upon which the adverse party relies. If he is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of an averment, he shall so state and this has the effect of a denial. Denials shall fairly meet the substance of the averments denied. When a pleader intends in good faith to deny only a part or a qualification of an averment, he shall specify so much of it as is true and material and shall deny only the remainder. Unless the pleader intends in good faith to controvert all the averments of the preceding pleading, he may make his denials as specific denials or designated averments or paragraphs, or he may generally deny all the averments except such designated averments or paragraphs as he expressly admits; but, when he does so intend to controvert all of its averments, he may do so by general denial subject to the obligations set forth in Rule 11.

(c) Affirmative defenses. In pleading to a preceding pleading, a party shall set forth affirmatively accord and satisfaction, arbitration and award, assumption of risk, contributory negligence, discharge in bankruptcy, duress, estoppel, failure of consideration, fraud, illegality, injury by fellow servant, laches, license, payment, release, res judicata, statute of frauds, statute of limitations, waiver, and any other matter constituting an avoidance or affirmative defense. When a party has mistakenly designated a defense as a counter-claim or a counter-claim as a defense, the court on terms, if justice so requires, shall treat the pleading as if there had been proper designation.

(d) Effect of failure to deny. Averments in a pleading to which a responsive pleading is required, other than those as to the amount of damages, are admitted when not denied in the responsive pleading. Averments in a pleading to which no responsive pleading is required or permitted shall be taken as denied or avoided.

(e) Pleading to be concise and direct: consistency.

(1) Each averment of a pleading shall be simple, concise, and direct. No technical forms of pleading or motions are required.

(2) A party may set forth two or more statements of a claim or defense alternatively or hypothetically, either in one count or defense or in separate counts or defenses. When two or more statements are made in the alternative and one of them if made independently would be sufficient, the pleading is not made insufficient by the insufficiency of one or more of the alternative statements. A party may also state as many separate claims or defenses as he has, regardless of consistency. All statements shall be made subject to the obligations set forth in Rule 11.

(f) Construction of pleadings. All pleadings shall be so construed as to do substantial justice.

(g) Pleadings shall not be read or submitted. Pleadings shall not be carried by the jury into the jury room when they retire to consider their verdict, except insofar as a pleading or portion thereof has been admitted in evidence.

(h) Disclosure of minority or legal disability. Every pleading or motion made by or on behalf of a person under legal disability shall set forth such fact unless the fact of legal disability has been disclosed in a prior pleading or motion in the same action or proceeding.

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 8 is to give notice, not to state facts and narrow the issues as was the purpose of pleadings in prior Mississippi practice. Consequently, the distinctions between "ultimate facts" and "evidence" or conclusions of law are no longer important since the rules do not prohibit the pleading of facts or legal conclusions as long as fair notice is given to the parties. 5 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 1202, 1218 (1969); 2A Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 8.12, 8.13 (2d ed. 1968); contra, Pigott v. Boeing Co., 240 So.2d 63 (Miss.1970); and King v. Mississippi P. & L. Co., 244 Miss. 486, 142 So.2d 222 (1962) (it is not sufficient to allege negligence as a mere conclusion of the pleader, but facts must be pleaded showing actionable negligence); see also Bennett v. Hardwell, 214 Miss. 390, 59 So.2d 82 (1952); McLemore v. McLemore, 173 Miss. 765, 163 So. 500 (1935) (ultimate essential facts upon which action is based must be averred, but not the items of evidence by which ultimate facts are to be proved); and Barnes v. Barnes, 317 So.2d 387 (Miss.1975) (where issue of possession of property was not presented by the pleadings in divorce action and no proof as to possession appeared in record, that portion of decree awarding possession of land to complainant was not substantiated by proof and was not valid).

Although Rule 8 abolishes many technical requirements of pleadings, it does not eliminate the necessity of stating circumstances, occurrences, and events which support the proffered claim. Averments of residency are no longer required unless needed by the claim, as in divorce proceedings. See Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-5 (1972). The rule allows the claims to be stated in general terms so that the rights of the client are not lost by poor drafting skills of counsel.

The list of affirmative defenses in Rule 8(c) is not intended to be exhaustive. Useful in determining what must be pleaded under 8(c) are considerations of policy, fairness, and probability. See 5 Wright & Miller, supra, 1271. The pleader normally will not be penalized for stating matter that technically is not an affirmative defense.

As with the statement of claims, notice of the defense raised by the defendant, Rule 8(d), is all that is required.

Rule 8(f) repudiates the prior Mississippi doctrine of construing the pleadings most strongly against the pleader. See, e.g., Taylor v. Twiner, 193 Miss. 410, 9 So.2d 644 (1942); V. Griffith, Mississippi

Chancery Practice, §§ 82, 175, 288, 307, 432 (2d ed. 1950).

Rule 8(g) accords with traditional Mississippi practice. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-151 (1972) (all papers read in evidence on the trial of any cause may be carried from the bar by the jury).

Rule 8(h) is intended to ensure that adequate notice is provided when one sues or defends for the beneficial interest of another. See generally V. Griffith, supra, §§ 127-150.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Construction.
Applicability.
Affirmative defenses.
Alternative pleadings.
Claims for relief.
Sufficiency of pleadings.

In general.

When a circuit court accepted a judgment debtor's letter of credit in lieu of a supersedeas bond, the circuit court retained jurisdiction to do so; however, the circuit court correctly determined that it lacked jurisdiction to cancel the judgment and to remove the judgment from the county's rolls. Fitch v. Valentine, 946 So. 2d 780 (Miss. 2007).

In her negligence action against a homeowner, decided in the homeowner's favor on summary judgment, on appeal, the worker asserted that Miss. R. Civ. P. 8(c) clearly set forth that the defense of statute of limitations was an affirmative defense which had to be set forth in responsive pleadings and that Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b) required every defense to be asserted in responsive pleadings, except the seven which could be made by motion, and that the statute of limitations defense was not included therein; however, the defense of statute of limitations was proper for summary judgment where there existed no genuine issues of material fact on the issue. Robertson v. Moody, 918 So. 2d 787 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In a suit to confirm title to real property, the plaintiff was required to state with reasonable certainty the nature of a named defendant's claim to the property, and the trial court's entry of judgment on the pleadings, given a lack of such statement, was plain error. Derby v. 20/20 Invs., LLC, 807 So. 2d 500 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

While this rule abolishes many technical requirements of pleadings, it does not eliminate necessity of stating circumstances, occurrences, and events which support the proffered claim. PACCAR Fin. Corp. v. Howard, 615 So. 2d 583 (Miss. 1993).

While it is unnecessary for a party to state facts in detail, it is necessary to state at least enough facts to put the opposing side on fair notice of the basis of one's claim. Hester v. Bandy, 627 So. 2d 833 (Miss. 1993).

Construction.

Miss. R. Civ. P. 8 does require that a party assert a demand for prejudgment interest in the appropriate pleading; on the other hand, Rule 8 does not require that a party seeking prejudgment interest must plead the specific date on which the prejudgment interest allegedly is due. Upchurch Plumbing, Inc. v. Greenwood Utils. Comm'n, 964 So. 2d 1100 (Miss. 2007).

Neither attorney's letter to member of bar complaint tribunal nor her discovery requests constituted an "answer" or a sufficiently responsive pleading to a disciplinary complaint of the Mississippi Bar, and therefore tribunal did not err in entering default against attorney. Harrison v. Mississippi Bar, 637 So. 2d 204 (Miss. 1994).

When a complaint is tested via motion under M.R.C.P. Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted, sufficiency of complaint is in substantial part determined by reference to subdivisions (a) and (e) of Rule 8. Luckett v. Mississippi Wood, Inc., 481 So. 2d 288 (Miss. 1985).

Applicability.

Complaint, otherwise properly filed, may not be dismissed, and need not be amended, simply because the plaintiff failed to attach a certificate or waiver; the certificate did not indicate whether the daughter's attorney consulted with the expert prior to, or after, filing the complaint; if the former, then the daughter was in compliance with the enforceable portion of § 11-1-58, and if the latter, then the pretrial statutory requirement was not met, and the trial court had to dismiss the complaint with prejudice. Wimley v. Reid, 991 So. 2d 135 (Miss. 2008).

Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure are only applicable in divorce actions when governing statute is silent; however, where issue is sufficiency of pleadings to support a specific award, general rules of pleading govern, as there is no inconsistent statutory provision. Crowe v. Crowe, 641 So. 2d 1100 (Miss. 1994).

Affirmative defenses.

Mortgagors' affirmative defense of election of remedies was waived under Miss. R. Civ. P. 8(c) because the first reference to the doctrine of election of remedies was within a supplemental memorandum in support of the mortgagors' motion for reconsideration and to vacate a judgment in favor of the mortgagee. Knight Props. v. State Bank & Trust Co., 77 So. 3d 491 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

In a breach of contract action brought by the employee, the employer did not assert any affirmative defenses in his answer to the employee's complaint, Miss. R. Civ. P. 8(c); rather, the employer waited and asserted them in his motion for summary judgment, which was over four years later. When a responsive pleading was required, all affirmative defenses must be raised in that pleading; therefore, the chancellor erred in relying on those affirmative defenses in reaching his judgment. Harris v. Tom Griffith Water Well & Conductor Serv., 26 So. 3d 352 (Miss. Ct. App. Jan. 27, 2009), reversed by 26 So. 3d 338, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 46, 30 I.E.R. Cas. (BNA) 586 (Miss. 2010).

Despite the fact that a county failed to set forth the affirmative defense of contributory negligence in the pleadings as required under Miss. R. Civ. P. 8(c), neither a car driver nor a passenger mother voiced an objection at either request by the county to apply comparative negligence during the trial and thus, the defense could be treated as if it had been raised in the pleadings under Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(b). Callahan v. Ledbetter, 992 So. 2d 1220 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

College did not waive its right to arbitrate students' causes of action centered around the prospect of "educational malpractice" because, while it was true that the college took part in the pretrial litigation process, it consistently advanced its arbitration rights. In its answer, the college asserted arbitration as an affirmative defense, and the college filed its motion to compel arbitration at the same time it filed its answer. Va. College, LLC v. Moore, 974 So. 2d 269 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

By including the motion to compel arbitration in its answer, a termite compnay complied with Miss. R. Civ. P. 8(c) and sufficiently preserved for appeal the issue of whether the matter between the compnay and clients should be arbitrated. Terminix Int'l, Inc., Ltd. P'ship v. Rice, 904 So. 2d 1051 (Miss. 2004).

Where a termite inspector did not file a motion to compel arbitration until seven months after answering the complaint, and did not raise it as a defense in its answer, the appellate court held that the inspector had waived its right to demand arbitration. Pass Termite & Pest Control, Inc. v. Walker, 904 So. 2d 1030 (Miss. 2004).

In the mother's child custody modification action, while personal jurisdiction was an affirmative defense, which was waived if not affirmatively pled, the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act (UCCJA), specifically Miss. Code Ann. § 93-23-5(1), required personal jurisdiction of the minor child and the contestant. The father, who had custody and resided with the child in California, properly raised the issue of lack of jurisdiction over the child in his amended complaint, and the chancellor's finding that she lacked jurisdiction over the child rendered the issue of jurisdiction over the father moot. Scaife v. Scaife, 880 So. 2d 1089 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Court did not err in dismissing an employee's action against an employer for wrongful termination because the employee had agreed to release the employer from all civil liability; it did not matter that the affirmative defense of release was not raised in the employer's answer. Miss. R. Civ. P. 8(c) was not a bar to the trial judge's consideration of the release. Rankin v. Clements Cadillac, Inc., 905 So. 2d 710 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Appellant tax sale purchaser raised the statute of limitations in his appeal of the lower court's decision that the tax sale of the landowners' property was void due to the lack of notice provided; however, this issue was not raised as an affirmative defense, and was not properly before the appellate court. Alexander v. Womack, 857 So. 2d 59 (Miss. 2003).

Laches was in the nature of an affirmative defense that had to be affirmatively pled under the provisions of Miss. R. Civ. P. 8(c), and the appellate court declined to address the issue when it was raised for the first time on appeal. Aron v. Reid, 850 So. 2d 108 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

The alleged voidness of a judgment is an avoidance or affirmative defense which must be pled under subsection (c) or it is waived. Bank of Miss. v. Knight, 208 F.3d 514 (5th Cir. 2000).

Appellants failed to affirmatively plead defense of laches and also failed to raise the defense at any time during hearings, and therefore they were procedurally barred from raising defense of laches for the first time on appeal. Goode v. Village of Woodgreen Homeowners Ass'n, 662 So. 2d 1064 (Miss. 1995).

If a party fails to raise the Statute of Frauds as a defense in his answer to a complaint, he will be deemed to have waived the defense. Canizaro v. Mobile Communications Corp. of Am., 655 So. 2d 25 (Miss. 1995).

Defendant's answer to complaint was sufficient, as defendant was not required to plead timeliness of plaintiff's demand under recourse agreement as an affirmative defense, and therefore timeliness issue was not waived. Associates Com. Corp. v. Parker Used Trucks, Inc., 601 So. 2d 398 (Miss. 1992).

The maker of a note who claims it is unenforceable as against public policy must say so affirmatively by way of defense. Martin v. Estate of Martin, 599 So. 2d 966 (Miss. 1992).

Lessee was required to affirmatively plead that acceleration clause in lease was a penalty, and thus substantially unenforceable, in order to employ that theory and avoid obligations otherwise provided under literal language of lease. Hertz Commercial Leasing Div. v. Morrison, 567 So. 2d 832 (Miss. 1990).

Allegation that corporate plaintiff had not qualified to do business in Mississippi and thus had no right to sue in Mississippi was an affirmative defense; trial court's default judgment, and its denial of defendant's motion to vacate, stood as a final judgment that defendant's affirmative defense was not timely pleaded. Bailey v. Georgia Cotton Goods Co., 543 So. 2d 180 (Miss. 1989).

Defendants' plea under exclusive remedy provision of workers' compensation act was an affirmative defense and, as such, defendants bore the burden of production and the risk of non-persuasion on that issue. McDaniel v. Ritter, 556 So. 2d 303 (Miss. 1989).

Alternative pleadings.

Trial court did not err in precluding evidence that accident victim had sued and then settled with his father's liability insurer before trial, since victim was simply alleging and supporting alternative theories of recovery, as allowed by this rule. Sperry-New Holland v. Prestage, 617 So. 2d 248 (Miss. 1993).

Although plaintiffs failed to particularly describe any easement in their pleadings, this failure was not fatal under modern rules of pleading, since plaintiffs clearly prayed alternatively for an easement by necessity. Broadhead v. Terpening, 611 So. 2d 949 (Miss. 1992).

Party may combine a suit to determine heirship with a suit to contest a will, and will contestant's allegation that she was decedent's sole heir at law was sufficient as a request for determination of heirship. Dees v. Estate of Moore, 562 So. 2d 109 (Miss. 1990).

Claims for relief.

Where the allegations by a farm against the Mississippi Transportation Commission for flooding of the farm's property had sounded in negligence, the farm could not assert Miss. Const. art. 3, § 17 for the first time in its response to the Commission's summary judgment motion as a defense, because the MTC did not have sufficient notice of the taking claim for the farm's response to the summary judgment motion. B & W Farms v. Miss. Transp.Comm'n, 922 So. 2d 857 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

The chancellor did err in basing a finding of contempt in part on the defendant husband's failure to pay April, 1998 alimony and child support and in including the amount past due in the judgment against him, notwithstanding the contention that the wife did not specifically seek that relief in her amended counter-motion for contempt, which was filed on April 6, 1998, since she was not required to speculate as to the dollar amount of unpaid obligations that might accrue between the time her pleading was filed and a hearing held on the matter. Watkins v. Watkins, 748 So. 2d 808 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Chancellor's award of lump sum alimony was not beyond scope of the pleadings, where complaint asked for permanent support and maintenance and other general relief, and husband could not reasonably have been surprised by chancellor's award of alimony in a divorce action. Crowe v. Crowe, 641 So. 2d 1100 (Miss. 1994).

In view of notice pleading requirements of M.R.C.P. Rule 8, client's complaint against his former attorney stated at least one actionable cause upon which relief could be granted, and therefore summary judgment in favor of attorney was reversed. Owen v. Pringle, 621 So. 2d 668 (Miss. 1993).

Chancellor did not err in imposing lien in wife's favor to secure lump sum alimony payment, despite absence in wife's pleadings of any request for lien. Smith v. Smith, 607 So. 2d 122 (Miss. 1992).

Circuit court had no authority to dismiss inmate's pro se complaint unless it could fairly and objectively be said that he could prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief. Singleton v. Stegall, 580 So. 2d 1242 (Miss. 1991).

Sufficiency of pleadings.

Although the resident's complaint did not specifically track the language of the statute, it was not fatal to the issue of whether the police officer and the city were liable under the Mississippi Tort Claims Act, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(c); Rule 8 did not have a magic words requirement. Scott v. City of Goodman, 997 So. 2d 270 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Trial court erred in dismissing plaintiff's action against defendant under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) and/or (c) because, as permitted by Miss. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2) and (e)(2), plaintiff permissibly pleaded a claim of both negligence and assault, notwithstanding that the claims were inconsistent. Jordan v. Wilson, 5 So. 3d 442 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 11 So. 3d 1250, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 130 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court erred in granting a law firm's motion for summary judgment in a legal malpractice suit because whether an insurance company adequately alleged in its amended complaint that it was the assignee of the insurance company's third party administrator's claims against the firm, and thus the real party in interest, was a genuine issue. MS Comp Choice, SIF v. Clark, Scott & Streetman, 981 So. 2d 955 (Miss. 2008).

In a dispute involving a promissory note, an issue of which statute of limitations applied was not decided because the creditor never filed suit to foreclose on the note, and he never filed collection on the note; further, the creditor's non-existent pleadings did not satisfy the pleading requirement of Miss. R. Civ. P. 8 and the debtor had no preceding pleadings to which to respond and allege affirmative defenses. Chimento v. Fuller, 965 So. 2d 668 (Miss. 2007).

Complaint alleging slander failed to comply with relaxed, notice-pleading requirements of Miss. R. Civ. P. 8 because it did not specify which plaintiff was slandered by which defendant and it did not set forth statements, paraphrased or verbatim, that constituted slander; without setting forth any information in the complaint regarding the statements, to whom the statements were directed, by whom the statements were made, and how the statements were slanderous, the allegation that appellees made "slanderous statements" constituted a bare legal conclusion with no support in the complaint. Chalk v. Bertholf, 980 So. 2d 290 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Parent company of an alcohol permit holder should have been dismissed from a personal injury case because it was not liable under Miss. Code Ann. § 67-1-83 since it was not a permit holder itself or an employee of such; moreover, the pleadings did not adequately state a claim showing that the corporate veil should have been pierced. Penn Nat'l Gaming, Inc. v. Ratliff, 954 So. 2d 427 (Miss. 2007).

Judgment was properly awarded to plaintiffs in their suit against defendants for encroachment on their property where plaintiffs' pleadings met the requirements of notice pleading, as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 8(a); the complaint informed defendants that the suit involved the placement of a boundary line, as the complaint alleged that a fence was on land that belonged to plaintiffs. Crosswhite v. Golmon, 939 So. 2d 831 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In a forfeiture proceeding, the State's complaint with regards to defendant's real property did not meet the requirements of Miss. R. Civ. P. 8(a), but defendant and his mother did not seek a prior ruling on the matter, and proceeded to trial; at the conclusion of its case-in-chief, the State made an oral motion to conform the pleadings to the proof, which included the description of the real property on which forfeiture was sought, and the reasons for the same. When the trial court inquired whether defendant and his mother objected to the motion to amend, their attorney stated that they had no objection, and the trial court approved the amendment; that amendment allowed the State's complaint to meet the threshold pleading requirements of Rule 8(a). Cannon v. State, 918 So. 2d 734 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 2005 Miss. LEXIS 537 (Miss. Aug. 25, 2005), affirmed in part and reversed in part by 919 So. 2d 913, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 764 (Miss. 2005).

In a suit for alleged asbestos-related injuries, the trial court's order granting plaintiffs' proposed case management order was reversed, where plaintiffs submitted pleadings which did not, at the very least, include the name or names of the defendants against whom each plaintiff alleged a claim, the time and location of exposure, and the medical condition caused by such exposure; this was a clear failure to comply with Miss. R. Civ. P. 8, 9, 10, and 11. 3M Co. v. Hinton, 910 So. 2d 526 (Miss. 2005).

In a mass-joined asbestos action brought by plaintiff consumers against defendants, manufacturers and retailers, seeking recovery for injuries resulting from exposure to asbestos-containing products, the consumers were entitled to have the action remanded to state court because defendants failed to show that certain local retailers were fraudulently joined for the purpose of defeating removal jurisdiction. Defendants' suggestion that the consumers were required to set forth detailed allegations against the local retailers lacked merit under Miss. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2) and Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2), and, under liberal notice pleading rules, the complaint was not defective because it clearly indicated that the consumers were proceeding against the local retailers under a standard theory of strict products liability. Duffin v. Honeywell Int'l, Inc., 312 F. Supp. 2d 869 (N.D. Miss. Apr. 5, 2004).

Where a widow filed an action against a city, its police chief, and two police officers, arising from the shooting death of her husband in his home, the trial court erred in dismissing her amended complaint under the Mississippi Tort Claims Act (MTCA), Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-1 et seq., as she had properly specified and separated the negligence-and-tort-based state law claims from the constitutional tort claims under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 in that amended complaint; the MTCA operated as the exclusive remedy for the state law civil claims against the city, the chief, and the officers, and Miss. R. Civ. P. 8(a) required no more than that notice of a claim be given. Elkins v. McKenzie, 865 So. 2d 1065 (Miss. 2003).

In an action by an attorney to recover a fee based on quantum meruit after he was discharged by his client, the complaint was insufficient to support a claim for conversion by the former client's subsequently hired attorney where the sole basis advanced in the complaint against the subsequently hired attorney was for breach of an alleged ethical duty. Estate of Stevens v. Wetzel, 762 So. 2d 293 (Miss. 2000).

Plaintiff sufficiently asserted theory of equitable estoppel in its pleadings, where complaint clearly put defendant on notice that plaintiff changed its position, detrimentally, in reliance on defendant's assurance that funds for completion of construction project were in hand. Christian Methodist Episcopal Church v. S & S Constr. Co., 615 So. 2d 568 (Miss. 1993).

Pleadings were sufficient to support trial court's award of punitive damages against defendant, where complaint provided sufficient notice to defendant that plaintiff sought to recover punitive damages for defendant's bad faith refusal to pay. Dynasteel Corp. v. Aztec Indus., Inc., 611 So. 2d 977 (Miss. 1992).

Wife's pleadings in divorce action were sufficient to give chancery court authority to order partition of marital home; although pleadings did not contain the word "partition", they plainly advised husband that she was looking to the marital residence as a source of a monetary award. Johnson v. Johnson, 550 So. 2d 416 (Miss. 1989).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Law Reviews — Taming an Elephant: A Closer Look at Mass Tort Screening and the Impact of Mississippi Tort Reforms, 26 Miss. C. L. Rev. 253, 2006/2007.

Rule 9. Pleading special matters.

(a) Capacity. The capacity in which one sues or is sued must be stated in one's initial pleading.

(b) Fraud, mistake, condition of the mind. In all averments of fraud or mistake, the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake shall be stated with particularity. Malice, intent, knowledge, and other conditions of mind of a person may be averred generally.

(c) Conditions precedent. In pleading the performance or occurrence of conditions precedent, it is sufficient to aver generally that all conditions precedent have been performed or have occurred. A denial of performance or occurrence shall be made specifically and with particularity.

(d) Official document or act: ordinance or special statute. In pleading an official document or official act it is sufficient to aver that the document was issued or the act was done in compliance with the law. In pleading an ordinance of a municipality or a county, or a special, local, or private statute or any right derived therefrom, it is sufficient to identify specifically the ordinance or statute by its title or by the date of its approval, or otherwise.

(e) Judgment. In pleading a judgment or decision of a domestic or foreign court, judicial or quasi-judicial tribunal, or of a board or officer, it is sufficient to aver the judgment or decision without setting forth matter showing jurisdiction to render it.

(f) Time and place. For the purpose of testing the sufficiency of a pleading, averments of time and place are material and shall be considered like all other averments of material matter.

(g) Special damage. When items of special damage are claimed, they shall be specifically stated.

(h) Fictitious parties. When a party is ignorant of the name of an opposing party and so alleges in his pleading, the opposing party may be designated by any name, and when his true name is discovered the process and all pleadings and proceedings in the action may be amended by substituting the true name and giving proper notice to the opposing party.

(i) Unknown parties in interest. In an action where unknown proper parties are interested in the subject matter of the action, they may be designated as unknown parties in interest.

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 9 is to permit the pleading of special matters with maximum emphasis on the substance of the pleading rather than on form.

Rule 9(a) is the same as was required by prior Mississippi procedure. See V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice, 164 (2d ed. 1950). A party desiring to raise an issue as to the legal existence, capacity, or authority of a party will be required to do so by specific negative averment. This is consistent with past procedure which held that affirmative defenses cannot be relied upon unless specially pleaded. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-59(4) (1972); White v. Thomason, 310 So.2d 914 (Miss. 1975). If lack of capacity appears affirmatively on the face of the complaint, the defense may be raised by a motion pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) (failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted), Rule 12(c) (a motion for judgment on the pleadings), or Rule 12(f) (a motion to strike).

Rule 9(b) is well-established in common law and past Mississippi practice. McMahon v. McMahon, 247 Miss. 822, 157 So.2d 494 (1963) (fraud will not be inferred or presumed and cannot be charged in general terms; the specific facts which constitute fraud must be definitely averred); Griffith, supra, §§ 176, 589. "Circumstances" refers to matters such as the time, place, and contents of the false representations, in addition to the identity of the person who made them and what he obtained as a result. See 5 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 1297 (1969). The so-called "textbook" elements of fraud may be pleaded generally, i. e., (1) false representation of a material fact, Sovereign Camp, W.O.W. v. Boykin, 182 Miss. 605, 181 So. 741 (1938); (2) knowledge of or belief in its falsity by the person making it, H. D. Sojourner Co. v. Joseph, 186 Miss. 755, 191 So. 418 (1939); (3) belief in its truth by the person to whom it is made, Pilot Life Ins. Co. v. Wade, 153 Miss. 874, 121 So. 844 (1929); (4) intent that it should be acted upon, McNeer & Dodd v. Norfleet, 113 Miss. 611, 74 So. 577 (1917); (5) detrimental reliance upon it by the person claiming to have been deceived, Clopton v. Cozart, 21 Miss. 363 (1850).

Conditions of mind, such as intent and malice, are required to be averred only generally. Cf. Benson v. Hall, 339 So.2d 570 (Miss.1976), and Edmunds v. Delta Democrat Pub. Co., 230 Miss. 583, 93 So.2d 171 (1957) (charge in a libel suit that defendant published libelous material "falsely and maliciously or with reckless disregard of the truth" without alleging any facts, were mere conclusions of the pleader and were not admitted on demurrer).

Rule 9(c) conforms to traditional Mississippi practice. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-109 (1972); McClave-Brooks Co. v. Belzoni Oil Works, 113 Miss. 500, 74 So. 332 (1917).

Rule 9(d) provides that in pleading an official document or official act, it is sufficient to aver that the document was issued or the act done in compliance with law; it is not necessary to allege facts showing due compliance. A defense based on the theory that an official document or act is defective must be raised by a specific denial. See Ludlow Corp. v. Arkwright-Boston Mfrs. Mut. Ins. Co., 317 So.2d 47 (Miss. 1975) (portions of official document pertaining to Hurricane Camille, prepared by U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, were admitted into evidence to prove empirical facts; portions containing hearsay, conclusions, and irrelevant information were excluded).

Pleading ordinances, under Rule 9(d), is not significantly different from prior Mississippi practice. When a claim or defense is founded upon an ordinance, the pleader must specifically refer to the ordinance, as by its title or by the date of its approval; it is not necessary that a certified copy of the ordinance be attached thereto, as was formerly required. See White v. Thomason, supra.

Rule 9(d) does not modify the requirement of proof of local and private legislation before such can be admitted into evidence; Miss. Code Ann. § 13-1-147 (1972) provides that such legislation need not be specially pleaded.

Rule 9(e) is identical to Federal Rule 9(e) and conforms, generally, to prior Mississippi practice. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-111 (1972). Of course, MRCP 10(d) states that a copy of the judgment should be attached to the pleading. If a defendant wishes to question the validity of the judgment being sued upon, he must do so specifically in his answer; he cannot raise the issue by a general denial or by a motion to dismiss. Once jurisdiction is put in issue, however, the party relying on the earlier judgment or decision has the burden of establishing its validity. 5 Wright & Miller, supra, §§ 1306-1307.

Under common law practice, allegations of time and place were considered immaterial to a statement of the cause of action. A party was required to plead time accurately only when it formed a material part of the substance of the case, as, for example, the date of a written instrument being sued upon. Allegations of place were also immaterial and only in local, as opposed to transitory, causes of action was it necessary to plead this assertion accurately. MRCP 9(f) treats time and place as material on a motion testing the sufficiency of the pleadings; accuracy in pleading time and place will facilitate the identification and isolation of the transaction or event in issue and provide mechanism for the early adjudication or testing of certain claims and defenses most notably, statutes of limitations. 5 Wright & Miller, supra, §§ 1308-1309; See also V. Griffith, supra, § 83(a).

Rule 9(g) conforms to past Mississippi practice requiring a detailed pleading of special damages and only a general pleading of general damages.

Briefly stated, "general" damage may be considered to be that which is so usual an accompaniment of the kind of breach or wrongdoing alleged in a complaint that the mere allegation of the wrong gives sufficient notice. Conversely, "special" damage is loss or injury of relatively unusual kind, which without specific notice the adversary would not understand to be claimed. See Vicksburg & M.R.R. Co. v. Ragsdale, 46 Miss. 458 (1872) (damages as may be presumed necessarily to result from a breach of contract need not be stated; special damages must be specifically stated).

General damage includes all those normal and standardized elements of recovery which the courts have adopted as safe bases of compensation and as to which they find it desirable to forego, not only the requirement of detailed pleading, but other requirements such as the "contemplation of the parties" requirement in contracts, or the requirement of certainty of proof. In contract and property cases, general elements of damage are usually based upon evaluation. Examples are the seller's claim for the refusal of the buyer to take the land or goods, measured by the difference between the contract price and the market value, or damages for the wrongful detention of land or goods, measured by the value of the use of the rental, valued during the delay. Similarly, when interest is allowable as damages, it is general damage.

The kinds of damage which are special and required to be set out in the complaint are infinite; only a few instances will be noted here. In cases of injury or to destruction of property, or its detention, any specific claims for damages other than the standardized compensation (based upon the value of the property and interest, or in case of detention, the rental or usable value) would be special. So, in actions for breach of contract all consequential loses, such as expenses or the loss of profits expected upon transactions with third persons, must be specially pleaded. In personal injury suits, the following are usually treated as matters to be specially pleaded: loss of time and earnings; impairment of future earning capacity; aggravation by the injury of a pre-existing disease; and insanity resulting from the injury. C. McCormick, Damages § 8 (1935).

Rule 9(h) is an adaptation of Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-39 (1972), while Rule 9(i) is an adaptation of Miss. Code Ann. § 11-5-11 (1972); neither provision is new to Mississippi practice.

[Comment amended effective April 13, 2000.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Capacity of state officials.
Challenging subject matter jurisdiction.
Fictitious parties.
Fraud.
Malice.
Mistake.
Names of defendants.
Special damages.

Capacity of state officials.

In a state employee's suit alleging that he was terminated in retaliation for exercising freedom of speech, the complaint sufficiently identified, as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(a), the individual state officials against whom relief was sought and the fact that these officials were being sued in their personal or individual capacity. E. Miss. State Hosp. v. Callens, 892 So. 2d 800 (Miss. 2004).

Challenging subject matter jurisdiction.

In an interlocutory appeal from orders of the Tallahatchie County Chancery Court and the Leflore County Circuit Court regarding the transfer of plaintiff estate from Tallahatchie to Leflore county, denial of defendants' motion to void the appointment and denial of defendants' motion for summary judgment, defendants had standing before both courts because they challenged the Tallahatchie court's subject matter jurisdiction to open the estate; under Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(a), defendants had standing to challenge the estate as a party plaintiff in the Leflore court tort action against defendants. Nat'l Heritage Realty, Inc. v. Estate of Boles, 947 So. 2d 238 (Miss. 2006).

Fictitious parties.

In a products liability suit, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(h) and 15(c)(2), a patient's second amended complaint, which substituted a medical device manufacturer for an unknown defendant, related back to the date of the original complaint naming a fictitious defendant because the patient made a reasonably diligent inquiry into the identity of the manufacturer where the suit was filed one day before the three-year limitations period in Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-49 expired; less than three months elapsed between when the hospital that used the device on the patient supplied an erroneous manufacturer's name and when the patient sought to substitute that manufacturer's name for the fictitious party designation; and the patient sought to substitute the correct manufacturer for the first manufacturer within three weeks after learning that the manufacturer had actually made the device. Scoggins v. Boston Sci. Corp., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35507 (N.D. Miss. Apr. 22, 2008).

Circuit court erred in dismissing the entire action when dismissing the hospital in the beneficiaries' wrongful death action where, to dismiss the entire action, only when the identified parties were dismissed and the complaint articulated claims against fictitious parties whose identity could be discovered, was to deprive a plaintiff of this benefit. Long v. Mem'l Hosp. at Gulfport, 969 So. 2d 35 (Miss. 2007).

Where an estate mistakenly named a nursing home and personnel, and the estate failed to properly substitute any defendant for a fictitious party under Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(h), the amended complaint related back as to four of the defendants because they were the same owners and managers as the amended nursing home and had notice under Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c), but the amended complaint did not relate back as to two defendants that did not have notice of the original complaint; therefore, those two defendant's were not timely served under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h). Bedford Health Props., LLC v. Estate of Williams, 946 So. 2d 335 (Miss. 2006).

Patient's amended complaint did not relate back to the original complaint as the patient was not diligent by waiting almost two years after filing the original complaint to identify a clinic and a doctor who had been named as fictitious parties. Joiner v. Phillips, 953 So. 2d 1123 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Summary judgment was properly awarded to a doctor in a patient's medical malpractice action where the patient's amended complaint, in which she added the doctor as a defendant, was not a proper Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(h) substitution because the amended complaint had not replaced a John Doe defendant with the doctor, and the amendment was made after the expiration of the statute of limitations. Santangelo v. Green, 920 So. 2d 521 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Plaintiff is required to make a "reasonably diligent inquiry" into the identity of an unknown defendant within the limitations period in order to substitute the defendant for a fictitious party under Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(h) and Miss. R. Civ. P.15(c)(2). Santangelo v. Green, 920 So. 2d 521 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Amendment that changes the parties against whom the claim is asserted will relate back if within the statute of limitations period and the additional 120 days for service of process, the new party receives such notice of the action as will prevent prejudice, and the new party knows or should have known that but for a mistake concerning the identity of the proper party, the action would be brought against the party. If the complaint uses fictitious names because the plaintiff is ignorant of the name of an opposing party and so alleges in his pleading, then an amendment to add the newly discovered actual party relates back to the date of the original pleading pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(h) and Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(2). Wilner v. White, 929 So. 2d 343 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), reversed by 929 So. 2d 315, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 267 (Miss. 2006).

The purpose of Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(h) specifically, is to toll the statute of limitations when, in good faith, the plaintiff is unable to identify unknown defendants; this shield protects defendants and may be waived only by them. Rawson v. Jones, 816 So. 2d 367 (Miss. 2001).

Medical malpractice defendants were not Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(h) fictitious parties where plaintiff had known doctor was her child's only treating physician as early as the day of the child's death, she hired a lawyer within a week of the death for purposes of the lawsuit, she and her lawyer attended a death conference where the doctor was present, her deposition showed she discussed suing the doctor many times, her initial and amended complaints did not name him, she made only minor changes to her complaint after consulting an expert, and defendants were added after the statute of limitation had run. Rawson v. Jones, 816 So. 2d 367 (Miss. 2001).

Plaintiff's attempt to join new party after running of statute of limitations was denied; plaintiff improperly substituted one party for another, not for a fictitiously named defendant, and therefore could not avail herself of relation back provisions of rules. Doe v. Mississippi Blood Servs., Inc., 704 So. 2d 1016 (Miss. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1078, 118 S. Ct. 1525, 140 L. Ed. 2d 676 (1998).

Fraud.

Chancellor did not err in dismissing a nephew's lawsuit against his uncles for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) because the nephew failed to plead his claim of fraudulent conveyance with particularity; the nephew pleaded a fraudulent conveyance in general terms but failed to state with particularity what made the conveyance fraudulent. Walton v. Walton, 52 So. 3d 468 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

In a fraud action, the State met the specificity requirement of Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(b) when it alleged a knowing, material, and false representation by pharmaceutical manufacturers with the purpose of deceiving the State, and that the State's reliance on the representation proximately caused the State's injury. State v. Bayer Corp., 32 So. 3d 496 (Miss. 2010).

Decedent's grandson, who was not an heir at law, failed to set out in his complaint basic available information, such as the time of the alleged fraud on the part of the decedent's administrator; the allegation of fraud was not stated with the required particularity to overcome the two-year statute of limitations.

McClendon v. Hudson (In re Estate of Hudson), 962 So. 2d 90 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Estate representatives' fraud claims brought against the administrator and the licensee of a nursing home were dismissed because the representatives simply alleged the collective defendants (not each defendant specifically) misrepresented the qualitative and quantitative care and supervision they would receive, and made those misrepresentations to the representatives and their families; the complaint did not specify the date or locations the allegedly fraudulent statements were made. Howard v. Estate of Harper, 947 So. 2d 854 (Miss. 2006).

When fraudulent concealment or other fraud-based allegations are asserted in a complaint, they are required to be pleaded with specificity and particularity under Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(b). State Indus. v. Hodges, 919 So. 2d 943 (Miss. 2006).

Child was killed by a water heater's explosion; while minimal, the mother's and sister's pleadings in a wrongful death action were factually particular enough to allege fraudulent concealment and to satisfy Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(b), and the circuit court's decision to deny a motion to dismiss was not an abuse of discretion. State Indus. v. Hodges, 919 So. 2d 943 (Miss. 2006).

Pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(b), fraud must be pled with particularity. Hence, a court did not err in dismissing an insured's action against an insurer for fraud because there were no facts alleged by the insured to support a claim of fraud against the insurer. Ngo v. Centennial Ins. Co., 893 So. 2d 1076 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Where an insured alleged that three insurance agents misrepresented the extent of coverage under two insurance policies and the effect of such policies on Medicaid and Medicare, the insured failed to satisfy the specificity requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b) and Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(b) because the insured's complaint alleged fraud claims only in broad, conclusory language. Williams v. Union Nat'l Life Ins. Co., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26332 (S.D. Miss. Sept. 25, 2003), vacated by, remanded by 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27494 (S.D. Miss. Sept. 17, 2004).

Two corporate defendants and seven individual defendants were parties to the suit and the subject complaint failed to specify which of the seven individual defendants made the allegedly fraudulent statements. Under the pleading standards of Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(b) and Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b) the court could not assume that each of the individual defendants made all of the allegedly fraudulent statements to the nursing home resident; and further, the complaint failed to allege the date on which, and location at which the allegedly fraudulent statements were made, thus the claim failed to meet the required pleading standards. Gray v. Beverly Enterprises-Mississippi, 261 F. Supp. 2d 652 (S.D. Miss. 2003).

Depositor's claim and reliance on a bank's fiduciary duty was unfounded in facts or law; there was no evidence that the bank perpetrated a fraud or intentionally deceived the depositor regarding the contract for the certificates of deposit or the provision therein regarding setoff to satisfy a debt of a joint tenant on the certificates of deposit. Union Planters Nat'l Bank, N.A. v. Jetton, 856 So. 2d 674 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 866 So. 2d 473 (Miss. 2004).

Purchasers' complaint covered all the elements of fraud and satisfied the pleading requirements of Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(b) where the complaint alleged that the insurance agents each made a representation about the nature of the policies in question that was not true, induced each purchaser to buy a policy that was deliberately presented to each purchaser by each agent in full knowledge of its falsity, with the intent that the purchaser should buy a policy based on the false representation; moreover, the complaint alleged that the purchasers did not know that the representation was false, and relied on presentations that were prepared by the insurance company and delivered by the agents, having the right to rely on the representations by the agents with apparent authority, and suffered financial injury as a direct result. Anderson v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc'y of the United States, 248 F. Supp. 2d 584 (S.D. Miss. 2003).

Home buyers' fraud claims failed where they did not plead the claims with particularity, because the only evidence of fraud that they set forth was a copy of the sales contract which they claimed had no repair disclosures, but the sales contract identified several areas that had to be repaired as a condition of the sale, and there was no evidence in the record of "willful or intentional" misconduct by the sellers. Mitchell v. Nelson, 830 So. 2d 635 (Miss. 2002).

Deciding feature was that the mother and daughter who defaulted on a bank note and security agreement failed to plead fraud with the requisite specificity, and any allegations of fraud were unsupported by the evidence; no agreements, other than a reaffirmation agreement filed in bankruptcy, were executed, and the evidence did not support the claim that the mother and daughter were fraudulently induced into reaffirming the debt to the bank. Burgess v. BankPlus, 830 So. 2d 1223 (Miss. 2002).

In an action arising from a residential real property transaction, the plaintiff buyer's complaint was insufficient to state a cause of action for fraudulent misrepresentation by the sellers' agent where the complaint merely alleged that the agent made misrepresentations to her. Powell v. Cohen Realty, Inc., 803 So. 2d 1186 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Complaint alleging fraudulent inducement to enter into and continue distributorship, while not artfully pled, alleged fraud sufficiently to meet standards predicated under subdivision (b) of this rule. Allen v. Mac Tools, Inc., 671 So. 2d 636 (Miss. 1996).

Plaintiff's averments of fraud were more than a mere summary recitation of elements, and were asserted with sufficient particularity to satisfy subdivision (b) of this rule. Nichols v. Tri-State Brick & Tile Co., 608 So. 2d 324 (Miss. 1992).

Petitioner's motion for leave to amend should have been allowed, where motion alleged fraud perpetrated upon court by administratrix of estate; if an allegation of fraud is sufficiently pled it should be heard, and thirty days leave to amend is to be granted when court sustains a motion to dismiss. Smith v. Estate of King, 501 So. 2d 1120 (Miss. 1987).

Malice.

Summary judgment was granted to a creditor in an action under the Fair Credit Reporting Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq., because a claim of harassment by two debtors was preempted under 15 U.S.C. § 1681h(e); an exception to this did not apply since the pleadings did not contain an allegation of malice. Harmon v. Regions Bank, 961 So. 2d 693 (Miss. 2007).

Mistake.

Finding in favor of one brother and his wife in a boundary dispute action was proper, where nothing in any of the pleadings was stated generally, much less with particularity, concerning mistake or the circumstances of such a mistake, that would support reformation, Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(b). Estate of DeLoach v. DeLoach, 873 So. 2d 146 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Names of defendants.

In a medical malpractice/wrongful death claim in which plaintiff's first two complaints asserted claims against John Does 1-5, the third complaint, which substituted the names of actual physicians for the John Does, did not relate back to the original complaint because plaintiff failed to exercise due diligence to discover the identities of the John Doe physicians where she received records pertaining to the patient's treatment prior to filing suit. Price v. Clark, 21 So. 3d 509 (Miss. 2009).

Addition of defendants' names in plaintiff's amended complaint pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(h) without the court's leave was improper because the new names were not substituted for fictitious parties, but rather were those of new defendants whose addition required court approval under Miss. R. Civ. P. 21. Veal v. J. P. Morgan Trust Co., N.A., 955 So. 2d 843 (Miss. 2007).

Although Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(h) pleadings are not considered amendments changing a party against whom a claim was asserted and are allowed under Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c) to relate back to the date of the original pleading, the rule did not apply to a patient's malpractice case because, in order for Rule 9(h)to apply, there had to be a substitution of a true party name for a fictitious one; the patient did not substitute the doctor's name for a "John Doe," but simply added his name. Wilner v. White, 929 So. 2d 315 (Miss. 2006).

In a suit for alleged asbestos-related injuries, the trial court's order granting plaintiffs' proposed case management order was reversed, where plaintiffs submitted pleadings which did not, at the very least, include the name or names of the defendants against whom each plaintiff alleged a claim, the time and location of exposure, and the medical condition caused by such exposure; this was a clear failure to comply with Miss. R. Civ. P. 8, 9, 10, and 11. 3M Co. v. Hinton, 910 So. 2d 526 (Miss. 2005).

Special damages.

Trial court in replevin action erred in submitting issue of defendant's consequential damages to jury, where defendant failed to sufficiently prove his consequential damages, and failed to comply with subdivision (g) of this rule by not sufficiently pleading his consequential damages. Puckett Mach. Co. v. Edwards, 641 So. 2d 29 (Miss. 1994).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Law Reviews — Taming an Elephant: A Closer Look at Mass Tort Screening and the Impact of Mississippi Tort Reforms, 26 Miss. C. L. Rev. 253, 2006/2007.

Rule 10. Form of pleadings.

(a) Caption; names of parties. Every pleading shall contain a caption setting forth the name of the court, the title of the action, the file number, and a designation as in Rule 7(a). In the complaint the title of the action shall include the names of all the parties, but in other pleadings it is sufficient to state the name of the first party on each side with an appropriate indication of other parties.

(b) Paragraphs; separate statement. The first paragraph of a claim for relief shall contain the names and, if known, the addresses of all the parties. All averments of claim or defense shall be made in numbered paragraphs, the contents of each of which shall be limited as far as practicable to a statement of a single set of circumstances; and the paragraph may be referred to by number in all succeeding pleadings. Each claim founded upon a separate transaction or occurrence and each defense other than denials shall be stated in a separate count or defense whenever a separation facilitates the clear presentation of the matters set forth.

(c) Adoption by reference; exhibits. Statements in a pleading may be adopted by reference in a different part of the same pleading or in another pleading or in any motion. A copy of any written instrument which is an exhibit to a pleading is a part thereof for all purposes.

(d) Copy must [should] be attached. When any claim or defense is founded on an account or other written instrument, a copy thereof should be attached to or filed with the pleading unless sufficient justification for its omission is stated in the pleading. (Amended effective April 13, 2000.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective April 13, 2000, Rule 10(d) was amended to suggest, rather than require that documents on which a claim or defense is based be attached to a pleading.

So. 2d (West Miss. Cas. 2000).

COMMENT

Rule 10(a) is substantially the same as current Mississippi practice. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-57 (1972).

The requirement in Rule 10(b) that averments be made in numbered paragraphs is similar to Mississippi Chancery Court Rule 10. MRCP Rule 10(b) requires claims to be presented in separate counts only when two conditions are met: the claims must be founded upon separate transactions or occurrences, and a separation must facilitate the clear presentation of the matters set forth. Thus, the pleader cannot be required to use separate counts where his claims arise from a single transaction or occurrence. Even where the claims arise from separate transactions or occurrences, the test as to whether separate counts must be used is functional rather than conceptual; separate counts are required if they facilitate the clear presentation of the matters set forth. Failure to comply with the requirements of Rule 10(b) is not ground for dismissal of the complaint or striking of the answer, but the defect may be ordered cured by motion. See 5 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 1322 (1969).

Rule 10(c) permits incorporation of portions of pleadings by reference to later portions of the same pleading or in subsequent pleadings or motions. This is particularly helpful where a factual averment has bearing in subsequent allegations of a pleading. Further, when pleadings are amended, prior phases of an earlier pleading not affected by the proposed amendment can be incorporated by reference. This practice functions most successfully when the requirement of numbered paragraphs, Rule 10(b), has been observed.

Defective incorporation by reference may be raised by a motion to strike, a motion for a more definite statement, or a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. The court can also remedy the defect on its own motion. See Oppenheimer v. F. J. Young & Co., 3 F.R.D. 220 (D.C.N.Y.1943); 5 Wright & Miller, supra, § 1327.

The original Rule 10(d) provided that "[w]hen any claim or defense is founded on an account or other written instrument, a copy thereof mũst be attached to or filed with the pleading unless sufficient justification for its omission is stated in the pleading." That subdivision, which does not appear in Federal Rule 10 was included in the original MRCP 10 to continue the prior Mississippi practice. However, the Mississippi Supreme Court criticized the mandate of subdivision 10(d) as being "at odds with the structure and philosophy of the Rules." Gilchrist Machine Co. v. Ross, 493 So. 2d 1288, 1292 n.1 (Miss. 1986). It required the attachment of foundational documents, even if the pleading stated a sufficient claim or defense under general pleading standards, and indeed even if the document was voluminous and readily available to all sides. The Court by interpretation removed much of the subdivision's mandatory effect. See Edwards v. Beasley, 577 So. 2d 384 (Miss. 1991) (trial judge committed reversible error by failing to permit the defendant to amend the answer at trial to attach two agreements on which a defense was based); Gilchrist, supra (failure to attach to the complaint invoices on which the claim was based did not render the invoices inadmissible at trial); Bryant, Inc. v. Walters, 493 So. 2d 933, 938 (Miss. 1986) (failure to comply with 10(d) did not void a default jdugment). Consequently, subdivision 10(d) was amended to its present form, which states that foundational documents should be attached, unless a reason for the failure to do so is stated. Thus, it remains good practice normally to attach such documents as part of a clear statement of a claim or defense. If, However, a foundational document is not attached to an otherwise sufficient pleading, the document may be obtained through discovery.

[Comment amended effective April 13, 2000.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Attachments.
Parties to be listed.
Separate counts.

Attachments.

A condemnor was not required to attach to its petition a corporate resolution authorizing a taking, and the failure to do so did not merit dismissal of the case. Ford v. Destin Pipeline Co., 809 So. 2d 573 (Miss. 2000).

The court reversed the judgment of dismissal of the plaintiff's claim for breach of contract to allow him the opportunity to discover if any contracts did in fact exist, and if so, whether such contracts established him as an intended third-party beneficiary. The plaintiff was not required to attach a copy of the contract to the pleadings. Donald v. Amoco Prod. Co., 735 So. 2d 161 (Miss. 1999).

Defendant in partnership dispute should have been allowed to amend his pleadings to attach copies of pertinent agreements to his answer and counterclaim, where plaintiff signed, was a party to, and was familiar with terms of the agreements, and his argument that defendant was trying to ambush him was without merit. Edwards v. Beasley, 577 So. 2d 384 (Miss. 1991).

Since defendant registered no objection to complaint prior to hearing on summary judgment motion, it waived any advantage it might gain from plaintiff's failure to provide affidavit attesting to accuracy of documents attached to complaint. Key Constructors, Inc. v. H & M Gas Co., 537 So. 2d 1318 (Miss. 1989).

Although complaint failed to comply with this rule since invoices were not attached, defendant's failure to assert violation by proper motion or otherwise, reasonably in advance of trial, operated as a waiver of its rights under this rule. Gilchrist Machinery Co. v. Ross, 493 So. 2d 1288 (Miss. 1986).

Parties to be listed.

In a suit for alleged asbestos-related injuries, the trial court's order granting plaintiffs' proposed case management order was reversed, where plaintiffs submitted pleadings which did not, at the very least, include the name or names of the defendants against whom each plaintiff alleged a claim, the time and location of exposure, and the medical condition caused by such exposure; this was a clear failure to comply with Miss. R. Civ. P. 8, 9, 10, and 11. 3M Co. v. Hinton, 910 So. 2d 526 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court did not err in excluding from the courtroom certain witnesses after the sequestration rule, Miss. R. Evid. 615, was invoked because the 500 names of the other witnesses were not originally listed as parties on the original complaint pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 10(a), and thus they were not considered parties. Prestridge v. City of Petal, 841 So. 2d 1048 (Miss. 2003).

Separate counts.

In an action arising from a motor vehicle accident, the defendant was not entitled to the exclusion of evidence based on the plaintiffs' allegation that the defendant exited his vehicle after the collision and pointed a gun at the plaintiffs in a dangerous and threatening manner since the gun-brandishing incident was a part of the totality of circumstances surrounding the collision, rather than a separate occurrence. Sims v. Collins, 762 So. 2d 785 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Law Reviews — Taming an Elephant: A Closer Look at Mass Tort Screening and the Impact of Mississippi Tort Reforms, 26 Miss. C. L. Rev. 253, 2006/2007.

Rule 11. Signing of pleadings and motions.

(a) Signature required. Every pleading or motion of a party represented by an attorney shall be signed by at least one attorney of record in that attorney's individual name, whose address shall be stated. A party who is not represented by an attorney shall sign that party's pleading or motion and state the party's address. Except when otherwise specifically provided by rule or statute, pleadings need not be verified or accompanied by affidavit. The rule in equity that the averments of an answer under oath must be overcome by the testimony of two witnesses or of one witness sustained by corroborating circumstances is abolished. The signature of an attorney constitutes a certificate that the attorney has read the pleading or motion; that to the best of the attorney's knowledge, information, and belief there is good ground to support it; and that it is not interposed for delay. The signature of an attorney who is not regularly admitted to practice in Mississippi, except on a verified application for admission pro hac vice, shall further constitute a certificate by the attorney that the foreign attorney has been admitted in the case in accordance with the requirements and limitations of Rule 46(b) of the Mississippi Rules of Appellate Procedure.

(b) Sanctions. If a pleading or motion is not signed or is signed with intent to defeat the purpose of this rule, it may be stricken as sham and false, and the action may proceed as though the pleading or motion had not been served. For wilful violation of this rule an attorney may be subjected to appropriate disciplinary action. Similar action may be taken if scandalous or indecent matter is inserted. If any party files a motion or pleading which, in the opinion of the court, is frivolous or is filed for the purpose of harassment or delay, the court may order such a party, or his attorney, or both, to pay to the opposing party or parties the reasonable expenses incurred by such other parties and by their attorneys, including reasonable attorneys' fees. (Amended effective March 13, 1991; amended effective January 16, 2003.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective March 13, 1991, Rule 11(b) was amended to provide for sanctions against a party, his attorney or both. 574-576 So. 2d XXI (West Miss. Cas. 1991).

COMMENT

The purposes of Rule 11 are to require that all pleadings, motions, and papers in an action be signed by at least one attorney of record and to eliminate the requirement of verified pleadings. Only the original paper must be signed, although copies served on the adverse attorneys should indicate by whom the original was signed. Counsel's office address should appear on all pleadings and other papers. This procedure accords with Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-5-9 and 11-7-91 (1972).

Good faith and professional responsibility are the bases of Rule 11. Rule 8(b), for instance, authorizes the use of a general denial "subject to the obligations set forth in Rule 11," meaning only when counsel can in good faith fairly deny all the averments in the adverse pleadings should he do so. Also, a signed pleading may be introduced into evidence in another action by an adverse party as proof of the facts alleged therein.

Verification will be the exception and not the rule to pleading in Mississippi; this is a break from past practice. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-5-21; 11-5-29; 11-5-31; and 11-5-33 (1972). No pleading need be verified or accompanied by affidavit unless there is a specific provision to that effect in rule or statute. See Rules 27 (a) and 65.

Sham pleadings and willful violations are disciplined consistently with past Mississippi procedure. See Sherrill v. Stewart, 197 Miss. 880, 21 So.2d 11 (1945).

The final sentence of Rule 11(b) is intended to ensure that the trial court has sufficient power to deal forcefully and effectively with parties or attorneys who may misuse the liberal, notice pleadings system effectuated by these rules. An objective standard is employed in determining whether Rule 11 sanctions should be imposed. See, Tricon Metals & Services, Inc. v. Topp, 537 So.2d 1331 (Miss.1989).

[Amended effective March 13, 1991.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Construction.
Frivolousness.
Particular cases.
Review.
Sanctions.

In general.

Where plaintiff's counsel commenced a personal injury suit against defendant railroad company one year and eight months after plaintiff's demise, the lawsuit amounted to a nullity; because the railroad company had a complete defense based upon the death of plaintiff some 20 months earlier, the lawsuit was frivolous, and an award of attorney fees was proper under Miss. R. Civ. P. 11 and Miss. Code Ann. § 11-55-5. Ill. Cent. R.R. Co. v. Broussard, — So. 2d —, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 589 (Miss. Ct. App. Sept. 30, 2008), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 19 So. 3d 821, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 745 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Complaints should not be filed in matters where plaintiffs intend to find out in discovery whether or not, and against whom, they have a cause of action, and absent exigent circumstances, plaintiffs' counsel should not file a complaint until sufficient information is obtained, and plaintiffs' counsel believes in good faith that each plaintiff has an appropriate cause of action to assert against a defendant in the jurisdiction where the complaint is to be filed; to do otherwise is an abuse of the system, and is sanctionable under Miss. R. Civ. P. 11. Harold's Auto Parts, Inc. v. Mangialardi, 889 So. 2d 493 (Miss. 2004).

Rule did not apply to a petition to return forfeited property and did not give an attorney the power to substitute his signature for that of his client. Shannon v. N. Miss. Narcotics Unit, 815 So. 2d 1255 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Pursuant to its inherent authority, circuit court had power to impose monetary sanctions against attorney as well as his clients. Bean v. Broussard, 587 So. 2d 908 (Miss. 1991).

Construction.

For purposes of this rule, a claim is frivolous only when, objectively speaking, the pleader or movant has no hope of success. Scruggs v. Saterfiel, 693 So. 2d 924 (Miss. 1997).

This rule must be read and interpreted in light of purpose implicit in it: one of general deterrence of frivolous filings. Tricon Metals & Services, Inc. v. Topp, 537 So. 2d 1331 (Miss. 1989).

Trial court has authority to act sua sponte under this rule, and ought to exercise that authority against backdrop of its inherent authority to impose sanctions upon those who abuse the judicial process. Tricon Metals & Services, Inc. v. Topp, 537 So. 2d 1331 (Miss. 1989).

Frivolousness.

Record contained sufficient evidence to support the chancellor's award of attorney's fees in the amount of $ 800 in favor of a brother because the chancellor set forth his calculations regarding attorney's fees, reviewed the time sheets the brother's attorney submitted, and evaluated the length of the attorney's practice, as well as his skill and expertise, in determining an hourly rate; the chancellor did not abuse his discretion in finding Miss. R. Civ. P. 11 sanctions appropriate based upon his finding that a sister filed a frivolous counterclaim against the brother. Buckalew v. Buccluch (In re Buckalew), 62 So. 3d 460 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Chancery court did not abuse its discretion in imposing sanctions against a nephew on the ground that he instituted a second frivolous lawsuit against his uncles because in the first lawsuit that was dismissed for failure to state a claim, the nephew sued the uncles and requested the chancellor to set aside a deed that conveyed an interest in one tract of land to one of the uncles, and that tract of land was also one of the six tracts of land that was conveyed to the uncles in another deed; the nephew failed to plead his claim of fraudulent conveyance with particularity, and thus, there was no way that he could prove the claim, making the claim frivolous. Walton v. Walton, 52 So. 3d 468 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Trial court did not err in ordering sanctions in a citizen's action against a city, a municipal court, and a municipal court judge pursuant to the Mississippi Litigation Accountability Act and Miss. R. Civ. P. 11(b) because the record clearly supported a finding that the citizen pursued a frivolous collateral action in trial court and that the sanctions were appropriate; in granting sanctions of attorney fees against the citizen pursuant to the factors set out in the Litigation Accountability Act, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-55-7, and Rule 11(b), the trial court found that the action was a frivolous action filed without substantial notification in order to harass the city, municipal court, and municipal court judge. Prewitt v. City of Oxford, 44 So. 3d 922 (Miss. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 2010 Miss. LEXIS 274 (Miss. June 3, 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 131 S. Ct. 294, 178 L. Ed. 2d 142, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 6224, 79 U.S.L.W. 3201 (U.S. 2010).

Refusal to award attorney fees to the employer after the deceased employee's personal-injury suit was dismissed was proper under Miss. R. Civ. P. 11 and the Litigation Accountability Act of 1988, Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-55-1 to 11-55-15, because, although the filing of a claim for a deceased person was frivolous since the claim had no hope of success, the decision to award sanctions was within the discretion of the trial court and the trial court was within its discretion to deny sanctions. The deceased employee's counsel filed the lawsuit and tried to follow up on it, and the employee was alive when it was originally filed; when counsel was unable to contact the employee, counsel pursued the lawsuit on the employee's behalf in order to avoid being barred by the statute of limitations. Ill. Cent. R.R. v. Broussard, 19 So. 3d 821 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Chancellor's decision not to award attorney's fees to the landowner was not an abuse of discretion where there was no evidence that the county filed the title claim in bad faith or without justification; to the contrary, the county presented ample evidence to support its claim. Knight v. Covington County, 27 So. 3d 1163 (Miss. Ct. App. Apr. 21, 2009), writ of certiorari dismissed by 2010 Miss. LEXIS 76 (Miss. Feb. 18, 2010).

Trial court did not err in denying a car purchaser's Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(6) motion for relief from judgment and finding his breach of contract suit against a car dealership was frivolous, where the dealer prepared a cash worksheet, which was not a contract, and the purchaser left with it stating he would return with the purchase money; he returned without the money and, without offering any payment, demanded the car be released to him, and he then filed the instant suit because the dealer refused to release the car to him. Guinn v. Wilkerson, 963 So. 2d 555 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 962 So. 2d 38, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 490 (Miss. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 553 U.S. 1022, 128 S. Ct. 2088, 170 L. Ed. 2d 823, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 3738, 76 U.S.L.W. 3582 (2008).

In a wrongful death action filed by the parents of two passengers who were killed during a police pursuit of the driver of a stolen vehicle, the parents were ordered to pay the county's attorney fees that were incurred in defending the action on appeal because the appeal was frivolous, as they had no hope of success against the county. McCoy v. City of Florence, 949 So. 2d 69 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 949 So. 2d 37, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 113 (Miss. 2007).

Refusal to award attorney's fees to the mother in a child custody action was proper pursuant to the Mississippi Litigation Accountability Act, Miss. Code Ann.

§ 11-55-1 et seq., because the father's claim for custody was not frivolous pursuant Miss. R. Civ. P. 11. He was and remained the legal father of the children because the parties voluntarily signed an acknowledgment of paternity knowing that the father was not the biological father of the children. Adcock v. Van Norman, 918 So. 2d 747 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), affirmed in part and reversed in part by, remanded by 917 So. 2d 86, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 830 (Miss. 2005).

Where a paternal grandmother sought and was granted temporary custody of her minor grandchild through an ex parte proceeding based on claims that the child was sexually abused by the attorney of the child's mother, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the mother's claims for attorney's fees under Miss. R. Civ. P. 11 for filing a frivolous claim. E. J. M. v. A. J. M., 846 So. 2d 289 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

The court did not abuse its discretion in determining that a complaint alleging injuries arising from a 12-car pileup was frivolous because the plaintiff sued an employer based upon no greater knowledge than the fact that the alleged tortfeasor was employed by the employer. Eatman v. City of Moss Point, 809 So. 2d 591 (Miss. 2000).

A prisoner's action asserting that his constitutional rights were violated when he was transferred from a state prison to a private prison facility over his objection was properly determined to be frivolous where the court found that the prisoner had 20 years' experience as a writwriter and that he was capable of distinguishing a meritorious claim from a frivolous one, and the petition failed to cite any constitutional guarantee or right which had been violated. Tubwell v. Grant, 760 So. 2d 687 (Miss. 2000).

Since there was no legitimate reason for naming attorneys of mass tort plaintiffs as parties in bill of peace, there could have been no hope of success nor any viable claim with regard to those attorneys, and there also could have been no hope of success as to those parties not served, and therefore the action was frivolous and sanctions were appropriate. Leaf River Forest Prods., Inc. v. Deakle, 661 So. 2d 188 (Miss. 1995).

Where depositions yielded no proof of alleged conspiracy, plaintiff's pleadings and motions were frivolous and sanctions were correctly imposed, since a reasonable person would not have had hope of success in pursuing the suit. Roussel v. Hutton, 638 So. 2d 1305 (Miss. 1994).

This rule did not place continuing duty on attorney to immediately abandon claim if it later appeared frivolous, and complaint was not frivolous at time it was filed, where attorney believed that case had merit based on information that he had, and that belief was not unreasonable when objectively viewed. Bean v. Broussard, 587 So. 2d 908 (Miss. 1991).

Although plaintiff had a weak case, it was hardly so devoid of any claim of liability as to be frivolous, and moreover judge had refused to grant defendant a directed verdict at the close of plaintiff's case, and therefore circuit judge erred in assessing sanctions against plaintiff for pursuing a frivolous lawsuit. Nichols v. Munn, 565 So. 2d 1132 (Miss. 1990).

Because there was a very real dispute over status of school districts in question, and circuit court's own order stated that Mississippi law was unclear, plaintiff's pleading could not be called frivolous and court abused its discretion in imposing sanctions. Greenville Pub. Sch. Dist. v. Western Line Consol. Sch. Dist., 575 So. 2d 956 (Miss. 1990), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 950, 112 S. Ct. 1512, 117 L. Ed. 2d 649 (1992).

Filing is that which triggers the possibility of sanctions; parties and attorneys do not have a continuing duty to monitor their pleadings and motions and abandon them if subsequent events or information coming to their attention suggest that a claim or defense is frivolous. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Evans, 553 So. 2d 1117 (Miss. 1989).

Particular cases.

Bona fide purchaser (BFP) for value's claim for attorneys fees under Miss. R. Civ. P. 11(b) was properly denied as while the former owner's claim was weak, it was not frivolous, and there was no evidence that the claim was intended to harass the BFP. Tenn. Props. Inc. v. Gillentine, 66 So. 3d 695 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Complaint by a Mississippi resident against an insurer arising out of uninsured motorist provisions of a policy was properly dismissed as time barred; the original complaint was properly refused by the circuit court clerk because it was signed by a Louisiana attorney who was not licensed to practice in Mississippi, and who had not been admitted pro hac vice. Mitchell v. Progressive Ins. Co., 965 So. 2d 679 (Miss. 2007).

In a breach of contract case between a rehabilitative services company, a nursing home, and their two owners, the services company was not entitled to recover attorney fees for the defense of a withdrawn counterclaim under Miss. R. Civ. P. 11(b) and Miss. Code Ann. § 11-55-5(1) because, even though the counterclaim was weak, there was no showing that it lacked any hope of success. Cain v. Cain, 967 So. 2d 654 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a suit for alleged asbestos-related injuries, the trial court's order granting plaintiffs' proposed case management order was reversed, where plaintiffs submitted pleadings which did not, at the very least, include the name or names of the defendants against whom each plaintiff alleged a claim, the time and location of exposure, and the medical condition caused by such exposure; this was a clear failure to comply with Miss. R. Civ. P. 8, 9, 10, and 11. 3M Co. v. Hinton, 910 So. 2d 526 (Miss. 2005).

Distinction addressed by the trial court in granting the landowner's motion to dismiss his trespass and unjust enrichment action, was that the landowner's claims were dismissed with prejudice rather than without prejudice. The trial court determined the dismissal with prejudice to be a final adjudication of the issues, and therefore, the telecommunications company (originally named as a defendant along with the Mississippi Power Company), obtained a favorable final adjudication on the merits of the case; however, the trial court was in the best position to consider the telecommunication company's ore tenus motion for attorney's fees and costs and did not abuse its discretion in denying same where it found the circumstances may have been unusual, but that they were not exceptional. Miss. Power Co. v. Hanson, 905 So. 2d 547 (Miss. 2005).

Executor's misrepresentation of the true facts to the chancery court (his brother's known claims of ownership to the livestock and the evidence of a valid inter vivos gift by the decedent), amounted to "improper conduct" under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-85, and his removal as executor of the estate was proper. Further, the chancellor properly found that the executor (and his attorney), violated the Mississippi Litigation Accountability Act, Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-55-1 to 11-55-15 (Rev. 2002), and Miss. R. Civ. P. 11(b), by their misrepresentations in obtaining an order from the chancery court, permitting them to retrieve the subject livestock, and the chancellor's award of attorney's fees and expenses was proper. In re Estate of Ladner v. Ladner, 909 So. 2d 1051 (Miss. — 2004).

Under Miss. R. Civ. P. 5(d), only proof of service of discovery responses, and not the responses themselves, need be filed with the court, and a plaintiff's motion for judgment based on the defendant's failure to file discovery responses with the court was thus clearly frivolous and justified sanctions under Miss. R. Civ. P. 11(b). McIntosh v. Victoria Corp., 877 So. 2d 519 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

Although the wife manipulated the judicial system by filing for divorce first in one county, and then, dissatisfied with the results, in a second county, the latter court of which incorporated the former court's orders on child custody and property division, because the divorce judgment was void pursuant to the jurisdiction and venue requirements of Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-11, the trial court was also without jurisdiction to enter orders for contempt and attorney fees, although a hearing on sanctions was called for. Roberts v. Roberts, 866 So. 2d 474 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 866 So. 2d 473 (Miss. 2004).

Though the circuit court's ruling approving the Mississippi Department of Corrections' (MDOC) suspension of an employee was reversed on appeal, the appellate court declined to award the employee attorney's fees as a sanction under Miss. R. Civ. P. 11(b) because it found, given the nature and course of the proceedings, that, even though ultimately lost, MDOC's appeal was not subject to sanctions. Hemba v. Miss. Dep't of Corr., 848 So. 2d 909 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

In wife's contempt action against former husband, the wife presented no evidence that the husband issued the 23 checks for child support, which the wife did not present to the bank for months, with fraudulent intent. Rather, the record showed the wife rebuffed the husband's efforts to make good on the checks, and wanted to file yet another complaint causing the husband yet more financial problems and emotional distress, and the wife was properly held in contempt. Broome v. Broome, 832 So. 2d 1247 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Though the Mississippi Life and Health Guaranty Association "stretched the limits" in various defenses it raised to defeat a trustee's claim for coverage for sums lost under an annuity contract with an insolvent insurer, the circuit court did not abuse its discretion by denying the trustee's request for attorney's fees. Bank of Miss. v. Miss. Life & Health Ins. Guar. Ass'n, 850 So. 2d 127 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Circuit court employed incorrect legal standards in considering and imposing sanctions against both parties to insurance dispute, and thus neither sanction order could stand. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Evans, 553 So. 2d 1117 (Miss. 1989).

Review.

This rule vests trial courts with discretionary authority to impose sanctions upon parties or attorneys; where trial court has employed correct legal standards, reviewing court may reverse only where it finds an abuse of discretion. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Evans, 553 So. 2d 1117 (Miss. 1989).

Sanctions.

Doctor's motion for sanctions under Miss. R. Civ. P. 11 and Miss. Code Ann. § 11-55-5 against a patient's attorney in a wrongful death action that alleged medical malpractice was properly denied as the attorney had a reasonable hope of success and had performed due diligence in determining the validity of the claim against the doctor. Todd v. Clayton, 53 So. 3d 827 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Based on the lack of evidence in the record, the fact that a grantee's brother was not a movant in the grantee's motion for Miss. R. Civ. P. 11 sanctions, and ambiguity regarding the calculation of the judgment, there was plain error in a chancellor's award of attorney's fees. Walton v. Walton, 44 So. 3d 1035 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Appellate court could not find that the chancery court erred in concluding that sanctions under neither Miss. R. Civ. P. 11(b) nor the Litigation Accountability Act, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-55-5(1) were warranted because while the chancellor had ordered the property owner to pay the county's fees for producing the records, it was unclear whether the property owner was to pay the bill within 20 days of the hearing or the final judgment. However, once the property owner paid the fees and the county withdrew its motion, the issue became moot. LaCroix v. Marshall County Bd. of Supervisors, 28 So. 3d 650 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 27 So. 3d 404, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 90 (Miss. 2010).

In a will-contest action, even if the matter were properly before the appellate court, the girlfriend of the decedent's motion for sanctions and attorney fees under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-55-5(1) and Miss. R. Civ. P. 11(b) was waived since she filed no notice of appeal for her "counter-appeal" as required by Miss. R. App. P. 4(a). Moreover, once the chancellor held the matter in abeyance, the record did not reflect that the girlfriend raised the motion for sanctions again until her appellate brief and she did not file her notice of appeal until 28 days after entry of the final judgment; at any time in the interim, the girlfriend could have requested a ruling on her motion for sanctions, but she failed to do so. Frazier v. Loew (In re Caspelich), 22 So. 3d 1199 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Violations under the Litigation Accountability Act, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-55-5(1) had to be brought in motion form; thus, the Legislature did not create a separate cause of action by virtue of Miss. R. Civ. P. 11, and the doctor's claim against the attorney was properly dismissed; the attorney did not act in manner that was improper or would warrant sanctions. Rose v. Tullos, 994 So. 2d 734 (Miss. 2008).

Attorney was liable for attorneys' fees and costs under Miss. R. Civ. P. 11 where the several pleadings filed by the attorney constituted "harassment" under the Rule. In re Spencer, 985 So. 2d 330 (Miss. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 555 U.S. 1046, 129 S. Ct. 629, 172 L. Ed. 2d 610, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 8600, 77 U.S.L.W. 3324 (2008).

Chancellor abused her discretion by awarding a judgment of fees and expenses greater than that supported by the record as there was nothing in the Litigation Accountability Act, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-55-1 et seq., or Miss. R. Civ. P. 11 that supported awarding attorneys' fees and expenses in excess of those actually incurred. In re Spencer, 985 So. 2d 330 (Miss. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 555 U.S. 1046, 129 S. Ct. 629, 172 L. Ed. 2d 610, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 8600, 77 U.S.L.W. 3324 (2008).

Chancellor did not abuse her discretion in finding the several pleadings filed by the attorney constituted "harassment" under Miss. R. Civ. P. 11; therefore, the attorney was liable for attorneys' fees and costs under Rule 11. In re Spencer, — So. 2d —, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 126 (Miss. Feb. 28, 2008), substituted opinion at, opinion withdrawn by 985 So. 2d 330, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 327 (Miss. 2008).

Chancellor committed plain error and therefore abused her discretion by awarding a judgment of fees and expenses greater than that supported by the record; there was nothing in the Litigation Accountability Act (Act) or Miss. R. Civ. P. 11 that supported awarding attorneys' fees and expenses in excess of those actually incurred as both the Act and the Rule allowed only for the recovery of "reasonable" fees and costs; the punitive functions of both the Act and the Rule were served by simply awarding reasonable attorneys' fees and costs, not an amount in excess of them. In re Spencer, — So. 2d —, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 126 (Miss. Feb. 28, 2008), substituted opinion at, opinion withdrawn by 985 So. 2d 330, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 327 (Miss. 2008).

Trial court's failure to award attorney fees was not an abuse of discretion when the parties did not address attorney fees in their agreement; further, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to impose sanction or monetary damages. Johnston v. Palmer, 963 So. 2d 586 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Trial court erred in dismissing plaintiffs' case without prejudice pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 11(a) and 41(b) based on the fact that plaintiffs were originally represented by a foreign attorney, who had not been admitted pro hac vice pursuant to Miss. R. App. P. 46 because a subsequent appearance bya member of the Mississippi bar cured the error; the foreign attorney's violation of Miss. R. App. P. 46 and La. St. Bar art. XVI, R. 5.5(a), which prohibited the unauthorized practice of law, warranted sanctions against the attorney and notification of the violation to the Louisiana state bar. Dinet v. Gavagnie, 948 So. 2d 1281 (Miss. 2007).

In an appeal of a judgment terminating his parental rights, there was no evidence in the record that the father pursued litigation in the sole attempt to harass the mother, and the father sought relief for a fundamental right, that of being a parent to his two children; therefore, the appellate court found no abuse of discretion by the chancellor and affirmed the trial court's orders denying the mother's request for reasonable expenses and attorney fees. C.M. v. R.D.H., 947 So. 2d 1023 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Sanctions were not proper where law firm filed an interpleader to determine ownership of attorney fees it held in a county after other attorneys had commenced litigation over the funds the law firm held in another county. Scruggs, Millette, Bozeman & Dent, P.A. v. Merkel & Cocke, P.A, 804 So. 2d 1000 (Miss. 2001).

Trial court improperly awarded sanctions against the Mississippi Department of Human Services in a suit seeking to establish that a divorce decree that did not include a child support award was either void or insufficiently supported; neither argument was necessarily frivolous, and the trial court failed to set forth its reasons for awarding sanctions. Miss. Dep't of Human Servs. v. Shelby, — So. 2d —, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 209 (Miss. Aug. 23, 2001), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 802 So. 2d 89, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 326 (Miss. 2001).

Sanctions were properly awarded to the defendant in an action for intentional infliction of emotional distress based on an allegation that the plaintiff's former wife set out on a course of conduct calculated to lead to the total destruction of the parent-child/grandparent-child relationship between the parties' child and her father's side of the family where the trial court found that the plaintiffs had no hope of sucess in the case. Little v. Collier, 759 So. 2d 454 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Sanctions under this rule were inappropriate in a proceeding arising from a city's failure to act on a request for a building permit because the issue was finally deemed moot due to the expiration of the applicant's option on the property at issue and subsequent sale of the property; when the case was determined to be moot, the issue of sanctions also became moot. City of Madison v. Bryan, 763 So. 2d 162 (Miss. 2000).

As the appellant had a viable claim concerning the type of alimony awarded in the final judgment of divorce, the appellee was not entitled to sanctions, notwithstanding her assertion that the appellant was attempting to harass her by filing a frivolous appeal. Murray v. Murray, — So. 2d —, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 265 (Miss. Ct. App. May 4, 1999), affirmed in part and reversed in part by 754 So. 2d 1200, 2000 Miss. LEXIS 51 (Miss. 2000).

Sanctions were inappropriate in dispute between collection agency and its client, where it was conceivable that collection agency thought it had an arguable claim. Milliken & Michaels, Inc. v. Fred Netterville Lumber Co., 676 So. 2d 266 (Miss. 1996).

Substantial justification existed to support personal representative's filing of complaint alleging undue influence on part of principal beneficiary to will, and there was no evidence that claim was unnecessarily expanded or brought to delay or harass, and therefore sanctions against representative were unwarranted. Pallatin v. Jones, 638 So. 2d 493 (Miss. 1994).

There was nothing in record to suggest that plaintiffs or their attorneys acted in bad faith, and case set forth by plaintiffs' attorneys was not so lacking in any hope for success as to render it frivolous; therefore trial court's imposition of sanctions was reversed. Stevens v. Lake, 615 So. 2d 1177 (Miss. 1993).

Trial court erroneously applied a theory of "continuing duty" to assess merits of lawsuit, and where record failed to demonstrate that plaintiff and her attorney knew of lack of proximate cause at time complaint was filed, sanctions were not warranted. January v. Barnes, 621 So. 2d 915 (Miss. 1992).

Suit filed by candidate in mayoral election could not be deemed frivolous where lower court misapplied the law, and sanctions against candidate were unjustified since there was no evidence that she had harassment or delay in mind when she instituted proceedings. Stringer v. Lucas, 608 So. 2d 1351 (Miss. 1992).

Sanctions were improperly imposed where plaintiff filed suit in chancery court in good faith; by virtue of prior precedent, plaintiff was following what it believed to be the correct procedure for trying questions of title. McDonald's Corp. v. Robinson Indus., Inc., 592 So. 2d 927 (Miss. 1991).

Circuit judge did not err in assessing $500 sanction against plaintiff for his false answer to interrogatory, which neither he nor his counsel ever attempted to correct. Nichols v. Munn, 565 So. 2d 1132 (Miss. 1990).

Sanctions against plaintiff were appropriate, where plaintiff had no hope of success on its claim for injunctive relief, and defendant had a complete defense to plaintiff's claim for repayment of bank note and advances on commissions. Tricon Metals & Services, Inc. v. Topp, 537 So. 2d 1331 (Miss. 1989).

Award of attorney's fees was reversed, where case involved one of the most litigated issues in state for the preceding eight years, and the public concern was meritorious. Hill v. Thompson, 564 So. 2d 1 (Miss. 1989).

Although pro se parties should be held to same rules of procedure and substantive law as represented parties, plaintiff would not be penalized via sanctions for exaggerating her claim, where defendant was put to no additional expense and plaintiff had a justifiable claim. Dethlefs v. Beau Maison Dev. Corp., 511 So. 2d 112 (Miss. 1987).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. When statute of limitations begins to run upon action against attorney for legal malpractice—deliberate wrongful acts or omissions. 67 A.L.R.5th 587.

Law Reviews — Taming an Elephant: A Closer Look at Mass Tort Screening and the Impact of Mississippi Tort Reforms, 26 Miss. C. L. Rev. 253, 2006/2007.

Rule 12. Defenses and objections — when and how presented — by pleading or motion — motion for judgment on the pleadings.

(a) When presented. A defendant shall serve his answer within thirty days after the service of the summons and complaint upon him or within such time as is directed pursuant to Rule 4. A party served with a pleading stating a cross-claim against him shall serve an answer thereto within thirty days after the service upon him. The plaintiff shall serve his reply to a counter-claim in the answer within thirty days after service of the answer or, if a reply is ordered by the court, within thirty days after service of the order, unless the order otherwise directs. The service of a motion permitted under this rule alters these periods of time as follows, unless a different time is fixed by order of the court:

(1) if the court denies the motion or postpones its disposition until the trial on the merits, the responsive pleading shall be served within ten days after notice of the court's action;

(2) if the court grants a motion for a more definite statement, the responsive pleading shall be served within ten days after the service of the more definite statement.

The times stated under this subparagraph may be extended, once only, for a period not to exceed ten days, upon the written stipulation of counsel filed in the records of the action.

(b) How presented. Every defense, in law or fact, to a claim for relief in any pleading, whether a claim, counter-claim, cross-claim, or third-party claim, shall be asserted in the responsive pleading thereto if one is required, except that the following defenses may at the option of the pleader be made by motion:

(1) Lack of jurisdiction over the subject matter,

(2) Lack of jurisdiction over the person,

(3) Improper venue,

(4) Insufficiency of process,

(5) Insufficiency of service of process,

(6) Failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted,

(7) Failure to join a party under Rule 19.

No defense or objection is waived by being joined with one or more other defenses or objections in a responsive pleading or motion. If a pleading sets forth a claim for relief to which the adverse party is not required to serve a responsive pleading, he may assert at the trial any defense in law or fact to that claim for relief. If, on a motion to dismiss for failure of the pleading to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, matters outside the pleading are presented to and not excluded by the court, the motion shall be treated as one for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in Rule 56, and all parties shall be given reasonable opportunity to present all material made pertinent to such a motion by Rule 56; however, if on such a motion matters outside the pleadings are not presented, and if the motion is granted, leave to amend shall be granted in accordance with Rule 15(a).

(c) Motion for judgment on the pleadings. After the pleadings are closed but within such time as not to delay the trial, any party may move for judgment on the pleadings. If, on a motion for judgment on the pleadings, matters outside the pleadings are presented to and not excluded by the court, the motion shall be treated as one for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in Rule 56, and all parties shall be given reasonable opportunity to present all material made pertinent to such a motion by Rule 56; however, if on such a motion matters outside the pleadings are not presented, and if the motion is granted, leave to amend shall be granted in accordance with Rule 15 (a).

(d) Preliminary hearings. The defenses specifically enumerated (1) through (7) in subdivision (b) of this rule, whether made in a pleading or by motion, and the motion for judgment on the pleadings (subdivision (c) of this rule), shall be heard and determined before trial on application of any party, unless the court orders that the hearing and determination thereof be deferred until the trial.

(e) Motion for more definite statement. If a pleading to which a responsive pleading is permitted is so vague or ambiguous that a party cannot reasonably be required to frame a responsive pleading, he may move for a more definite statement before interposing his responsive pleading. The motion shall point out the defects complained of and the details desired. If the motion is granted and the order of the court is not obeyed within ten days after notice of the order or within such other time as the court may fix, the court may strike the pleading to which the motion was directed or make such order as it deems just.

(f) Motion to strike. Upon motion made by a party before responding to a pleading or, if no responsive pleading is permitted by these rules, upon motion made by a party within thirty days after the service of the pleading upon him or upon the court's own initiative at any time, the court may order stricken from any pleading any insufficient defense or any redundant, immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous matter.

(g) Consolidation of defenses in motion. A party who makes a motion under this rule may join with it any other motions herein provided for and then available to him. If a party makes a motion under this rule but omits therefrom any defense or objection then available to him which this rule permits to be raised by motion, he shall not thereafter make a motion based on the defense or objection so omitted, except a motion as provided in subdivision (h)(2) hereof on any of the grounds there stated.

(h) Waiver or preservation of certain defenses.

(1) A defense of lack of jurisdiction over the person, improper venue, insufficiency of process, or insufficiency of service of process is waived (A) if omitted from a motion in the circumstances described in subdivision (g), or (B) if it is neither made by a motion under this rule nor included in a responsive pleading or an amendment thereof permitted by Rule 15 (a) to be made as a matter of course.

(2) A defense of failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, a defense of failure to join a party indispensable under Rule 19, and an objection of failure to state a legal defense to a claim may be made in any pleading permitted or ordered under Rule 7(a), or by motion for judgment on the pleadings, or at the trial on the merits.

(3) Whenever it appears by suggestion that the parties or otherwise that the court lacks jurisdiction of the subject matter, the court shall dismiss the action or transfer the action to the court of proper jurisdiction.

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 12 is to expedite and simplify the pretrial phase of litigation while promoting the just disposition of cases. The periods of time referred to in Rule 12(a) relate to service of process, motions, pleadings or notices, and not to the filing of the instruments. Because of the nature of divorce cases, Rules 12(a)(1) and (2) do not apply to such proceedings. See also M.R.C.P. 81(b). Rule 12(a) represents a marked change from the former procedures which linked the return date or response date to a term of court. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-5-17; 11-7-121; and 13-3-13 (1972).

Rules 12(b)(6) and 12(c) serve the same function, practically, as the general demurrer. See Investors Syndicate of America, Inc. v. City of Indian Rocks Beach, Florida, 434 F.2d 871, 874 (5th Cir. 1970). They are the proper motions for testing the legal sufficiency of the complaint; to grant the motions there must appear to a certainty that the plaintiff is entitled to no relief under any set of facts that could be proved in support of the claim.

If the complaint is dismissed with leave to amend and no amendment is received, the dismissal is a final judgment and is appealable unless the dismissal relates to only one of several claims. See Ginsburg v. Stern, 242 F.2d 379 (3rd Cir. 1957).

A motion pursuant to Rule 12(c) may be granted if it is not made so that its disposition would delay the trial; the moving party must be clearly entitled to judgment. See Greenberg v. General Mills Fun Group, Inc., 478 F.2d 254, 256 (5th Cir. 1973).

Under 12(d), the decision to defer should be made when the determination will involve the merits of the action, thus making deference generally applicable to motions on Rules 12(b)(6) and (c).

Rule 12(e) abolishes the bill of particulars. Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-97 (1972). The motion for a more definite statement requires merely that — a more definite statement — and not evidentiary details. The motion will lie only when a responsive pleading is required, and is the only remedy for a vague or ambiguous pleading.

Ordinarily, Rule 12(f) will require only the objectionable portion of the pleadings to be stricken, and not the entire pleading. Motions going to redundant or immaterial allegations, or allegations of which there is doubt as to relevancy, should be denied, the issue to be decided being whether the allegation is prejudicial to the adverse party. Motions to strike a defense for insufficiency should, if granted, be granted with leave to amend. Rule 12(f) is generally consistent with past Mississippi procedure. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-59(3) (1972); Parish v. Lumbermen's Mut. Cas. Co., 242 Miss. 288, 134 So.2d 488 (1961).

Rule 12(g) allows the urging of all defenses or objections in one motion with no waiver. There are three important qualifications which permit at least two rounds of motions: (1) the requirement of consolidation applies only to defenses and objections then available to the moving party;

(2) the requirement applies only to defenses and objections which this rule permits to be raised by motion; (3) the prohibition against successive motions is subject to the exceptions stated in Rule 12(h).

Rule 12(h)(1) states that certain specified defenses which may be available to a party when he makes a pre-answer motion, but which he omitted from the motion, are waived. A party who by motion invites the court to pass upon a threshold defense should bring forward all the specified defenses he then has and thus allow the court to do a reasonably complete job. The waiver reinforces the policy of Rule 12(g) forbidding successive motions. 5 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 1391 (1969).

Rule 12(h)(2) preserves three defenses against waiver during the pleading, motion, discovery, and trial stages of an action; however, such defenses are waived if not presented before the close of trial. 5 Wright & Miller, supra, § 1392.

Under Rule 12(h)(3) a question of subject matter jurisdiction may be presented at any time, either by motion or answer. Further, it may be asserted as a motion for relief from a final judgment under M.R.C.P. 60(b)(4) or may be presented for the first time on appeal. Welch v. Bryant, 157 Miss. 559, 128 So. 734 (1930); Brown v. Bank, 31 Miss. 454 (1856). This provision preserves the traditional Mississippi practice of transferring actions between the circuit and chancery courts, as provided by Miss. Const. § 157 (all causes that may be brought in the circuit court whereof the chancery court has jurisdiction shall be transferred to the chancery court) and § 162 (all causes that may be brought in the chancery court whereof the circuit court has exclusive jurisdiction shall be transferred to the circuit court), but not reversing for a court's improperly exercising its jurisdiction, Miss. Const. § 147. Cazeneuve v. Curell, 70 Miss. 521, 13 So. 32 (1893).

[Amended effective February 1, 1990.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction.
Affirmative defenses.
Costs.
Dismissal.
Failure to state a claim.
Hearings.
Motions.
Necessary parties.
Personal jurisdiction.
Pleadings.
Service of process.
Subject matter jurisdiction.
Summary judgment.
Venue.
Waiver.

Construction.

A court's inquiries under M.R.C.P. Rule 12(b)(2) are not only separate from, but also precede, consideration of Rule 12(b)(6) inquiries. Petters v. Petters, 560 So. 2d 722 (Miss. 1990).

When a complaint is tested via motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, its sufficiency in substantial part is determined by reference to M.R.C.P. Rules 8(a) and (e). Grantham v. Mississippi Dep't of Corrections, 522 So. 2d 219 (Miss. 1988).

When a complaint is tested via motion under M.R.C.P. Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted, sufficiency of complaint is in substantial part determined by reference to subdivisions (a) and (e) of Rule 8. Luckett v. Mississippi Wood, Inc., 481 So. 2d 288 (Miss. 1985).

Affirmative defenses.

In a breach of contract action brought by the employee, the employer did not assert any affirmative defenses in his answer to the employee's complaint; rather, the employer waited and asserted them in his motion for summary judgment, which was more than four years later. When a responsive pleading was required, all affirmative defenses must be raised in that pleading, Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b); therefore, the chancellor erred in relying on those affirmative defenses in reaching his judgment. Harris v. Tom Griffith Water Well & Conductor Serv., 26 So. 3d 352 (Miss. Ct. App. Jan. 27, 2009), reversed by 26 So. 3d 338, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 46, 30 I.E.R. Cas. (BNA) 586 (Miss. 2010).

Costs.

Trial court did not err in failing to award plaintiff her expenses, costs and attorney's fees when defendants' M.R.C.P. Rule 12 motions to dismiss were denied; provision in Rule 56 (h) of award of costs to prevailing party was not applicable to motions under Rule 12. Joseph v. Tennessee Partners, Inc., 501 So. 2d 371 (Miss. 1987).

Dismissal.

Three cases were properly dismissed for insufficiency of process and insufficiency of service of process, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(4)-(5), where the process issued to defendants was deficient and not in substantial compliance with Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(b), a pro se response by one defendant might have constituted an appearance under Miss. R. Civ. P. 55, but was not a valid answer because it did not comport with the filing requirement of Miss. R. Civ. P. 5(d). Fletcher v. Limeco Corp., 996 So. 2d 773 (Miss. 2008), remanded by 32 So. 3d 429, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 182 (Miss. 2010).

Because Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-36(15) clearly and unambiguously stated that no action against a health care provider could be commenced without providing a 60-day pre-suit notice and because the personal representative of a decedent's estate failed to provide any written notice to a nursing care facility concerning her intent to commence a wrongful death suit, the nursing care facility was entitled to a dismissal. Forest Hill Nursing Ctr. & Long Term Care Mgmt., LLC v. Brister, 992 So. 2d 1179 (Miss. 2008).

Although the state legislature could not promulgate statutes dictating to the judiciary what a party was required to attach to pleadings filed in court, the legislature had constitutional authority to set out pre-suit requirements such as the requirement that a litigant obtain an expert consultation prior to commencing a medical malpractice suit. Where the attorney representing the personal representative of the estate of a decedent in a wrongful death suit against a nursing care facility admitted that he did not consult an expert prior to commencing the lawsuit, the nursing care facility was entitled to a dismissal. Forest Hill Nursing Ctr. & Long Term Care Mgmt., LLC v. Brister, 992 So. 2d 1179 (Miss. 2008).

Trial court properly dismissed individuals' complaint against the Supreme Court chief justice for appointing a special chancellor to hear outstanding matters regarding two underlying cases as the chief justice enjoyed judicial immunity and the appointment was a judicial act. Vinson v. Prather, 879 So. 2d 1053 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In initial suit by homeowners against a seller, for fraud, where the homebuilder appeared for a deposition pursuant to a subpoena, the homebuilder did not make an appearance when the homebuilder was not yet named as a party. Thus, when the homebuilder was later added as defendant in the homeowners' negligence action, and failed to timely answer, entry of default judgment was proper; further, the homebuilder's alleged inability to contact the homeowners' counsel did not annul the homebuilder's obligation to timely answer under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12. Williams v. Kelly, 872 So. 2d 783 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Motion to dismiss a breach of contract claim was improper and was reversed on de novo review. A company properly pled a breach where it pled that a partnership with which it had a contract for the sale of land materially breached the contract first and where it pled that the partnership took actions, including wrongfully withholding a legal description of the property, that violated the covenant of good faith and fair dealing by preventing the company from fulfilling the terms of the agreement. Favre Prop. Mgmt., LLC v. Cinque Bambini, 863 So. 2d 1037 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Dismissal, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6), of an inmate's claim against the employees of the Missouri Department of Corrections was proper where the employees were acting within the course and scope of their employment; the inmate's negligence action was barred by the Mississippi Tort Claims Act, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-1 et seq. Whitt v. Gordon, 872 So. 2d 71 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a suit filed by a former employer against a former employee, the employment agreement that was presented to the chancery court was not a valid enforceable contract as it had lapsed by its own terms without renewal more than a year before the lawsuit was filed. As it was simple contract law that a valid and enforceable contract was required to maintain an action for breach of contract or injunctive relief thereon, the chancery court did not err in granting a motion to dismiss. HeartSouth, PLLC v. Boyd, 865 So. 2d 1095 (Miss. 2003).

In a suit filed by a former employer against a former employee, the employment agreement was not ambiguous, and by its own language the employment agreement had in fact lapsed one year before the employee left the employer's organization and one year and 16 days before the employer filed its complaint for breach of contract. Therefore, the court did not err in finding that the contract had in fact expired and was invalid and unenforceable. HeartSouth, PLLC v. Boyd, 865 So. 2d 1095 (Miss. 2003).

Court properly dismissed a suit filed by a former employer against a former employee, where the covenant not to compete expired 16 days before the filing of the complaint, and the agreement lapsed for want of renewal. HeartSouth, PLLC v. Boyd, 865 So. 2d 1095 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court properly dismissed the dependents' suit against the municipal officials under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(c) where, before municipal officials could be found negligent, thereby entitling a plaintiff to recover, the plaintiff had to show the existence of a legal duty owed to him by the municipal officials; any assertion that the municipal officials breached a duty to the decedent because they failed to guarantee his safety and well-being was unrealistic and untenable, given that the municipal officials were not present when the threat on the decedent's life was made, and the municipal officials, acting in their individual capacity, owed no duty to the decedent. Dependants of Reid v. City of Canton, 858 So. 2d 163 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

While truck owner's claim to determine insurance coverage under Miss. R. Civ. P. 57(b)(2) was futile because the insurance company did not deny coverage, and dismissal as to that claim was proper, the trial court abused its discretion in denying the truck owner's motions to compel discovery, and for leave to file a first amended complaint, to add a claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress based on the plain language of Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(a). Poindexter v. S. United Fire Ins. Co., 838 So. 2d 964 (Miss. 2003).

Action for wrongful death of inmate was properly dismissed; fact that medical treatment was inadequate for severity of inmate's condition did not indicate that doctors in question committed "willful wrongs or malicious acts" sufficient to overcome defendants' qualified immunity. Sparks v. Kim, 701 So. 2d 1113 (Miss. 1997).

Governor's contested actions were discretionary and, as such, mandamus could not lie, and citizens' challenge to permit for building of hazardous waste treatment facility should have been dismissed for failure to state a claim. USPCI of Miss., Inc. v. State ex rel. McGowan, 688 So. 2d 783 (Miss. 1997).

Chancery court did not err in dismissing plaintiff's suit against surveyor without stating any grounds for the dismissal, where it was obvious that plaintiff had merely claimed error or negligence, but failed to specifically show in what way defendant was negligent. Weeks v. Thomas, 662 So. 2d 581 (Miss. 1995).

Board of supervisors can only make a county liable for a contract by a valid order duly entered upon its minutes, and where there was a clear absence of such approval the trial court's dismissal was proper. Butler v. Board of Supervisors, 659 So. 2d 578 (Miss. 1995).

Dismissal of action against school district for negligent retention and supervision of employee was premature, and required remand for further discovery and development of facts. T.M. v. Noblitt, 650 So. 2d 1340 (Miss. 1995).

As a matter of law, prisoner's civil rights complaint did not state a claim upon which relief could be granted, since being housed with inmate diagnosed with active tuberculosis was responsibility of classification committee, not the five named defendants, and prisoner's complaint was not properly pled since it did not state acts or omissions by named defendants which demonstrated conduct amounting to deliberate indifference. Bilbo v. Thigpen, 647 So. 2d 678 (Miss. 1994).

In view of notice pleading requirements of M.R.C.P. Rule 8, client's complaint against his former attorney stated at least one actionable cause upon which relief could be granted, and therefore summary judgment in favor of attorney was reversed. Owen v. Pringle, 621 So. 2d 668 (Miss. 1993).

Trial court properly granted defendant's motion to dismiss, since plaintiffs received full satisfaction of their claim when default judgment was paid by a co-defendant, together with interest; plaintiffs were thus estopped from pursuing any claim for relief against defendant. Evans v. Sharpley, 607 So. 2d 1210 (Miss. 1992).

Proper motion for defendant to make at the close of plaintiffs' case was a motion to dismiss pursuant to M.R.C.P. Rule 41(b), rather than Rule 12(b)(6); under Rule 41(b), judge must consider the evidence fairly, rather than in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. Century 21 Deep S. Properties, Ltd. v. Corson, 612 So. 2d 359 (Miss. 1992).

Since circuit court acted entirely within the pleadings and struck all affidavits before ruling, supreme court would treat judgment below as though court had dismissed complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted, as opposed to one disposed of on summary judgment. State ex rel. Moore v. Molpus, 578 So. 2d 624 (Miss. 1991).

Motion for dismissal under subdivision (b)(6) of this rule raises an issue of law, over which supreme court conducts de novo review. Tucker v. Hinds County, 558 So. 2d 869 (Miss. 1990).

To grant a motion under subdivision (b)(6) of this rule, it must appear to a certainty that plaintiff is entitled to no relief under any set of facts that could be provided in support of his claim. Martin v. Phillips, 514 So. 2d 338 (Miss. 1987).

Defendant had no right of appeal from refusal of trial judge to grant his M.R.C.P. Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss the plaintiff's complaint; any defects had been cured procedurally by subsequent proceedings in the case. The complaint, when conformed with the proof, stated a totally viable claim. Stanton & Assocs. v. Bryant Constr. Co., 464 So. 2d 499 (Miss. 1985).

Failure to state a claim.

Because father's claim on a promissory note against a son would still be futile if a trial court allowed him to amend it under Miss. R. Civ. P. 15 due to the running of the statute of limitations, trial court did not err in denying the father's motion to amend and granting the son's motion to dismiss under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Merideth v. Merideth, 987 So. 2d 477 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Medical malpractice suit was properly dismissed for failure to state a claim because plaintiffs did comply with Miss. Code Ann. § 11-1-58 by filing with their complaint either an expert disclosure or a certificate of counsel stating that an expert disclosure had not yet been obtained because of the running of the statute of limitations under Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-36; strict compliance with Miss. Code Ann. § 11-1-58 was mandatory, and defendants, a medical center and the estate of a deceased doctor, which had been substituted as a defendant under Miss. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1) after the doctor's death and reasserted the defenses raised by the doctor, had both raised as an affirmative defense plaintiffs' failure to comply with the statute. Caldwell v. N. Miss. Med. Ctr., Inc., 956 So. 2d 888 (Miss. 2007).

Clearly, more than 90 days after the first notice to creditors had elapsed when plaintiff (a surviving child), filed his claim against the estate, claiming he was entitled to all the insurance proceeds per the decedent's property settlement with a former wife. However, when the decedent died, plaintiff was a minor, and according to the terms of the decedent's will, the decedent's second and surviving spouse had been appointed testamentary guardian of plaintiff's person and estate; defendant was in a fiduciary relationship with plaintiff, and in that capacity, she not only had an obligation to initiate any and all claims which plaintiff may have had, but she had an obligation to initiate them timely, and therefore, the chancery court erred in granting defendant's Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b) motion. Thornhill v. Thornhill, 905 So. 2d 747 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Court did not err in granting an insurer's motion to dismiss an insured's action pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) because the insured pled no facts to support a contention that the insurer interfered with proper payment under a policy. Ngo v. Centennial Ins. Co., 893 So. 2d 1076 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Issue on appeal was whether the officers were entitled to equitable review of their claims relating to compensation and retirement benefits, which were excluded from state service grievance procedure. However, the Mississippi Supreme Court had already found that Miss. Code Ann. § 25-13-11(e) (Rev. 2003) was constitutional after an appeal by one of said officers; as such, the officers' grievances (in a subsequent combined action), were barred by the traditional notions of res judicata, collateral estoppel, and/or for failure to exhaust all administrative remedies and the trial court properly granted the Mississippi Department of Public Safety's Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss. Farmer v. State Dep't of Pub. Safety, 907 So. 2d 981 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 910 So. 2d 574, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 461 (Miss. 2005).

Finding in favor of the deceased purchaser's wife and against the seller was proper pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) where the seller did not allege that the wife transferred or conveyed the money. She simply chose not probate her husband's will when the estate was insolvent. Greenville Lumber Co. v. Hammett, 889 So. 2d 502 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court did not err in dismissing the client's claim against the first lawyer pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) where he had neither personally participated in a negligent act nor directly supervised anyone who had committed wrongful conduct; there was nothing in the record to suggest that the attorney had any contact whatsoever with the client, and the client's bare allegations that the partners, including the first attorney, regularly consulted one another on the cases being handled by the firm were not supported by the record. Keszenheimer v. Boyd, 897 So. 2d 190 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 896 So. 2d 373 (Miss. 2005).

Where the car owner's vehicle, a total loss, was stored at the premises of a towing company, and where the car owner had refused to accept the insurer's offer of settlement, the car owner had no viable claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress when the insurer refused to include towing or storage expenses; the car owner did suffer from very severe health problems (unrelated to the accident), but his claim that the insurer took advantage of his condition and engaged in bullying tactics, telling him to "take it or leave it," with respect to the settlement offer, did not constitute conduct that was so egregious as to "shock the conscience." Thus, the trial court properly granted the insurer's motion to dismiss pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Poindexter v. Southern United Fire Ins. Co., 880 So. 2d 373 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Court erred in dismissing, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6), a student's personal injury lawsuit against a university and two of its police officers on the ground that the action was barred by the statute of limitations; applying the statute as written, the student timely filed the lawsuit. Page v. Univ. of S. Miss., 878 So. 2d 1003 (Miss. 2004).

Where two parents were unable to produce evidence to rebut the presumption that a principal acted in good faith by reporting suspected child abuse, a trial court properly granted a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim since the principal had immunity in an action alleging defamation, slander, libel, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and false light. Howe v. Andereck, 882 So. 2d 240 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 882 So. 2d 772 (Miss. 2004).

Dismissal under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) of plaintiffs' claims was proper as to the potential wrongful death claims because the child was still alive; therefore, there was no claim upon which relief could be granted. In re Brantley v. Brantley, 865 So. 2d 1126 (Miss. 2004).

County was not estopped from asserting the statute of limitations defense in a case involving a claim filed under the Mississippi Tort Claims Act, Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-46-1 to 11-46-23, because the statements of a county employee regarding the payment of medical bills were not fraudulent since the injured party had failed to submit any valid medical claims; therefore, the trial court did not err in dismissing the case for failing to state a cause of action. Williams v. Clay County, 861 So. 2d 953 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court did not err in dismissing, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6), a patient's complaint against a state hospital and physicians for failure to comply with Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-11 of the Mississippi Tort Claims Act; the court found that (1) the record did not reflect that the patient had complied with the notice of claim requirements under § 11-46-11(3), and (2) the patient waited over two years to file his action, which fell outside the limitations period. Southern v. Miss. State Hosp., 853 So. 2d 1212 (Miss. 2003).

Because a citizen failed to file a notice of claim against the city pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-11(1) of the Mississippi Tort Claims Act, and because a document agreed to between the citizen and the city four years earlier did not serve as proper notice, the citizen failed to comply with the Act and the action was properly dismissed under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Black v. City of Tupelo, 853 So. 2d 1221 (Miss. 2003).

Because parents waited over one year after their son's death to file an action under the Mississippi Tort Claims Act, Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-46-1 to -23, against the State and state agencies, and nothing operated to toll the statute of limitations under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-11, the action was time-barred and properly dismissed pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Stockstill v. State, 854 So. 2d 1017 (Miss. 2003).

As a hazardous condition allegedly causing plaintiff's decedent's death did not arise out of the condition of the property created by the owner or existing in a concealed state, but was a hazard created by the general contractor, the trial court properly granted the owner's motion to dismiss under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Bevis v. Linkous Constr. Co., 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 773, 856 So. 2d 535 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 860 So. 2d 1223 (Miss. 2003).

Where a shareholder sued a corporation that allegedly acted wrongfully to freeze her out of her 10 percent ownership interest, in light of the compelling evidence presented by the shareholder on her mismanagement claim, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the corporation's motion under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6) to dismiss that count for failure to state a claim. Missala Marine Servs. v. Odom, 861 So. 2d 290 (Miss. 2003).

Defendant's motion to dismiss a breach of contract case for failure to state a claim, based on an arbitration clause in the parties' contract, was properly denied; defendant, by failing to pay its half of the arbitration fees as required by the contract, breached the arbitration provision and therefore waived its right to compel its protections. Sanderson Farms, Inc. v. Gatlin, 848 So. 2d 828 (Miss. 2003).

Other than the guest's reference to the general law on fraud, the guest did not present any meaningful arguments and no legal support for a civil claim with regard to misrepresentations in discovery by the store; thus, the trial court properly dismissed the guest's claim for fraud under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b) for failure to state a claim. Gamble v. Dollar Gen. Corp., 852 So. 2d 5 (Miss. 2003).

Dismissal for failure to state a claim of a retired state employee's equal protection challenge to the Legislature's establishment of a supplemental retirement plan for legislators was proper; since the different treatment of retired legislators had a rational basis in the financial uncertainties they risked, the proper course in seeking a remedy was political, not judicial. Dillard v. Musgrove, 838 So. 2d 261 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court did not err in dismissing with prejudice a fraud and misrepresentation case against an insurer because the claim was barred by the six-year statute of limitations in Miss. Code Ann. § 722; the cause of action was not tolled by Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-67 because the insurer did nothing to prevent two insureds from discovering their cause of action. Stephens v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc'y of the United States, 850 So. 2d 78 (Miss. 2003).

Where a cancer patient died while a medical malpractice suit he filed was pending, and his daughter was substituted as plaintiff and was appointed executrix of his estate, the trial court erred in dismissing the suit for failing to state a claim, as the amended complaint filed by the daughter on behalf of the estate sought recovery for injuries the patient suffered during his lifetime. Necaise v. Sacks, 841 So. 2d 1098 (Miss. 2003).

Under subsection (b)(6), it was beyond doubt that the father would be unable to prove any set of facts in support of his allegations against the Department of Human Services; as such, dismissal by the circuit judge was appropriate and mandated by law. Little v. Miss. Dep't of Human Servs., 835 So. 2d 9 (Miss. 2002), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 878, 124 S. Ct. 296, 157 L. Ed. 2d 142 (2003).

On a motion to dismiss a third party complaint against an insurance company seeking defense and indemnification in the main action against the third party plaintiff, the court properly examined the third party plaintiff's insurance policy as the policy was specifically referred to in the third party complaint, the policy was central and necessary to the third party action, the defendant tendered the entire policy, and the policy directly refuted the third party complaint's assertions. Sennett v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 757 So. 2d 206 (Miss. 2000).

Hearings.

Because a citizen's failure to file a notice of claim under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-11(1) of the Mississippi Tort Claims Act and the dismissal of the citizen's previous lawsuit were not in dispute, and because the only remaining questions were ones of law, the trial court's error in failing to hold a hearing prior to granting the city's motion to dismiss under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) was harmless error only. Black v. City of Tupelo, 853 So. 2d 1221 (Miss. 2003).

Motions.

Trial court's grant of the employer's motion to dismiss or, in the alternative, motion for summary judgment, was proper where the letter in question was not sufficient to place an affirmative duty on the employer to preserve the machine; further, the Supreme Court refused to recognize a separate tort of negligent spoliation of evidence. Richardson v. Sara Lee Corp., 847 So. 2d 821 (Miss. 2003).

A Rule 12(c) motion is premature until all necessary responsive pleadings have been filed. Fortenberry v. City of Hattiesburg, 758 So. 2d 1023 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

A moving party has a choice of making a M.R.C.P. 4(h) objection to process by (1) filing a M.R.C.P. 12(b)(4) or (5) motion prior to filing a responsive pleading, (2) by asserting other general affirmative defenses, or (3) by filing them simultaneously therewith; thus, where the issue of service of process was raised in the defendant's initial responsive pleading, it was properly and timely pled. Collom v. Senholtz, 767 So. 2d 215 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

A formal response is not required to contest a motion to dismiss as the court may examine only the complaint itself in determining whether to grant or deny the motion. Moore ex rel. City of Aberdeen v. Byars, 757 So. 2d 243 (Miss. 2000).

Necessary parties.

Trial court did not err in dismissing claim for sub-surface trespass and conversion, due to plaintiff's failure to join all affected mineral interest holders. Ladner v. Quality Exploration Co., 505 So. 2d 288 (Miss. 1987).

Personal jurisdiction.

As a company's business contacts with the state were not systematic and continuous, and the personal injury lawsuit filed by an individual did not arise from the company's contacts in the state, the company's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction was affirmed. Williams v. Bud Wilson's Mobile Home Serv., 887 So. 2d 830 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 888 So. 2d 1177 (Miss. 2004).

Notwithstanding Miss. Code Ann. § 93-25-9(b), the chancellor could have exercised jurisdiction over the child support question if the father, a resident of California, had voluntarily entered a general appearance, or filed a responsive pleading that effectively waived the issue of jurisdiction. However, while it was correct that the father filed a written answer, with leave of court, he filed an amended answer, which contested jurisdiction; same related back to the filing date of the original answer, and despite his written entry of appearance, and a motion for guardian ad litem, the facts did not suffice for a general appearance or for personal jurisdiction over the father for the purpose of modifying child support. Scaife v. Scaife, 880 So. 2d 1089 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Supreme Court of Mississippi finds that the majority position is the better rule; that is, a Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(2) motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction is not converted to a motion for summary judgment when the trial court considers matters outside the pleadings. Horne v. Mobile Area Water & Sewer Sys., 897 So. 2d 972 (Miss. 2004), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 125 S. Ct. 1652, 161 L. Ed. 2d 479 (2005), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 125 S. Ct. 1662, 161 L. Ed. 2d 480 (2005).

Trial court erred in dismissing, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12, a purchaser's action to recover for defects in a mobile home; the purchaser's act of filing an amended complaint within the relevant statute of limitations, Miss. Code Ann. § 63-17-159(6), was sufficient to defeat defendants' motion to dismiss, as the amended complaint, filed pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15, provided defendants with the required notice under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4. King v. Am. RV Ctrs., Inc., 862 So. 2d 558 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Question of personal jurisdiction initially turns on the well-pleaded allegations of the complaint; on a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, all allegations of the complaint, together with reasonable inferences flowing therefrom, are accepted as true. R.C. Constr. Co. v. National Office Sys., 622 So. 2d 1253 (Miss. 1993).

A non-resident defendant may, on a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, litigate the inherent factual questions through the use of live testimony or affidavits; if the court finds facts that sustain his defense, it should dismiss. R.C. Constr. Co. v. National Office Sys., 622 So. 2d 1253 (Miss. 1993).

Personal injury action against railroad should have been dismissed for lack of personal jurisdiction; railroad was a nonresident corporation not amenable to suit in Mississippi, where it had not qualified to do business in state and had no agent for process in state, nor did record reflect name of any other officer, agent, employee, or personnel within state. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. v. Fox, 609 So. 2d 357 (Miss. 1992).

Trial court obtained jurisdiction over nonresident defendant by virtue of fact that it qualified to do business in Mississippi and appointed an agent for service of process; court erred in dismissing complaint for lack of personal jurisdiction. Read v. Sonat Offshore Drilling, Inc., 515 So. 2d 1229 (Miss. 1987).

Pleadings.

Trial court erred in dismissing plaintiff's action against defendant under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) and/or (c) because, as permitted by Miss. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2) and (e)(2), plaintiff permissibly pleaded a claim of both negligence and assault, notwithstanding that the claims were inconsistent. Jordan v. Wilson, 5 So. 3d 442 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 11 So. 3d 1250, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 130 (Miss. 2009).

Judgment was properly awarded to plaintiffs in their suit against defendants for encroachment on their property where nothing in defendants' motion for a new trial indicated that the chancery court erred in not requiring a deraignment of title, or in ruling the way it did in the absence of a deraignment of title; no Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(e) motion was ever filed to request that plaintiffs deraign their title. Crosswhite v. Golmon, 939 So. 2d 831 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In a confirmation of title case, the failure to deraign title is not grounds for dismissal, but a party may file a Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(e) motion to force the complainant to do so. Crosswhite v. Golmon, 939 So. 2d 831 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Products liability suit against cigarette companies was properly dismissed on the pleadings under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as the Mississippi Product Liability Act, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-1-63 (2001), precluded all product liability actions against tobacco companies. Lane v. R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 853 So. 2d 1144 (Miss. 2003).

Customer who suffered injuries after voluntarily consuming alcohol is not part of the protected class of Miss. Code Ann. § 67-3-73; therefore, a casino's motion to dismiss a negligence action was properly granted since there was no liability under either § 67-3-73 or Miss. Code Ann. § 67-1-83. Bridges v. Park Place Entm't, Inc., 860 So. 2d 811 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court did not err in refusing to grant a default judgment based on defendant's alleged failure to answer the complaint within 30 days; defendant had placed the answer in the mail in a timely fashion and the plaintiff could not refuse to accept it and then claim defendant had not answered. Slaydon v. Hansford, 830 So. 2d 686 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

The plaintiffs were properly denied leave to amend the complaint on a motion to dismiss where the proposed amendment was futile in the light of statutory and case law pertaining to their claim. Jones v. Lovett, 755 So. 2d 1243 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Service of process.

Pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1), certain defendants waived the defenses of insufficiency of service of process and insufficiency of process by omitting these defenses from their answer and motion to dismiss. Therefore, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b) and 58, the order dismissing those defendants fully adjudicated the case as to all parties and it was a final, appealable judgment. Sauvage v. Meadowcrest Living Ctr., LLC, 28 So. 3d 589 (Miss. 2010).

Three cases were properly dismissed for insufficiency of process and insufficiency of service of process, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(4)-(5), where the process issued to defendants was deficient and not in substantial compliance with Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(b), a pro se response by one defendant might have constituted an appearance under Miss. R. Civ. P. 55, but was not a valid answer because it did not comport with the filing requirement of Miss. R. Civ. P. 5(d). Fletcher v. Limeco Corp., 996 So. 2d 773 (Miss. 2008), remanded by 32 So. 3d 429, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 182 (Miss. 2010).

In a medical malpractice suit, a hospital did not waive its affirmative defense of insufficient service of process by the failure of the hospital to include the affirmative defense in a subsequent motion for a change or venue or by its active participation in the litigation. Lucas v. Baptist Mem. Hosp. - N. Miss., Inc., 997 So. 2d 226 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In a medical malpractice/wrongful death case, defendant doctor's motion to dismiss for failure to timely effect service of process under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) was properly denied because the trial court found good cause for the failure where plaintiff's counsel retained local counsel, who was to effect service of process; where local counsel failed to do so; where counsel learned of local counsel's failure on day 118, took immediate action, and effected service on day 121; and where local counsel withdrew from the case. Foss v. Williams, 993 So. 2d 378 (Miss. 2008).

Where a county obtained an injunction to allow its surveyor to enter landowners' property, the circuit court did not have personal jurisdiction over the landowners and thus the injunction was improperly granted because there was no proof that the landowners had been properly served with process. Blakeney v. Warren County, 973 So. 2d 1037 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Claimant's argument that the driver's active participation in the underlying litigation constituted a tacit waiver of the service of process defense was without merit because the defense was not waived by the mere submission of other pleadings in the case, nor even by participation in a trial on the merits, and the error was preserved until its resolution by the court. Page v. Crawford, 883 So. 2d 609 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Subject matter jurisdiction.

Motion for relief under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(4) was properly dismissed because an alleged descendant waited more than six years to challenge an adverse ruling in an ejectment action filed against a record title holder; there was no reason for his failure to file an appeal or his decision to wait so long to file the motion, and moreover there was no basis for arguing that the chancery court lacked subject matter jurisdiction over a property case. Netterville v. Weyerhaeuser Co., 963 So. 2d 38 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Where appellant filed an appeal of the chancery court's order finding a prescriptive easement across his property for an access road, there was no was justifiable basis for appellant's argument that a chancery court did not have jurisdiction over matters involving property; such authority was conferred by Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 160, history, and precedent. Graves v. Dudley Maples, L.P., 950 So. 2d 1017 (Miss. 2007).

The plaintiffs were entitled to have their breach of contract action transferred from the chancery court to the circuit court as the action was legal in nature and as their right to a jury trial would be infringed upon if the action was heard in chancery court. Burnette v. Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co., 770 So. 2d 948 (Miss. 2000).

Chancellor did not err in declining jurisdiction in child custody dispute where, although Mississippi was the new "home state" of children involved, chancery court in Arkansas retained continuing jurisdiction over the parties by virtue of having entered the original decree. Johnson v. Ellis, 621 So. 2d 661 (Miss. 1993).

Summary judgment.

In a fraud action, dismissal under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) was improper because the trial court considered matters outside the pleadings when it took into account a pretrial settlement agreement. Having done so, the trial court was required to convert the motion into a Miss. R. Civ. P. 56 motion for summary judgment, which it failed to do. State v. Bayer Corp., 32 So. 3d 496 (Miss. 2010).

When a party introduces evidence outside of the pleadings in defense or support of a Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) motion, the motion is converted into one for summary judgment. Sullivan v. Tullos, 20 So. 3d 1 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), reversed by, remanded by 19 So. 3d 1271, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 501 (Miss. 2009).

Even though a motion to dismiss should have been treated as a motion for summary judgment because facts outside of the pleadings were considered, the error was harmless because, even though an employment contract attached to the motion was considered, another almost identical contract was referenced in the pleadings. Therefore, a chancellor did not become privy to any knowledge by virtue of one contract that he did not already have from the other contract. Winters v. Calhoun County Sch. Dist., 990 So. 2d 238 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In an action alleging defendants published slanderous statements against plaintiffs on a radio talk show program, the trial court's exclusion of the radio show transcript allowed the trial court to refine its review of a motion for summary judgment based only on the pleadings and dismiss the complaint pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Chalk v. Bertholf, 980 So. 2d 290 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In her negligence action against a homeowner, decided in the homeowner's favor on summary judgment, on appeal, the worker asserted that Miss. R. Civ. P. 8(c) clearly set forth that the defense of statute of limitations was an affirmative defense which had to be set forth in responsive pleadings and that Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b) required every defense to be asserted in responsive pleadings, except the seven which could be made by motion, and that the statute of limitations defense was not included therein; however, the defense of statute of limitations was proper for summary judgment where there existed no genuine issues of material fact on the issue. Robertson v. Moody, 918 So. 2d 787 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Letters did show that the father's attorney failed to serve notice of the subpoena immediately under Miss. R. Civ. P. 45, but the father's attorney's failure to follow correct procedure did not rise to the level of abuse of process. The trial court properly granted summary judgment in favor of the father and his attorney as to the abuse of process claim; moreover, the mother's argument that the father was required to hand deliver the notice to her attorney under Miss. R. Civ. P. 5(b) was without merit, as service was allowed by mail under the plain language of Miss. R. Civ. P. 5(b). Ayles v. Allen, 907 So. 2d 300 (Miss. 2005).

Dismissal of the claimant's petition for declaratory relief in an action involving the liquidation of an insurance company was improper pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(c) and Miss. R. Civ. P. 56 where the trial judge erred in converting a motion for judgment on the pleadings into a motion for summary judgment without giving the claimants 10-days notice of that intention. Huff-Cook, Inc. v. Dale, 913 So. 2d 988 (Miss. 2005).

Language of Miss. R. Civ. P. 12 granting the respondent to a motion to dismiss that was subsequently converted into one for summary judgment an opportunity to present further material, is not self-executing; litigant desiring to avail herself of the right to present more evidentiary material has an affirmative duty to timely raise the issue with the trial court or be deemed to have waived objection to the court proceeding on the motion. Champluvier v. Beck, 909 So. 2d 1061 (Miss. 2004).

Where defendant waited for twenty-seven years before suing doctors who negligently operated on his leg causing a misalignment of his femur, the doctors filed motions to dismiss the suit as barred by the statute of limitations. The circuit court considered some material outside of the pleadings, transformed the doctors' motions into a motion for summary judgment, and properly granted the motions. Russell v. Williford, 907 So. 2d 362 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 910 So. 2d 574 (Miss. 2005).

Appellate court reviewed defendants' Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6)motion to dismiss under the summary judgment standard as the trial court considered exhibits, including deposition testimony, to the motion along with defendants' answer. Gulledge v. Shaw, 880 So. 2d 288 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court properly dismissed claims against a contractor on summary judgment, but improperly labeled its decision as a dismissal for failure to state a claim under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6); as the court made its decision after reviewing the complaint, the answer, the motion to dismiss, the response to it, and the accompanying exhibits, its decision was properly labeled a summary judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 56. Rein v. Benchmark Constr. Co., — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 282 (Miss. June 12, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at, remanded in part by 865 So. 2d 1134, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 180 (Miss. 2004).

Defendant's motion was a motion for summary judgment rather than a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim or for judgment on the pleadings since the motion, even though it was not accompanied by affidavits or responses to discovery, dealt with the merits of the plaintiff's case. Hartford Cas. Ins. Co. v. Halliburton Co., 826 So. 2d 1206 (Miss. 2001).

When a party is given an opportunity to amend and the trial court states that dismissal will occur otherwise, the failure to amend and the seeking of an appeal abandons the opportunity to amend and, once the period allowed for an amendment passes and the party pursues an appeal, the partial summary judgment, partial only because the opportunity to amend remained open, becomes a complete and final judgment. Hobgood v. Koch Pipeline Southeast, Inc., 769 So. 2d 838 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1073, 121 S. Ct. 766, 148 L. Ed. 2d 666 (2001).

The trial judge properly complied with subsection (b) of this rule and Rule 56(c) in treating a motion to dismiss filed by the defendants as a motion for summary judgment; the plaintiff and her counsel were made aware that the judge reviewed a videotape of the incident at issue and the judge postponed making his final ruling for over three months, granting ample time for the plaintiff to respond and gather additional discovery, notwithstanding that no specific decree regarding the conversion of the motion was made. Jones v. Jackson Pub. Schs., 760 So. 2d 730 (Miss. 2000).

The language of the rule granting a respondent to a motion to dismiss subsequently converted to a summary judgment motion an opportunity to present further material is not self-executing; a litigant desiring to avail herself of the right to present more evidentiary material has an affirmative duty to timely raise the issue with the trial court or be deemed to have waived objection to the court proceeding on the motion. Koestler v. Mississippi College, 749 So. 2d 1122 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Due to extensive court filings, including interrogatory responses and other discovery tools, court considered that matters outside the pleadings had been presented and therefore action was reviewed as a summary judgment motion, despite plaintiff's assertions of error indicating that appeal was from a dismissal for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Westbrook v. City of Jackson, 665 So. 2d 833 (Miss. 1995).

Plaintiff should have been allowed time to file affidavits or other pertinent material in opposition to motion for summary judgment; since trial court considered "matters outside the pleadings" in ruling on defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings, M.R.C.P. Rule 12(c) required that plaintiff be given an opportunity to present all pertinent material, and since plaintiff's request was timely made, it should have been allowed. Cunningham v. Lanier, 555 So. 2d 685 (Miss. 1989).

Defendant's answer and amended answer each raised matters of affirmative defense, and thus plaintiff was not clearly entitled to judgment, and trial court properly denied plaintiff's motion for judgment on the pleadings. Millican v. Turner, 503 So. 2d 289 (Miss. 1987).

Issues of res judicata resulting from the entire course of proceedings and final judgment of dismissal entered in plaintiff's previous lawsuit meant that there were no factual points to be developed in the subsequent one. The circuit court thus correctly exercised authority granted it under M.R.C.P. Rule 12(b) and considered defendants' motion to dismiss as one for summary judgment. Walton v. Bourgeois, 512 So. 2d 698 (Miss. 1987).

Venue.

When a defendant is sued in both a paternity and support proceeding, he has right to have case heard in county in which he resides, if he is a resident of Mississippi; defendant must timely assert this right via a M.R.C.P. Rule 12(b)(3) motion, and his failure to do so amounts to waiver. Belk v. State Dep't of Pub. Welfare, 473 So. 2d 447 (Miss. 1985).

Waiver.

In a negligence case, the defense of lack of personal jurisdiction was waived under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1) because an out-of-state resident made a general appearance when he sought relief from a default judgment without raising that objection; therefore, the case was improperly dismissed for a failure timely serve process. Courtney v. McCluggage, 991 So. 2d 642 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Custody award of the mother's and father's child to the father was appropriate, in part because the mother waived her jurisdictional arguments when she failed to timely seek resolution of the issue and when she participated in the hearing without first seeking an adjudication of her jurisdictional issue. Price v. McBeath, 989 So. 2d 444 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Even if a buyer from a tax sale was a necessary and indispensable party under Miss. R. Civ. P. 19 to a proceeding where the redemption period in Miss. Code Ann. § 27-45-3 was extended for 60 days, the buyer's successor in interest was procedurally barred from bringing its Miss. R. Civ. P. 19 objection on appeal since the issue was not raised. The issue was not heard sua sponte in accordance with Shaw v. Shaw, 603 So. 2d 287 (Miss. 1992), because the buyer was notified by letter of the foreclosure sale and the possibility that the tax redemption period could be extended, this knowledge was imputed to the successor in interest, and neither the buyer nor the successor in interest chose to challenge the joinder issue until after the conclusion of the trial court proceedings. Marathon Asset Mgmt., LLC v. Otto, 977 So. 2d 1241 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In a wrongful death matter arising out of a high speed chase that occurred in Mississippi, an Alabama city, its police chief, and an Alabama city police officer all filed responsive pleadings, and then filed motions to dismiss 20 months later, alleging lack of personal jurisdiction; the three defendants waived the defense. City of Cherokee v. Parsons, 944 So. 2d 886 (Miss. 2006).

When a New York commuter van company filed its answer and defenses in the wrongful death action of Mississippi residents following an accident that occurred in New York, the company did not waive its defense of lack of personal jurisdiction under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(2) when it included a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, although the company filed 21 months after being served with process, thereby failing to meet the thirty-day answer requirement of Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(a). Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(h) governs the waiver of defenses and while Rule 12(h) provides for certain circumstances in which a defense may be waived, it creates no overlap of the 30-day answer requirement of Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(a) and defenses that are coupled with an untimely answer. Rockaway Commuter Line, Inc. v. Denham, 897 So. 2d 156 (Miss. 2004).

Where appellant's counsel appeared for trial and participated by cross-examining appellee and by calling a witness during her case-in-chief, but appellant did not object to or challenge any irregularities in the service of process, her failure to raise these challenges in the court below waived these defenses under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1). Venegas v. Gurganus, 911 So. 2d 562 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In a contempt proceeding on the husband's failure to pay child support, the affirmative defense of the statute of limitations was not waived because, although the husband filed an answer, no such pleading was required under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b) and 81(d)(2), (4); thus, the husband had the right to raise the defense at any stage and the statute of limitations would bar any claims filed seven years after the youngest child reached the age of 21 pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-59. Miss. Dep't of Human Servs. v. Guidry, 830 So. 2d 628 (Miss. 2002).

Respondent waived defenses of lack of personal jurisdiction or insufficiency of service of process where she failed to assert them by motion within prescribed 20 days, or in a responsive pleading or amendment thereof, and default judgment was properly entered where she failed to plead or otherwise defend a claim asserted against her. Terrell v. Mississippi Bar, 635 So. 2d 1377 (Miss. 1994).

Divorce defendant could not raise for the first time on appeal that decree was void for insufficiency of process and lack of personal jurisdiction; because defendant waited seven years before raising such a defense, his claim was waived. Manning v. Tanner, 594 So. 2d 1164 (Miss. 1992).

Objections to venue are waived if not timely asserted. Sawyer v. Illinois Cent. G.R.R., 606 So. 2d 1069 (Miss. 1992).

Venue disputes must be settled early on, as a defendant waives any objection to venue unless he asserts it early on; if venue is proper when and where suit is filed, it may not be ousted by later events. Flight Line v. Tanksley, 608 So. 2d 1149 (Miss. 1992).

Where defendant's answer asserted that court lacked jurisdiction over him, the fact that he did not label this assertion an "affirmative defense" was of no moment, and where he followed this with a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, his jurisdictional challenge was not waived. Jones v. Chandler, 592 So. 2d 966 (Miss. 1991).

Defendant waived his defense of insufficiency of service of process, where his answer made no mention of any such defense, and it was only in response to plaintiff's summary judgment motion that defendant finally raised his defense. Young v. Huron Smith Oil Co., 564 So. 2d 36 (Miss. 1990).

Lack of in personam jurisdiction is a matter that may be waived if not timely asserted. Scribner v. Scribner, 556 So. 2d 350 (Miss. 1990).

Defendant waived defense of improper venue when he failed to assert it in his motion to quash and set aside decree. Lowrey v. Will of Smith, 543 So. 2d 1155 (Miss. 1989).

Divorce defendant's motion for continuance under Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act did not waive his defense of lack of in personam jurisdiction; his motion amounted to no more than an application to stay proceedings and was not to be construed as an appearance, nor was his subsequent pleading reasserting this defense to be considered as a waiver of that defense. O'Neill v. O'Neill, 515 So. 2d 1208 (Miss. 1987).

Objections to venue are deemed waived when they are not asserted in defendant's answer or in a M.R.C.P. Rule 12 motion. H & W Transf. & Cartage Serv., Inc. v. Griffin, 511 So. 2d 895 (Miss. 1987).

Rule 13. Counter-claim and cross-claim.

(a) Compulsory counter-claims. A pleading shall state as a counter-claim any claim which at the time of serving the pleading the pleader has against any opposing party if it arises out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the opposing party's claim and does not require for its adjudication the presence of third parties over whom the court cannot acquire jurisdiction. But the pleader need not state the claim if:

(1) at the time the action was commenced the claim was the subject of another pending action; or

(2) the opposing party brought suit upon his claim by attachment or other process by which the court did not acquire jurisdiction to render a personal judgment on that claim, and the pleader is not stating any counter-claim under this Rule 13; or

(3) the opposing party's claim is one which an insurer is defending.

In the event an otherwise compulsory counter-claim is not asserted in reliance upon any exception stated in paragraph (a), re-litigation of the claim may nevertheless be barred by the doctrines of res judicata or collateral estoppel by judgment in the event certain issues are determined adversely to the party electing not to assert the claim.

(b) Permissive counter-claims. A pleading may state as a counter-claim any claim against an opposing party not arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the opposing party's claim.

(c) Counter-claim exceeding opposing claim. A counter-claim may or may not diminish or defeat the recovery sought by the opposing party. It may claim relief exceeding in amount or different in kind from that sought in the pleading of the opposing party.

(d) Counter-claim against the state of Mississippi. These rules shall not be construed to enlarge beyond the limits fixed by law the right to assert counter-claims or to claim credits against the State of Mississippi, a political subdivision, or an officer in his representative capacity or agent of either.

(e) Counter-claim maturing or acquired after pleading. A claim which either matured or was acquired by the pleader after serving his pleading may, with the permission of the court, be presented as a counter-claim by supplemental pleading.

(f) Omitted counter-claim. When a pleader fails to set up a counter-claim through oversight, inadvertence, or excusable neglect, or when justice requires, he may by leave of court set up the counter-claim by amendment on such terms as the court deems just.

(g) Cross-claim against co party. A pleading may state as a cross-claim any claim by one party against a co-party arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter either of the original action or of a counter-claim therein or relating to any property that is the subject matter of the original action. Such cross-claim may include a claim that the party against whom it is asserted is or may be liable to the cross-claimant for all or part of the claim asserted in the action against the cross-claimant.

(h) Claims exceeding court's jurisdiction. Upon the filing in the county court by any party of a counter-claim or cross-claim which exceeds the jurisdictional limits of that court, and upon the motion of all parties filed within twenty days after the filing of such counter-claim or cross-claim, the county court shall transfer the action to the circuit or chancery court wherein the county court is situated and which would otherwise have jurisdiction.

(i) Joinder of additional parties. Persons other than those made parties to the original action may be made parties to a counter-claim or cross-claim in accordance with the provisions of Rules 19 and 20.

(j) Separate trials; separate judgment. If the court orders separate trials as provided in Rule 42(b), judgment on a counter-claim or cross-claim may be rendered in accordance with the terms of Rule 54(b) when the court has jurisdiction so to do, even if the claims of the opposing parties have been dismissed or otherwise disposed of.

(k) Appealed actions. When an action is commenced in the justice court or in any other court which is not subject to these rules and from which an appeal for a trial de novo lies to a court subject to these rules, any counter-claim made compulsory by subdivision (a) of this rule shall be stated as an amendment to the pleading within thirty days after such appeal has been perfected or within such further time as the court may allow; and other counter-claims and cross-claims shall be permitted as in an original jurisdiction action. When a counter-claim or cross-claim is asserted by a defendant in such an appealed case, the defendant shall not be limited in amount to the jurisdiction of the lower court but shall be permitted to claim and recover the full amount of its claim irrespective of the jurisdiction of the lower court.

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 13 is to grant the court broad discretion to allow claims to be joined in order to expedite the resolution of all the controversies between the parties in one suit and to eliminate the inordinate expense occasioned by circuity of action and multiple litigation:

It is, and should be, a paramount concern of the judiciary to prevent multiple suits where one suit will suffice. There is a tendency, perhaps, to forget that one who undergoes the rigors of an action, with all of its traumatic impact, loss of time, delay, substantial expense and disruption of his affairs, with consequent appeals and possible retrials and still other appeals, should be spared having to do this more often than is strictly necessary. Even the successful party after bearing the expense of one trial and of one appeal is, in many instances, hardly a winner. Magee v. Griffin, 345 So.2d 1027, 1032 (Miss.1977).

Under Rule 13(a), some claims may now be asserted as counter-claims which heretofore could have been interposed only by way of recoupment or set-off at law, See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-63 (1972), Myers v. Estell, 47 Miss. 4 (1872), or by cross-bill in equity, See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-5-37 (1972); Stewart v. Stebbins, 30 Miss. 66 (1855). Rule 13(a), however, makes it immaterial whether the counter-claim is legal or equitable, See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-5-37 (1972), or in contract or in tort, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-36 (1972), or even whether it has any connection whatever with the plaintiff's claim, See Dewees v. Dewees, 55 Miss. 315 (1877), Oxford v. Spears, 228 Miss. 433, 87 So.2d 914 (1956). A counter-claim is compulsory if there is any logical relation between the original claim and the counter-claim. Under 13(b), all other claims may be brought by a party in one action.

Under Rule 13(c), a counter-claim may ask for more or different relief than that sought by the opposing party. Cf. Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-7-63 - 69 (1972), Johnson v. Richardson, 234 Miss. 849, 108 So.2d 194 (1959). Also, under Rule 13 additional parties may be brought in to defend against the counter-claim where there presence is necessary for the granting of complete relief.

Rule 13(g), providing for cross-claims, is essentially equivalent to past Mississippi chancery procedure, see Miss. Code Ann. § 11-5-37 (1972), and permits acceleration of liability by the cross-claim.

Rule 13(h) tracks the provisions of Miss. Code Ann. § 9-9-21 (Supp. 1987) regarding the jurisdiction of counter-claims in county court. The county court retains jurisdiction of a suit when a counter-claim is brought which exceeds the jurisdictional amount for original suits in county court unless a motion to transfer is made by all parties as described in Rule 13(h).

If a counter-claim or cross-claim has been properly asserted, then under M.R.C.P. 13(i) any person whose joinder in the original action would have been possible (pursuant to M.R.C.P. 20, permissible joinder) may be added as a party to the counter-claim or cross-claim. M.R.C.P. 13(i) is identical to Federal Rule 13(h).

Because of the liberal provisions in Rule 13 for counter-claims and cross-claims, the trial court may be faced with many disparate issues or claims in a single action. Should the court determine that one or more of the counter-claims or cross-claims should be handled separately to avoid prejudice or to promote convenience and economy, Rule 13(j) authorizes the judge to invoke Rule 43(b) and order separate trials of the claims. M.R.C.P. 13(j) is identical to Federal Rule 13(i).

Rule 13(k) governs actions appealed for trials de novo from lower courts in which there are no compulsory counter-claim provisions. Under this rule the defendant in the trial de novo must assert compulsory counter-claims within thirty days after the appeal has been perfected. In pursuing his counter-claim or cross-claim the defendant is not limited to the jurisdictional ceiling of the court below.

[Amended effective March 1, 1989.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction.
Compulsory counterclaims.
Scope of a cross-claim.
Waiver.

Construction.

Federal district court dismissed, on grounds of res judicata, the claims of a foreign corporation, even though the prior dismissal of its claims by a State court had been erroneous where the corporation had not been authorized to do business at that time under Miss. Code Ann. § 79-4-15.02(a), but the State court should have stayed the proceedings under Miss. Code Ann. § 79-4-15.02(c). Cuba Timber Co., Plaintiff v. Boswell, 339 F. Supp. 2d 773 (S.D. Miss. 2004).

Where defendant in partition suit filed answer also claiming for partition, but never served a cross-claim upon her co-defendants, she was required to file and serve a cross-claim before she could obtain relief from a co-defendant. Johnson v. Franklin, 481 So. 2d 812 (Miss. 1985).

Compulsory counterclaims.

Where defendant in an automobile negligence case failed to file an answer to plaintiff's complaint but filed a counterclaim, the trial court did not err in granting plaintiff's motion to dismiss because the submission of a counterclaim without filing a responsive pleading was procedurally improper. A counterclaim was a claim asserted against a party in a responsive pleading; because defendant failed to file an answer to plaintiff's complaint, his counterclaim was not properly before the trial court. Keyes v. Berry, 995 So. 2d 861 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Although the company argued that Miss. R. Civ. P. 13(a) applied to its counterclaim against the corporation, because both it and the corporation were represented by their respective insurance companies in the prior suit, Fed. R. Civ. P. 13 applied to the company's counterclaim, because the prior suit was pending in the federal court, and Fed. R. Civ. P. 13 had no insurer exception; the company's claim should have been brought as a compulsory counterclaim in the prior suit rather than as an independent state court claim; the company's claim fit squarely within the definition of a compulsory counterclaim set forth by Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a). Tyler Marine Servs. v. Aqua Yacht Harbor Corp., 920 So. 2d 493 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Because a net lease agreement at issue between a partnership and a corporation arose from the same complex business arrangement made by the parties that were being litigated in the partnership's circuit court action against the corporation, the claims asserted by the corporation in its chancery court action should have been submitted as a compulsory counterclaim against the partnership in the partnership's circuit court action. Copiah Med. Assocs. v. Miss. Baptist Health Sys., 898 So. 2d 656 (Miss. 2005).

Interpleader action was available to law firm to facilitate payment of the attorney fees in its possession into the registry of the court; however, the action for interpleader should have been brought as a compulsory counterclaim to pending litigation in another county between the same parties involving the same attorney fees. Scruggs, Millette, Bozeman & Dent, P.A. v. Merkel & Cocke, P.A, 804 So. 2d 1000 (Miss. 2001).

In asserting their compulsory counterclaim argument, plaintiffs were asserting a claim in bar which was in the nature of an affirmative defense; as such, plaintiffs had burden of proof at trial as well as on summary judgment. Atkinson v. National Bank of Commerce, 530 So. 2d 163 (Miss. 1988).

Scope of a cross-claim.

Because the agreement at issue arose from the same complex business arrangement made by the parties, the claims asserted in the chancery court action should have been submitted as a compulsory counterclaim in the circuit court action. Copiah Med. Assocs. v. Miss. Baptist Health Sys., — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 463 (Miss. May 6, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at, remanded by 898 So. 2d 656, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 259 (Miss. 2005).

Defendant insurance agent's motion for leave to file a cross-claim against defendant insurer was properly denied because the far-reaching allegations of the proposed cross-claim were only tangential to the subject matter of the complaint, thus, the proposed cross-claim exceeded the definition of a cross-claim under Miss. R. Civ. P. 13(g). Edwards v. Jackson Nat'l Life Ins. Co., 860 So. 2d 842 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Waiver.

Grant of summary judgment in favor of the appellee neighbors in their boundary-dispute action was proper because the appellant neighbor had waived the defense of adverse possession, Miss. R. Civ. P. 13(f). Appellant offered no reason for the six-month delay between the filing of her answer and her motion to amend the answer to raise the affirmative defense of adverse possession; further, the affirmative defense of adverse possession would have existed prior to the filing of the lawsuit, so it was not a fact that would have been found only through discovery. Charlot v. Henry, 45 So. 3d 1237 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Rule 14. Third-party practice.

(a) When defendant may bring in third party. After commencement of the action and upon being so authorized by the court in which the action is pending on motion and for good cause shown, a defending party may cause a summons and complaint to be served upon a person not a party to the action who is or may be liable to him for all or part of the plaintiff's claim against him. The person served with the summons and third-party complaint, hereinafter called the third-party defendant, shall make his defenses to the third-party plaintiff's claim as provided in Rule 12 and his counter-claims against the third-party plaintiff and cross-claims against other third-party defendants as provided in Rule 13. The third-party defendant may assert against the plaintiff any defenses which the third-party plaintiff has to the plaintiff's claim. The third-party defendant may also assert any claim against the plaintiff arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the plaintiff's claim against the third-party plaintiff. The plaintiff may assert any claim against the third-party defendant arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the plaintiff's claim against the third-party plaintiff and the third-party defendant thereupon shall assert his defenses as provided in Rule 12 and his counter-claims and cross-claims as provided in Rule 13. Any party may move to strike the third-party claim, or for its severance or separate trial. A third-party defendant may proceed under this rule against any person not a party to the action who is or may be liable to him for all or part of the claim made in the action against the third-party defendant.

(b) When plaintiff may bring in third party. When a counter-claim is asserted against a plaintiff, he may cause a third party to be brought in under circumstances which under this rule would entitle a defendant to do so.

(c) Admiralty and maritime claims [Omitted]. (Former Rule 14 deleted effective May 1, 1982; new Rule 14 adopted effective July 1, 1986.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective July 1, 1986, a new Rule 14 was adopted. 486-490 So. 2d XVII (West Miss. Cas. 1986).

Effective May 1, 1982, Rule 14 was abrogated. 410-416 So. 2d XXI (West Miss. Cas. 1982).

COMMENT

Third-party practice, or impleader, allows a defendant to bring into the action a person, not previously a party, who is or may be liable to the defendant for all or part of the plaintiff's claim against the defendant. The defendant thus becomes a third-party plaintiff with respect to his claim against the new party, who becomes the third-party defendant. The purpose of the practice is to avoid the problem of circuitous or duplicative actions, which occur when a defendant, held liable in the first action, is required to bring a second action against another party he alleges is derivatively or secondarily liable to him for all or part of the judgment. By consolidating the main claim and the derivative or secondary claim in a single action, the court may avoid inconsistent results, duplication of effort, and unnecessary delay.

The rule requires a party seeking to implead a third party to obtain authorization from the court in all cases. (It thus differs from the federal version of Rule 14, which permits impleader without leave if the third-party complaint is filed within 10 days after service of the defendant's answer to the original claim.)

The rule also provides that "any party may move to strike the third-party claim" after it has been asserted. On motions either to authorize or to strike a third-party claim, the court must, of course, disallow any claim that does not meet the express requirements of the rule.

The rule also provides, however, that impleader should be permitted only for "good cause." This term makes clear what is implicit in the federal rule, that the court has discretion to disallow a claim even if it meets the technical requirements of the rule. As the cases interpreting the federal rule state, the court should exercise its discretion in light of the policies underlying the rule. Weyerhauser Co. v. Wells, 593 So. 2d 1010 (Miss. 1992) quotes the foregoing portion of this paragraph with approval and states further:

"It is apparent that the rule does not grant a defendant the right to have a third party claim heard by the court in the same action. The Mississippi trial courts have greater discretion on Rule 14 than the federal courts have. . . ."

Thus, a valid third-party claim that will avoid circuitous or duplicative actions should ordinarily be permitted, unless it would unduly delay the original action. If the court determines that the third-party claim would unduly complicate the original action, it should not disallow impleader; instead, it should permit the claim and order a separate trial as authorized by the rule and by Rule 42(b).

It is essential that the third-party claim be for some form of derivative or secondary liability of the third-party defendant to the third-party plaintiff. Third-party practice is not a general device for bringing in additional parties to the action. It is not available, for example, to bring in a party solely on the ground that he is or may be liable to the original plaintiff. McPherson v. Hoffman, 275 F.2d 466 (6th Cir.1960); Campbell Construction Engineers, Inc. v. Water Works & Sewer Board, 290 So.2d 194, 202, 52 Ala.App. 129 (1974). Thus, an allegation that the third party is a joint tortfeasor or is the one really liable to the original plaintiff is insufficient to state a third-party claim.

Impleader is likewise not available for the assertion of an independent action by the defendant against a third party, even if the claim arose out of the same transaction or occurrence as the main claim. See, e.g., Nagunst v. Western Union Tel. Co., 76 F.R.D. 631, 635 (D.Kan.1977). Once a third-party claim is properly asserted, however, the third-party plaintiff may assert whatever additional claims he has against the third-party defendant under Rule 18 (a). See, e.g., Schwab v. Erie Lackawanna R.R., 438 F.2d 62, 71 (3rd Cir.1971).

The requirement that the third-party claim be for derivative or secondary liability may be met by, for example, an allegation of a right of indemnity (contractual or otherwise), contribution, subrogation, or warranty. The rule does not, however, create any such rights. It merely provides a procedure for expedited consideration of these rights where they are available under the substantive law. Thus, since Mississippi does not recognize a right of contribution for joint tortfeasors, Rule 14 will not, in general, permit impleader of a joint tortfeasor. Mississippi does, however, permit contribution among judgment joint tortfeasors, and also recognizes a right of indemnity in favor of a passive tortfeasor against an active one. See Bush v. City of Laurel, 215 So.2d 256, 259, 60 (Miss. 1968). Impleader would be available to accelerate the determination of claims by one tortfeasor against another based upon either of these theories of derivative liability, where their substantive requirements are satisfied. Similarly, a defendant may implead his liability insurer if the insurer is disclaiming liability on the policy. An insurer against loss, sued by its policyholder, may implead the person who allegedly caused the loss, where a right of subrogation would arise from the insurer's payment of the plaintiff's claim.

Because the rule expressly allows third-party claims against one who "may be liable," it is not an objection to impleader that the third party's liability is contingent on the original plaintiff's recovery against the third-party plaintiff. Jeub v. B/G Foods, Inc., 2 F.R.D. 238 (D.Minn.1942).

The rule makes clear that a third-party claim may not be asserted against a person who is already a party. This limitation presents no difficulty if the defending party wishes to assert a claim for derivative liability against a co-party, because Rule 13(g) expressly allows cross-claims asserting that the co-party "may be" liable to the claimant. If, however, the party against whom the defendant wishes to assert his claim for derivative liability is a co-plaintiff of the party asserting the main claim, then the defendant does face a difficulty: the terms of Rule 13(a) and (b) state that a counter-claim must be mature. In a proper case, however, the court may order the severance of the co-plaintiff to allow the claim to be asserted, then consolidate the actions under Rule 42. See 6 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 1446 (1990).

Although the rule does not state it expressly, a motion for leave to implead must be on notice to all the parties to the action, but not to the proposed third-party defendant. Moreover, under Rule 5 a copy of the third-party complaint, as well as the responsive pleadings of the third-party defendant, must be served on all the parties.

The third-party defendant may assert his defenses to the third-party claim by motion or answer as provided in Rule 12 and may assert defenses to the original plaintiff's claim against the third-party defendant. This last provision is necessary, since the defendant's assertion of a third-party claim may reduce his incentives to defend the original action vigorously.

The third-party defendant is subject to the compulsory counterclaim requirements of Rule 13(a) with respect to claims against the third-party plaintiff. He may also assert a claim he has against the original plaintiff that arises out of the same transaction or occurrence on the main claim, and the original plaintiff has a similar right vis-a-vis the third-party defendant.

The last sentence of the rule allows the third-party defendant to assert a fourth-party claim, again subject to the provisions and limitations already discussed.

Rule 14(b) allows a plaintiff against whom a counterclaim has been asserted to implead a third-party defendant. The rule's requirement that the claim asserted against plaintiff be a counterclaim suggests that it must be asserted by an opposing party. In spite of this, the plaintiff should be permitted to implead when the third-party defendant, who is not strictly an opposing party, has asserted a claim against him. See 6 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 1464 (1990).

History: A version of Rule 14 was included in the original Rules of Civil Procedure adopted by the Supreme Court in 1981.

[Amended April 18, 1995; amended effective January 27, 2005.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Application.
Implied consent.

Application.

Federal district court dismissed, on grounds of res judicata, the claims of a foreign corporation, even though the prior dismissal of its claims by a State court had been erroneous where the corporation had not been authorized to do business at that time under Miss. Code Ann. § 79-4-15.02(a), but the State court should have stayed the proceedings under Miss. Code Ann. § 79-4-15.02(c). Cuba Timber Co., Plaintiff v. Boswell, 339 F. Supp. 2d 773 (S.D. Miss. 2004).

Although the defendant may implead a liability insurer if the insurer is disclaiming liability, the defendant may not implead the insurer if the court determines that the insurer, pursuant to the policy terms, is not liable. Sennett v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 757 So. 2d 206 (Miss. 2000).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion when it refused to allow the defendant commission to file a third-party complaint on the basis that the commission had taken no steps whatsoever to expeditiously resolve the action, even though it noted in its argument that time was of the essence in completing the project at issue. Mississippi Transp. Comm'n v. SCI, Inc., 717 So. 2d 332 (Miss. 1998).

Implied consent.

Trial court erred in concluding that the landowners' complaint did not contain a description of the lands claimed to have been adversely possessed and that their claim failed because the trial court could have ordered a survey to describe boundaries of the tracts of land by metes and bounds; even if the landowners had not alleged adverse possession at all, the receipt of the kind of evidence offered and accepted without objection on the question of possession would constitute a trial by consent, and no amendment would be needed, Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(b). Benefield v. Swords, 857 So. 2d 782 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Rule 15. Amended and supplemental pleadings.

(a) Amendments. A party may amend a pleading as a matter of course at any time before a responsive pleading is served, or, if a pleading is one to which no responsive pleading is permitted and the action has not been placed upon the trial calendar, the party may so amend it at any time within thirty days after it is served. On sustaining a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6), or for judgment on the pleadings, pursuant to Rule 12(c), leave to amend shall be granted when justice so requires upon conditions and within time as determined by the court, provided matters outside the pleadings are not presented at the hearing on the motion. Otherwise a party may amend a pleading only by leave of court or upon written consent of the adverse party; leave shall be freely given when justice so requires. A party shall plead in response to an amended pleading within the time remaining for response to the original pleading or within ten days after service of the amended pleading, whichever period may be longer, unless the court otherwise orders.

(b) Amendment to conform to the evidence. When issues not raised by the pleadings are tried by expressed or implied consent of the parties, they shall be treated in all respects as if they had been raised in the pleadings. Such amendment of the pleadings as may be necessary to cause them to conform to the evidence and to raise these issues may be made upon motion of any party at any time, even after judgment; but failure so to amend does not affect the result of the trial of these issues. If evidence is objected to at the trial on the ground that it is not within the issues made by the pleadings, the court may allow the pleadings to be amended and shall do so freely when the presentation of the merits of the action will be subserved thereby and the objecting party fails to satisfy the court that the admission of such evidence would prejudice the maintaining of the action or defense upon the merits. The court may grant a continuance to enable the objecting party to meet such evidence. The court is to be liberal in granting permission to amend when justice so requires.

(c) Relation back of amendments. Whenever the claim or defense asserted in the amended pleading arose out of the conduct, transaction, or occurrence set forth or attempted to be set forth in the original pleading, the amendment relates back to the date of the original pleading. An amendment changing the party against whom a claim is asserted relates back if the foregoing provision is satisfied and, within the period provided by Rule 4(h) for service of the summons and complaint, the party to be brought in by amendment:

(1) has received such notice of the institution of the action that the party will not be prejudiced in maintaining the party's defense on the merits, and

(2) knew or should have known that, but for a mistake concerning the identity of the proper party, the action would have been brought against the party. An amendment pursuant to Rule 9(h) is not an amendment changing the party against whom a claim is asserted and such amendment relates back to the date of the original pleading.

(d) Supplemental pleadings. Upon motion of a party the court may, upon reasonable notice and upon such terms as are just, permit the party to serve a supplemental pleading setting forth transactions, occurrences, or events which have happened since the date of the pleading sought to be supplemented. Permission may be granted even though the original pleading is defective in its statement of a claim for relief or defense. If the court deems it advisable that the adverse party plead to the supplemental pleading, it shall so order, specifying the time therefor. (Amended effective July 1, 1998; amended effective April 17, 2003 to allow amendments on dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) or judgment on the pleadings under Rule 12(c) where the court determines that justice so requires.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective July 1, 1998, Rule 15(c) was amended to state that the relation back period includes the time permitted for service of process under Rule 4(h).

COMMENT

"It is an invariable principle of practice that the admissible proof in any case must come within the allegations of the pleadings and that it avails nothing to prove what is not charged. But courts are organized for the purpose of hearing and determining causes on their actual merits; and, although it is true that good faith and a reasonable diligence are expected of parties in equity and of their solicitors, and that every party when he comes into court will in the first instance unfold his whole case or defense in accordance with the rules that govern the pleadings and proceedings therein, nevertheless it would be a hopelessly visionary and impractical expectation that every party in every case could always successfully communicate at once to his solicitor all the material facts with complete accuracy, or that any solicitor, although having all the facts, may reach such a height of professional perfectibility as to stand above the possibility of error or omission in pleading them — as a consequence of which there would sometimes be a failure of full justice on the actual merits unless amendment and correction in the pleadings, and in other procedural steps, were seasonably and judiciously allowed." V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice, § 388 (2d ed. 1950).

The preceding statements state well the theory underlying Rule 15 and demonstrate that amended pleadings have been liberally permitted throughout Mississippi legal history. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-5-45, 11-5-57, 11-5-59, 11-5-61, 11-5-63, 11-7-55, 11-7-59(3), 11-7-115, and 11-17-117 (1972); See also, Grocery Co. v. Bennett, 101 Miss. 573, 58 So. 482 (1912) (courts are organized for the purpose of trying cases on their merits and only in exceptional cases should trial courts refuse to permit amendments to pleadings or proceedings); Field v. Middlesex Bkg. Co., 77 Miss. 180, 26 So. 365 (1899) (the presentation of a case on its merits should not be defeated by reason alone of any formal rules of pleading and practice, if within the legitimate powers of a court of conscience to avoid it).

M.R.C.P. 15(a) now varies from Federal Rule 15(a) in one important instance. The federal rule permits a party to amend his pleading only once as a matter of course before a responsive pleading is served; the Mississippi rule places no limit on the number of amendments.

Prior to the 2003 amendment of Rule 15(a), a party could, as a matter of right, amend within thirty days after losing on Rule 12(b)(6) and 12(c) motions on which matters outside the pleadings were not presented. In Poindexter v. Southern United Fire Ins. Co., 838 So. 2d 964 (2003), the Supreme Court recognized that the rule mandated an opportunity to amend upon dismissal under Rule 12(b) even though circumstances might be such as would make an amendment futile. Recognizing that the federal rule gives no such absolute right to amend, it was suggested there that "the better course is to temper M.R.C.P. 15(a)'s mandate with the paramount concerns of logic, futility of amendment, and judicial economy." Poindexter, 838 So. 2d at 972, Waller, J., concurring. Now, M.R.C.P. 15(a) expressly provides that in the event a Rule 12(b)(6) or 12(c) motion is granted, leave to amend may be granted by the trial court where justice so requires.

Under M.R.C.P. 15(b), when evidence is introduced or an issue is raised with the express or implied consent of the other party, the pleadings shall be treated in all respects as if they had been amended to conform to such evidence. If the opposing party objects but fails to persuade the court that such party will be prejudiced in maintaining the party's claim or defense, the court must then grant leave to amend the pleadings to allow the evidence on the issue. If the objecting party can show prejudice, the court may grant a continuance to meet the evidence, but should again allow amendment of the pleadings. 6 Wright & Miller, supra, Civil § 1495.

Under Rule 15(c) the first test for whether an amendment relates back, is merely whether the amended claim or defense arose from the same "conduct, transaction, or occurrence" as the original. The remaining tests are whether the new party to be added by the amendment (if any) is served before expiration of the period provided by Rule 4(h) for service of a summons and complaint. An intended defendant who is notified of an action within the period allowed by Rule 4(h) for service of a summons and complaint may not defeat the action on account of a defect in the pleading with respect to the defendant's name, provided that the requirements of clauses (1) and (2) have been met. If the notice requirement is met within the Rule 4(h) period, a complaint may be amended at any time to correct a formal defect such as a misnomer or misidentification. In allowing a name-correcting amendment within the time allowed by Rule 4(h), this rule allows not only the 120 days specified in that rule, but also any additional time resulting from any extension ordered by the court pursuant to that rule, as may be granted, for example, if the defendant is a fugitive from service of the summons.

Amendments pursuant to Rule 9(h) (fictitious parties) are not considered as changing parties and do relate back.

Rule 15(d) permits supplemental pleadings when such are reasonably necessary to show transactions, occurrences, or events which have transpired since the date of the pleading sought to be supplemented. This conforms, generally, to prior Mississippi practice. See Wright v. Frank, 61 Miss. 32 (1883).

While Rule 15(d) does not expressly incorporate the relation back doctrine of Rule 15(c), it appears sensible that supplemental pleadings should be subject to the basic relation back tests of 15(c). 6 Wright & Miller, supra, Civil § 1508.

[Amended effective September 1, 1987; amended August 21, 1996; amended July 1, 1998; amended effective April 17, 2003.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Construction.
Applicability.
Ad damnum clause.
Adding parties.
Amendment of pleadings.
Compelling reason.
Conforming to evidence.
Dismissal.
Fraud.
Implied consent.
Interest of justice.
Prejudice.
Relation back.
Statute of limitations.
Sua sponte.
Timeliness.

In general.

Parties manifested their consent to the chancellor's modification of the original judgment and division of the marital property on numerous occasions during the years covered in the appeal, and no surprise or prejudice was occasioned as a result of the judge's decision to grant the agreed request of the parties; although the parties' pleadings were for the contempt of the original judgment, the parties consented to the chancellor's authority to modify and decide issues not resolved by the Virginia divorce, including division of the marital property. Chapel v. Chapel, 876 So. 2d 290 (Miss. 2004).

In a child support matter, more than seven years had passed since the eldest child had reached 21; therefore, his claim was barred by the statute of limitations, but the claim of his sister was still viable, and the father did not waive the defense by failing to raise it as an affirmative defense in the pleadings when no pleading was required. Brown v. Brown, 822 So. 2d 1119 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

This rule places granting of motions to amend pleadings in the sound discretion of the trial court. Broadhead v. Terpening, 611 So. 2d 949 (Miss. 1992).

Construction.

Failure of incorporators to include page three when they filed a first petition for incorporation was a clerical error and not a failure to comply with the specific requirements of Miss. Code Ann. § 21-1-13; incorporation pleadings were amendable pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15. City of Jackson v. Byram Incorporators, 16 So. 3d 662 (Miss. 2009).

Fair reading of the annexation statutes, Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(a), Miss. R. Civ. P. 81(a)(11), and applicable case law leaves no doubt that, in most instances, annexation pleadings are amendable pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15. The court here clarifies that in annexation proceedings, when errors appear in the legal description of the territory proposed to be annexed and/or in the legal description of the entire boundary as changed after enlargement/annexation, such errors may be amended pursuant to the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure and case law. Lamar County v. City of Hattiesburg (In re Extension of the Boundaries of Hattiesburg), 840 So. 2d 69 (Miss. 2003).

Subdivision (b) of this rule is nothing more than a rule of waiver: where a party offers no timely objection to his opponent's proof on an issue not pleaded, issue is treated as having been tried by implied consent. Queen v. Queen, 551 So. 2d 197 (Miss. 1989).

M.R.C.P. Rule 54(c) does not preclude a Rule 15(b) amendment after judgment has been entered; phrase "amended pleadings" in Rule 54(c) refers to and contemplates pleadings amended in accordance with procedures, including timeliness, authorized in Rule 15(b). Queen v. Queen, 551 So. 2d 197 (Miss. 1989).

Nothing in statutes governing election contests conflicted with rules of civil procedure respecting amendments, and trial court did not err when it allowed petition for judicial review to be amended. Pearson v. Parsons, 541 So. 2d 447 (Miss. 1989).

Defendants' motion to amend their answer would have been granted if it had been considered by lower court; justice required that it be added, and there would be no prejudice. Defendants were therefore not procedurally barred from raising issue first presented in their amended answer. Haygood v. First Nat'l Bank, 517 So. 2d 553 (Miss. 1987).

Applicability.

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the buyers leave to amend to assert a cause of action for the alleged violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 73-35-21(1)(a) where any amendment would be futile based on the fact that the original owners and buyers never consummated their real-estate transaction by closing on the home. Fletcher v. Lyles, 999 So. 2d 1271 (Miss. 2009).

Grant of summary judgment in favor of employee's employer was proper where denial of her leave to amend was justified, since she had nine months in which to amend her complaint, yet she waited to do so until two months before the trial where the claim had been ongoing since 1995. Harris v. Miss. Valley State Univ., 873 So. 2d 970 (Miss. 2004).

Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(d) deals with the supplementation of additional, unforeseeable or latent injuries and not additional legal theories, and even if the customer's amendment actually was a supplement, the standard for allowance was met because there was reasonable notice to the enterprise, and there were just terms; the customer's motion was made six months before trial, and the enterprise had ample time to prepare for the additional legal theories. CEF Enters. v. Betts, 838 So. 2d 999 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

While leave to amend is to be liberally granted, where plaintiff twice failed to amend its complaint after two agreed scheduling orders, denial of a subsequent leave to amend was proper. Hartford Cas. Ins. Co. v. Halliburton Co., 826 So. 2d 1206 (Miss. 2001).

The trial court's denial of a motion to amend a complaint two days before trial did not abuse discretion. Marchbanks v. Borum, 806 So. 2d 278 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Leave to amend pursuant to subsection (a) does not apply to a case dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. Esco v. Scott, 735 So. 2d 1002 (Miss. 1999).

Ad damnum clause.

County court has the authority to grant an amendment to the ad damnum clause even though by doing so it will divest itself of jurisdiction and require the matter to be transferred to either the chancery or circuit court. Wal-Mart Super Ctr. v. Long, 852 So. 2d 568 (Miss. 2003).

Plaintiff should have been permitted to amend ad damnum clause of his complaint to increase amount of his demand, both at conclusion of his case on first trial and before beginning of second trial. Bradley v. Findley, 502 So. 2d 1181 (Miss. 1986).

Adding parties.

Addition of defendants' names in plaintiff's amended complaint without the court's leave was improper, even though plaintiff had obtained written consent from the original defendants, because the new names were not substituted for fictitious parties, but rather were those of new defendants whose addition required court approval under Miss. R. Civ. P. 21. Veal v. J. P. Morgan Trust Co., N.A., 955 So. 2d 843 (Miss. 2007).

Patient's amended complaint, adding a doctor and clinic as defendants, could not relate back to the original complaint; because only the motion to amend the complaint pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(a) was considered filed prior to expiration of the statute of limitations, the putative amended complaint itself was held to be a nullity and dismissed since there were no timely proceedings to allow the amendment, nor was consent of the adverse party given. Wilner v. White, 929 So. 2d 315 (Miss. 2006).

Although Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(h) pleadings are not considered amendments changing a party against whom a claim was asserted and are allowed under Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c) to relate back to the date of the original pleading, the rule did not apply to a patient's malpractice case because, in order for Rule 9(h)to apply, there had to be a substitution of a true party name for a fictitious one; the patient did not substitute the doctor's name for a "John Doe," but simply added his name. Wilner v. White, 929 So. 2d 315 (Miss. 2006).

Patient's amended complaint, which atempted to add a doctor and a clinic as defendants, failed to meet the test in Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(2) because there was no mistake as to the parties' identities; the doctor's name actually appeared in the body of the original complaint itself, and the patient was well aware of the possibility of a claim she might have against him. Wilner v. White, 929 So. 2d 315 (Miss. 2006).

The plaintiff should have been allowed to amend her complaint so as to add new defendants under the "freely given where justice so requires" standard as there was no undue prejudice given that the additional defendants gave deposition testimony in connection with the action prior to the filing of the amended complaint and thereby were aware of the action. Wilner v. White, 788 So. 2d 822 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

In an action arising from a motor vehicle accident, the court improperly denied leave to the plaintiff to amend her complaint where (1) the accident occurred on February 25, 1993, (2) she filed suit against the defendant on February 24, 1994, and (3) she asserted that her attorney only learned that the defendant's minor son was driving the car on April 8, 1997 and filed a motion to amend two days later. Estes v. Starnes, 732 So. 2d 251 (Miss. 1999).

Trial judge did not err in denying plaintiff's motion to amend pleadings to add defendant's parent corporation; defendant was a corporate subsidiary separate and distinct from its parent, and parent corporation was not to be held responsible for any liability of the subsidiary. MBF Corp. v. Century Bus. Communications, Inc., 663 So. 2d 595 (Miss. 1995).

Chancellor erred in denying plaintiffs' motion for leave to amend complaint, where party sought to be added alleged causes of action which arose out of a series of transactions including those which created issues between existing parties. McDonald v. Holmes, 595 So. 2d 434 (Miss. 1992).

Amendment of pleadings.

Grant of summary judgment in favor of the appellee neighbors in their boundary-dispute action was proper because the appellant neighbor had waived the defense of adverse possession, Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(a). Appellant offered no reason for the six-month delay between the filing of her answer and her motion to amend the answer to raise the affirmative defense of adverse possession; further, the affirmative defense of adverse possession would have existed prior to the filing of the lawsuit, so it was not a fact that would have been found only through discovery. Charlot v. Henry, 45 So. 3d 1237 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Dismissal of two doctors in a medical-malpractice action brought by the patient and her spouse was inappropriate pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-36(15) because the patient's rejoinder of the doctors as defendants via an amended complaint after statutory notice was provided cured the initial failure to give notice. Hans v. Mem'l Hosp., 40 So. 3d 1270 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing a former employer to file an untimely-amended answer because the employees could show no prejudice from the trial court's decision since the employer pleaded the statute of limitations in its original answer. Jones v. Fluor Daniel Servs. Corp., 32 So. 3d 417 (Miss. 2010).

Trial court abused its discretion in denying the buyers' motion to amend to include the additional claims of negligent inducement and negligent misrepresentation in determining that the buyers could not have proven by a preponderance of the evidence a lack of care on the part of the sellers; the sellers' alleged knowledge of the two inspection reports did not of necessity preclude a claim of negligence. Fletcher v. Lyles, 999 So. 2d 1271 (Miss. 2009).

In a negligence case, an amended complaint was timely filed, and seeking leave of court for the amendment was not required because no responsive pleading had been filed yet. Courtney v. McCluggage, 991 So. 2d 642 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Amendment substituting a plaintiff relates back to the date of the original complaint under Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c) if the new plaintiff is the real party in interest. MS Comp Choice, SIF v. Clark, Scott & Streetman, 981 So. 2d 955 (Miss. 2008).

Trial court erred in granting a law firm's motion for summary judgment in a legal malpractice suit because whether an insurance company adequately alleged in its amended complaint that it was the assignee of the insurance company's third party administrator's claims against the firm, and thus the real party in interest, was a genuine issue. MS Comp Choice, SIF v. Clark, Scott & Streetman, 981 So. 2d 955 (Miss. 2008).

Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(a) allows a plaintiff to amend his complaint without having first served the complaint on a defendant. MS Comp Choice, SIF v. Clark, Scott & Streetman, 981 So. 2d 955 (Miss. 2008).

While plaintiffs erred under Miss. Code Ann. §11-46-1(i) in naming a sheriff's department as a defendant in a personal injury suit, the trial court erred in denying plaintiffs' motion for leave to amend the complaint pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c) to add a county as a defendant where plaintiffs' notice of claim letter put the proper county official on notice that, except for the mistake of naming the wrong party, the action would have been brought against the county. Mieger v. Pearl River County, 986 So. 2d 1025 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 987 So. 2d 451, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 371 (Miss. 2008).

Where an estate mistakenly named a nursing home and personnel, and the estate failed to properly substitute any defendant for a fictitious party under Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(h), the amended complaint related back as to four of the defendants because they were the same owners and managers as the amended nursing home and had notice under Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c), but the amended complaint did not relate back as to two defendants that did not have notice of the original complaint; therefore, those two defendant's were not timely served under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h). Bedford Health Props., LLC v. Estate of Williams, 946 So. 2d 335 (Miss. 2006).

In an action alleging waste, a trial court should have allowed an amendment to join two owners of property that gave permission to cut timber since they might have been indispensable parties under Miss. R. Civ. P. 19. Tolbert v. Southgate Timber Co., 943 So. 2d 90 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

After an original complaint has been filed, an amended complaint, except as otherwise provided by rule, may be filed only upon seeking and receiving leave of the court to do so, as set forth in Miss. R. Civ. P. 15; therefore, a putative amended complaint could not have been anything more than an attachment to the motion to amend until the court had ruled on that motion. Wilner v. White, 929 So. 2d 315 (Miss. 2006).

Amount of award to a corporation in a contract dispute was tried by consent, even though it was not in the corporation's complaint in its suit against a county. The trial by consent acted to amend the complaint. Southland Enters., Inc. v. Newton County, 940 So. 2d 937 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 939 So. 2d 805, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 739 (Miss. 2006).

Plaintiff is required to make a "reasonably diligent inquiry" into the identity of an unknown defendant within the limitations period in order to substitute the defendant for a fictitious party under Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(h) and Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(2). Santangelo v. Green, 920 So. 2d 521 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Court did not err in denying defendant's motion to supplement his petition for postconviction relief because nothing he sought to add to his petition occurred since the date of pleading; while the affidavits sought to be added to the petition were executed since the date of the original petition, the allegations contained therein all related to events that occurred prior to the date of the original petition. Hence, defendant's reliance upon Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(d) was misplaced. Sanchez v. State, 913 So. 2d 1024 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari dismissed by 920 So. 2d 1008, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 605 (Miss. 2005).

Miss. Code Ann. § 23-15-927 is silent regarding the amendment of pleadings. Therefore, Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(a) controls and amendments are allowed at any time before a responsive pleading is served; in the case at bar, no responsive pleading from the County Democratic Executive Committee was on record, and even if there was a response by the Committee served upon the candidate (who opposed the holding of a new primary election), in the record, Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(a) allowed the amendment of pleadings after a responsive pleading was served "by leave of the court." Jefferson Davis County v. Davies, 912 So. 2d 837 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court erred in dismissing, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12, a purchaser's action to recover for defects in a mobile home; the purchaser's act of filing an amended complaint within the relevant statute of limitations, Miss. Code Ann. § 63-17-159(6), was sufficient to defeat defendants' motion to dismiss, as the amended complaint, filed pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15, provided defendants with the required notice under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4. King v. Am. RV Ctrs., Inc., 862 So. 2d 558 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial court did not err in dismissing defendant's motion to amend his postconviction petition for relief; since the State was not required to file a responsive pleading, defendant had 30 days, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(a), to file his motion to amend from the time he served his postconviction relief motion, and since he did not file his motion within that time, the trial court did not err in dismissing his motion to amend. Faye v. State, 859 So. 2d 393 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

While truck owner's claim to determine insurance coverage under Miss. R. Civ. P. 57(b)(2) was futile because the insurance company did not deny coverage, and dismissal as to that claim was proper, the trial court abused its discretion in denying the truck owner's motions to compel discovery, and for leave to file a first amended complaint, to add a claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress based on the plain language of Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(a). Poindexter v. S. United Fire Ins. Co., 838 So. 2d 964 (Miss. 2003).

Bank had reason to be on notice of the variance in the acreage figures before the trial commenced and even before the buyer's counsel tried to repair the error, namely, upon taking the depositions of the agents and the buyer's theory of the case and damages were for the land the bank had purchased while the buyer was trying to secure a loan with the bank; thus, any prejudice suffered by the bank with regard to the amendment of the buyer's pleadings pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(b) did not amount to reversible error. AmSouth Bank v. Gupta, 838 So. 2d 205 (Miss. 2002).

In a suit for negligence, trial court did not abuse its discretion in permitting one psychiatrist to amend his answer in a suit for negligence to include a notice and statute of limitation defense, or in permitting another psychiatrist to raise the same defenses for the first time in his motion for summary judgment. Bennett v. Madakasira, 821 So. 2d 794 (Miss. 2002).

In a firefighter's employment dispute with a city, the trial court abused its discretion when refusing to allow the firefighter to amend the complaint following the city's motion to dismiss or, in the alternative, move for summary judgment; the firefighter sought to add a new theory of recovery arising from the same transaction and series of events in response to the city's assertion of governmental immunity. Pratt v. City of Greenville, 804 So. 2d 972 (Miss. 2001).

The plaintiffs were properly denied leave to amend the complaint on a motion to dismiss where the proposed amendment was futile in the light of statutory and case law pertaining to their claim. Jones v. Lovett, 755 So. 2d 1243 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Court did not abuse its discretion in allowing defendant to amend her pleadings during the trial by adding counterclaims; defendant did not prevail on some of these claims and plaintiff could show no actual prejudice caused by the addition of the other claims. Merchants Acceptance, Inc. v. Jamison, 752 So. 2d 422 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Defendant in replevin action should have been granted leave to file amended response and counterclaim, where his motion to amend was timely, did not alter the gist of his allegations, and neither plaintiff nor trial court identified any undue prejudice that would be suffered by plaintiff if amendment were to be granted. Simmons v. Thompson Mach., 631 So. 2d 798 (Miss. 1994).

Trial court erred in denying plaintiff leave to amend her complaint to include RICO claims arising out of the same series of events as her original complaint, and therefore court's grant of summary judgment was premature. Frank v. Dore, 635 So. 2d 1369 (Miss. 1994).

Trial court was correct in refusing to hear petition for writ of habeas corpus, where mother sought to amend her pleading a mere two days before trial in termination of parental rights proceeding. Natural Mother v. Paternal Aunt, 583 So. 2d 614 (Miss. 1991).

Plaintiffs alleging false arrest and false imprisonment were not entitled to amend their complaint to include claim for malicious prosecution, where they failed to properly move for leave to amend, defendants' motion for summary judgment had already been sustained, and allowing plaintiffs to circumvent statute of limitations by their proposed amendment would be unduly prejudicial to defendants. Parker v. Mississippi Game & Fish Comm'n, 555 So. 2d 725 (Miss. 1989).

Compelling reason.

Policy to freely grant amendments is not allowed to encourage delay, laches and negligence; examples of when a motion to amend may be prejudicial include where it would burden the adverse party with more discovery, preparation, and expense, particularly where the adverse party would have little time to investigate and acquaint itself with the matter; lack of diligence is not a compelling reason to amend, and applications to amend the pleadings should be prompt. Webb v. Braswell, 930 So. 2d 387 (Miss. 2006).

Defendant insurance agent's motion for leave to file a cross-claim against defendant insurer was properly denied because there was no compelling reason under Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(a) why the cross-claim had to be filed in this suit as the agent was not seeking to hold the insurer liable for any damages that the insureds may have recovered against the agent and and when the motion was heard the lawsuit had already been dismissed. Edwards v. Jackson Nat'l Life Ins. Co., 860 So. 2d 842 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Conforming to evidence.

Although the developers did not affirmatively plead equitable estoppel in their answer, the record was replete with particular facts that reverberated with the tenets of equitable estoppel, Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(b). Accordingly, they were sufficient to support the chancellor's finding. David M. Cox, Inc. v. Pitts, 29 So. 3d 795 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 29 So. 3d 774, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 138 (Miss. 2010).

Despite the fact that a county failed to set forth the affirmative defense of contributory negligence in the pleadings as required under Miss. R. Civ. P. 8(c), neither a car driver nor a passenger mother voiced an objection at either request by the county to apply comparative negligence during the trial and thus, the defense could be treated as if it had been raised in the pleadings under Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(b). Callahan v. Ledbetter, 992 So. 2d 1220 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Question of a constructive trust was properly before the appellate court pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(b) because when the husband and wife introduced the evidence and the administratrix did not object, the pleadings were amended by operation of the rules of civil procedure; even were the appellate court to consider the husband and wife "the other side," the husband and wife consented, since they were the ones who introduced evidence outside the pleadings. Horne v. Parker (In re Estate of Hood), 955 So. 2d 943 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Because a former adoptive mother's husband was both a legal custodian and a legal parent of a child, he was entitled to notice of a prospective adoptive mother's attempts to adopt; although the father was not named in the first adoption decree, he was a de facto party to such due to a chancery court's questioning of him, the recognition in the final decree that he was married to the former adoptive mother, and the fact that the child was taking his last name. In re J.D.S., 953 So. 2d 1133 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

There was no error in allowing the Mississippi State Bar to amend its formal complaint at the close of its case-in-chief under Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(b) to include an allegation that an attorney violated another rule of professional conduct based on evidence received at a formal hearing because there was no objection to testimony regarding this violation or the introduction of a client's receipts. Shah v. Miss. Bar, 962 So. 2d 514 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court's grant of divorce to a wife was proper in a case where there was no surprise or prejudice occasioned as a result of the trial court's decision to grant a divorce requested by both parties based on the husband's admission of adultery. Ward v. Ward, 825 So. 2d 713 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Because the issue of adverse possession was tried by consent, the failure to amend the pleadings to make them conform to the evidence did not affect the result of the trial on these issues. Stewart v. Graber, 754 So. 2d 1281 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion when it refused to allow the plaintiff to amend its complaint to conform the pleadings to proof and include a cause of action for commercial bribery on the basis that the plaintiff lacked due diligence in amending the complaint and because the defendants would have been adversely prejudiced if the motion to amend was granted at such a late date, on the last day of a four-day trial. Par Indus. v. Target Container Co., 708 So. 2d 44 (Miss. 1998).

The plaintiff wife was properly permitted to amend the complaint in her divorce action to conform to evidence already presented in her trial testimony where (1) the amendment occurred in the middle of her testimony and before the defendant husband was called as a witness, (2) the only contested issues in the amended pleadings were increased requests in the amount of the lump sum and periodic alimony, and (3) the husband was required to put on the same evidence to defend the request for alimony, regardless of the amount in the pleadings. Robison v. Robison, 722 So. 2d 601 (Miss. 1998).

Where the defendant offered no objection to evidence offered by the plaintiff of a deficiency in child support greater than the amount set forth in her pleadings, the pleadings would be deemed amended, especially since (1) the amount sought was a liquidated amount which the defendant could reasonably calculate based on his own knowledge of the decree versus the amount paid by him, and (2) the defendant knew that he was not currently paying the full amount of child support due and that, therefore, the outstanding amount thereof would continue to increase until trial. Lahmann v. Hallmon, 722 So. 2d 614 (Miss. 1998).

Chancellor did not err in denying defendant's motion to amend to conform pleadings to proof presented at trial, where defendant's proof, even if admitted under an amended pleading, would have been inadequate to support a claim. Bowser v. Tootle, 556 So. 2d 1373 (Miss. 1990).

Plaintiff's motion, at close of defendant's case, to amend medical malpractice complaint to conform to evidence presented in case was correctly denied, where new theory of recovery was not tried by implied consent, and had motion been granted, it would have resulted in undue prejudice to defendant. McCarty v. Kellum, 667 So. 2d 1277 (Miss. 1995).

Dismissal.

Trial court's dismissal of complaint for failure to state a claim for which relief can be granted afforded plaintiffs an automatic right to amend within thirty days, but their failure to exercise this right rendered their assignment of error meritless. Sligh v. First Nat'l Bank, 704 So. 2d 1020 (Miss. 1997).

Fraud.

Petitioner's motion for leave to amend should have been allowed, where motion alleged fraud perpetrated upon court by administratrix of estate; if an allegation of fraud is sufficiently pled it should be heard, and thirty days leave to amend is to be granted when court sustains a motion to dismiss. Smith v. Estate of King, 501 So. 2d 1120 (Miss. 1987).

Implied consent.

Trial court erred in concluding that the landowners' complaint did not contain a description of the lands claimed to have been adversely possessed and that their claim failed because the trial court could have ordered a survey to describe boundaries of the tracts of land by metes and bounds; even if the landowners had not alleged adverse possession at all, the receipt of the kind of evidence offered and accepted without objection on the question of possession would constitute a trial by consent, and no amendment would be needed, Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(b). Benefield v. Swords, 857 So. 2d 782 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Two fleeting references to the possibility of joint custody — during a trial in which both parents fought hard for sole custody — were insufficient to amend a parent's pleadings under a theory of implied consent to include a petition for joint custody. Mabus v. Mabus, 890 So. 2d 806 (Miss. — 2003).

Because it was reasonable that claimant did not recognize the significance of the evidence introduced at trial that was not present in the pleadings, and thus failed to object, he did not give implied consent to the trial of the unpleaded issues. Cox v. S.B. Thomas Trust, 755 So. 2d 52 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Plaintiff was not barred from asserting negligence issue, where she implicitly amended her complaint under subdivision (b) of this rule by introducing negligence issue in her motion opposing summary judgment, and the rule allows issues tried by implied consent to be litigated. Presswood v. Cook, 658 So. 2d 859 (Miss. 1995).

Chancellor erred in amending divorce decree to award husband the parties' oldest child as a tax exemption; issue of tax exemptions was not raised by the pleadings, and wife did not impliedly consent to trial of issue where chancellor's few, brief questions of husband concerning tax exemptions would not have alerted wife that a new, unpled issue was being raised and tried. Shipley v. Ferguson, 638 So. 2d 1295 (Miss. 1994).

A finding that an issue was tried by implied consent depends upon whether parties recognized that a new issue was being litigated at trial; where questions asked or evidence presented at trial are relevant to issues actually raised in the pleadings, trial by implied consent will not be found. Setser v. Piazza, 644 So. 2d 1211 (Miss. 1994).

Wife's action for separate maintenance was properly converted to, and tried as, a claim for alimony, where husband put on evidence as to fault and alimony, failed to properly object, and failed to raise any due process considerations at trial or on appeal, and therefore issue of alimony was tried by parties' consent. Weiss v. Weiss, 579 So. 2d 539 (Miss. 1991).

Where plaintiffs originally sued on agency theory but added joint venture claim at trial, the matter was tried by implied consent where defendant noted the new theory but did not object. Carmichael v. Agur Realty Co., 574 So. 2d 603 (Miss. 1990).

Undue influence issue was tried by implied consent of parties, where plaintiff at trial sought to establish existence of confidential relationship and defendant's exercise of undue influence, and no objection was offered on grounds that such evidence was beyond scope of pleadings. Norris v. Norris, 498 So. 2d 809 (Miss. 1986).

Interest of justice.

Chancellor abused her discretion by allowing a wife to put forward evidence of her need for temporary rehabilitative alimony, in order "to be fair to both parties and to do equity," where there had been no mention of alimony in the pre-trial statement. Singley v. Singley, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 283 (Miss. June 12, 2003).

Chancery court should have allowed taxpayers' post-judgment motion to amend complaint to assert claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and Equal Protection Clause, since case was of great public interest, federal judiciary had declared that it had no subject matter jurisdiction, and justice demanded that the claim be heard and decided on its merits and the only available alternative was allowing amendment in the present action. Burrell v. Mississippi State Tax Comm'n, 536 So. 2d 848 (Miss. 1988).

Trial court did not err in denying the motion to amend filed by the deceased patient's heir after the statute of limitations expired because the heir failed to meet both the identity of transaction test and the notice requirement, thereby rendering the relation back doctrine of Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c) inapplicable and her amended complaint barred by the two-year statute of limitations provided in Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-36(2) for wrongful death actions. The facts on which the heir founded her claims of negligence gave rise to separate and distinct actions, which failed to inform the doctor of litigation concerning a particular occurrence because the original complaint alleged that the doctor negligently prescribed ACE inhibitors for the patient's hypertension, and the amended complaint alleged he negligently prescribed allopurinol for the patient's gout. Bracey v. Sullivan, 899 So. 2d 210 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Prejudice.

Although the court did not find any evidence that appellant sought leave of court to amend his complaint to add a claim that appellee usurped a corporate opportunity, any error was harmless because the record was clear that the chancellor did not award appellant any damages based on that claim. Griffith v. Griffith, 997 So. 2d 218 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Under Miss. R. Civ. P. 15, appellant should have been allowed to amend his pleadings where, when appellee appealed from the justice court to the circuit court, the circuit court granted original jurisdiction, not appellate jurisdiction, and therefore had to follow the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure; appellee would not suffer prejudice if appellant were to amend his pleadings, especially since it was appellee who chose to appeal to the circuit court and invoke the original jurisdiction of the circuit court. Statham v. Miller, 988 So. 2d 407 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Had the trial court granted the couple leave to amend, the rights of all the defendants would be prejudicially affected, in particular, the driver's insurer, who had been dismissed as a result of the settlement agreement, would have been most prejudicially affected, and to grant the couple permission to amend their complaint at such a late date would prejudice the restaurant; accordingly, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the couple's motion to amend. Whitaker v. T & M Foods, Ltd., 7 So. 3d 946 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), reversed by, remanded by 2008 Miss. LEXIS 486 (Miss. Oct. 2, 2008), reversed by, remanded by 7 So. 3d 893, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 166 (Miss. 2009)supra.

County court did not abuse its discretion in granting a plaintiff, more than one year after the complaint was filed, leave to amend her ad damnum clause from $75,000 to $750,000, as the amendment did not prejudice defendant, which could have sought removal to federal court but chose not to. Wal-Mart Super Ctr. v. Long, 852 So. 2d 568 (Miss. 2003).

Where employee filed her motion to amend her pleadings just 14 days after the employer filed his answer and 9 days after the employer filed his motion for summary judgment, this filing by the employee was well within the normal period for discovery and prior to the case being anywhere near ready for trial, and there was no actual prejudice to the employer, thus, the trial court abused its discretion in denying the employee's motion to amend her pleadings. Coleman v. Smith, 841 So. 2d 192 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Amendment of defendant's answer and counterclaim should have been allowed, where amendment would have merely formally pled those issues of which plaintiff already had full knowledge. TXG Intrastate Pipeline Co. v. Grossnickle, 716 So. 2d 991 (Miss. 1997).

In practice, an amendment should be denied only if the amendment would cause actual prejudice to the opposite party. TXG Intrastate Pipeline Co. v. Grossnickle, 716 So. 2d 991 (Miss. 1997).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in granting leave to file amended complaint, where opposing party did not assert nor did record contain a hint of prejudice. Rector v. Mississippi State Hwy. Comm'n, 623 So. 2d 975 (Miss. 1993).

Allowing entire theory of liability to change at conclusion of a three-day trial seriously prejudiced defendant, and circuit judge therefore erred in submitting new issue to jury, and was correct in reversing his ruling upon defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Hester v. Bandy, 627 So. 2d 833 (Miss. 1993).

Relation back.

In a medical negligence case in which a mother raised her constitutional challenges to the Mississippi Tort Claims Act (MTCA) for the first time on appeal, although, in her motion to amend the complaint, the mother stated that she wished to raise the constitutionality of the MTCA, there was no valid complaint to amend. The mother had not complied with the notice requirement under Miss. R. Civ. P. 24(d), and she had not complied with the 90-day notice period in Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-11(1). Jones v. Laurel Family Clinic, P.A., 37 So. 3d 665 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Trial court's dismissal of the personal injury action as untimely was reversed and remanded for further proceedings because it had long been recognized that the doctrine of misnomer allowed parties to correct party-name errors if doing so would not result in prejudice. Allowing the dismissal to stand would have denied the patient an opportunity for a trial on the merits because of a misnomer in the complaint, and the patient should not have been penalized for the misnomer, because no such penalty existed under the facts of the case, in which the correction was simple and prejudiced no one. Scaggs v. GPCH-GP, Inc., 23 So. 3d 1080 (Miss. 2009).

Applying Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c), the patient's proposed amended complaint did arise out of the same transaction, but there was no evidence that the medical company received any notice of the institution of the present medical negligence action until after the time period for service of process had expired. Thus, the patient failed to meet the requirements of Rule 15(c) and seeing as the company was not a defendant in the case, it was not error for the circuit court to refuse to allow the patient to serve the company with process, and Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h) was inapplicable. Johnson v. Lee, 17 So. 3d 1140 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Summary judgment was granted to an electric company in a property damage case because the statute of limitations was not tolled under Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-57 since, from the date of an alleged incident until the expiration of the three-year statute of limitations, other parties were free to file their own claim or to join in the claim erroneously filed on behalf of a dissolved corporation. Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c) did not allow for a reprieve from the limitations period because no amended complaint was filed; instead, an entirely new action with new parties was initiated. Funderburg v. Pontotoc Elec. Power Ass'n, 6 So. 3d 439 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Negligence case was properly dismissed as barred by the statute of limitations where the elements of Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c) were not met; even though an amended complaint arose from the same conduct, transaction, or occurrence as an original complaint, there was no mistake concerning a driver's identity where he was identified in an accident report and referred to in the allegations of the original complaint. An owner's original suit against the driver's grandmother was dismissed because the grandmother was not the driver's guardian. Campbell v. Davis, 8 So. 3d 909 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Civil rights litigant's motion to amend his pro se complaint in tort to add a federal claim under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 for violation of his right to free speech on the ground that the tort claims were barred by the Mississippi Tort Claims Act was properly denied because the federal claim was barred under the applicable residual three-year statute of limitation period in Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-49 and because the amended claim did not relate back to the time of the filing of the original pleading, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c); the proposed amendment did not pass the identity of transaction test because the tort claims asserted in the original complaint did not bear a relation to the free speech claim and the defendant was not on notice regarding the free speech claim. Giles v. Stokes, 988 So. 2d 926 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In a products liability suit, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(h) and 15(c)(2), a patient's second amended complaint, which substituted a medical device manufacturer for an unknown defendant, related back to the date of the original complaint naming a fictitious defendant because the patient made a reasonably diligent inquiry into the identity of the manufacturer where the suit was filed one day before the three-year limitations period in Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-49 expired; less than three months elapsed between when the hospital that used the device on the patient supplied an erroneous manufacturer's name and when the patient sought to substitute that manufacturer's name for the fictitious party designation; and the patient sought to substitute the correct manufacturer for the first manufacturer within three weeks after learning that the manufacturer had actually made the device. Scoggins v. Boston Sci. Corp., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35507 (N.D. Miss. Apr. 22, 2008).

Landman and lessees entered stipulated evidence on the amount in dispute and the date that it was due, and the landman made no other objections to this stipulation; the landman did not object that the evidence of prejudgment interest was outside the pleadings, and since he failed to make such objection, the evidence of liquidated damages and the date from which they were allegedly due was entered prior to judgment by the expenses or, at the very least, implied consent of the parties. Gill v. Gipson, 982 So. 2d 415 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 981 So. 2d 298, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 238 (Miss. 2008).

Substitution of a son as the party in a wrongful death case was improper because a patient's brother lacked standing to bring the action originally; by the time the son filed an amended complaint, the limitations period in Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-13 had expired, and the complaint did not relate back to a nullity, and therefore dismissal was warranted. Tolliver ex rel. Wrongful Death Beneficiaries of Green v. Mladineo, 987 So. 2d 989 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a wrongful death case, an amendment of a complaint under Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c) was properly denied because the causes of action did not arise out of the same nucleus of common facts; one dealt with the design and manufacturing of a vehicle, while the other dealt with the failure to inspect and repair the vehicle before resale, and therefore, the statute of limitations had run on the proposed claim since relation back did not apply. Russell v. Ford Motor Co., 960 So. 2d 495 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 959 So. 2d 1051, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 387 (Miss. 2007).

Patient's amended complaint did not relate back to the original complaint as the patient was not diligent by waiting almost two years after filing the original complaint to identify a clinic and a doctor who had been named as fictitious parties. Joiner v. Phillips, 953 So. 2d 1123 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Summary judgment was properly awarded to a doctor in a patient's medical malpractice action where the patient's amended complaint, in which she added the doctor as a defendant, was not a proper Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(h) substitution, because the amended complaint had not replaced a John Doe defendant with the doctor, and the amended complaint did not relate back to the date of the original pleading under Rules 9(h) and 15(c)(2). Santangelo v. Green, 920 So. 2d 521 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In a medical malpractice action, on remand from a first appeal denying an amended complaint, the trial court granted summary judgment for defendants based on the two-year limitations period. However, upon a petition for rehearing, the appellate court held that based on the unique facts of the case, the amended complaint should have been treated as an original complaint as to the added parties; since the amended complaint was filed prior to the expiration of the statute of limitations (exactly two years after the alleged negligence), and a summons, along with the amended complaint, was served upon the added parties within the time period required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h), the trial judge erred in granting summary judgment for defendants. Wilner v. White, 929 So. 2d 343 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), reversed by 929 So. 2d 315, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 267 (Miss. 2006).

Amendment that changes the parties against whom the claim is asserted will relate back if within the statute of limitations period and the additional 120 days for service of process, the new party receives such notice of the action as will prevent prejudice, and the new party knows or should have known that but for a mistake concerning the identity of the proper party, the action would be brought against the party. If the complaint uses fictitious names because the plaintiff is ignorant of the name of an opposing party and so alleges in his pleading, then an amendment to add the newly discovered actual party relates back to the date of the original pleading pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 9(h) and Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(2). Wilner v. White, 929 So. 2d 343 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), reversed by 929 So. 2d 315, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 267 (Miss. 2006).

Circuit court had priority jurisdiction over a chancery court regarding the specific performance of a lease agreement between a partnership and a corporation because the partnership filed a complaint alleging breach of a management contract against the corporation in the circuit court before the corporation filed its action in the chancery court, the partnership's complaint was amended after the corporation filed its action in the chancery court to include a declaratory action that the lease was void as a result of the corporation's breach of the management agreement, and the complaint amendment related back to the date of the partnership's original filing under Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c). Copiah Med. Assocs. v. Miss. Baptist Health Sys., 898 So. 2d 656 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court did not err in denying the motion to amend filed by the deceased patient's heir after the statute of limitations expired because the heir failed to meet both the identity of transaction test and the notice requirement, thereby rendering the relation back doctrine of Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c) inapplicable and her amended complaint barred by the statute of limitations. The facts on which the heir founded her claims of negligence gave rise to separate and distinct actions, which failed to inform the doctor of litigation concerning a particular occurrence because the original complaint alleged that the doctor negligently prescribed ACE inhibitors for the patient's hypertension, and the amended complaint alleged he negligently prescribed allopurinol for the patient's gout. Bracey v. Sullivan, 899 So. 2d 210 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Notwithstanding Miss. Code Ann. § 93-25-9(b), the chancellor could have exercised jurisdiction over the child support question if the father, a resident of California, had voluntarily entered a general appearance, or filed a responsive pleading that effectively waived the issue of jurisdiction. However, while it was correct that the father filed a written answer, with leave of court, he filed an amended answer, which contested jurisdiction; same related back to the filing date of the original answer, and despite his written entry of appearance, and a motion for guardian ad litem, the facts did not suffice for a general appearance or for personal jurisdiction over the father for the purpose of modifying child support. Scaife v. Scaife, 880 So. 2d 1089 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Patient's motion for leave to amend had been filed prior to the end of the limitation and service of process period, however, the matter was not brought on for hearing until after the limitation and the process service window closed. An amendment to add a party at so late a date would relate back only if notice had been timely received, and "a mistake concerning the identity of the proper party" had existed or substitution of a newly identified party for a fictitious one was being made; even had the patient's complaint been amended immediately after the hearing on the motion to amend, it would not have related back since the patient was aware of the new defendants who were the subject of the proposed amendment and there was not reasonable diligence. Wilner v. White, — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 654 (Miss. Ct. App. July 13, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at, remanded by 929 So. 2d 343, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 1033 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

By a request to amend its complaint against a debtor to seek foreclosure, a lienholder properly initiated foreclosure, even though the request was not granted until months later because, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15, the granting of a motion to amend related back to the original pleadings; thus, the lienholder initiated foreclosure proceedings prior to the expiration of the one-year extension of a condominium lien pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 89-9-21. Tally Arms Condo. Ass'n v. Breland, 854 So. 2d 28 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where newly added defendants were not served with the original complaint or with the motion to amend and the proposed amended complaint within 120 days after the statute of limitations elapsed, as the amended complaint was filed after the statute of limitations had run against the new defendants and did not relate back to the filing of the original complaint under Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(a), (c), the trial court properly dismissed the new defendants. Curry v. Turner, 832 So. 2d 508 (Miss. 2002).

In order for an amendment to a complaint to "relate back" under subsection (c) of this rule, the original complaint must be valid. Pickens v. Donaldson, 748 So. 2d 684 (Miss. 1999).

Relation back privilege provided for fictitious parties under subdivision (c)(2) of this rule requires plaintiff to actually exercise a reasonably diligent inquiry into identity of the fictitious party. Doe v. Mississippi Blood Servs., Inc., 704 So. 2d 1016 (Miss. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1078, 118 S. Ct. 1525, 140 L. Ed. 2d 676 (1998).

Plaintiff's attempt to join new party after running of statute of limitations was denied; plaintiff improperly substituted one party for another, not for a fictitiously named defendant, and therefore could not avail herself of relation back provisions of rules. Doe v. Mississippi Blood Servs., Inc., 704 So. 2d 1016 (Miss. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1078, 118 S. Ct. 1525, 140 L. Ed. 2d 676 (1998).

Amended complaint correcting name of corporate defendant was not time-barred and related back to date of originally filed complaint, where company's insurance adjuster investigated claim soon after occurrence and the same attorneys represented both corporate entities. Brown v. Winn-Dixie Montgomery, Inc., 669 So. 2d 92 (Miss. 1996).

In determining the propriety of amending a pleading which would otherwise be time barred because the limitations period had run, the claim stated in amendment must arise from the same transaction or occurrence as did the claim in original complaint, and the opposing party must have been put on notice regarding the claim or defense raised by the amended pleading. Hudson v. Parvin, 582 So. 2d 403 (Miss. 1991).

Where plaintiff filed an amended complaint within ten days after her original complaint was dismissed under M.R.C.P. 12(b)(6), she was not required to petition court for 30 days leave, and her amended complaint related back to the date of her original complaint. O'Cain v. Harvey Freeman & Sons, 603 So. 2d 824 (Miss. 1991).

Filing date of amended bill could not be used to meet residency period necessary for divorce, since amended bill related back to filing date of original bill. O'Neill v. O'Neill, 515 So. 2d 1208 (Miss. 1987).

Statute of limitations.

Because father's claim on a promissory note against a son would still be futile if a trial court allowed him to amend it under Miss. R. Civ. P. 15 due to the running of the statute of limitations, trial court did not err in denying the father's motion to amend and granting the son's motion to dismiss under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Merideth v. Merideth, 987 So. 2d 477 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Circuit court erred in dismissing the doctor as a defendant from the beneficiaries' wrongful death claim where the time allowed by the medical malpractice statute of limitations had not yet expired when the doctor was served with the amended complaint. Long v. Mem'l Hosp. at Gulfport, 969 So. 2d 35 (Miss. 2007).

Patient's amended complaint, adding a doctor and clinic as defendants, could not be treated for purposes of the added parties as an original complaint; because only the motion to amend the complaint pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(c) was considered filed before the expiration of the two-year statute of limitations under Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-36, when the trial court denied the motion to amend, the practical effect was that no amended complaint had ever been filed. Wilner v. White, 929 So. 2d 315 (Miss. 2006).

Patient's motion for leave to amend was filed prior to the end of the limitation and service of process periods, however, the matter was not brought on for hearing until after the limitation and the process service window closed. An amendment to add a party at so late a date would relate back only if notice had been timely received, and "a mistake concerning the identity of the proper party" had existed or substitution of a newly identified party for a fictitious one was being made; even had the patient's complaint been amended immediately after the hearing on the motion to amend, it would not have related back since the patient was aware of the new defendants who were the subject of the proposed amendment and there was not reasonable diligence; therefore, the limitations period was not tolled. Wilner v. White, — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 654 (Miss. Ct. App. July 13, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at, remanded by 929 So. 2d 343, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 1033 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In a patient's negligence action, in granting the motion to amend the complaint four years after the initial suit to add the health care provider as a new party, it appeared obvious that the new "fraudulent concealment" argument was advanced as a "savings" option, because without it the statute of limitation on negligence actions would have barred any action; because the trial court erred in granting the motion to amend the complaint, the issue of whether or not the amended complaint would relate back became moot. Medicomp, Inc. v. Marshall, 878 So. 2d 193 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 125 S. Ct. 671, 160 L. Ed. 2d 508 (2004).

In a contempt proceeding against the husband for not paying child support, the pleading of the Mississippi Department of Human Services (DHS) was not styled as an amendment to the wife's original complaint for child support arrearages and was not pled as such, new process was served on the husband, and the DHS failed to obtain permission from the chancellor to amend the petition; thus, the chancellor was correct in finding the DHS's petition stood alone, did not revive the wife's prior petition, and was barred by the statute of limitations. Miss. Dep't of Human Servs. v. Guidry, 830 So. 2d 628 (Miss. 2002).

In an action arising from a motor vehicle accident, the plaintiff should have been granted leave to amend her complaint to assert that the defendant's minor son was driving the defendant's vehicle at the time of the accident, notwithstanding the expiration of the statute of limitations, since (1) the defendant, as well as his minor son, had notice of the plaintiff's claim within the applicable statute of limitations by virtue of the plaintiff's negotiations with the defendant's insurer and ultimately, the action against the defendant, and (2) the defendant and his son knew or should have known that but for some error in identity, the son was the proper party and could not be said to have been prejudiced as the defendant retained counsel at the time the suit was instituted. Estes v. Starnes, 732 So. 2d 251 (Miss. 1999).

Sua sponte.

The trial court did not err in bifurcating trial in a proceeding to contest probate of a will and to allow amendment of the pleadings, notwithstanding that the parties did not make a motion for amendment and did not argue for an amendment. Smith v. Averill, 722 So. 2d 606 (Miss. 1998).

Timeliness.

Car owner's request to amend her complaint was untimely and failed to conform to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15, in that the request to amend was made outside of the discovery window and the owner obtained neither leave of court nor the repair facility's written consent to amend. Beene v. Ferguson Auto., Inc., 37 So. 3d 695 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Patron's personal injury suit against a store was remanded to the state court in which it was originally filed because the store removed the suit after the expiration of the one-year period in 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b); the equitable exception to the one-year period did not apply because although the patron waited until just before trial to amend her complaint to seek more than $75,000, such was warranted by new medical findings concerning the patron's injuries and was allowable under Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(c) and Miss. R. Civ. P. 15. Smith v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 489 F. Supp. 2d 600 (N.D. Miss. 2007).

Where leave to amend a complaint was sought at a hearing for summary judgment, but a motion for such was not filed until after summary judgment was granted, the motion was properly denied as untimely. Harmon v. Regions Bank, 961 So. 2d 693 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court erred in sua sponte entering a default judgment against a city under Miss. R. Civ. P. 55 in a suit brought under the Mississippi Tort Claims Act, specifically Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(c); although the city did not timely answer plaintiff's amended complaint pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(a), the parties continued to engage in discovery for over four years and plaintiff had no intention of seeking of a default judgment. City of Jackson v. Presley, 942 So. 2d 777 (Miss. 2006).

Though former Miss. R. Civ. P.15(a) entitled plaintiffs to an automatic 30 days' leave to amend their complaint after the trial court granted defendants' motion for judgment on the pleadings, their failure to timely file an amended complaint justified the trial court's denial of their subsequent motion to amend the complaint. Lane v. R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 853 So. 2d 1144 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court abused its discretion by allowing a party in a land dispute to amend her pleadings after commencement of trial to include a counterclaim for adverse possession, an affirmative defense. Brown v. Akin, 790 So. 2d 893 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Rule 16. Pre-trial procedure.

In any action the court may, on its own motion or on the motion of any party, and shall on the motion of all parties, direct the attorneys for the parties to appear before it at least twenty days before the case is set for trial for a conference to consider and determine:

(a) The possibility of settlement of the action;

(b) the simplification of the issues;

(c) the necessity or desirability of amendments to the pleadings;

(d) itemizations of expenses and special damages;

(e) the limitation of the number of expert witnesses;

(f) the exchange of reports of expert witnesses expected to be called by each party;

(g) the exchange of medical reports and hospital records, but only to the extent that such exchange does not abridge the physician-patient privilege;

(h) the advisability of a preliminary reference of issues to a master for findings to be used as evidence when the trial is to be by jury;

(i) the imposition of sanctions as authorized by Rule 37;

(j) the possibility of obtaining admissions of fact and of documents and other exhibits which will avoid unnecessary proof;

(k) in jury cases, proposed instructions, and in non-jury cases, proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law, all of which may be subsequently amended or supplemented as justice may require;

(l) such other matters as may aid in the disposition of the action.

The court may enter an order reciting the action taken at the conference, the amendments allowed to the pleadings, and the agreements made by the parties as to any other matters considered, and limiting issues for trial to those not disposed of by admissions or agreements of counsel; and such order when entered shall control the subsequent course of the action, unless modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice. (Amended effective March 1, 1989; April 13, 2000.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective April 13, 2000, Rule 16 was amended to allow the conference to be held pursuant to the court's motion. So. 2d. (West Miss.Cas. 2000).

Effective March 1, 1989, Rule 16 was amended to abrogate provisions for a pretrial calendar. 536-538 So.2d XXI (West Miss. Cas. 1989).

COMMENT

Rule 16 governs the pretrial conference. It provides that such a conference may be held on the court's own motion or on the motion of any party and shall be held on the motion of all parties. It authorizes the amending or supplementing of proposed jury instructions, or of proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law in non-jury cases, after they have been preliminarily agreed upon in the pretrial conference. Also, it provides that the court may enter a pretrial order, and if such order is entered it "shall control the subsequent course of action unless modified."

[Comment amended April 18, 1995; April 13, 2000.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction.
Issues.
Motion for recusal denied.

Construction.

Nothing in this rule or elsewhere allows a local court to unilaterally adopt a special rule which is inconsistent with a uniform rule regarding the reporting of settlement to the court. Watts v. Pennington, 598 So. 2d 1308 (Miss. 1992).

Issues.

Chancellor abused her discretion by allowing a wife to put forward evidence of her need for temporary rehabilitative alimony, in order "to be fair to both parties and to do equity," where there had been no mention of alimony in the pre-trial statement. Singley v. Singley, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 283 (Miss. June 12, 2003).

Chancellor abused her discretion in awarding a wife alimony since alimony had not been mentioned in the pretrial statement and the chancellor could not modify the pretrial statement: the parties had not agreed to modification, and the chancellor did not find manifest injustice. Singley v. Singley, 846 So. 2d 1004 (Miss. 2002).

The chancellor abused her discretion in determining that the issue of alimony was a matter properly before it, notwithstanding that the wife's counterclaim contained language requesting periodic and lump sum alimony, since the pre-trial statement produced by a joint effort of the parties, approved by the chancellor, and entered by order of the chancellor was unambiguous and clear and did not indicate that alimony was an issue to be tried. Singley v. Singley, — So. 2d —, 2000 Miss. App. LEXIS 456 (Miss. Ct. App. Sept. 26, 2000), affirmed in part and reversed in part by, remanded by 846 So. 2d 1004, 2002 Miss. LEXIS 309 (Miss. 2002), affirmed in part and reversed in part by, remanded by 2003 Miss. LEXIS 283 (Miss. June 12, 2003).

Motion for recusal denied.

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying plaintiff's motion for recusal where plaintiff failed to produce any evidence regarding either allegation of impropriety; plaintiff produced no evidence that the court administrator had any material input into the court's judicial decisions. Hill v. Mills, 26 So. 3d 322 (Miss. 2010).

Rule 16A. Motions for recusal of judges.

Motions seeking the recusal of judges shall be timely filed with the trial judge and shall be governed by procedures set forth in the Uniform Rules of Circuit and County Court Practice and the Uniform Rules of Chancery Court Practice. (Adopted, April 4, 2002.)

COMMENT

Motions for recusal should be timely filed and should not be used for purposes of delay. Specific procedures for presentation and consideration of motions seeking the recusal of judges are set forth in URCCC 1.15 and Unif. Chanc. R. 1.11. See also, M.R.A.P. 48B concerning review of the trial judges' denial of motions to recuse under M.R.A.P. 21. [Adopted April 4, 2002]

CHAPTER IV. PARTIES

Rule 17. Parties plaintiff and defendant; capacity.

(a) Real party in interest. Every action shall be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest. An executor, administrator, guardian, bailee, trustee, a party with whom or in whose name a contract has been made for the benefit of another, or a party authorized by statute may sue in his representative capacity without joining with him the party for whose benefit the action is brought. No action shall be dismissed on the ground that it is not prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest until a reasonable time has been allowed after objection for ratification of commencement of the action by, or joinder or substitution of, the real party in interest; and such ratification, joinder or substitution shall have the same effect as if the action had been commenced in the name of the real party in interest.

(b) Subrogation cases. In subrogation cases, regardless of whether subrogation has occurred by operation of law, assignment, loan receipt, or otherwise, if the subrogor no longer has a pecuniary interest in the claim the action shall be brought in the name of the subrogee. If the subrogor still has a pecuniary interest in the claim, the action shall be brought in the names of the subrogor and the subrogee.

(c) Infants or persons under legal disability. Whenever a party to an action is an infant or is under legal disability and has a representative duly appointed under the laws of the State of Mississippi or the laws of a foreign state or country, the representative may sue or defend on behalf of such party. A party defendant who is an infant or is under legal disability and is not so represented may be represented by a guardian ad litem appointed by the court when the court considers such appointment necessary for the protection of the interest of such defendant. The guardian ad litem shall be a resident of the State of Mississippi, shall file his consent and oath with the clerk, and shall give such bond as the court may require. The court may make any other orders it deems proper for the protection of the defendant. When the interest of an unborn or unconceived person is before the court, the court may appoint a guardian ad litem for such interest. If an infant or incompetent person does not have a duly appointed representative, he may sue by his next friend.

(d) Guardian ad litem; how chosen. Whenever a guardian ad litem shall be necessary, the court in which the action is pending shall appoint an attorney to serve in that capacity. In all cases in which a guardian ad litem is required, the court must ascertain a reasonable fee or compensation to be allowed and paid to such guardian ad litem for his service rendered in such cause, to be taxed as a part of the cost in such action.

(e) Public officers. When a public officer sues or is sued in his official capacity, he may be described as a party by his official title rather than by name; but the court may require his name to be added.

COMMENT

Rule 17 prescribes the general requirements that must be satisfied regarding the plaintiff's interest in the subject matter of the proceeding and each litigant's capacity either to sue or be sued. Rule 17(a) sets forth the basic principle for determining who may bring an action by requiring that it be prosecuted "in the name of the real party in interest," provides specific capacity rules to be followed in actions involving infants or persons under legal disabilities, and provides for the appointment and remuneration of attorneys as guardians ad litem.

The second sentence of Rule 17(a) contains a specific enumeration of a number of persons who are real parties in interest; the purpose of this listing is to provide guidance in cases in which it might not be clear who the real party in interest is and to emphasize the fact that he might not be the person beneficially interested in the potential recovery. Of course, the rule presumes that applicable substantive laws of Mississippi give the persons named in the rule the right to sue. Attempts have been made to interpret Rule 17 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure (after which M.R.C.P. 17 was drafted) as creating an exception to the joinder requirements of Rule 19 by the portion of Rule 17(a) stating that anyone listed "may sue in his own name without joining with him the party for whose benefit the action is brought"; the courts have rejected this interpretation and have held that Rule 17(a) assumes that the joinder of those beneficially interested in the action is not otherwise required. As a result, Rule 19 always must be consulted to determine if all the necessary parties have been joined. 6 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 1543 (1971).

The provision that no action shall be dismissed on the ground that it is not prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest until a reasonable time has been allowed, after the objection has been raised, for ratification, joinder, or substitution, is added simply in the interests of justice. Originally the rule was permissive in purpose: it was designed to allow an assignee to sue in his own name. That having been accomplished, the modern function of the rule in its negative aspect is simply to protect the defendant against a subsequent action by the party actually entitled to recover, and to ensure generally that the judgment will have its proper effect as res judicata. See, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-3 (1972); Smith v. Copiah County, 219 Miss. 633, 69 So.2d 404 (1954).

Rule 17(b) governs real parties in interest in subrogation cases. One of the most common instances of subrogation is when the insurer indemnifies its insured, at which time the former succeeds to whatever rights the latter has against the person who allegedly caused the damage. Difficulties arise when the subrogated insurer seeks to bring suit in the name of the insured in order to avoid the antipathy juries are thought to have toward insurance companies, especially as against an injured person. As a practical matter, of course, the insurance company will control the prosecution of the lawsuit no matter in whose name it is brought.

The general rule under the federal equivalent of M.R.C.P. 17(b) is that if an insurer has paid the entire claim it is the real party in interest and must sue in its own name. This is sound since it is logical that an insured who has no interest in the outcome of the litigation may not bring suit. See U.S. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 338 U.S. 366 [70 S. Ct. 207, 94 L.Ed. 171] (1949); American Fid. & Cas. Co. v. All Am. Bus Lines, Inc., 179 F.2d 7 (10th Cir. 1949); 6 Wright & Miller, supra, Civil § 1546.

The insurer who pays a part of the loss is only partially subrogated to the rights of the insured. This may occur when the loss exceeds the coverage or when the insurance policy contains a deductible amount that must be borne by the insured. The respective rights of the parties in this situation parallel those when there has been a partial assignment: either the insured or the insurer may sue in his own name. See U.S. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., supra. Thus, if the insured brings suit, the insurer who is partially subrogated may intervene in the action to protect his pro rata share of the potential recovery. See McDonald v. E. J. Lavino Co., 430 F.2d 1065 (5th Cir. 1970); Smith Petroleum Serv. Inc. v. Monsanto Chem. Co., 420 F.2d 1103 (5th Cir. 1970). If either sues and the other does not voluntarily join or intervene, the defendant may protect himself from multiple lawsuits, by having the absent party joined. See U.S. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., supra, Cross v. Harrington, 294 F. Supp. 1340 (N.D.Miss. 1969); 6 Wright & Miller, supra, Civil § 1546.

The first, sentence of M.R.C.P. 17(c) provides that whenever an infant or person, under a legal disability has a representative, such as a guardian, conservator, or other fiduciary, the representative may sue or defend on behalf of his ward. If the infant or person under a legal disability does not have a representative, he may be represented by a guardian ad litem.

If the rights of an unborn or unconceived person are before the court, that person may also be represented by a guardian ad litem. Infants and persons under a legal disability may sue by their next friends. Rule 17(c) gives the court the discretion to appoint guardians ad litem when deemed necessary. For an example of when the appointment of a guardian ad litem was held unnecessary to protect an infant, See Hutton v. Hutton, 233 Miss. 458, 102 So.2d 424 (1958). The rule also sets forth the general, professional qualifications for a guardian ad litem.

Rule 17(d) provides that when the appointment of a guardian becomes necessary, the court shall appoint an attorney to serve in that capacity, whose compensation shall be determined by the court and taxed as a cost of the action. Rules, 17(c) and (d) are adapted from Miss. Code Ann. § 9-5-89 (1972). See also V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice, § 34 (2d ed. 1950).

Rule 17(e) permits public officials to be referred to by their official titles when sued or suing in their official capacities; however, the trial court is empowered to require that the official's proper name be added. This subsection appears as Federal Rule 25(d)(2); however, since it pertains more to capacities and interests of parties than to substitution of parties, it was moved to Rule 17.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Guardians ad litem.
Notice.
Real party in interest.
Res judicata effect.
Subrogation.
Survival action.
Wrongful death actions.

Guardians ad litem.

Chancery court did not abuse its discretion in apportioning the costs of a guardian ad litem equally among the parties in a child custody dispute, without considering a mother's financial circumstances; there is no evidence in the record to indicate that the apportionment of the cost for the guardian ad litem was an undue burden to either party. McCraw v. Buchanan, 10 So. 3d 979 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Fee paid to the guardian ad litem was proper where the youth court recognized the complexity of the case and awarded the guardian a higher amount than what it considered reasonable for the usual case, Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-121(6); further, the guardian failed to point to anything that indicated that the youth court's decision was unreasonable or that the court had abused its discretion as to the amount of compensation, Miss. R. Civ. P. 17(d). In the Interest of L.D.M., 872 So. 2d 655 (Miss. 2004).

The Department of Human Services was properly required to pay a portion of the guardian ad litem fees incurred after it was made a passive litigant in a proceeding for modification of visitation where the husband alleged physical and sexual abuse of the child at issue, the department supported this allegation, and the court found that no such abuse occurred. Mississippi Dep't of Human Servs. v. Murr, 797 So. 2d 818 (Miss. 2000).

In a proceeding for modification of vistation in which the Department of Human Services joined the action and supported the father, the department was properly required to pay guardian ad litem fees including those incurred after the date that the department was made a passive litigant in the case; notwithstanding the department's passive role, it previously became a litigant when it adopted the position of the father and alleged child abuse, and taking a passive role in the litigation did not change its status as a party to the case. Mississippi Dep't of Human Servs. v. Murr, 797 So. 2d 818 (Miss. 2000).

County board of supervisors was not required to pay guardian ad litem's fee under subdivision (d) of this rule, where case in which the guardian's services were rendered had been appealed, and it could not be ascertained against whom the costs would finally be assessed. Lowrey v. Forrest County Bd. of Supvrs., 559 So. 2d 1029 (Miss. 1990).

Guardian ad litem fee under subdivision (d) of this rule was not a "cost of preparation of the record on appeal" under M.R.A.P. Rule 11(b)(1), and therefore prepayment of fee was not required for processing of appeal to supreme court. In re Newsom, 536 So. 2d 1 (Miss. 1988).

Appointment of guardian ad litem was needed to insure and protect best interests of child who filed paternity suit against her presumed natural father, since, in context of divorce action, interest of child's mother might not be coextensive with the interest of the child. Baker v. Williams, 503 So. 2d 249 (Miss. 1987).

Notice.

Estate was properly noticed of the hearing on the motion for summary judgment where the estate, not the heir who filed the motion for summary judgment, elected not to notice each beneficiary of the will. The beneficiaries were named in the probated will and the executor was acting on behalf of all the beneficiaries to set aside the deeds in order to bring the real property back into the estate. Smith v. Smith (In re Will of Smith), 910 So. 2d 562 (Miss. 2005).

Real party in interest.

In a property damage case, because there was no authority cited for the proposition that an action filed on behalf of a dissolved corporation should have been treated as being filed against a partnership, appellate review of the issue was precluded. In addressing the merits of the issue, it was determined that a dissolved corporation could not have been a real party in interest because it had been dissolved more than eight years before the alleged incident took place, and there was an opportunity given to substitute the real party in interest. Funderburg v. Pontotoc Elec. Power Ass'n, 6 So. 3d 439 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Dismissal of an action alleging waste due to the cutting of timber was improperly dismissed on the basis that an estate lacked standing to bring the action since it had no interest therein and no power to bring such an action; the trial court should have allowed a substitution of the heirs as parties to the action. Tolbert v. Southgate Timber Co., 943 So. 2d 90 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Although Miss. R. Civ. P. 25(c) transfers were generally permissive, the execution sale and purchase of lawsuits, as choses in action, left only one party, a bank, with any interest in the litigation; because Miss. R. Civ. P. 17 allowed only the real party in interest to prosecute its claims, the trial court abused its discretion by refusing to substitute the bank as plaintiff in the actions. Citizens Nat'l Bank v. Dixieland Forest Prods., LLC, 935 So. 2d 1004 (Miss. 2006).

Trial court did not err by granting the corporations summary judgment on the issue of standing in the law firm's antitrust lawsuit, as the law firm's clients only had standing to object to any fees associated with retrieval of their medical records under Miss. Code Ann. § 41-9-65, and the law firm was not a real party in interest under Miss. R. Civ. P. 17(a). Owen & Galloway, L.L.C. v. Smart Corp., 913 So. 2d 174 (Miss. 2005).

Res judicata effect.

Where a father entered into a stipulation to dismiss a driver from a negligence case with prejudice, his minor son was unable to assert the same cause of action against the driver when he reached the age of majority, pursuant to the doctrine of res judicata. Taylor v. Taylor, 835 So. 2d 60 (Miss. 2003).

Subrogation.

Plaintiff was a real party in interest, as opposed to a nominal party, in an unsuccessful property damage suit brought by subrogated insurance carrier, and plaintiff was therefore barred from pursuing a subsequent action under doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel. Alexander v. Elzie, 621 So. 2d 909 (Miss. 1992).

Where subrogated insurer assigned to plaintiff whatever rights it might have by virtue of subrogation, and chose instead to rely upon its contractual right against plaintiff in the event of recovery, the insurer was no longer a real party in interest as contemplated by subdivision (a) of this rule. Turner v. Haynes, 489 So. 2d 494 (Miss. 1986).

Survival action.

Where summary judgment was granted in a daughter wrongful death complaint, and upon remand the complaint was amended to allege a survival action under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-233 with the estate added as a party, the real party in interest joined the suit within a reasonable time after objection pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 17. Methodist Hosp. of Hattiesburg, Inc. v. Richardson, 909 So. 2d 1066 (Miss. 2005).

Wrongful death actions.

Dismissal of a wrongful death suit was proper because the great-nephew lacked standing to institute a wrongful death suit under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-13, which conferred standing only to a decedent's spouse, parent, child, or sibling and not to distant relatives; the great-nephew also lacked standing because he was not the administrator of the decedent's estate when the wrongful death suit was commenced, and standing was to be determined as of the commencement of the action. Delta Health Group, Inc. v. Estate of Pope, 995 So. 2d 123 (Miss. 2008).

Rule 18. Joinder of claims and remedies.

(a) Joinder of claims. A party asserting a claim to relief as an original claim, counter-claim, cross-claim, or third-party claim, may join, either as independent or as alternate claims, as many claims as he has against an opposing party.

(b) Joinder of remedies. Whenever a claim is one heretofore cognizable only after another claim has been prosecuted to a conclusion, the two claims may be joined in a single action; but the court shall grant relief in that action only in accordance with the relative substantive rights of the parties.

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 18 is to eliminate piecemeal litigation by permitting liberal joinder of claims.

Rule 18(a) eliminates any restrictions on claims that may be joined in actions in the courts of Mississippi. Rule 18(a) permits a party to join as many original claims, counter-claims, cross-claims, or third-party claims as he has against an opposing party. Similarly, legal and equitable claims or any combination of them may be joined in one action; a party may also assert alternative claims for relief, consistency among the claims not being necessary; consequently, an election of remedies or theories will not be required at the pleading stage of the litigation.

Rule 18(a) is intended to have its primary application during the pleading stage. Thus, the rule should be read in conjunction with the provisions governing pleading: in essence, any claim joined under Rule 18(a) must be set forth in accordance with Rule 8, which requires a short and plain statement showing that the pleader is entitled to relief; if the claim involves a subject described in Rule 9 (pleading special matters), then it may have to be delineated with more specificity than is required by Rule 8; Rule 19(b) necessitates that claims based on different transactions be separately stated when it would facilitate the clear presentation of the matters set forth in the pleadings; and Rule 11 requires that every pleading be signed by the litigant's attorney certifying that to the best of his knowledge, information, and belief there are good grounds to support the claims advanced in the pleading.

Since Rule 18(a) deals only with the scope of joinder at the pleading stage and not with questions of trial convenience, jurisdiction, or venue, a party should be permitted to join all the claims he has against his opponent as a matter of right. The rule proceeds on the theory that no inconvenience can result from the joinder of any two or more matters in the pleadings, but only from trying two or more matters together, if at all.

In circuit court actions in which legal and equitable claims are asserted, the traditional procedure has been to move to transfer the action to chancery court. However, if the action is not transferred, the judgment will not be reversed on appeal solely because all or part of the subject matter was technically beyond the court's jurisdiction. Rule 18(a) will effectuate no change in this procedure. See V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice, 508-517(a) (2d ed. 1950); Miss. Const. § 147 (no reversal on appeal if action tried in wrong court, absent any other error); § 157 (transfer of actions from circuit court to chancery court); § 162 (transfer of actions from chancery court to circuit court). See, McLean v. Green, 352 So.2d 1312 (Miss.1977).

It must be remembered, however, that Miss. Const. § 147 does not bestow equitable remedies upon the law courts nor does it bestow common-law remedies upon the chancery courts.

Rule 18(b) permits a party to join two claims even though if they were asserted independently it would be necessary to prosecute one of them successfully before proceeding to the adjudication of the other. The provision is unqualified and allows the joinder of any type of contingent claim. The basic purpose of the rule is to reinforce the notion that a party should be able to obtain in a single action all the relief to which he is entitled.

For discussion of Federal Rule 18, after which M.R.C.P. 18 is patterned, See 6 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 1581-1594 (1971); 3A Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 18.01-.10 (1968).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Joinder of claims.
Joinder of remedies.

Joinder of claims.

All claims for the wrongful death of a person must be litigated in the same suit and in the same court. Long v. McKinney, 897 So. 2d 160 (Miss. 2004).

In a wrongful death action, a court erred by failing to consolidate beneficiaries' separate suit filed one day after the decedent's daughter's suit because the daughter filed suit as the representative of all statutory beneficiaries, and all such beneficiaries should have received notice of the litigation. Because there was no apparent conflict of interest between appellee and the estate, and since the estate, through appellee as administratrix, employed a law firm to represent the estate, that firm should represent the estate, provided the pleadings were amended to assert a claim on behalf of the estate. Long v. McKinney, 897 So. 2d 160 (Miss. 2004).

Actions sounding in both contract and tort may be joined in the same complaint. Trammell v. State, 622 So. 2d 1257 (Miss. 1993).

Although the different claims required different burdens of proof, they could still be joined in one action. Towner v. Moore ex rel. Quitman County Sch. Dist., 604 So. 2d 1093 (Miss. 1992).

Joinder of remedies.

Party may combine a suit to determine heirship with a suit to contest a will, and will contestant's allegation that she was decedent's sole heir at law was sufficient as a request for determination of heirship. Dees v. Estate of Moore, 562 So. 2d 109 (Miss. 1990).

Rule 19. Joinder of persons needed for just adjudication.

(a) Persons to be joined if feasible. A person who is subject to the jurisdiction of the court shall be joined as a party in the action if:

(1) in his absence complete relief cannot be accorded among those already parties, or

(2) he claims an interest relating to the subject of the action and is so situated that the disposition of the action in his absence may (i) as a practical matter impair or impede his ability to protect that interest or (ii) leave any of the persons already parties subject to a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations by reason of his claimed interest.

If he has not been so joined, the court shall order that he be made a party. If he should join as a plaintiff but refuses to do so, he may be made a defendant or, in a proper case, an involuntary plaintiff.

(b) Determination by court whenever joinder not feasible. If a person as described in subdivision (a) hereof cannot be made a party, the court shall determine whether in equity and good conscience the action should proceed among the parties before it or should be dismissed, the absent person being thus regarded as indispensable. The factors to be considered by the court include: First, to what extent a judgment rendered in the person's absence might be prejudicial to him or those already parties; second, the extent to which, by protective provisions in the judgment, by the shaping of relief, or other measures, the prejudice can be lessened or avoided; third, whether a judgment rendered in the person's absence will be adequate; fourth, whether the plaintiff will have an adequate remedy if the action is dismissed for nonjoinder.

(c) Pleading reasons for nonjoinder. A pleading asserting a claim for relief shall state the names, if known to the pleader, of any persons as described in subdivision (a)(1) through (2) who are not joined, and the reasons why they are not joined.

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 19 is to permit a court to balance the rights of all persons whose interests are involved in an action.

Compulsory joinder is an exception to the general practice of giving the plaintiff the right to decide who shall be parties to a law suit; although a court must take cognizance of this traditional prerogative in exercising its discretion under Rule 19, plaintiff's choice will have to be compromised when significant countervailing considerations make the joinder of particular absentees desirable.

There are at least four main questions a court must consider when deciding a question of joinder under Rule 19: First, the plaintiff's interest in having a forum; second, the defendant's wish to avoid multiple litigation, inconsistent relief, or sole responsibility for a liability he shares with another; third, the interest of an outsider whom it would have been desirable to join; fourth, the interest of the courts and the public in complete, consistent, and efficient settlement of controversies. This list is by no means exhaustive or exclusive; pragmatism controls.

There is no precise formula for determining whether a particular nonparty must be joined under Rule 19(a). The decision has to be made in terms of the general policies of avoiding multiple litigation, providing the parties with complete and effective relief in a single action, and protecting the absent persons from the possible prejudicial effect of deciding the case without them. Account also must be taken of whether other alternatives are available to the litigants. By its very nature Rule 19(a) calls for determinations that are heavily influenced by the facts and circumstances of individual cases.

The structure of Rule 19 reflects the analytical sequence that a court should follow in deciding a party joinder problem. Once an issue of compulsory joinder is raised, the court initially must determine whether the absent person's interest in the litigation is sufficient to satisfy one or more of the tests set out in the first sentence of Rule 19(a). When it does, the second sentence of the subdivision states that if he has not been joined, "the court shall order that he be made a party." If the absent person should be regarded as a plaintiff but refuses to join, the court may join him as a defendant or, in a proper case, as an involuntary plaintiff.

Difficulties arise only if the absentee cannot be effectively joined because he is not subject to service of process, if his joinder will deprive the court of subject matter jurisdiction, or if he makes a valid objection to the court's venue after joinder. When joinder of someone described in Rule 19(a) is not feasible, the court must examine the four considerations described in Rule 19(b) to determine whether the action may go forward in his absence or must be dismissed, "the absent person being thus regarded as indispensable." By proceeding in this orderly fashion, the court would be able to avoid grappling with the difficult question of indispensability whenever it initially decides that the absentee's interest is not sufficient to warrant compelling his joinder. The first joinder standard, which is described in Rule 19(a)(1), is designed to protect those who are already parties by requiring the presence of all persons who have an interest in the litigation so that any relief that may be awarded will effectively and completely adjudicate the dispute. The second test set out in Rule 19 (a) relates the situations in which the action cannot be effectively adjudicated because the absentee claims an interest in the subject matter of the action, and disposing of the case in his absence may prejudice either those already before the court or the absentee himself. See 7 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 1604 (1972).

Generally, Rule 19 comports with traditional Mississippi practice; however, the rule effectuates at least one significant modification. Under M.R.C.P. 19, a person needed for just adjudication must be joined and may be joined as a defendant if, although properly a plaintiff, he refuses to join the suit voluntarily. Under prior practice the suit must be dismissed if a necessary party cannot be joined. Comment, Procedural Reform in Mississippi: A Current Analysis, 47 Miss.L.J. 33, 5859 (1976), citing Terry v. Unknown Heirs of Gibson, 108 Miss. 749, 67 So. 209 (1915); Gates v. Union Naval Stores Co., 92 Miss. 227, 45 So. 979 (1908); Borroughs v. Jones, 78 Miss. 235, 28 So. 944 (1900); Lemmon v. Dunn, 61 Miss. 210 (1883); See also V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice §§ 137-150 (2d ed. 1950); 7 Wright & Miller, supra, §§ 1601-1625; 3A Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 19.01-.20 (1974).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Adoption proceedings.
Dismissal.
Indispensable parties.
Interest in litigation.
Parties; necessary.
Parties; unnecessary.
Preservation for review.

Adoption proceedings.

The maternal grandparents should have been joined as parties in an adoption proceeding where they had filed a suit for custody of the child at issue. S.R. v. P.L.H., 748 So. 2d 853 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Dismissal.

Trial court did not err in dismissing claim for sub-surface trespass and conversion, due to plaintiff's failure to join all affected mineral interest holders. Ladner v. Quality Exploration Co., 505 So. 2d 288 (Miss. 1987).

Indispensable parties.

In an action alleging waste, a trial court should have allowed an amendment to join two owners of property that gave permission to cut timber since they might have been indispensable parties under Miss. R. Civ. P. 19. Tolbert v. Southgate Timber Co., 943 So. 2d 90 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

United States was not an indispensable party to litigation involving a rural electric power association's ability to engage in the business of selling propane, even though the Rural Electrification Administration had a security interest in the association's property. Tallahatchie Valley Elec. Power Ass'n v. Miss. Propane Gas Ass'n, 812 So. 2d 912 (Miss. 2002).

Transferee, as owner of certain percentages property interests at issue in the litigation, had interests in both the property and in the litigation. As such, it was a necessary and indispensable party which should have been joined upon defendant's motion. TXG Intrastate Pipeline Co. v. Grossnickle, 716 So. 2d 991 (Miss. 1997).

County board of supervisors was an indispensable party to action involving effect of zoning ordinance on railroad, and the board was to be made a party on remand. Columbus & G. Ry. v. Scales, 578 So. 2d 275 (Miss. 1991).

No proper and complete adjudication of dispute involving real estate lien could be made in absence of persons owning interests in the property affected; procedural due process required that they be given notice and an opportunity to be heard. Aldridge v. Aldridge, 527 So. 2d 96 (Miss. 1988).

Interest in litigation.

City was not a necessary party in a landowner's action for ejectment against a developer because the city had no interest, actual or mistaken, with the disputed strip of land, and its absence in the matter did not prevent the chancery court from granting complete relief between the developer and the landowner; when the action began, either the developer or the landowner owned the disputed property, and a conveyance to the developer involved the unplatted portion of a subdivision, with no dedication provision for the city contained therein. Delta Hous. Dev. Corp. v. Johnson, 48 So. 3d 573 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 49 So. 3d 1139, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 628 (Miss. 2010).

In a wrongful death action, a court erred by failing to consolidate beneficiaries' separate suit filed one day after the decedent's daughter's suit because the daughter filed suit as the representative of all statutory beneficiaries, and all such beneficiaries should have received notice of the litigation. Because there was no apparent conflict of interest between appellee and the estate, and since the estate, through appellee as administratrix, employed a law firm to represent the estate, that firm should represent the estate, provided the pleadings were amended to assert a claim on behalf of the estate. Long v. McKinney, 897 So. 2d 160 (Miss. 2004).

All claims for the wrongful death of a person must be litigated in the same suit and in the same court. Long v. McKinney, 897 So. 2d 160 (Miss. 2004).

Fact that parties had pending applications before Environmental Quality Permit Board did not give them an interest in the litigation, where the litigation did not challenge the issuance of specific permits by the board, but challenged the governor's authority to adopt a rule without public input. Fordice v. Thomas, 649 So. 2d 835 (Miss. 1995), but see USPCI of Miss., Inc. v. State ex rel. McGowan, 688 So. 2d 783 (Miss. 1997).

Parties; necessary.

Circuit court could not fully and completely determine priority of garnishors without first retrying that the creditor join the prior garnishors under Miss. R. Civ. P. 19(a). The prior garnishors had a significant pecuniary interest in the disposition of the creditor's motion to determine priority and the circuit court's subsequent fulfillment of that request. Y-D Lumber Co. v. Humphreys County, 2 So. 3d 793 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Administratrix's negligence claims against the healthcare providers and doctors was wrongful death case, and as such was a Miss. R. Civ. P. 19 compulsory joinder case and governed by Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-13; thus, the trial court erred by transferring venue as to each doctor to separate counties, and venue for the wrongful death claim was proper in Bolivar County. Rose v. Bologna, 942 So. 2d 1287 (Miss. 2006).

Neighbor's claim that all necessary parties were not joined in the suit was without merit where the neighbor did not identify a specific party that was necessary to the action; based on the evidence, the appellate court found that all necessary parties were joined. Fike v. Shelton, 860 So. 2d 1227 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Because the State was the ultimate fee-holder of 16th Section lands, it was therefore a necessary party to any action that might forever divest it of title in those lands; when the board of education filed a complaint to quiet and confirm title, and the landowners counterclaimed for clear title on their behalf, the suit became one that endangered the State's interest in protecting its asserted title and the failure to join the State as an interested party in a real estate dispute justified reversal and remand as the failure was a violation of fundamental due process. Bd. of Educ. v. Warner, 853 So. 2d 1159 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court did not err in noticing the absence of a necessary party and ordering a joinder, and when the need for the joinder disappeared, the chancellor, recognizing the change in circumstances, did not err in entering a final judgment. Flowers v. McCraw, 792 So. 2d 339 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Any court sitting as an appellate court has inherent authority to allow additional parties to participate in appeal upon timely application or upon the court's invitation; indeed, there may be occasions when the court should decline to act until all necessary parties have been joined. Cummings v. Benderman, 681 So. 2d 97 (Miss. 1996).

Wife of defendant should have been made a party to action involving boundary dispute, where she owned a half interest in land, it was her homestead, and her husband could not make any binding agreement concerning land without her participation. Mabry v. Howington, 569 So. 2d 1165 (Miss. 1990).

Parties; unnecessary.

Chancellor did not err in approving the final accounting and discharging the conservator because under Miss. R. Civ. P. 19 joinder was not feasible because no person had been appointed to represent the estate, the estate suffered no prejudice, and neither Miss. Code Ann. § 93-13-67 nor caselaw indicated that the failure of the conservator to file accountings was fatal to the approval of a final accounting. Vinson v. Benson, 972 So. 2d 694 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 973 So. 2d 244, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 8 (Miss. 2008).

Condemning authority in eminent domain action was not required to join neighboring landowner, a portion of whose land was held by condemnee by adverse possession. Coats v. Yazoo City, 562 So. 2d 64 (Miss. 1990).

Owners of property containing access road to subdivision in violation of county ordinance were not indispensable parties to county's action to bring subdivision into compliance. Johnson v. Hinds County, 524 So. 2d 947 (Miss. 1988).

Preservation for review.

Even if a buyer from a tax sale was a necessary and indispensable party under Miss. R. Civ. P. 19 to a proceeding where the redemption period in Miss.Code Ann. § 27-45-3 was extended for 60 days, the buyer's successor in interest was procedurally barred from bringing its Miss. R. Civ. P. 19 objection on appeal since the issue was not raised. The issue was not heard sua sponte in accordance with Shaw v. Shaw, 603 So. 2d 287 (Miss. 1992), because the buyer was notified by letter of the foreclosure sale and the possibility that the tax redemption period could be extended, this knowledge was imputed to the successor in interest, and neither the buyer nor the successor in interest chose to challenge the joinder issue until after the conclusion of the trial court proceedings. Marathon Asset Mgmt., LLC v. Otto, 977 So. 2d 1241 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Rule 20. Permissive joinder of parties.

(a) Permissive joinder. All persons may join in one action as plaintiffs if they assert any right to relief jointly, severally, or in the alternative in respect of or arising out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences, and if any question of law or fact common to all these persons will arise in the action. All persons may be joined in one action as defendants if there is asserted against them jointly, severally, or in the alternative, any right to relief in respect of or arising out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences, and if any question of law or fact common to all defendants will arise in the action. A plaintiff or defendant need not be interested in obtaining or defending against all the relief demanded. Judgment may be given for one or more of the plaintiffs according to their respective rights to relief, and against one or more defendants according to their respective liabilities.

(b) Separate trials. The court may make such orders as will prevent a party from being embarrassed, delayed, or put to expense by the inclusion of a party against whom the party asserts no claim and who asserts no claim against the party, and may order separate trials or make other orders to prevent delay or prejudice.

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 20 is to promote trial convenience and expedite the final determination of disputes, thereby preventing multiple law suits. The rule is permissive in character; joinder in situations falling within the rule's standard is not required unless it is within the scope of compulsory joinder prescribed by Rule 19.

Rule 20(a) permits joinder in a single action of all persons asserting or defending against a joint, several, or alternative right to relief that arises out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences and presents a common question of law or fact. The phrase "transaction or occurrence" requires that there be a distinct litigable event linking the parties. Rule 20(a) simply establishes a procedure under which several parties' demands arising out of the same litigable event may be tried together, thereby avoiding the unnecessary loss of time and money to the court and the parties that the duplicate presentation of the evidence relating to facts common to more than one demand for relief would entail.

Joinder of parties under Rule 20(a) is not unlimited as is joinder of claims under Rule 18(a). Rule 20(a) imposes two specific requisites to the joinder of parties: (1) a right to relief must be asserted by or against each plaintiff or defendant relating to or arising out of the same transaction, occurrence, or the same series of transactions or occurrences; and, (2) some question of law or fact common to all the parties will arise in the action. Both of these requirements must be satisfied in order to sustain party joinder under Rule 20(a). See American Bankers Inc. of Florida v. Alexander, 818 So. 2d 1073, 1078. However, even if the transaction requirement cannot be satisfied, there always is a possibility that, under the proper circumstances, separate actions can be instituted and then consolidated for trial under Rule 42(a) if there is a question of law or fact common to all the parties. See Stoner v. Colvin, 236 Miss. 736, 748, 110 So.2d 920, 924 (1959) (courts of general jurisdiction have inherent power to consolidate action when called for by the circumstances). If the criteria of Rule 20 are otherwise met, the court should consider whether different injuries, different damages, different defensive postures and other individualized factors will be so dissimilar as to make management of cases consolidated under Rule 20 impractical. *See Demboski v. CSX Transp., Inc.*157 F.R.D. 28 (S.D. Miss 1994).) cited with approval in *Illinois Cen. R.R. Coj. v. Travis,*808 So. 2d 928, 934 (Miss. 2002).

Rule 20(b) gives the court authority to order separate trials or make any other order to prevent another party from being embarrassed, delayed, prejudiced, or put to unnecessary expense by the joinder of a party against whom the party asserts no claim and who asserts no claim against the party. Aside from emphasizing the availability of separate trials, Rule 20(b) has little significance inasmuch as the power granted the court therein also is provided by the much broader grant of discretion set forth in Rule 42(b). See 3A Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 20.01-.08 (1968); 7 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 1651-1660 (1972).

In order to allow the court to make a prompt determination of whether joinder is proper, the factual basis for joinder should be fully disclosed as early as practicable, and motions questioning joinder should be filed, where possible, sufficiently early to avoid delays in the proceedings.

[Comment amended February 20, 2004.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction.
Adding parties.
Fraudulent misjoinder.
Interpretation.
Joinder improper.
Joinder proper.
Review.
Severance.

Venue.

Construction.

As to permissive joinder and the application of Miss. R. Civ. P. 20(a), the Mississippi Supreme Court recently added, in addition to other factors enunciated in past decisions, that a plaintiff must indicate the specific injury sustained. The Supreme Court now adds to the list that a plaintiff must specify the "distinct litigable event" common to all plaintiffs; this information by no means guarantees that plaintiffs may be joined in one suit, but it should supply a trial court with the information necessary to make such a determination. Ill. Cent. R.R. Co. v. Gregory, 912 So. 2d 829 (Miss. 2005).

Adding parties.

Chancellor erred in denying plaintiffs' motion for leave to amend complaint, where party sought to be added as plaintiff alleged causes of action which arose out of a series of transactions including those which created issues between existing parties. McDonald v. Holmes, 595 So. 2d 434 (Miss. 1992).

Fraudulent misjoinder.

Plaintiffs' claims against medical defendants were fraudulently misjoined with those against employer defendants, Miss. R. Civ. P. 20: while a work-related accident might have had some relevance to damages in the claims against the medical defendants, it was not a "linking" event joining the two sets of defendants (the medical defendants were sued for medical malpractice and product liability in connection with a surgery which was related to an accident at work, while the employer defendants were sued for wrongful discharge, slander, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and negligence in connection with the administration of a drug test); further, the plaintiffs failed to identify, nor could the court find, any question of law or fact common to the two sets of defendants. Palermo v. Letourneau Techs., Inc., 542 F. Supp. 2d 499 (S.D. Miss. Mar. 26, 2008).

After a negligence suit was removed from state to federal court, then remanded due to lack of complete diversity jurisdiction, defendant insurer's motion for reconsideration of the federal district court's order awarding fees related to the removal and remand to plaintiff insured under 28 USCS § 1447(c) was rejected; the court held that joinder of the insurer was proper under Miss. R. Civ. P. 20 for the purpose of obtaining a declaration of coverage under Fed. R. Civ. P. 57, and thus the court did not err in holding that the insurer lacked an objectively reasonable basis to remove the case on the grounds that it had been fraudulently misjoined with an in-state defendant. Hines v. Plane Paint, Inc., 430 F. Supp. 2d 598 (S.D. Miss. 2006).

Assuming arguendo that the Fifth Circuit would explicitly adopt the Tapscott rationale in an appropriate case, the court would only be able to accept jurisdiction based on the misjoinder of a party if such misjoinder were egregious; as the Mississippi Supreme Court had found the joinder of literally thousands of consumer plaintiffs from several different states to be proper under Miss. R. Civ. P. 20, the court could not conclude that the joinders were improper, much less egregiously so, under the liberal version of Miss. R. Civ. P. Rule 20 which applied at the time the amended complaint was filed. Walton v. Tower Loan, 338 F. Supp. 2d 691 (N.D. Miss. Sept. 28, 2004).

Motion for remand was granted because the court did not find fraudulent misjoinder with regard to defendants under Miss. R. Civ. P. 20 and the fact that 5 out of 45 plaintiffs had filed for bankruptcy was not sufficient to establish federal jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C.S. § 1334 when state law claims completely predominated in the action. Jackson v. Truly, 307 F. Supp. 2d 818 (N.D. Miss. 2004).

Interpretation.

Language requiring that joined plaintiffs demonstrate the existence of a "distinct litigable event" semantically distinguishes Miss. R. Civ. P. 20(a) from the requirement under Fed. R. Civ. P. 20(a) that the claims between the different plaintiffs be "logically related." MS Life Ins. Co. v. Baker, 905 So. 2d 1179 (Miss. 2005).

Joinder improper.

Trial court's dismissal of the nonresidents' asbestos injury suit without prejudice was correct where, under the applicable case law, plaintiffs could not be joined under Miss. R. Civ. P. 20 unless their claims were connected by a distinct, litigable event and the causes of action had accrued outside the state. Alexander v. AC And S, Inc., 947 So. 2d 891 (Miss. 2007).

Amount of evidence that would have to be introduced to prove all of the claims by the agents against the insurers in one trial would certainly overwhelm a jury; no agent had claims against every defendant, and the agents failed to provide sufficient facts to prove that their claims of fraud and conspiracy could withstand severance. Miss. Farm Bureau Fed'n v. Roberts, 927 So. 2d 739 (Miss. 2006).

Trial court abused its discretion in allowing plaintiffs to conduct discovery as the plaintiffs were not properly joined under Miss. R. Civ. P. 20, and the complaint did not put the railroad on notice as to the specific wrong done to each plaintiff by the railroad. Thus, the matter was remanded for plaintiffs to amend the complaint. Ill. Cent. R.R. v. Adams, 922 So. 2d 787 (Miss. 2006).

Medical malpractice and pharmaceutical product liability case was remanded for severance where the trial court abused its discretion in joining the four patients' cases because each patient was affiliated with only one physician and one pharmacist, and it was improper to join diverse plaintiffs with diverse defendants in the same law suit. Warner-Lambert Co. v. Potts, 909 So. 2d 1092 (Miss. 2005).

Where plaintiffs, numerous former and present employees, sued defendant, a railroad company, for occupational lung disease (all but one plaintiff residing outside of Tunica County, Mississippi, where the suit was filed, and some plaintiffs residing in Tennessee), primarily due to alleged exposure to asbestos, the railroad company successfully argued that joinder was improper because their employment consisted of work in different crafts at different work sites during different periods of time, and there was no transaction or occurrence or "distinct litigable event" common to all plaintiffs. Moreover, all claims against out-of-state defendants based on causes of action that accrued out of state were dismissed based on forum non conveniens, and all other plaintiffs' claims had to be severed from those of the Tunica County resident, including claims of plaintiffs who alleged exposure in Tunica County; all cases that could not be brought individually in Tunica County were to be transferred to a venue in which each plaintiff could have originally brought his or her claim, as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 82(d). Ill. Cent. R.R. Co. v. Gregory, 912 So. 2d 829 (Miss. 2005).

Court erred in denying defendants' motion to sever and transfer plaintiffs' personal injury claims based on improper joinder because there was no single transaction or occurrence connecting plaintiffs to asbestos exposure at a shipyard to justify joinder under Miss. R. Civ. P. 20(a). Although each plaintiff worked at a common workplace, the shipyard, their employment was at different dates and times. Crossfield Prods. Corp. v. Irby, 910 So. 2d 498 (Miss. 2005).

Where a department store was sued for racial profiling customers across the country in store security measures, the joinder of claims of out-of-state customers into a single mass action in Mississippi exceeded the scope of permissible joinder under Miss. R. Civ. P. 20(a). Cases without an independent basis for venue in Hinds County, Mississippi, were severed. Dillard's, Inc. v. Scott, 908 So. 2d 93 (Miss. 2005).

Same transaction or occurrence requirement of Miss. R. Civ. P. 20(a) was satisfied as any potential claims the driver had against either the employee or insurer arose out of one distinct event, the accident of March 14, 2001; however, the driver improperly joined the insurer as a defendant where the driver could not rely on Miss. R. Civ. P. 57 as the basis for bringing suit against the insurer where Rule 57 only allowed the driver to seek a declaratory judgment against an insurer when coverage was in doubt, and coverage was not in doubt; there would therefore be no common question of law or fact litigated between all parties, making joinder of the insurer and employee as defendants improper. Mercer v. Moody, 918 So. 2d 664 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court improperly permitted an asbestos mass tort case with 76 plaintiffs and 136 defendants to proceed without severance when only 6 plaintiffs had ties to Mississippi, only 2 of those were exposed in the trial court's county, and plaintiffs were exposed at 250 different work locations in 20 different states. Amchem Prods. v. Rogers, 912 So. 2d 853 (Miss. 2005).

Suits of six asbestos claims plaintiffs and seven defendants were improperly joined as the plaintiff's actions did not arise out of the same transaction or occurrence. Although the plaintiffs all alleged exposure to asbestos, the plaintiffs worked in different occupations, for different employers, at different times; furthermore, some of the plaintiffs used respiratory protection equipment while others did not; also evident of improper joinder was the identical amounts of damages awarded to each plaintiff, in that each plaintiff had unique medical histories, work histories, differing exposures and differing diagnoses which were presented to the jury. 3M Co. v. Johnson, 895 So. 2d 151 (Miss. 2005).

Medical malpractice and pharmaceutical product liability case was remanded for severance where the trial court abused its discretion in joining the four patients' cases because each patient was affiliated with only one physician and one pharmacist, and it was improper to join diverse plaintiffs with diverse defendants in the same law suit. Warner-Lambert Co. v. Potts, 909 So. 2d 1092 (Miss. 2005).

Joinder was improper under Miss. R. Civ. P. 20(a) in borrowers' suit against lenders based on alleged "insurance packing," "loan flipping," and other deceptive business practices because there was no common question of misrepresentation and the borrowers failed to meet the Rule 20(a) same transaction and occurrence test as the loans were taken out on different days from different branch offices using different loan officers and containing different interest rates. CitiFinancial, Inc. v. Moody, 910 So. 2d 553 (Miss. 2005).

Court erred in denying defendants' motion to sever and transfer plaintiffs' personal injury claims based on improper joinder because there was no single transaction or occurrence connecting plaintiffs to asbestos exposure at a shipyard to justify joinder under Miss. R. Civ. P. 20(a). Although each plaintiff worked at a common workplace, the shipyard, their employment was at different dates and times. Crossfield Prods. Corp. v. Irby, 910 So. 2d 498 (Miss. 2005).

Because the owners' claims against the insurer and agents did not arise from the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences, joinder was not proper under Miss. R. Civ. P. 20(a); the owners were located in seven different Mississippi counties and three other states, dealt with different agents or employees, had different customer bases, and the damages allegedly incurred by each owner necessarily arose in a different time period. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Murriel, 904 So. 2d 112 (Miss. 2004).

Where three plaintiffs residing in different counties alleged they were harmed by a defective drug that had been prescribed to them, they could not be permissively joined in the same suit because their merely taking the same prescription drug did not constitute the "same transaction or occurrence" required by the permissive joinder rule, Miss. R. Civ. P. 20. Purdue Pharma, L.P. v. Estate of Heffner, 904 So. 2d 100 (Miss. 2004).

Federal district court's determination that a doctor had not been fraudulently joined to defeat diversity jurisdiction was not a determination that he was properly joined under Miss. R. Civ. P. 20. Purdue Pharma, L.P. v. Estate of Heffner, 904 So. 2d 100 (Miss. 2004).

Just because plaintiffs may all be joined in an action does not necessarily mean that all named defendants are appropriately joined; where users of a prescription drug filed a state court tort action against the drug's makers and an in-state doctor, as to those users who were not treated by the doctor, the action was properly removed to the court because the doctor was egregiously misjoined. Jones v. Nastech Pharm., 319 F. Supp. 2d 720 (S.D. Miss. 2004).

In a products liability case arising from use of a prescription drug, a court improperly joined the suits of ten plaintiffs where their actions did not arise out of the same transaction or occurrence as plaintiffs were prescribed the drug by different physicians, in different amounts, for different ailments, they presented 10 unique medical histories, and along with the histories and injuries, plaintiffs also claimed significantly different medical expenses. Although there were significant differences in medical expenses, the jury took only two hours after a four-week trial to award each plaintiff $ 10 million. Janssen Pharmaceutica, Inc. v. Bailey, 878 So. 2d 31 (Miss. 2004).

Joinder proper.

Miss. R. Civ. P. 20 is clearly considered to apply to asbestos claims. Amchem Prods. v. Rogers, 912 So. 2d 853 (Miss. 2005).

Where there was at least one viable state-law claim with a possibility of recovery against the resident retail sellers with respect to the strict liability claim under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-1-63, joinder of the diabetics' claims was proper under Miss. R. Civ. P. 20; therefore, the the case was erroneously removed pursuant to 28 U.S.C.S. § 1332 and had to be remanded to the state court. Polk v. Lifescan, Inc., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25762 (N.D. Miss. Sept. 19, 2003).

Where users of a prescription drug filed a state court tort action against the drug's makers and an in-state doctor, as to the only user who was treated by the doctor, the action was remanded because the court held that the physician was egregiously misjoined because the remaining plaintiffs did not allege a claim against both the physician and the pharmaceutical companies arising out of the same transaction or occurrence. Jones v. Nastech Pharm., 319 F. Supp. 2d 720 (S.D. Miss. 2004).

In a mass-joined asbestos action brought by plaintiff consumers against defendants, manufacturers and retailers, seeking recovery for injuries resulting from exposure to asbestos-containing products, the consumers were entitled to have the action remanded to state court because no egregious procedural misjoinder existed in the action, including the joinder of so-called "friction defendants" (manufacturers and sellers of car parts sold to consumers) and "non-friction defendants" (manufacturers and sellers of industrial insulation products). Thus, defendants failed to show that the local retailers were fraudulently joined for the purpose of defeating removal jurisdiction. Duffin v. Honeywell Int'l, Inc., 312 F. Supp. 2d 869 (N.D. Miss. Apr. 5, 2004).

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C.S. §§ 1332(a) and 1441(a), the individuals' motion to remand their action against the automobile manufacturers and sellers seeking to recover for personal injuries and property damages arising out of automobile accidents was granted where, under the liberal joinder provisions of Miss. R. Civ. P. 20 and the case law interpreting it, the individuals' allegations that their injuries arose out of the installation of defective engine systems in their automobiles were sufficiently related to withstand the manufacturers' and sellers' fraudulent misjoinder arguments. Burrell v. Ford Motor Co., 304 F. Supp. 2d 883 (S.D. Miss. 2004).

Insurance agents' motion to remand their several tort claims against an insurance company and a supervisor was granted where the agents had stated at least one claim against the non-diverse supervisor, tortious interference with contract, by sufficiently alleging (1) the existence of an agency contract with the company, (2) that the supervisor had unjustifiably interfered with that contract, and (3) that the agents had not fraudulently misjoined their claims under Miss. R. Civ. P. 20, since each agent was under a separate agency contract with the company, so that the facts and law supporting the agents' claims had numerous common factors, and the evidence required to prove them was not so voluminous that jury confusion would result. Ross v. Life Investors Ins. Co. of Am., 309 F. Supp. 2d 842 (S.D. Miss. 2004).

Where painters and sanders sued diverse manufacturers and non-diverse sellers regarding lead paint exposure and defendants removed the case to federal court, Miss. R. Civ. P. 20, rather than Fed. R. Civ. P. 20, applied to the fraudulent misjoinder analysis because application of Fed. R. Civ. P. 20 in a fraudulent misjoinder analysis violates the Fed. R. Civ. P. 82 prohibition on utilizing the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure to expand the jurisdiction of a federal court; the court found that neither the plaintiffs nor the plaintiffs' claims were fraudulently misjoined. Sweeney v. Sherwin Williams Co., 304 F. Supp. 2d 868 (S.D. Miss. 2004).

In analgesic users' suit against manufacturers, pharmacies, and a doctor arising out of the use of the analgesic Oxycontin, remand to state court was appropriate because the doctor was not fraudulently misjoined. Jamison v. Purdue Pharma Co., 251 F. Supp. 2d 1315 (S.D. Miss. 2003).

Almost 1,400 plaintiffs were properly joined in five consolidated actions alleging that they were force placed into collateral protection insurance policies at unfavorable rates since (1) all of the plaintiffs' claims arose out of the same pattern of conduct, the same type of insurance, and involved interpretation of the same master policy, (2) the plaintiffs asserted that the cases contained at least 22 common issues of fact and law that applied to each and every plaintiff, and (3) the defendants asserted the same defense to all of the claims. American Bankers Ins. Co. of Fla. & Am. Bankers Ins. Group v. Alexander, 818 So. 2d 1073 (Miss. 2001), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 944, 122 S. Ct. 324, 151 L. Ed. 2d 242 (2001).

Review.

Circuit court erred in stating that Miss. R. Civ. P. 20 required only that cause of actions had to arise out of similar transactions or occurrences, that could be satisfied by common questions of law or fact. Rule 20(a) imposes two specific requisites to the joinder of parties: (1) a right to relief must be asserted by or against each plaintiff or defendant relating to or arising out of the same transaction or occurrence; and, (2) some question of law or fact common to all the parties will arise in the action; both of these requirements must be satisfied. Ill. Cent. R.R. Co. v. Gregory, 912 So. 2d 829 (Miss. 2005).

Where forty-five plaintiffs made general allegations claiming that an insurance company illegally required credit insurance and fraudulently inflated the cost of premiums, the plaintiffs failed to meet the prerequisite for joinder that the claims be based upon the same transaction or occurrence. The trial court abused its discretion in ruling on the insurance company's motion to sever with scant proof offered for, or in opposition to, joinder. MS Life Ins. Co. v. Baker, 905 So. 2d 1179 (Miss. 2005).

Although allowing joinder would have been the better choice, trial court's denial of joinder was not an abuse of discretion, considering uncertain state of the law. Bobby Kitchens, Inc. v. Mississippi Ins. Guar. Ass'n, 560 So. 2d 129 (Miss. 1989).

Defendants' motion for reconsideration of the district court's refusal to grant their motion to remand on the basis of fraudulent joinder to prevent removal was denied where the amendments of Miss. R. Civ. P. 20 did not apply retroactively to require reconsideration of defendants' contention that plaintiffs were misjoined. Duffin v. Honeywell Int'l, Inc., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12856 (N.D. Miss. Apr. 26, 2004).

Severance.

Following an automobile accident in which both drivers had the same liability insurer, appellee driver filed a claim for property damage and medical payments under her policy with the insurer and a third-party claim for bodily injury and medical expenses under appellant's liability policy, and appellant driver filed breach of contract and bad faith claims against the insurer; circuit court abused its discretion in denying the motion to sever, because neither prong of Miss. R. Civ. P. 20(a) was met for permissive joinder. Hegwood v. Williamson, 949 So. 2d 728 (Miss. 2007).

In patient's action over prescription drugs manufactured and sold by drug company to treat obesity, the trial of the seven patient's claims against the four doctors and the drug company would have inevitably resulted in the same confusing presentation of evidence which the Mississippi Supreme Court sought to avoid in reversing the trial court in Janssen Pharmaceutica, Inc. v. Armond, 866 So. 2d 1092 (Miss. 2004). The supreme court therefore reversed the trial court's denial of the drug company's motion to sever or transfer venue, and remand with instructions that the trial court sever and transfer the cases to the appropriate venue. Wyeth-Ayerst Labs. v. Caldwell, 905 So. 2d 1205 (Miss. 2005).

Severance was ordered as to each of the residents where they failed in their obligation to assert sufficient information to justify joinder; the trial court was directed to dismiss the complaint of each resident who failed, within 45 days of the order, to provide the manufacturers and trial court with sufficient information, including the name of the manufacturer or manufacturers against whom each resident made a claim, and the time period and location of exposure. Harold's Auto Parts, Inc. v. Mangialardi, 889 So. 2d 493 (Miss. 2004).

In patient's action over prescription drugs manufactured and sold by drug company to treat obesity, the trial of the seven patient's claims against the four doctors and the drug company would have inevitably resulted in the same confusing presentation of evidence which the Mississippi Supreme Court sought to avoid in reversing the trial court in Janssen Pharmaceutica, Inc. v. Armond, 866 So. 2d 1092 (Miss. 2004). The supreme court therefore reversed the trial court's denial of the drug company's motion to sever or transfer venue, and remand with instructions that the trial court sever and transfer the cases to the appropriate venue. Wyeth-Ayerst Labs. v. Caldwell, 905 So. 2d 1205 (Miss. 2005).

Issues raised in the pharmaceutical companies' appeal dealt with the same issues raised and discussed in an earlier case, where the appellate court determined that joinder was improper and that the trial court abused its discretion in denying the motion to sever and transfer; because the patients in the case did not share a single, distinct litigable event, they could not be joined, and the pharmaceutical companies' motion should have been granted and the improperly joined patients should have been severed for separate trials. Janssen Pharmaceutica, Inc. v. Jackson, 883 So. 2d 91 (Miss. 2004).

Pharmaceutical companies argued that the plaintiffs took the prescription drug at different times, under different labels and warnings and had different pre-existing conditions. Because of those differences, the companies sought to have plaintiffs' joinder in Jefferson County severed, alleging that the inquiries into alleged defective design, failure to warn, breach of warranty and misrepresentation would be wholly distinct in each plaintiff's case; the Mississippi Supreme Court concluded a jury could well be overwhelmed by the 30 separate fact patterns that were offered to prove medical malpractice, affirmed the trial court's decision to sever plaintiffs' claims, and affirmed the trial court's decision allowing for transfer of the claims of those plaintiffs without jurisdiction in Jefferson County to the court or courts of plaintiffs' counsel's choosing. Culbert v. Johnson & Johnson, 883 So. 2d 550 (Miss. 2004).

Court erred in denying pharmaceutical company's motion to sever plaintiffs' claims against physicians and pharmacists in an action for injuries sustained after the use of a drug; jury might have been overwhelmed with 37 fact patterns offered to prove malpractice. Janssen Pharmaceutica, Inc. v. Keys, 879 So. 2d 446 (Miss. 2004).

For the purposes of Miss. R. Civ. P. 20, six medical malpractice plaintiffs were misjoined with the remaining 19 plaintiffs where, inter alia, each of the medical malpractice plaintiffs would have different facts and witnesses to support their claims of medical malpractice at trial, and would also have different medical histories with no relationship to those of the other plaintiffs. Thus, where each doctor-patient pair presented a different set of factual issues requiring consideration, the court found that the claims of the medical malpractice plaintiffs should be severed from the claims of the other plaintiffs and should be remanded to the state court from which they had been removed. Pittman v. Purdue Pharma Co., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9840 (S.D. Miss. Mar. 12, 2004).

Motion to remand was granted with regard to four plaintiffs because these plaintiffs' claims were fraudulently misjoined under both Fed. R. Civ. P. 20 and Miss. R. Civ. P. 20 with the claims of their co-plaintiffs as their claims did not arise from the same transaction or occurrence as to the purchase of insurance policies from defendants. Therefore, the court did not allow the four plaintiffs to deprive the diverse defendants of their right of removal based on diversity jurisdiction. Reed v. Am. Med. Sec. Group, Inc., 324 F. Supp. 2d 798 (S.D. Miss. 2004).

Joinder of consumers' complaints against defendants was improper under Miss. R. Civ. P. 20 and Smith County was improper venue; the case was remanded for severance and for a transfer of the severed cases to those jurisdictions in which each consumer could have brought his or her claims without reliance on another of the improperly joined plaintiffs. Janssen Pharmaceutica, Inc. v. Grant, 873 So. 2d 100 (Miss. 2004).

Court erred in denying pharmaceutical companies' and doctors' motion to sever and transfer venue for separate trials in an action by 56 plaintiffs for injuries caused by a prescription medication; plaintiffs had different medical histories, alleged different injuries at different times, ingested different amounts of the medication over different periods of time, received advice from different doctors, who, in turn, received different information about the risks associated with the medication via six different warning labels utilized during the time covered by the lawsuit, and who each had his or her own reasons to prescribe the medication. Mass joinder of the claims would make it impossible for the jury to limit the evidence to the appropriate plaintiff and doctor relationship. Janssen Pharmaceutica, Inc. v. Armond, 866 So. 2d 1092 (Miss. 2004).

The court properly severed a claim against a teacher arising from the paddling of a child as punishment from a claim against the school superintendent for falsely reporting that the child was abused by her father, since the claims were based on different events and involving different individuals. Burnham v. Stevens, 734 So. 2d 256 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Venue.

In a suit where an administratrix sued a railroad for her husband's death, alleging injuries and death due to exposure to asbestos, although the decedent resided and worked for the railroad in Tennessee, a suit with others against it in Mississippi was proper because the administratrix was properly joined under Miss. R. Civ. P. 20, and thus, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 82(c), venue was proper for all plaintiffs where it was proper for one. Ill. Cent. R.R. v. Travis, 808 So. 2d 928 (Miss. 2002).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Law Reviews — Foreword: Love It or Leave It; An Examination of the Need for and Structure of a Class Action Rule in Mississippi, 24 Miss. C. L. Rev. 145, Spring, 2005.

Litigation in Mississippi Today: A Symposium: Life in Lawsuit Central: An Overview of the Unique Aspects of Mississippi's Civil Justice System, 71 Miss. L.J. 359, Winter, 2002.

Litigation in Mississippi Today: A Symposium: Class Actions & Joinder in Mississippi, 71 Miss. L.J. 447, Winter, 2002.

Now Open for Business: The Transformation of Mississippi's Legal Climate, 24 Miss. C. L. Rev. 393, Spring, 2005.

Tort Reform by the Mississippi Supreme Court, 24 Miss. C. L. Rev. 427, Spring, 2005.

State Court Class Actions in Mississippi: Why Adopt Them Now?, 24 Miss. C. L. Rev. 437, Spring, 2005.

Taming an Elephant: A Closer Look at Mass Tort Screening and the Impact of Mississippi Tort Reforms, 26 Miss. C. L. Rev. 253, 2006/2007.

Rule 21. Misjoinder and nonjoinder of parties.

Misjoinder of parties is not ground for dismissal of an action. Parties may be dropped or added by order of the court on motion of any party or of its own initiative at any stage of the action and on such terms as are just. Any claim against a party may be severed and proceeded with separately.

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 21 is to avoid multiple litigation and to promote liberal joinder of parties.

Rule 21 applies, for example, when: (1) the joined parties do not meet the requisites of Rule 20; (2) no relief has been demanded from one or more of the parties joined as defendants, See Wherry v. Latimer, 103 Miss. 524, 529, 60 So. 563, 564 (1912) (no error when no objection was made); (3) no claim for relief is stated against one or more of the defendants; (4) one of several plaintiffs does not seek any relief against the defendant and is without any real interest in the controversy, See Jackson v. Dunbar, 68 Miss. 288, 290, 10 So. 38, 40 (1890) (one of several plaintiffs having no right of action was improperly joined but no objection having been made there was no error where there was no recovery in favor of the one misjoined); Miss. Code Ann. § 11-5-65 (1972) (allows for chancery decree upon the merits disregarding objection for misjoinder at hearing); Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-7-21, 11-7-23 (1972) (written objection to misjoinder to be made prior to trial, plaintiff to have leave to amend).

Rules 17 and 19 should be used as reference points for what is meant by nonjoinder in Rule 21. Thus, Rule 21 simply describes the procedural consequences of failing to join a party as required in Rules 17 and 19, Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-7-21, 11-7-23 (1972); Williams v. General Insurors, Inc., 193 Miss. 276, 290, 7 So.2d 876, 878 (1942) (generally, equity court will not proceed where necessary party has been omitted), and makes it clear that the defect can be corrected. Accord, Soloman v. Miss. Coast Hotels, Inc., 263 So.2d 526, 527 (Miss. 1972) (complainant is given leave to amend to add necessary party); Wiener v. Pierce, 253 Miss. 728, 732-33, 178 So.2d 869, 871 (1965) (on failure to amend, bill is dismissed, without prejudice); Gates v. Union Naval Stores Co., 92 Miss. 227, 230, 45 So. 979, 980 (1908) (supreme court raised issue of nonjoinder and declined to proceed until the necessary parties were joined). See also, V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice, §§ 147-149 (2d ed. 1950); 3A Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 21.01-.05 (1974); 7 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 1681-1689 (1972). M.R.C.P. 21 is identical to FRCP 21.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Additional parties.
Severance.
Severance; forum after.

Additional parties.

Addition of two parties in a revised petition for incorporation did not render the petition jurisdictionally fatal, pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 21-1-15, because Miss. R. Civ. P. 21 applied to petitions of incorporation where the parties had received timely service of process and neither party objected to the proposed incorporation. City of Jackson v. Byram Incorporators, 16 So. 3d 662 (Miss. 2009).

Severance.

Trial court's order dismissing defendants whose names had been added in plaintiff's amended complaint without the court's leave was proper because the new names were not substituted for fictitious parties, but rather were those of new defendants whose addition required court approval under Miss. R. Civ. P. 21. Veal v. J. P. Morgan Trust Co., N.A., 955 So. 2d 843 (Miss. 2007).

Where the plaintiffs are misjoined and severance is required, the rule is for the trial court to: (1) allow a plaintiff whose case is properly before the court (if any), and all properly joined plaintiffs, to proceed in the filed action; (2) allow misjoined plaintiffs who are properly before the trial court to proceed with separate actions in the forum court; and (3) sever and dismiss all misjoined plaintiffs who lack proper venue in the forum court, allowing each severed plaintiff to file a new complaint in an appropriate venue selected by that plaintiff. Canadian National/Illinois Cent. R.R. v. Smith, 926 So. 2d 839 (Miss. 2006).

Trial court in medical malpractice action abused its discretion in severing plaintiff's claims against a second physician, where those claims involved the same nucleus of common facts and arose from the same transaction or occurrence. Kiddy v. Lipscomb, 628 So. 2d 1355 (Miss. 1993).

Severance; forum after.

Decision to grant summary judgment to companies in a product liability action was reversed on appeal because the case should have never been transferred to a second county in Mississippi due to misjoinder; since nothing connected the claims to Mississippi, they should have been dismissed instead of transferred. Creel v. Bridgestone/Firestone N. Am. Tire, LLC, 950 So. 2d 1024 (Miss. 2007).

Where the plaintiffs are misjoined and severance is required, the rule is for the trial court to: (1) allow a plaintiff whose case is properly before the court (if any), and all properly joined plaintiffs, to proceed in the filed action; (2) allow misjoined plaintiffs who are properly before the trial court to proceed with separate actions in the forum court; and (3) sever and dismiss all misjoined plaintiffs who lack proper venue in the forum court, allowing each severed plaintiff to file a new complaint in an appropriate venue selected by that plaintiff. Canadian National/Illinois Cent. R.R. v. Smith, 926 So. 2d 839 (Miss. 2006).

Rule 22. Interpleader.

(a) Plaintiff or defendant. Persons having claims against the plaintiff may be joined as defendants and required to interplead when their claims are such that the plaintiff is or may be exposed to double or multiple liability. It is not ground for objection to the joinder that the claims of the several claimants or the titles on which their claims depend do not have a common origin or are not identical but are adverse to and independent of one another, or that the plaintiff avers that he is not liable in whole or in part to any or all of the claimants. A defendant exposed to similar liability may obtain such interpleader by way of cross-claim or counter-claim. The provisions of this rule supplement and do not in any way limit the joinder of parties permitted in Rule 20.

(b) Release from liability; deposit or delivery. Any party seeking interpleader, as provided in subdivision (a) of this rule, may deposit with the court the amount claimed, or deliver to the court or as otherwise directed by the court, the property claimed, and the court may thereupon order such party discharged from liability as to such claims and the action shall continue as between the claimants of such money or property.

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 22, interpleader, is to permit a stakeholder who is uncertain if and to whom he is liable for money or property held by him to join those who are or who might assert claims against him and to thereby obtain a judicial determination for the proper disbursement of the money or property. Interpleader is not new to Mississippi practice. See, e. g. Yarborough v. Thompson, 11 Miss. 291 (1844); Anderson v. Wilkinson, 18 Miss. 601 (1848); Browning v. Watkins, 18 Miss. 482 (1848). It is intended that Rule 22 be applied liberally.

The protection afforded by interpleader takes several forms. Most significantly, it prevents the stakeholder from being obligated to determine at his peril which claimant has the better claim and, when the stakeholder himself has no interest in the fund, forces the claimants to contest what essentially is a controversy between them without embroiling the stakeholder in the litigation over the merits of the respective claims. Even if the stakeholder denies liability, either in whole or in part to one or more of the claimants, interpleader still protects him from the vexation of multiple suits and the possibility of multiple liability that could result from adverse determinations in different courts. Thus, interpleader can be employed to reach an early and effective determination of disputed questions with a consequent saving of trouble and expense for the parties. As is true of the other liberal joinder provisions in these rules, interpleader also benefits the judicial system by condensing numerous potential individual actions into a single comprehensive unit, with a resulting savings in court time and energy.

Interpleader also can be used to protect the claimants by bringing them together in one action and reaching an equitable division of a limited fund. This situation frequently arises when the insurer of an alleged tortfeasor is faced with claims aggregating more than its liability under the policy. Were an insurance company required to await reduction of claims to judgment, the first claimant to obtain such a judgment or to negotiate a settlement might appropriate all or a disproportionate share of the fund before his fellow claimants were able to establish their claims. The difficulties such a race to judgment poses for the insurer, and the unfairness which may result to some claimants, are among the principal evils the interpleader device is intended to remedy. See, e. g., State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Tashire, 386 U.S. 523 (87 S. Ct. 1199, 18 L.Ed.2d 270) (1967).

An additional advantage of interpleader to the claimant is that it normally involves a deposit of the disputed fund or property in court, thereby eliminating much of the delay and expense that often attends the enforcement of a money judgment.

Historically, equitable interpleader was characterized by four requirements: (1) the same thing, debt, or duty must be claimed by both or all the parties against whom the relief is demanded; (2) all their adverse titles or claims must be dependent on or be derived from a common source; (3) the person asking the relief — the plaintiff — must not have or claim any interest in the subject matter; (4) he must have incurred no independent liability to either of the claimants; that is, he must stand perfectly indifferent between them, in the position of a stakeholder. See V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice, §§ 420-426 (2d ed. 1950). It is intended that Rule 22 be applied liberally with the view toward increasing the availability of interpleader in eliminating historical technical restraints on the device that are not founded on adequate policy consideration. As a result, the four historic limitations on interpleader should be of no great significance.

The primary test for determining the propriety of interpleading the adverse claimants and discharging the stakeholder is whether the stakeholder legitimately fears multiple vexation directed against a single fund.

Ordinarily, interpleader is conducted in two "stages." In the first, the court hears evidence to determine whether the plaintiff is entitled to interplead the defendants. In the second stage, a determination is made on the merits of the adverse claims and, if appropriate, on the rights of an interested stakeholder.

After the stakeholder has paid the disputed fund into court, or given bond therefor, and the claimants have had notice and an opportunity to be heard, the court determines whether the stakeholder is entitled to interpleader relief. If so, the court will enter an order requiring the claimants to interplead and, if the stakeholder is disinterested, discharging the stakeholder from the proceeding and from further liability with regard to the interpleader fund. The court may also permanently enjoin the claimants from further harassing the stakeholder with claims or judicial proceedings. This first stage may be concluded upon motion by either the stakeholder or one of the claimants for summary judgment or judgment on the pleadings, just as in any other action. In any event, since the determination of the propriety of interpleader turns upon an examination of compliance with the prerequisites of the rule, issues raised at the first stage are clearly for the court to determine.

Generally, the claimants will have asserted their claims to the interpleader fund in their answer to the stakeholder's complaint. If an order of interpleader is entered, each claimant must then traverse the claims of the other claimants, thus joining issue. Alternatively, if the issues are already clearly defined in the claimants' initial pleadings, further pleadings may be unnecessary.

After issue has been joined between the claimants, or among the claimants and the interested stakeholder, the court will proceed as in any other civil case. Summary judgment may be granted in favor of one of the claimants against any other, even before the former serves an answer to the latter's pleading, a procedure generally appropriate under Rule 56(b). In most cases, however, the issues at the second stage will be determined by a trial, and the manner of trial will necessarily depend upon the state of the pleadings at that time; the court is to decide, "by such method as *See*ms most suited to the particular case, " which claimants are to prevail and to what extent.

There is, however, no inflexible rule that the proceeding must be divided into two stages. The entire action may be disposed of at one time in cases where, for example, the stakeholder has not moved to be discharged or has remained in the action by reason of an interest therein. There may even be a third stage, in the event that the second stage determination leaves unresolved some further dispute, either between the stakeholder and the prevailing claimant or among the prevailing claimants.

Trial during stages later than the first is also appropriate for counter-claims raised by the claimants, such as those alleging an independent liability, and for cross-claims between claimants which are held appropriate for resolution in the course of the interpleader proceedings. See 3A Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 22.01-.16; (2d. ed. 1992); 7 Wright, Miller Kane, Federal Practice and Procedure Civil §§ 1701 et seq. (1986); Miss Code Ann. §§ 11-35-41, -43 (statutory interpleader by garnishee; 75-7-603 (statutory interpleader by bailee) (1972).

[Amended April 18, 1995.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Applicability.

In general.

A Rule 22 interpleader action provides only the procedural vehicle to assert claims to the specific funds; however, the rule by itself cannot be the basis for a pro-rata distribution. Chic Creations of Bonita Lakes Mall v. Doleac Elec. Co., 791 So. 2d 254 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Applicability.

Where a plumber had been named as an interpleader defendant, the plumber was not required to have sought statutory remedies for the outstanding balance on its contract before it could recover funds that had been interpled. Noble House, Inc. v. W & W Plumbing & Heating, Inc., 881 So. 2d 377 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Interpleader action was available to law firm to facilitate payment of funds in its possession into the registry of the court when several attorneys made claims to the funds as attorney fees arising from litigation. Scruggs, Millette, Bozeman & Dent, P.A. v. Merkel & Cocke, P.A, 804 So. 2d 1000 (Miss. 2001).

Interpleader was appropriate where a contract between a shopping center owner and a retail store in the shopping center provided that the owner would pay a certain sum to the store for the construction of the interior of the store and the owner knew that subcontractors were not paid by the general contractor for their work on the store; the owner had a reasonable concern that it could be subjected to multiple litigation and the validity of the various potential claims was not for the owner to determine. Chic Creations of Bonita Lakes Mall v. Doleac Elec. Co., 791 So. 2d 254 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Rule 23. Class actions. [Omitted].

Rule 23.1. Derivative actions by shareholders. [Omitted].

Rule 23.2. Actions relating to unincorporated associations. [Omitted].

COMMENT

Class action practice is not being introduced into Mississippi trial courts at this time.

Few procedural devices have been the subject of more widespread criticism and more sustained attack — and equally spirited defense — than practice under Federal Rule 23 and its state counterparts. The dissatisfaction focuses primarily on Rule 23(b)(3), which permits suits on the part of persons whose only connection is that one or more common issues characterize their position in relation to an adverse party.

In 1976 the American Bar Association, the Conference of Chief Justices, and the Judicial Conference of the United States jointly sponsored the National Conference on the Causes of Popular Dissatisfaction with the Administration of Justice. Class action practice was one of the topics considered by the National Conference (often referred to as the "Pound Conference," in deference to Roscoe Pound and his landmark address in 1906 entitled "The Causes of Popular Dissatisfaction with the Administration of Justice") and referred to the ABA for follow-up study and action.

Aside from general proposals to provide jurisdictional "floors" and "ceilings" to regulate the size of class actions, greater judicial control over awards of attorneys' fees, and replacing the "opt-out" provisions with "opt-in" requirements, no meaningful reforms have as yet been developed to render class action practice a more manageable tool. See American Bar Association, Report of Pound Conference Follow-up Task Force, 74 F.R.D. 159, 194-97 (1976); Erickson, New Directions in the Administration of Justice: Responses to the Pound Conference, 64 A.B.A.J. 48, 52, 56 (1978); Schuck and Cohen, The Consumer Class Action: An Endangered Species, 12 San Diego L.Rev. 39 (1974); Comment, Class Actions and the Need for Legislative Reappraisal, 50 Notre Dame Law. 285 (1974); Comment, The Federal Courts Take a New Look at Class Actions, 27 Baylor L. Rev. 751 (1975); Dam, Class Actions: Efficiency, Compensation, Deterrence, and Conflict of Interest, 4 J. Legal Studies 47, 56-61 (1975).

Rule 24. Intervention.

(a) Intervention of right. Upon timely application, anyone shall be permitted to intervene in an action:

(1) when a statute confers an unconditional right to intervene; or

(2) when the applicant claims an interest relating to the property or transaction which is the subject of the action and he is so situated that the disposition of the action may as a practical matter impair or impede his ability to protect that interest, unless the applicant's interest is adequately represented by existing parties.

(b) Permissive intervention. Upon timely application anyone may be permitted to intervene in an action:

(1) when a statute confers a conditional right to intervene; or

(2) when an applicant's claim or defense and the main action have a question of law or fact in common.

When a party to an action relies for ground of claim or defense upon any statute or executive order administered by a federal or state governmental officer or agency, or upon any regulation, order, requirement, or agreement issued or made pursuant to the statute or executive order, the officer or agency upon timely application may be permitted to intervene in the action. In exercising its discretion the court shall consider whether the intervention will unduly delay or prejudice the adjudication of the rights of the original parties.

(c) Procedure. A person desiring to intervene shall serve a motion to intervene upon the parties as provided in Rule 5. The motion shall state the grounds therefor and shall be accompanied by a pleading setting forth the claim or defense for which intervention is sought. The same procedure shall be followed when a statute gives a right to intervene.

(d) Intervention by the state. In any action (1) to restrain or enjoin the enforcement, operation, or execution of any statute of the State of Mississippi by restraining or enjoining the action of any officer of the State or any political subdivision thereof, or the action of any agency, board, or commission acting under state law, in which a claim is asserted that the statute under which the action sought to be restrained or enjoined is to be taken is unconstitutional, or (2) for declaratory relief brought pursuant to Rule 57 in which a declaration or adjudication of the unconstitutionality of any statute of the State of Mississippi is among the relief requested, the party asserting the unconstitutionality of the statute shall notify the Attorney General of the State of Mississippi within such time as to afford him an opportunity to intervene and argue the question of constitutionality.

COMMENT

Rule 24, Intervention, concludes these rules' treatment of parties to civil actions: Rule 19 details who must be joined; Rule 20 details who may be joined; Rule 24 governs the rights of a stranger to the action who desires to be joined.

It has long been the law in Mississippi that a total stranger cannot interfere with the objects and purposes of a civil suit as between the original parties. Nevertheless, when it has happened that an owner or part owner has a claim or interest in property which is the subject of a pending action and which may be materially affected by the outcome of the litigation, he has been allowed to intervene to protect his interests; this is referred to as equitable intervention. See V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice, §§ 410, 411 (2d ed. 1950), quoted in Edwards v. Harper, 321 So.2d 301 (Miss.1975).

Additionally, intervention has been allowed when specifically permitted by statute; statutory intervention appears to have been the only form of intervention available in courts of law. See, e. g., Miss. Code Ann. § 11-33-101 (other creditors may intervene in attachment action instituted against a debtor); §§ 31-5-1 and -9 (in action on bond of contractor for Public Works Contracts materialmen and laborers may intervene); § 53-3-19 (in forfeiture and sale of oil and gas products seized as contraband, persons adversely affected thereby may intervene); § 71-3-71 (workmen's compensation employer or insurer entitled to intervene in action by employee against third party); and § 75-31-335 (1972) (any person damaged may intervene in injunction action pertaining to violation of Mississippi Milk Products Sale Law); City of Biloxi v. Gully, 187 Miss. 664, 193 So. 786 (1940).

M.R.C.P. 24 undertakes to continue to distinguish between two kinds of intervention: 24(a) pertains to Intervention of Right and provides that an applicant "shall be permitted to intervene" if he satisfies the tests of that portion of the rule; 24(b), however, is labeled Permissive Intervention and prescribes conditions under which an applicant "may be permitted to intervene" in an action.

If a statute of Mississippi grants a right to intervene, intervention is absolute or permissive depending on whether the statute creates an unconditional or conditional right. Other than this, intervention is said to be of right under 24(a)(2) when the applicant claims an interest relating to the property or transaction that is the subject of the action and he is so situated that the disposition of the action as a practical matter may impair or impede his ability to protect that interest, unless his interest is adequately represented by existing parties. An applicant who does not meet the test of 24(a) may be permitted to intervene under 24(b)(2) if his claim or defense and the main action have a question of law or fact in common. 7A Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 1902 (1972).

So viewed, it is apparent that Rule 24 is, in practical effect, substantially the equivalent of traditional Mississippi practice in the area of intervention: 24(a)(1) and (b)(1) conform generally to traditional statutory intervention, and 24(a)(2) and (b)(2) follow equitable intervention practices. However, the rule gives law courts intervention powers formerly accorded only to courts of equity.

Whether a particular application to intervene falls under 24(a) or 24(b) makes at least one important difference: An application for permissive intervention is addressed to the discretion of the court, whereas an application for intervention of right poses only a question of law. 7A Wright & Miller, supra.

Intervention pursuant to 24(a) and (b) both require that the application be "timely." The requirement of timeliness is not of fixed meaning and provides an opportunity (even under 24(a)) for the court to take some account of the practical situation and the effect on those already parties and on the economical disposition of judicial business by allowing intervention. Rule 24(a) represents a judgment that in the situation there described justice demands that the interest of the absentee should predominate over the interests of the original parties and of trial convenience, but if the absentee has failed to move promptly to protect his interest he may find himself denied relief. 7A Wright & Miller, supra. Rule 24(d) allows the State of Mississippi to intervene in any civil action wherein a major element of controversy pertains to the constitutionality of a state statute. The purpose of this provision is to protect the public's interest in the result of an action that may have far-reaching statewide implications. Notice to the Attorney General is mandatory even if the court thinks the constitutional question frivolous, but failure to give the notice does not deprive the court of jurisdiction to decide the case. Rule 24(d) was patterned after the following similar rules from other jurisdictions: Alabama Rules of Civil Procedure, R. 24(b); Maine Rules of Civil Procedure, R. 24(d); Minnesota Rules of Civil Procedure, R. 24.04; Tennessee Rules of Civil Procedure, R. 24.04; Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, R. 24(c).

Rule 24(d) allows the State of Mississippi to intervene in any civil action wherein a major element of controversy pertains to the constitutionality of a state statute. The purpose of this provision is to protect the public's interest in the result of an action that may have far-reaching statewide implications. Notice to the Attorney General is mandatory even if the court thinks the constitutional question frivolous, but failure to give the notice does not deprive the court of jurisdiction to decide the case. Rule 24(d) was patterned after the following similar rules from other jurisdictions: Alabama Rules of Civil Procedure, R. 24(b); Maine Rules of Civil Procedure, R. 24(d); Minnesota Rules of Civil Procedure, R. 24.04; Tennessee Rules of Civil Procedure, R. 24.04; Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, R. 24(c). See State v. Watkins, 676 So. 2d 247 (Miss. 1996).

[Amended March 22, 2001.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction.
Divorce proceedings.
Intervention as of right.
Intervention by state.
Intervention; improper.
Intervention; permissive.
Motion wrongly denied.
Procedure.
Time for appeal.
Timeliness of motion.

Construction.

Workers' compensation insurance carrier could pursue an appeal even though it did not file a formal intervention notice pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 24 because the trial court and all other parties had acted as if the carrier had intervened and the equities of hearing the appeal favored the insurance carrier. Federated Mut. Ins. Co. v. McNeal, 943 So. 2d 658 (Miss. 2006).

In a paternity action, the mother argued that she had a fundamental right, as a mother, to retain the birth name given to her child, and that the paternal presumption in Miss. Code Ann. § 93-9-9(1) constituted both a due process and equal protection violation, but she had waited three years (until the final hearing on custody, support, and visitation), to act on her prior motion to amend the earlier judgment of the chancellor, which had given the child the father's surname. The Mississippi Supreme Court held: (1) although other jurisdictions had established that a parent had a fundamental constitutional right in his/her child's name, the supreme court had yet to recognize that same was fundamental; (2) the mother had made no challenge to the constitutionality of § 93-9-9(1) in her motion to alter or amend, and the father and the trial court were first apprised of her constitutional challenge when she appealed to the instant court; (3) the Mississippi Attorney General had received no notice of her constitutional challenge until he received her appellate brief; and (4) consequently, the issue was procedurally barred pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 24(d), and because she had failed to raise the constitutional issue in the trial court. Powers v. Tiebauer, 939 So. 2d 749 (Miss. 2005).

Whether putative intervenor is likely to prevail on merits is not part of calculus in which trial court should engage in considering an application to intervene. Guaranty Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Pittman, 501 So. 2d 377 (Miss. 1987).

Divorce proceedings.

A man's second wife was entitled to intervene in a proceeding in which the man's first wife sought to set aside their divorce judgment in order to protect her property and marital rights. Cohen v. Cohen, 748 So. 2d 91 (Miss. 1999).

Intervention as of right.

Standard of review for intervention of right under Miss. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2) is de novo, while the standard of review for permissive intervention under Rule 24(b)(2) is abuse of discretion; the chancery court erred in denying a buyer's motion for intervention of right under Rule 24(a)(2) in a hospital's action to enforce a contract for the acquisition of a surgery center's membership interests, assets, and certificate of need because the four requirements necessary to establish intervention of right, including timeliness, an adequate interest in the action, impaired ability to protect that interest, and inadequate representation of that interest, were met. Madison HMA, Inc. v. St. Dominic-Jackson Mem. Hosp., 35 So. 3d 1209 (Miss. 2010).

Although the railroad company had a substantial financial interest in the adoption by the grandfather, that interest was purely economic since the grandfather's adopted children would be able to join his natural children to maintain and continue the grandfather's asbestos suit against the railroad company because they were his dependants and beneficiaries, and the three adopted children were receiving approximately $ 1,932 per month from the grandfather's retirement with the railroad company, a benefit they could not have received had they not been adopted. Therefore, because the railroad company's claim for intervention was based solely on its property and monetary concerns, intervention under Miss. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2) was precluded. D.C.S. v. J.F., 44 So. 3d 1006

(Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari dismissed en banc by 2010 Miss. LEXIS 515 (Miss. Sept. 30, 2010).

Trial court abused its discretion in denying the grandmother's motion to intervene as the grandmother's interests in the safety and well-being of her grandchildren were not being represented by the existing parties; they deprived the children, and particularly the granddaughter, of the court's protection and it was never appropriate to deprive children of due process safeguards by punishing one of the litigants in a custody battle and refusing to consider allegations of abuse of the children. S.G. v. D.C., 13 So. 3d 269 (Miss. 2009).

Motion to intervene filed by the Governor of Mississippi, the Mississippi Division of Medicaid, and the Mississippi Health Care Trust Fund was timely filed and they had the right to intervene under Miss. R. Civ. P. 24 (a) because: (1) the application for intervention was timely due to the current, ongoing, and future expenditures and income from tobacco settlement monies; (2) the original parties to the tobacco litigation will not suffer prejudice by their intervention; (3) denying the intervention would deny the Governor and the Trust Fund their arguable and purported right to input regarding expenditures or budgeting of the settlement funds; and (4) there were unusual circumstances militating for a determination that the application was timely. Hood ex rel. State Tobacco Litigation v. State, 958 So. 2d 790 (Miss. 2007).

Appellate court affirmed the trial court's denial of the foster parent's motion to intervene under Miss. R. Civ. P. 24(a) in adoption proceedings brought by the individual as it was in the best interests of the minor child for the matter to proceed without intervention. Neshoba County Dep't of Human Servs. v. Hodge, 919 So. 2d 1157 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Trial court erred in denying an employer's and insurers' request to intervene in an employee's negligence action against a doctor and a medical corporation. The employer and the insurers were entitled to intervene because the employee's paraplegia, which occurred after back surgery, was proximately caused by her on-the-job injury. Miss. Ins. Guar. Ass'n v. Brewer, 922 So. 2d 807 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 927 So. 2d 750, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 126 (Miss. 2006).

Department of human services had a duty to intervene in paternity action, and its intervention in action was one of right. Mississippi State Dep't of Human Servs. v. Barnett, 633 So. 2d 430 (Miss. 1993).

Workers' compensation carrier was entitled to participate in proceeds of settlement reached during trial between injured employee and driver of other automobile involved in collision. Sneed v. Verdun, 611 So. 2d 947 (Miss. 1992).

Liability insurer should have been allowed to intervene in personal injury action stemming from accident between automobile and truck, where defendant truck driver had defaulted and intervenor was insurance carrier for truck driver's putative employer. Guaranty Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Pittman, 501 So. 2d 377 (Miss. 1987).

This rule does not address the manner or degree of participation of all parties, after an intervenor exercises right of intervention; manner or degree of participation must be left to broad discretion of trial judge, whose responsibility it is to see that each party is afforded opportunity to assert and protect his own interest in an orderly, fair proceeding. Reikes v. Martin, 471 So. 2d 385 (Miss. 1985).

Intervention by state.

In a medical negligence case in which a mother raised her constitutional challenges to the Mississippi Tort Claims Act (MTCA) for the first time on appeal, although, in her motion to amend the complaint, the mother stated that she wished to raise the constitutionality of the MTCA, there was no valid complaint to amend. The mother had not complied with the notice requirement under Miss. R. Civ. P. 24(d), and she had not complied with the 90-day notice period in Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-11(1). Jones v. Laurel Family Clinic, P.A., 37 So. 3d 665 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Supposed "notice" to a special assistant attorney general is not sufficient under Miss. R. Civ. P. 24(d) or Miss. R. App. P. 44; therefore, a hospital was procedurally barred from bringing constitutional challenges to Miss. Code Ann. § 41-7-191(16) under Miss. Const. art. 4, § 87, Miss. Const. art. 3, § 14, and the Fourteenth Amendment where there was no notice to the Mississippi Attorney General. Oktibbeha County Hosp. v. Miss. State Dep't of Health, 956 So. 2d 207 (Miss. 2007).

Appellant's failure to challenge the constitutionality of Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-13(1) in the trial court or to give notice to the Attorney General precluded the Supreme Court from considering the issue on appeal. Donaldson v. Covington County, 846 So. 2d 219 (Miss. 2003).

In an abuse and neglect proceeding, the parents were procedurally barred from challenging the constitutionality of the proceeding because they failed to send notice of their challenge to the Attorney General. In re D.O., 798 So. 2d 417 (Miss. 2001).

Chancellor erred in declaring portion of state statute unconstitutional without giving proper notice to Attorney General to appear and defend constitutionality of the statute. State v. Watkins, 676 So. 2d 247 (Miss. 1996).

Intervention; improper.

Denial of the doctor's intervention in the modification of a property settlement agreement (PSA) entered into by the husband and wife was appropriate because the doctor did not have a legally protected interest in the divorce; he was not named in the PSA, and it provided for no legal obligations or duties owed expressly to him. Additionally, given the doctor's attempt to intermeddle in the divorce proceedings, after having meddled with the marital relationship of the husband and wife, justice hardly demanded intervention by him. Dare v. Stokes, 62 So. 3d 958 (Miss. 2011).

Denial of the intervenors' motion to intervene was improper pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 24(a), where the motion was timely, in part, because the court could find no prejudice to the existing parties since the suit under the Open Meetings Act, § 25-41-1 et seq., had been stayed in 1998 for a number of years and the quiet title suit was not initiated until late 2002. Hayes v. Leflore County Bd. of Supervisors, 935 So. 2d 1026 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), reversed by 2006 Miss. LEXIS 210 (Miss. Apr. 27, 2006).

County which owned pulp mill and land on which it was located was not entitled to intervene as a defendant in action against mill operator for its discharge of toxic substances into river, where county failed to establish that its interest was not already adequately represented by existing party defendants. Perry County v. Ferguson, 618 So. 2d 1270 (Miss. 1993).

Intervention of resident security holders was improper in utility rate increase proceedings, where they were already a party to the proceedings through officers of power company, and their interest was adequately represented by the company. State ex rel. Pittman v. Mississippi Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 506 So. 2d 978 (Miss. 1987).

Intervention; permissive.

Since the Governor of Mississippi, the Mississippi Division of Medicaid, and the Mississippi Health Care Trust Fund were not seeking to intervene in a concluded matter which had already been litigated, the assertion by the partnership, a nonprofit organization created to reduce underage smoking, that they could not intervene because the matter was already litigated lacked merit; by allowing intervention, the payments made by the tobacco companies each year would not be altered, and therefore the settlement agreement between the state and the tobacco companies would not be jeopardized. Hood ex rel. State Tobacco Litigation v. State, 958 So. 2d 790 (Miss. 2007).

Motion to intervene filed by the Governor of Mississippi, the Mississippi Division of Medicaid, and the Mississippi Health Care Trust Fund could not be set aside for a perceived lack of statutory or legal authority because: (1) the Governor unquestionably had not only the statutory but also the constitutional authority to intervene since the Governor was under a solemn duty to act in order to assure faithful execution of Mississippi's laws; (2) the division had a compelling interest to see that the annual payments of $20 million were placed in the Mississippi Health Care Trust Fund because the suit was initially brought to recoup monies expended by the division; (3) the Mississippi

Health Care Trust Fund was authorized to recoup funds paid to a partnership, a non-profit organization created to reduce under age smoking; and (4) the Mississippi Attorney General declined to take action. Hood ex rel. State Tobacco Litigation v. State, 958 So. 2d 790 (Miss. 2007).

The court improperly allowed a physician to intervene in an action to establish paternity brought prior to an anticipated wrongful death action by the father against the physician based upon alleged negligent medical treatment leading to the deaths of the mother and child; there was no suggestion that the physician's defense to the claim of negligence would be in any way impacted by the paternity action and his liability existed independent of the paternity action. In re Estate of Johnson, 779 So. 2d 164 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

State Democratic Committee should have been allowed to intervene permissively, if not by right, in election contest involving candidate it sponsored; Committee's interest in the subject matter was substantial, and only the Committee could provide relief. Cummings v. Benderman, 681 So. 2d 97 (Miss. 1996).

Motion wrongly denied.

Company's motion to intervene in an action concerning ownership of land leased by the company should have been granted. After obtaining partial relief sought in its proposed complaint attached to its motion to intervene pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 24(c), the company was entitled to continued participation in the proceedings as a matter of law. Lamar Cos. v. Cocajo Trust, 54 So. 3d 222 (Miss. 2011).

Procedure.

Since the driver failed to raise her constitutional challenge that the Mississippi Tort Claims Act violated the due process clause of the state constitution before the trial court and also failed to notify the Mississippi Attorney General in accordance with Miss. R. Civ. P. 24(d), her issue was procedurally barred on appeal. Canadian National/Illinois Cent. R.R. v. Smith, 926 So. 2d 839 (Miss. 2006).

Unemployment compensation claimant's constitutional argument on appeal was procedurally barred because his argument was unsupported by citation to authority and he did not provide notice to the attorney general under Miss. R. Civ. P. 24(d) and Miss. R. App. P. 44(a) that the constitutionality of a statute was being challenged; therefore, he was procedurally barred from advancing his constitutional argument on appeal. Grehan v. Miss. Empl. Sec. Comm'n, 918 So. 2d 774 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Plaintiff's failure to raise the issue of the constitutionality of a statute before the trial court and to notify the Mississippi Attorney General resulted in a procedural bar on that issue. Cockrell v. Pearl River Valley Water Supply Dist., 865 So. 2d 357 (Miss. 2004).

Estate administrator failed to comply with the rule and the constitutionality issue of the statute was barred, because it was not raised in the trial court and because the attorney general's office was not properly notified. Corey v. Skelton, 834 So. 2d 681 (Miss. 2003).

Party who is granted permission to intervene pursuant to M.R.C.P. Rule 24(b)(2) is not required to issue a summons and complaint pursuant to Rule 4; rather, service of motion to intervene accompanied by complaint, pursuant to Rule 5, is sufficient service. Breland v. Smith-Johnson, Inc., 501 So. 2d 389 (Miss. 1987).

Time for appeal.

Grandmother's appeal was timely where an immediate appeal of a denial of an application for leave to intervene under Miss. R. Civ. P. 24 was not required and the father did not file a brief in the current appeal, Miss. R. App. P. 31(d). S.G. v. D.C., 13 So. 3d 269 (Miss. 2009).

Timeliness of motion.

In a church's action to confirm title to property, a title holder's father's Miss. R. Civ. P. 24(a) motion to intervene was found untimely as the father pretended to be title holder to the property and answered the action before admitting the father's identity and seeking to intervene as himself; the delay prejudiced the church. Vasser v. Bibleway M.B. Church, 50 So. 3d 381 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Although Miss. R. Civ. P. 25(c) transfers were generally permissive, the execution sale and purchase of lawsuits, as choses in action, left only one party, a bank, with any interest in the litigation; because Miss. R. Civ. P. 17 allowed only the real party in interest to prosecute its claims, the trial court abused its discretion by refusing to substitute the bank as plaintiff in the actions. Hayes v. Leflore County Bd. of Supervisors, 935 So. 2d 1015 (Miss. 2006).

In an action arising out of an automobile accident in which five persons died and five others were injured, it was error for the court to permit the representatives of two of the deceased persons to intervene in an action filed against the defendant city where the motion for intervention was not filed until after the expiration of the notice of claim and statute of limitations provisions of § 11-46-11. City of Tupelo v. Martin, 747 So. 2d 822 (Miss. 1999).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. Right to Intervene in Court Review of Zoning Proceeding. 47 A.L.R.6th 439.

Rule 25. Substitution of parties.

(a) Death.

(1) If a party dies and the claim is not thereby extinguished, the court shall, upon motion, order substitution of the proper parties. The motion for substitution may be made by any party or by the successors or representatives of the deceased party and, together with the notice of hearing, shall be served on the parties as provided in Rule 5 and upon persons not parties in the manner provided in Rule 4 for the service of summons. The action shall be dismissed without prejudice as to the deceased party if the motion for substitution is not made within ninety days after the death is suggested upon the record by service of a statement of the fact of the death as herein provided for the service of the motion.

(2) In the event of the death of one or more of the plaintiffs or of one or more of the defendants in an action in which the right sought to be enforced survives only to the surviving plaintiff or only against the surviving defendants, the action does not abate. The death shall be suggested upon the record and the action shall proceed in favor of or against the surviving parties.

(b) Legal disability. If a party comes under a legal disability the court upon motion served as provided in subdivision (a) of this rule may allow the action to be continued by or against his representative.

(c) Transfer of interest. In case of any transfer of interest, the action may be continued by or against the original party, unless the court upon motion directs the person to whom the interest is transferred to be substituted in the action or joined with the original party. Service of the motion shall be made as provided in subdivision (a) of this rule.

(d) Public officers; death or separation from office. When a public officer is a party to an action in his official capacity and during its pendency dies, resigns, or otherwise ceases to hold office, the action does not abate and his successor is automatically substituted as a party. Proceedings following the substitution shall be in the name of the party, but any misnomer not affecting the substantial rights of the parties shall be disregarded. An order of substitution may be entered at any time, but the omission to enter such an order shall not affect the substitution.

COMMENT

Prior Mississippi practice provided two methods for the substitution of deceased parties or for public officers who died in office or were separated from their office: motion to revive, and bill of revivor. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-7-25 through -31 (1972). Normally, under the statutes the suggestion of death of a party plaintiff would be filed by the defendant; if the successors to the plaintiff did not appear, the suit could be dismissed. Smith v. Pattison, 45 Miss. 619 (1871). If the successors desired to enter the suit, it was only necessary for them to file a motion to revive, supported by affidavits reciting the facts of plaintiff's death and their appointment as plaintiff's legal representatives. Notice of the motion to revive was not required because the defendants were considered to be before the forum and were deemed to have taken notice of the statutory proceedings suggesting death and revival. Mitchell v. Conner, 42 Miss. 550 (1869); Criscoe v. Adams, 123 Miss. 37, 85 So. 119 (1920). Essentially, the same procedure was followed in the event of the defendant's death, but notice of the motion of revival was required to be served. Smith v. Hargraves, 114 Miss. 687, 75 So. 545 (1917). In the event the rights or liabilities of the survivors became litigious — such as in a dispute as to who the true heirs were, or where interests under a will or trust were contested — a bill of revivor could have been resorted to. Proceedings on a bill of revivor were conducted as an original action designed to resolve the litigated issues. Sovereign Camp, W. O. W. v. Durr, 186 Miss. 850, 192 So. 45 (1939). See V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice, §§ 416-419 (2d ed. 1950).

M.R.C.P. 25 provides, in four subsections, for the substitution of parties in the event of death, incompetency, transfer of interest, or public officers' succession in office. Rule 25 is inapplicable if substitution is sought for any reason other than one of these four circumstances, in which case resort must be to Rules 17 (real party in interest), 21 (adding or dropping parties), or 24 (intervention).

Rule 25 presupposes that substitution is for someone who was already a party to a pending action; substitution is not possible if one who was named as a party in fact died before the commencement of the action. See Misukami v. Buras, 419 F.2d 1319 (5th Cir. 1969). Similarly, if one named in a filed complaint dies, becomes incompetent, vacates office, or transfers his interest before he is served with process, substitution is available but process must be served on the new party to acquire in personam jurisdiction. See Ransom v. Brennan, 437 F.2d 513 (5th Cir. 1971).

As the rule states, the action will be dismissed without prejudice if a motion for substitution is not made within ninety days of the suggestion of death on the record. The suggestion of death must be in writing and must be served on parties in accordance with Rule 5 and upon persons not parties as provided in Rule 4 for the service of a summons. The general provisions of M.R.C.P. 6(b) apply to motions to substitute; accordingly, the court may extend the period for substitution if timely requested. Similarly, the court may allow substitution to be made after the expiration of the ninety-day period on a showing that the failure to act earlier was the result of excusable neglect. M.R.C.P. 6(b)(2). See 7A Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 1951, 1955 (1972).

Objection to substitution may be made either by the representative of the decedent or by any other party, since the presence or absence of a party may affect the rights of other parties. The court should not resolve the merits of the controversy in passing on the motion for substitution. 7A Wright & Miller, supra, § 1956.

The procedure for substitution after a party becomes incompetent is the same as for substitution after death. M.R.C.P. 25(b).

M.R.C.P. 25(c) applies to transfers, assignments, and corporate mergers and dissolutions. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 79-3-151 (effect of merger or consolidation); 79-3-183(e) (articles of dissolution); and 79-3-209 (1972) (survival of remedy after dissolution, suspension or failure).

The most significant feature of Rule 25(c) is that it does not require that any action be taken after an interest has been transferred; the action may be continued by or against the original party and the judgment will be binding on his successor in interest even though he is not named. An order of joinder in such a situation is merely a discretionary determination by the trial court that the transferee's presence would facilitate the conduct of the litigation. Since Rule 25(c) is wholly permissive there is no time limit on moving to substitute under its provisions. The motion for substitution may be made by any party. The rule incorporates by reference the provisions of Rule 25(a) on service of the motion. Thus, the motion, with notice of the hearing, may be served on the existing parties in accordance with Rule 5 but must be served on persons who are not already parties as provided in Rule 4 for service of process. 7A Wright & Miller, supra § 1958. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-3 (1972) (assignee of chose in action may sue).

M.R.C.P. 25(d) applies only when the public official is sued "in his official capacity." In those situations in which the public official's personal assets may be subject to execution after judgment, Rule 25(a) governs his substitution in the event of death. Subsection (d)(2) of Federal Rule 25, after which this Mississippi rule was patterned, appears as M.R.C.P. 17(e), since the latter provision pertains more to capacities and interests of parties than to substitution of parties.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Applicability.
Death.
Transfers of interest.

Applicability.

Although Miss. R. Civ. P. 25(c) transfers were generally permissive, the execution sale and purchase of lawsuits, as choses in action, left only one party, a bank, with any interest in the litigation; because Miss. R. Civ. P. 17 allowed only the real party in interest to prosecute its claims, the trial court abused its discretion by refusing to substitute the bank as plaintiff in the actions. Citizens Nat'l Bank v. Dixieland Forest Prods., LLC, 935 So. 2d 1004 (Miss. 2006).

The rule, by its terms, applies to judgments, and not to pre-trial discovery orders. TXG Intrastate Pipeline Co. v. Grossnickle, 716 So. 2d 991 (Miss. 1997).

Death.

According to established precedent and Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-237, an executrix's medical malpractice action against a doctor and a medical practice survived a decedent's death and did not have to be recommenced because the executrix complied with Miss. R. Civ. P. 25 as the doctor and medical practice made no suggestion of death upon the record to trigger the ninety-day time requirement set out by the rule; nowhere does Rule 25 state that the substitution of parties is a commencement of a new action, but instead, it is the continuation of a prior action. Harris v. Darby, 17 So. 3d 1076 (Miss. 2009).

Medical malpractice suit was properly dismissed for failure to state a claim because plaintiffs did comply with Miss. Code Ann. § 11-1-58 by filing with their complaint either an expert disclosure or a certificate of counsel stating that an expert disclosure had not yet been obtained because of the running of the statute of limitations under Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-36; strict compliance with Miss. Code Ann. § 11-1-58 was mandatory, and defendants, a medical center and the estate of a deceased doctor, which had been substituted as a defendant under Miss. R. Civ. P. 25(a)(1) after the doctor's death and reasserted the defenses raised by the doctor, had both raised as an affirmative defense plaintiffs' failure to comply with the statute. Caldwell v. N. Miss. Med. Ctr., Inc., 956 So. 2d 888 (Miss. 2007).

The requirement of Miss. R. Civ. P. 25(a) to move the substitution of the estate of a deceased party within 90 days of service of a statement of the fact of the death did not begin running when counsel for the deceased party moved for a continuance based on the party's death. Estate of Baxter v. Shaw Assocs., 797 So. 2d 396 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Defendant did not fulfill the rule's requirement concerning service on non-parties when it mailed a copy of the Suggestion of Death to plaintiffs' attorney rather than to estate of deceased party plaintiff; since estate was not properly served, the ninety-day limitations period never began to run, and therefore trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to dismiss deceased as a party plaintiff, and in allowing plaintiffs to substitute estate more than ninety days after defendant filed its Suggestion of Death. Hurst v. Southwest Miss. Legal Servs. Corp., 610 So. 2d 374 (Miss. 1992), overruled on other grounds, Rains v. Gardner, 731 So. 2d 1192 (Miss. 1999).

Transfers of interest.

In the underlying action, the telecommunications company maintained that it should not have been named as a defendant by the landowner as it was not the parent company of the Mississippi Power Company (also a named defendant in the underling action), and had no easements or fiber optic telecommunications lines in Mississippi. However, the distinction addressed by the trial court in granting the landowner's motion to dismiss his trespass and unjust enrichment action, was that the landowner's claims were dismissed with prejudice rather than without prejudice; the trial court was in the best position to consider the telecommunication company's ore tenus motion for attorney's fees and costs and did not abuse its discretion in denying same where it found the circumstances may have been unusual, but that they were not exceptional. Miss. Power Co. v. Hanson, 905 So. 2d 547 (Miss. 2005).

By its terms this rule applied to judgments, not pre-trial discovery orders, and therefore it was error for chancellor to impose same discovery sanctions on second defendant that it imposed on first, where second defendant had complied with all discovery requests. TXG Intrastate Pipeline Co. v. Grossnickle, 716 So. 2d 991 (Miss. 1997).

Transferee, as owner of certain percentages in working interests and interests in the litigation, was a necessary, indispensable party and should have been joined upon defendant's motion. TXG Intrastate Pipeline Co. v. Grossnickle, 716 So. 2d 991 (Miss. 1997).

CHAPTER V. DEPOSITIONS AND DISCOVERY

Rule 26. General provisions governing discovery.

(a) Discovery methods. Parties may obtain discovery by one or more of the following methods: depositions upon oral examination or written questions; written interrogatories; production of documents or things or permission to enter upon land or other property, for inspection and other purposes; and requests for admission. Unless the court orders otherwise under subdivisions (c) or (d) of this rule, the frequency of use of these methods is not limited.

(b) Scope of Discovery. Unless otherwise limited by order of the court in accordance with these rules, the scope of discovery is as follows:

(1) In general. Parties may obtain discovery regarding any matter, not privileged, which is relevant to the issues raised by the claims or defenses of any party. The discovery may include the existence, description, nature, custody, condition and location of any books, documents, electronic or magnetic data, or other tangible things; and the identity and location of persons (i) having knowledge of any discoverable matter or (ii) who may be called as witnesses at the trial. It is not ground for objection that the information sought will be inadmissible at the trial if the information sought appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.

(2) Insurance agreements. A party may obtain discovery of the existence and contents of any insurance agreement under which any person carrying on an insurance business may be liable to satisfy part or all of a judgment which may be entered in the action or to indemnify or reimburse for payments made to satisfy the judgment. Information concerning the insurance agreement is not by reason of disclosure admissible in evidence at trial. For purposes of this paragraph, an application for insurance shall not be treated as part of an insurance agreement.

(3) Trial preparation: materials. Subject to the provisions of subdivision (b)(4) of this rule, a party may obtain discovery of documents and tangible things otherwise discoverable under subdivision (b)(1) of this rule and prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial by or for another party or by or for that other party's representative (including that party's attorney, consultant, surety, indemnitor, insurer, or agent) only upon a showing that the party seeking discovery has substantial need of the materials in the preparation of that party's case and that the party is unable without undue hardship to obtain the substantial equivalent of the materials by other means. In ordering discovery of such materials when the required showing has been made, the court shall protect against disclosure of the mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories of an attorney or other representative of a party concerning the litigation.

A party may obtain without the required showing a statement concerning the action or its subject matter previously made by that party. Upon request, a person not a party may obtain without the required showing a statement concerning the action or its subject matter previously made by that person. If the request is refused, the person may move for a court order. Rule 37(a)(4) applies to the award of expenses incurred in relation to the motion. For purposes of this paragraph, a statement previously made is: (A) a written statement signed or otherwise adopted or approved by the person making it, or (B) a stenographic, mechanical, electrical, or other recording, or a transcription thereof, which is a substantially verbatim recital of an oral statement by the person making it and contemporaneously recorded.

(4) Trial preparations: experts. Discovery of facts known and opinions held by experts, otherwise discoverable under subsection (b)(1) of this rule and acquired or developed in anticipation of litigation or for trial, may be obtained only as follows:

(A)(i) A party may through interrogatories require any other party to identify each person whom the other party expects to call as an expert witness at trial, to state the subject matter on which the expert is expected to testify, and to state the substance of the facts and opinions to which the expert is expected to testify and a summary of the grounds for each opinion.

(ii) Upon motion, the court may order further discovery by other means, subject to such restrictions as to scope and such provisions, pursuant to subsection (b)(4)(C) of this rule, concerning fees and expenses, as the court may deem appropriate.

(B) A party may discover facts known or opinions held by an expert who has been retained or specially employed by another party in anticipation of litigation or preparation for trial and who is not expected to be called as a witness at trial only upon a showing of exceptional circumstances under which it is impracticable for the party seeking discovery to obtain facts or opinions on the same subject by other means.

(C) Unless manifest injustice would result, (i) the court shall require that the party seeking discovery pay the expert a reasonable fee for time spent in responding to discovery under subsections (b)(4)(A)(ii) and (b)(4)(B) of this rule, and (ii) with respect to discovery obtained under subsection (b)(4)(A)(ii) of this rule, the court may require, and with respect to discovery obtained under subsection (b)(4)(B) of this rule, the court shall require, the party seeking discovery to pay the other party a fair portion of the fees and expenses reasonably incurred by the latter party in obtaining facts and opinions from the expert.

(5) Electronic data. To obtain discovery of data or information that exists in electronic or magnetic form, the requesting party must specifically request production of electronic or magnetic data and specify the form in which the requesting party wants it produced. The responding party must produce the electronic or magnetic data that is responsive to the request and is reasonably available to the responding party in its ordinary course of business. If the responding party cannot-through reasonable efforts-retrieve the data or information requested or produce it in the form requested, the responding party must state an objection complying with these rules. If the court orders the responding party to comply with the request, the court may also order that the requesting party pay the reasonable expenses of any extraordinary steps required to retrieve and produce the information.

(c) Discovery conference. At any time after the commencement of the action, the court may hold a conference on the subject of discovery, and shall do so if requested by any party. The request for discovery conference shall certify that counsel has conferred, or made reasonable effort to confer, with opposing counsel concerning the matters set forth in the request, and shall include:

1. a statement of the issues to be tried;
2. a plan and schedule of discovery;
3. limitations to be placed on discovery, if any; and
4. other proposed orders with respect to discovery.

Any objections or additions to the items contained in the request shall be served and filed no later than ten days after service of the request.

Following the discovery conference, the court shall enter an order fixing the issues; establishing a plan and schedule of discovery; setting limitations upon discovery, if any; and determining such other matters, including the allocation of expenses, as are necessary for the proper management of discovery in the case.

Subject to the right of a party who properly moves for a discovery conference to prompt convening of the conference, the court may combine the discovery conference with a pretrial conference authorized by Rule 16.

The court may impose sanctions for the failure of a party or counsel without good cause to have cooperated in the framing of an appropriate discovery plan by agreement. Upon a showing of good cause, any order entered pursuant to this subdivision may be altered or amended.

(d) Protective orders. Upon motion by a party or by the person from whom discovery is sought, and for good cause shown, the court in which the action is pending, or in the case of a deposition the court that issued a subpoena therefor, may make any order which justice requires to protect a party or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense, including one or more of the following:

(1) that the discovery not be had;

(2) that the discovery may be had only on specified terms and conditions, including a designation of the time or place;

(3) that the discovery may be had only by a method of discovery other than that selected by the party seeking discovery;

(4) that certain matters not be inquired into, or that the scope of the discovery be limited to certain matters;

(5) that discovery be conducted with no one present except persons designated by the court;

(6) that a deposition after being sealed to be opened only by order of the court;

(7) that a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information not be disclosed or be disclosed only in a designated way;

(8) that the parties simultaneously file specified documents or information enclosed in sealed envelopes to be opened as directed by the court;

(9) the court may make any other order which justice requires to protect the party or witness from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression or undue burden or expense, including provision for payment of expenses attendant upon such deposition or other discovery device by the party seeking same.

If the motion for a protective order is denied in whole or in part, the court may, on such terms and conditions as are just, order that any party or person provide or permit discovery. Rule 37(a)(4) applies to the award of expenses incurred in relation to the motion.

(e) Sequence and timing of discovery. Unless the court upon motion, for the convenience of parties and witnesses and in the interests of justice, orders otherwise, methods of discovery may be used in any sequence and the fact that a party is conducting discovery, whether by deposition or otherwise, shall not operate to delay any other party's discovery.

(f) Supplementation of responses. A party who has responded to a request for discovery with a response that was complete when made is under no duty to supplement his response to include information thereafter acquired, except as follows:

(1) A party is under a duty seasonably to supplement that party's response with respect to any question directly addressed to (A) the identity and location of persons (i) having knowledge of discoverable matters, or (ii) who may be called as witnesses at the trial, and (B) the identity of each person expected to be called as an expert witness at trial, the subject matter on which the person is expected to testify, and the substance of the testimony.

(2) A party is under a duty seasonably to amend a prior response if that party obtains information upon the basis of which (A) the party knows that the response was incorrect when made, or (B) the party knows that the response, though correct when made, is no longer true and the circumstances are such that a failure to amend the response is in substance a knowing concealment.

(3) A duty to supplement responses may be imposed by order of the court, agreement of the parties, or at any time prior to trial through new requests for supplementation of prior responses. (Amended effective March 1, 1989; March 13, 1991; April 13, 2000; Amended effective May 29, 2003 to add Rule 26(5) addressing discovery of electronic data.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective April 13, 2000, Rule 26(c) was amended to allow the court on its own motion to convene a discovery conference, So. 2d (West Miss.Cas. 2000).

Effective March 13, 1991, Rule 26(b)(1)(ii) was amended to delete the oral testimony of witnesses from the listing of matter that might be discovered by a party. Rule 26(d) was amended to provide that in the case of depositions protective orders might be made by the court that issued a subpoena therefor. 574-576 So. 2d XXIII (West Miss. Cas. 1991).

Effective March 1, 1989, Rule 26(b)(1) and Rule 26(f)(1) were amended to provide for the identification of (and supplementation of the prior identification of) those, in addition to experts, who may be called as witnesses at the trial. 536-538 So. 2d XXIV (West Miss. Cas. 1989).

COMMENT

With two important exceptions M.R.C.P. 26 is identical to Miss. Code Ann. § 13-1-226 (1972): subdivision 26(B)(1) narrows the scope of permissible discovery, although it does permit the discovery of the identity and location of persons who may be called as witnesses at the trial; a new subdivision (c) is added and the original subdivisions are renumbered accordingly.

Sweeping and abusive discovery is encouraged by permitting discovery confined only by the "subject matter" of a case — the language of Miss. Code Ann. § 13-1-226(b) (1972) — rather than limiting it to the issues presented. Discovery should be limited to the specific practices or acts that are in issue. Determining when discovery spills beyond "issues" and into "subject matter" will not always be easy, but M.R.C.P. 26(b)(1) is intended to favor limitations, rather than expansions, on permissible discovery. Accordingly, "admissible evidence" referred to in the last sentence of 26(b)(1) must be limited by the new relevancy which emerges from the term "issues, " rather than from the more sweeping term "subject matter."

Rule 26(b) was amended effective May 29, 2003, adding subsection (5) to make specific provision for discovery of data and information existing in electronic and magnetic form. Recognizing that special problems may exist in the retrieval of such data, the rule limits the duty to that of production of electronic and magnetic data to that which is reasonably available to the responding party in its ordinary course of business. Further, if extraordinary steps are required to retrieve and produce the information, the court may require the requesting party to pay the expense of those steps, in addition to costs which may be assessed under Rule 26(d)(9). The production of data compilations which are subject to production under Rule 34 is also subject to the limitations of Rule 26(b)(5).

Rule 26(c) establishes a discovery conference convened on the court's own motion or at the request of any party. This conference is a corollary to the limitation on the scope of discovery dictated by Rule 26(b)(1). Whether the conference is convened on the court's own motion or upon a litigant's certified request, the court has control over the time of its convening and the scope of its reach.

Rule 26(c) provides the procedure for early judicial control but continues to impose principal responsibility upon the litigating bar for the preparation of a case. In the great majority of cases, opposing counsel should be able, without judicial intervention, to formulate an appropriate plan and schedule of discovery in relation to issues readily defined by agreement. In those instances, however, where it would facilitate the discovery process, the court may hold a discovery conference on its own motion or upon the request of either party.

The discovery conference will produce an order defining: (a) a "plan" in which the types and subjects of discovery are set forth, e. g., oral depositions of A, B and C; production of contracts and any letters, correspondence or memoranda explaining or modifying them, etc.; (b) a "schedule" for discovery which specifies the time and place for discovery events, e. g., the dates and places for the taking of depositions of A, B and C, or the time within which documents are to be produced, and (c) such "limitations" as might otherwise be employed in protective orders, e. g., the documents of C shall be disclosed only to B's lawyers.

The rule also provides for "allocation of expenses." This provision would permit courts, as justice dictates, to reassign the usual financial burdens of discovery. For example, a court might condition discovery demanded by party A upon the payment by A of all or part of party B's expenses, including attorneys' fees.

An early accord or order on discovery may require later modification. Rule 26(c) allows such amendments freely. Again, cooperation among counsel should be the rule rather than the exception.

Comment amended effective March 1, 1989; April 13, 2000; amended effective May 29, 2003.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Applicability.
Disclosure of witnesses.
Discoverable matters.
Discovery of statements.
Discovery violations.
Expert testimony.
Expert witnesses.
Filing with court.
Litigation materials.
Matters exempt from discovery.
Protective orders.
Sanctions.
Scope of discovery.
Supplementation of responses.
Work product.
Workers' compensation proceedings.

Applicability.

In a proceeding for adverse possession, the failure of the party opposing the claim of adverse possession to answer the requests for admission conclusively established that the deceased had exclusive use of the property at the times at issue, that the deceased held himself out as the owner of the property, and that the deceased did not allow others to use the property except with his permission. Williams v. Estate of Williams, 952 So. 2d 950 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 951 So. 2d 563, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 522 (Miss. 2007).

Architect sought to appeal a decision from the Mississippi State Board of Architecture that found that the architect had unlawfully engaged in the practice of architecture in Mississippi; the chancery court improperly dismissed the appeal because the time for appeal expired on a Saturday, and when the notice and bond were filed the following Monday, the appeal was timely; Miss. R. Civ. P. 6 was identical to Miss. R. App. P. 26(a) in all respects. Broady v. Miss. State Bd. of Architecture, 936 So. 2d 441 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Although defendant argued that the trial court erred in dismissing his appeal because it was dismissed by means of a procedure for dismissal of state civil, not criminal cases, and the appellate court initially agreed that Miss. R. Civ. P. 5 and 41 applied to civil and not criminal cases; an appeal was not perfected until a written notice of appeal and a cost bond were filed within 30 days of the judgment appealed, such that both a cost and appearance bond were required in appeals from municipal courts, and no Mississippi case permitted the filing of the required bonds past the 30-day appeal time. Riley v. Town of Lambert, 856 So. 2d 721 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Correct standard for awarding sanctions for a vexatiously overbroad subpoena is that under M.R.C.P. Rule 45, not Rules 26 or 37. SLM v. Clinton Pub. Sch. Dist., 677 So. 2d 737 (Miss. 1996).

Insofar as they may be applicable, procedures contemplated by this rule are available to either party in a bar disciplinary matter for the taking of depositions of parties or witnesses. Mississippi State Bar v. Attorney L., 511 So. 2d 119 (Miss. 1987).

Disclosure of witnesses.

Landowner did not designate any experts during the discovery phase of the matter and did not indicate his desire to call an expert witness prior to trial, as he was required to do under Miss. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(A)(i). Had the landowner wished to preserve that issue for appeal, he was required to make a proffer of the witness's proposed testimony pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 103(a)(2), and because the landowner neglected to make a proffer of the proposed expert testimony, the issue was not properly preserved for the appellate court's review. Pittman v. Dykes Timber Co., 18 So. 3d 923 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Where a driver sued a utility company for negligence after the driver drove into some utility poles located in a truck parked on the side of a highway, the trial court did not err by allowing the utility company to present a witness, although the witness was not revealed during discovery, since that witness was not discovered until after the trial began. Myles v. Entergy Miss., Inc., 828 So. 2d 861 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

The requirements of Miss. R. Civ. P. 26(b) to disclose the name and testimony of an expert witness did not apply to an attorney testifying on behalf of a party who was not qualified as an expert. Estate of Baxter v. Shaw Assocs., 797 So. 2d 396 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Bar disciplinary tribunal erred in allowing testimony of witness who had not been previously disclosed pursuant to attorney's discovery requests. Emil v. Mississippi Bar, 690 So. 2d 301 (Miss. 1997).

Discoverable matters.

Granting of a directed verdict in favor of a physician provider, a physician, and a medical center, in a claim for medical malpractice was appropriate pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(1) because, if the patient's counsel had disclosed the medical articles in question to defendants shortly after gathering them in May 2005, the supplementation might have been seasonable. However, disclosure only six days prior to trial provided insufficient time for defendants' counsel to have adequately prepared a rebuttal. Hartel v. Pruett, 998 So. 2d 979 (Miss. 2008).

Trial court in divorce case was ordered on remand to rule as to each of 29 categories of financial information, granting the wife access to those documents revealing financial information (including any corporate documents relating to distribution or salary) that would positively or negatively affect her agreed entitlement to the husband's various forms of income. West v. West, 891 So. 2d 203 (Miss. 2004).

Court in action for fraud and negligence in connection with pre-sale residential termite inspection erred in failing to compel answer to interrogatory asking defendant to identify every person for whom it had performed a pre-sale termite inspection in the past five years, since evidence of similar occurrences was relevant and admissible to show absence of mistake or accident, and plan or intent. Dawkins v. Redd Pest Control Co., 607 So. 2d 1232 (Miss. 1992).

Discovery of statements.

Trial court did not err in requiring defendant to produce, at trial, the recorded statement of a non-party witness, where plaintiff had not sought statement by pretrial discovery or subpoena. Seaboard Sys. R.R. v. Cantrell, 520 So. 2d 479 (Miss. 1987).

Discovery violations.

Finding against the company in the driver's action for damages was improper where, whether or not the driver's counsel actually intended to obtain unfair advantage over the company by designating an expert at such a late date, the untimely designation, belated submission of Miss. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4) interrogatory responses, last-minute deposition, and the addition of a third theory of liability as to the company weeks after the initial designation, had the effect of working a severe prejudice on the company. Int'l Paper Co. v. Townsend, — So. 2d —, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 108 (Miss. Ct. App. Feb. 7, 2006), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 961 So. 2d 741, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 192 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Order by a trial court that granted the individuals' motion to compel a doctor to respond to a set of interrogatories and request for admissions was reversed; the state supreme court held that the trial court abused its discretion in granting the order as the discovery violated Miss. R. Civ. P.26(d) becasue it was unduly burdensome, and oppressive as many were confusing, and therefore, ambiguous. Haley v. Harbin, 933 So. 2d 261 (Miss. 2005).

Chancellor abused his discretion in refusing to require disclosure of the underlying business documents with respect to the loan on the divorcing parties' property; simply ruling that the wife could get all the financial information she needed by way of deposition did not satisfy her discovery requests — in contentious proceedings involving complex finances of such great magnitude, it is not sufficient to simply tell one party to rely on the self-interested assertions of their opponent and his witnesses — doing so eviscerates the aggrieved party of the ability to make a substantive showing of its case. West v. West, 891 So. 2d 203 (Miss. 2004).

Trial judge did not abuse his discretion in refusing to allow evidence that was not disclosed, pursuant to a discovery request, regarding a doctor who treated the accident victim. However, the victim was not prejudiced by the exclusion as the jury nonetheless got the information the victim wished to convey through the doctor's report, the jurors' viewing of the victim's scar and determining for themselves the extent of permanent disfigurement. Haggerty v. Foster, 838 So. 2d 948 (Miss. 2002).

Chancery court was within its authority in excluding testimony of defendant's expert witness, where defendant failed to disclose expert's name in response to interrogatories and failed to supplement its answers before trial. Simmons v. Bank of Mississippi, 593 So. 2d 40 (Miss. 1992).

Expert testimony.

Where the patient designated a doctor as her expert witness in a medical malpractice case, the designation failed to state his opinion, the facts on which he based his opinion, or a summary of the grounds supporting his opinion; the patient's supplemental designation was filed three weeks after the deadline. The trial court did not err by striking the expert, because the designation did not comply with Miss. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(A)(i). Moore v. Delta Reg'l Med. Ctr., 23 So. 3d 541 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), review denied by 22 So. 3d 1193, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 608 (Miss. 2009).

Where an employee sued the railroad for injuries sustained while mounting a moving locomotive, the trial court did not err by allowing an expert to testify regarding reasons why the major railroads were amending their safety rules and allowing the expert to refer to statistical information; the subject matter contained in the expert report included the subject matter he testified to at trial, and there was no discovery violation. Canadian Nat'l/Ill. Cent. R.R. v. Hall, 953 So. 2d 1084 (Miss. 2007).

Appellate court's reasoning in affirming summary judgment for the physician stemmed not from the fact that the patient failed to file his expert's designation one week late. The appellate court affirmed because the patient failed to respond to the physician's motion with an affidavit, submitted by an expert, that established the standard of acceptable professional practice, that the physician deviated from that standard, that such deviation was the proximate cause of the patient's injuries, and that the patient suffered damages as a result; the letter submitted by the patient's expert, even if had been in proper affidavit form, was merely a broad statement of general allegations and did not announce the applicable standard of care. Potter v. Hopper, 907 So. 2d 376 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari dismissed by 910 So. 2d 574, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 455 (Miss. 2005).

Accident reconstructionist's testimony and calculations relied on distances and speeds that were reported to him and, at trial, when the reports of speed and distance changed, said expert recalculated his opinion using the same methods and formulas that were admitted into evidence. The subject matter or substance of the expert's testimony did not change and his testimony was not improperly admitted pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 26 (b)(4)(A)(i). McKenzie v. Supervalu, Inc., 883 So. 2d 1188 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Though plaintiff was tardy in supplementing its discovery responses to provide defendant with its expert's data compilations and measurements, since defendant's ability to deal with this data at trial was not impaired, the trial court's denial of defendant's motion for a continuance was not an abuse of discretion. Choctaw Maid Farms, Inc. v. Hailey, — So. 2d —, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 302 (Miss. Oct. 31, 2001), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 822 So. 2d 911, 2002 Miss. LEXIS 181 (Miss. 2002).

The plaintiff disclosed the name and expected testimony of an expert witness in her responses to the defendant's interrogatories and, therefore, the expert's testimony as to the permanency of the plaintiff's injuries was properly introduced. Ford v. Johnson, 750 So. 2d 546 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

In a false arrest action, the court improperly allowed a physician to give expert testimony, where he was not listed as an expert witness pursuant to the rule, but he stated that the arrest of the plaintiff exacerbated her pre-existing depression. Foster v. Noel, 715 So. 2d 174 (Miss. 1998).

Trial court did not err in excluding testimony of expert witness hired two weeks before trial, where it was not until the day before trial that the expert produced a preliminary report based on his research, and a final report was not delivered until three days after the trial had begun. Broadhead v. Bonita Lakes Mall, Ltd. Partnership, 702 So. 2d 92 (Miss. 1997).

Testimony of plaintiff's expert witness did not go beyond scope of her supplemental interrogatory answers; language in interrogatory and that used at trial were not vastly different, and if interrogatories were read as a whole, defendant had sufficient notice of what expert's testimony would entail. Southwest Miss. Regional Medical Ctr. v. Lawrence, 684 So. 2d 1257 (Miss. 1996).

Where trial court limited scope of expert witness depositions by prohibiting inquiry into bias, interest, or prejudice of any of the experts, this precluded plaintiffs from discovering potentially valuable information, but did not amount to reversible error. McCarty v. Kellum, 667 So. 2d 1277 (Miss. 1995).

Absent showing of exceptional circumstances, deposition of an expert retained by a party but not expected to testify is impermissible. GMC v. Jackson, 636 So. 2d 310 (Miss. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 928, 115 S. Ct. 317, 130 L. Ed. 2d 279 (1994).

Testimony of attorney as to what his examination of local land records reflected was not the type of expert testimony subject to an interrogatory under subdivision (b)(4)(A)(i) of this rule. R & S Dev., Inc. v. Wilson, 534 So. 2d 1008 (Miss. 1988).

Trial court did not err in applying sanctions and disallowing testimony and appraisal of expert not disclosed until day prior to trial. Varner v. Patrick, 523 So. 2d 319 (Miss. 1988).

Trial court was not required to exclude testimony of defendants' expert, where plaintiff did not request an order compelling discovery when defendants gave what plaintiff deemed to be unsatisfactory responses to its expert witness interrogatory. State Highway Comm'n v. Havard, 508 So. 2d 1099 (Miss. 1987).

Trial judge did not err in admitting testimony of defendants' expert; where he was identified in interrogatory responses as an expert "in the field of mechanical operation of locomotive engines and trains," his testimony on operation of train's emergency brakes was not error. Slay v. Illinois Cent. G.R.R., 511 So. 2d 875 (Miss. 1987).

Circuit court erred in allowing expert to testify for defendant in negligence action; expert's name had not been disclosed in answers to plaintiff's interrogatories, and defendant's claim that expert was a "rebuttal witness" was rejected. Harris v. General Host Corp., 503 So. 2d 795 (Miss. 1986).

Expert witnesses.

Emergency physician and nurse practitioner did not give impermissible expert testimony, and the February 2007 supplemental response to "Interrogatory No. 5" was not a discovery violation in regard to Miss. R. Civ. P. 26; both witnesses were identified and the employer was given reasonable notice as to the nurse practitioner's treatment of the driver. APAC Miss., Inc. v. Johnson, 15 So. 3d 465 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Summary judgment was properly granted in a medical malpractice suit, a patient's expert witness affidavit to support her claim was untimely filed nine days following the summary judgment hearing; discovery responses were to be supplemented seasonably pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 26(f). Dotson v. Jackson, 8 So. 3d 230 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 12 So. 3d 531, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 212 (Miss. 2009).

Under Miss. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(A)(i), the plaintiff could call experts only to rebut opinions from defendants' expert not disclosed in discovery, and not reasonably anticipated; if the plaintiff wished to counter expected testimony from defendants' experts, she had fair opportunity to obtain experts of her own and properly disclose her expert's opinions. Banks v. Hill, 978 So. 2d 663 (Miss. 2008).

In a personal injury case, defendant's expert witness disclosure was proper because the expert witness designation clearly indicated that defendant's expert would testify that "the sole cause of the accident was plaintiff's following too closely and failing to keep her vehicle under control by not braking and/or steering in such a manner to maintain control of her vehicle"; It followed reasonably from that summary of the expert's opinion that the expert might testify about the speeds, distances, and times involved in the accident. Walker v. Gann, 955 So. 2d 920 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Miss. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4) mandated certain disclosures concerning expert witnesses, and it was necessary that litigants understand that there was an obligation to timely comply with the orders of trial court; the daughter wholly failed in her duty to designate a medical expert, a crucial component of her cause of action, and summary judgment was appropriately entered. Brooks v. Roberts, 882 So. 2d 229 (Miss. 2004).

Heirs failed to show excusable neglect for not filing their designation of experts in a timely manner; their motion for extension of time to designate expert witnesses was therefor denied. Bowie v. Montfort Jones Mem'l Hosp., 861 So. 2d 1037 (Miss. 2003).

Where a medical malpractice defendant's interrogatory response negligently identified an expert as a urologist rather than an expert in infectious diseases, but adequately described the proposed substance of the testimony, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing the testimony, or in denying the patient's surviving relatives' motions for directed verdict, judgment notwithstanding the verdict, and a new trial. Buskirk v. Elliott, 856 So. 2d 255 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by not permitting a grief therapist to testify because the plaintiffs failed to adequately respond to the defendant's discovery requests concerning expert testimony. Palmer v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 905 So. 2d 564 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, remanded, 904 So. 2d 1077 (Miss. 2005).

In a personal injury action, the defendant should not have been unfairly surprised when the plaintiff's expert witness stated a specific level of physical impairment of the plaintiff because (1) the plaintiff identified the witness as an expert witness who would testify as to the plaintiff's injuries, treatment, and causation, and (2) the expert was also expected to testify that the plaintiff had a total disability from his previous employment. Peterson v. Ladner, 785 So. 2d 290 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

This rule does not require that an expert be restricted to testify only to the literal words from his or her opinion and a summary of the related grounds; the very use of the words "substance" and "summary" show that the rule does not require an expert to state solely the words of his or her compiled reports, and such a view would place form over substance. Holladay v. Holladay, 776 So. 2d 662 (Miss. 2000).

In an action against a pharmaceutical company and a physician arising from a massive stroke suffered by the plaintiff after taking a medication manufactured by the pharmaceutical company, an expert witness was properly allowed to testify on behalf of the pharmaceutical company because the expert had been designated as an expert witness by the physician and a supplemental discovery response by the pharmaceutical company stated that it reserved the right to call in its case-in-chief any treating physician, any expert witness listed by the plaintiffs and any expert witness listed by any co-defendant, even if such co-defendant was not a party at the time of trial; although the supplemental response was evasive or incomplete, the plaintiff failed to meet her burden to seek relief from the court and, instead, waited until trial to object to the presentation of the expert witness. Warren v. Sandoz Pharms. Corp., 783 So. 2d 735 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

The trial judge did not abuse his discretion by allowing the defendant's counsel to elicit opinions from a physician since (1) the plaintiffs' counsel participated in deposing the physician prior to trial and, thus, the plaintiffs could hardly cry "ambush" when the trial judge allowed the physician to express his "expert opinions," and (2) the plaintiffs had indicated during discovery that they intended to call the physician as their "fact" witness. Burnham v. Stevens, 734 So. 2d 256 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

In finding the plaintiff's initial answer of "No decision has been made concerning any experts which may be relied upon. This response will be supplemented at the appropriate time," to be no answer at all, the trial judge abused his discretion; the plaintiff's initial answer was appropriate when given and was seasonably supplemented to allow the defendant enough time to prepare before trial. Robert v. Colson, 729 So. 2d 1243 (Miss. 1999).

Filing with court.

Letters between the mother's and the father's attorneys indicated the dates on which the subpoena and notice thereof were served, the subpoena on a Friday, and the notice to the mother's attorney on the following Monday. Those letters did show that the father's attorney had failed to serve notice of the subpoena immediately under Miss. R. Civ. P. 45, but the father's attorney's failure to follow correct procedure did not rise to the level of abuse of process; the trial court properly granted summary judgment in favor of the father and his attorney as to the abuse of process claim. Ayles v. Allen, 907 So. 2d 300 (Miss. 2005).

No evidence existed on when the student actually mailed the envelope, so it was possible that the envelope was deposited in a mailbox on the 29th, but not postmarked until the 30th; the postmark date did not determine the date of service, and being one day late in service of discovery responses could not be deemed a sufficient violation of the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure to warrant dismissal with prejudice. Harvey v. Stone County Sch. Dist., 862 So. 2d 545 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Litigation materials.

In determining whether investigative materials prepared by insurance claims adjusters are work-product prepared in anticipation of litigation, court should look to the facts of each case, and should consider the nature of the documents, the nature of the litigation and investigation, the relationship between the parties, and any other fact peculiar to the case. Haynes v. Anderson, 597 So. 2d 615 (Miss. 1992).

Burden rests on the party resisting discovery to show that the material sought was prepared in anticipation of litigation. Haynes v. Anderson, 597 So. 2d 615 (Miss. 1992).

Trial court did not err in declining to require railroad to produce notes and drawings of its investigator regarding accident at crossing; decedent's representative failed to allow at least ten days for documents to be produced, and she also had same opportunity as railroad to observe crossing in an unaltered state subsequent to accident. Mitcham v. Illinois Cent. G.R.R., 515 So. 2d 852 (Miss. 1987).

Matters exempt from discovery.

Legal research memo prepared for the defendant by an attorney was research undertaken to respond to a client's request; it fell within the purview of the attorney-client privilege and was thus not discoverable. Hewes v. Langston, 848 So. 2d 800 (Miss. 2003).

Letters, draft affidavits, and other correspondence circulated among counsel on matters of common interest. were protected under the "common interest" prong of the attorney-client privilege as well as under the work product doctrine. Hewes v. Langston, 848 So. 2d 800 (Miss. 2003).

Protective orders.

Where the Harrison County Development Commission (HCDC), a political subdivision of the State of Mississippi, willfully and knowingly denied a county citizen access to certain records related to a planned development (in part, by unilaterally requiring fees that were not part of its policy), and which were not exempt under the Mississippi Public Records Act of 1983, Miss. Code Ann. § 25-61-1 to Miss. Code Ann. § 25-61-17, it was properly ordered to produce those records not specifically exempt, and pay a civil penalty, as well as attorney's fees. Pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 25-61-9(2), HCDC should have separated information on its director's salary and leave time (subject to disclosure), from his personnel file and disclosed any non exempt material; further, the information on its business partners or prospects were not confidential and were subject to disclosure, and therefore, it was not entitled to a protective order per Miss. R. Civ. P. 26(d). Harrison County Dev. Comm'n v. Kinney, 920 So. 2d 497 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Circuit court violated its protective responsibility by allowing asexual assault victim premature inspection of allegedly privileged documents produced by the perpetrator's employer because counsel for the victim was in possession of the documents hours before the employer was even aware that they had been released and before it was given a chance to appeal the court's decision. Simply issuing a protective order in conjunction with the order compelling production was not enough to protect the employer's rights. McKinley v. Lamar Bank, — So. 2d —, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 611 (Miss. Sept. 22, 2005), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 919 So. 2d 918, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 811 (Miss. 2005).

Because a service provider failed to base its allegations of fraud on any specific facts, a chancery court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to allow the provider access to the highly confidential pricing models of its primary competitor under Miss. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(7) and Miss. Code Ann. § 75-26-3(d). Elec. Data Sys. Corp. v. Miss. Div. of Medicaid, 853 So. 2d 1192 (Miss. 2003).

Deponent in a deposition taken in Mississippi for use in an out-of-state case was entitled to a protective order concerning sensitive matters as to which a protective order had been obtained in the out-of-state court. Barnes v. A Confidential Party, 628 So. 2d 283 (Miss. 1993).

Information sought in wrongful death action against tobacco company constituted a trade secret deserving of protective order under subdivision (d)(7) of this rule; contents of protective order were primary responsibility of circuit court, which did not abuse its discretion. American Tobacco Co. v. Evans, 508 So. 2d 1057 (Miss. 1987).

Sanctions.

Chancery court did not abuse its discretion in excluding the testimony of an occurrence witness, who was private investigator hired to investigate a husband's gambling issues, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(A)(i), because he was not identified by a wife until three days before the divorce proceeding. Irby v. Estate of Irby, 7 So. 3d 223 (Miss. 2009).

While the trial court's frustration with the discovery process was understandable, the ordering of a new trial after a unanimous jury verdict for a vehicle manufacturer, based on a perceived violation of court orders which were never placed on record, was an abuse of discretion; the manufacturer violated a single order concerning the time frame for the submission of documents which it submitted two days late. Ford Motor Co. v. Tennin, 960 So. 2d 379 (Miss. 2007).

When an injured employee, who brought suit against her employer and a related casino alleging bad faith in connection to her workers' compensation claim, failed to comply with a trial court's discovery deadline, the trial court properly struck the employee's expert's affidavit. Buchanan v. Ameristar Casino Vicksburg, Inc., 957 So. 2d 969 (Miss. 2007).

Although the plaintiff failed to seasonably supplement her discovery responses so as to divulge the names of her experts in a medical malpractice action, the penalty should have been something less drastic than striking her supplemented responses and the affidavit of one of those experts where (1) the plaintiff pursued her case not perfectly but fairly diligently from filing until dismissal, (2) prior to the hearings on the motion to dismiss, she supplemented in detail and presented possible arguable questions of fact of medical negligence, and (3) no trial date had been set at the time of supplementation. Thompson v. Patino, 784 So. 2d 220 (Miss. 2001).

The exclusion of the plaintiff's supplementation of her discovery responses identifying her expert witnesses and the striking of the affidavit of one of her experts were inappropriate sanctions in a medical malpractice action, notwithstanding the plaintiff's neglect, where a trial date had not been set at the time of dismissal. Thompson v. Patino, — So. 2d —, 2000 Miss. LEXIS 91 (Miss. Apr. 20, 2000), substituted opinion at 784 So. 2d 220, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 127 (Miss. 2001).

Where there was no violation of discovery rules or pre-trial court order, circuit judge was without authority to impose sanctions against plaintiff for scheduling deposition for a date two days before Pre-Trial Conference, after plaintiff had requested that Pre-Trial Conference be set. Jones v. Wiese, 652 So. 2d 175 (Miss. 1995).

Scope of discovery.

Attorney's memorandum to the office file and other attorneys, noting conversations with third parties, is protected by the work product doctrine; such memos receive even greater protection because they necessarily reveal the attorney's mental impressions, and they may be obtained through discovery only in rare situations and upon a far stronger showing than for other work product documents. Hewes v. Langston, 853 So. 2d 1237 (Miss. 2003).

Miss. R. Civ. P. 26(b), as amended and made effective May 29, 2003, adds subsection (5) to make specific provision for discovery of data and information existing in electronic and magnetic form. Recognizing that special problems may exist in the retrieval of such data, the rule limits the duty of production of electronic and magnetic data to that which is reasonably available to the responding party in its ordinary course of business; further, if extraordinary steps are required to retrieve and produce the information, a court may require the requesting party to pay the expense of those steps, in addition to costs that may be assessed under Rule 26(d)(9); finally, the production of data compilations that are subject to production under Miss. R. Civ. P. 34 is also subject to the limitations of Rule 26(b)(5). In re Miss. Rules of Civ. Procedure, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 262 (Miss. May 29, 2003).

Where attorney responded to interrogatories without revealing incident relevant to causation of injury in suit against his client, his actions went far beyond what could be considered a discovery dispute, and amounted to conduct involving dishonesty, deceit, misrepresentation, obstructing another party's access to evidence, conduct prejudicial to administration of justice, and both failure to disclose a material fact and making a false statement of material fact to a tribunal. Mississippi Bar v. Land, 653 So. 2d 899 (Miss. 1994).

Supplementation of responses.

According to the testimony, the pedestrian's medical bills were incurred due to the injury at issue; under Miss. Code Ann. § 41-9-119, the trial court committed reversible error by refusing to allow them to be submitted to the jury; and a new trial was ordered, with directions that the parties be allowed to supplement their discovery responses with respect to expert witnesses. Estate of Bolden v. Williams, 17 So. 3d 1069 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court erred in granting defendants summary judgment on the family's wrongful death action as it erroneously equated a discovery deadline with a deadline for supplementation of an expert opinion; Miss. R. Civ. P. 26(f)(1) required supplements; no trial date had been set and the expert's supplemental affidavit did not change his original opinions. Young v. Meacham, 999 So. 2d 368 (Miss. 2008).

Trial court's judgment in favor of a corporation was affirmed; the corporate executives were not required to supplement their deposition testimony about the coporation's stock going public as the statements were truthful when made and no further questions were asked. Welsh v. Mounger, 883 So. 2d 46 (Miss. 2004).

A supplemental response pertaining to an expert witness was timely, notwithstanding that it was delivered only five days before the resumption of trial after a continuance, where the expert witness was identified by the plaintiff several months before trial, the expert's opinion had been supplemented once before, and the defendant failed to show surprise or unfair prejudice caused by the timeliness of the final supplementation. Holladay v. Holladay, 776 So. 2d 662 (Miss. 2000).

There was no violation of subsection (f) in a divorce proceeding where the wife identified a large credit card debt in her interrogatory responses, but did not supplement her responses to state when and why the debt was incurred; such information did not fall into any of the categories of information for which supplementation is required and the husband sought no further information. Keller v. Keller, 763 So. 2d 902 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Where defense counsel in a medical malpractice action failed to notify plaintiff's counsel of the status of a witness as an expert or of her opinions until a mere seven days before trial, the court erred allowing the witness to testify. Coltharp v. Carnesale, 733 So. 2d 780 (Miss. 1999).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion in striking the plaintiff's supplemental responses to interrogatories as untimely where she requested an extension of discovery 292 days after the deadline and two months after this motion was denied, she finally filed her supplemental responses. Thompson v. Patino, — So. 2d —, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 280 (Miss. Ct. App. May 18, 1999), reversed by, remanded by 2000 Miss. LEXIS 91 (Miss. Apr. 20, 2000).

In an eminent domain proceeding, the court properly refused to allow the untimely submission of a supplemental report only six days before trial, even though the report did not contain radically new information, since the admission of the report would nevertheless have been prejudicial. Blanton v. Board of Suprvs., 720 So. 2d 190 (Miss. 1998).

The defendant could not claim prejudice by an expert's testimony for the plaintiffs on the basis that the plaintiffs did not seasonably supplement its interrogatories with respect to the substance of the expert's opinion where the defendant was afforded the opportunity to depose the expert but chose not to do so. Mississippi Valley Gas Co. v. Estate of Walker, 725 So. 2d 139 (Miss. 1998).

Although defendant failed to adequately supplement his response to interrogatories, there was no reversible error where plaintiff was unable to show any resulting prejudice. Terrain Enters., Inc. v. Mockbee, 654 So. 2d 1122 (Miss. 1995).

Where medical malpractice plaintiffs failed to give adequate responses to discovery so that defendant would understand that an attack on propriety of performing hysterectomy was part of the claim against him, trial court did not err in refusing to grant instruction concerning defendant's alleged deviation from minimum standard of care in performing hysterectomy. West v. Sanders Clinic for Women, 661 So. 2d 714 (Miss. 1995).

Permanent disability was a separate subject matter from causation, and plaintiffs' supplemental answer to expert interrogatory was insufficient to put defendant on notice that extent of disability might be a part of expert's testimony; expert's opinion therefore should have been excluded. T.K. Stanley, Inc. v. Cason, 614 So. 2d 942 (Miss. 1992).

Chancellor did not err in allowing testimony of two witnesses whose names were not supplied to plaintiff in a timely fashion; there was no prejudice since individuals were not expert witnesses, and plaintiff had managed to have an investigator interview one of the witnesses. Eastover Bank for Sav. v. Hall, 587 So. 2d 266 (Miss. 1991).

Trial court erred in excluding testimony of plaintiff's expert as to matters in affidavit, where defendant's counsel admitted she had known that doctor would be plaintiff's expert since the time she had received his affidavit, and she had been in possession of it for three months prior to trial; accordingly, the requirement of seasonable supplementation of responses was met. Hudson v. Parvin, 582 So. 2d 403 (Miss. 1991).

Trial court did not err in allowing testimony of expert witness first disclosed in supplemental interrogatory responses ten calendar days before trial. Motorola Communications & Elecs., Inc. v. Wilkerson, 555 So. 2d 713 (Miss. 1989).

Plaintiff's expert should not have been allowed to testify, where his name was not provided to opposing counsel until four days before trial; moreover, no information was given regarding expert's testimony, which apparently came as a complete surprise to defense counsel, who first learned of plaintiff's broken neck and permanent damage at the same time as the jury. Jones v. Hatchett, 504 So. 2d 198 (Miss. 1987).

Work product.

DVD recording was not protected by work product because the supreme court was unpersuaded that the DVD recording of the subsequent confrontation represented mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories of an attorney or other representative of a party concerning the litigation, Miss. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3). Furthermore, the "work-product" doctrine pertained to pretrial discovery, not admissibility, such that the circuit court abused its discretion in predicating its admissibility determination thereon. Baker Donelson Bearman Caldwell & Berkowitz, P.C. v. Seay, 42 So. 3d 474 (Miss. 2010).

In a civil suit against a church administration regarding allegations of sexual abuse by a priest, the church administration was required to review minutes of its investigative committee and include in a privilege log all portions it claimed were protected by the work-product privilege of Miss. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3). Roman Catholic Diocese v. Morrison, 905 So. 2d 1213 (Miss. 2005).

Attorney's memorandum to the office file and other attorneys noting a conversation with a third party was protected by the work product doctrine, and the crime-fraud exception did not apply, as there was no proof of either a crime or fraud. Hewes v. Langston, 848 So. 2d 800 (Miss. 2003).

Workers' compensation proceedings.

This rule does not apply to proceedings before the Workers' Compensation Commission. Mid-Delta Home Health, Inc. v. Robertson, 749 So. 2d 379 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. Discovery of Deleted Email and Other Deleted Electronic Records. 27 A.L.R.6th 565.

Crime-fraud exception to work product privilege in Federal courts. 178 A.L.R. Fed. 87.

Law Reviews — Baumer, Eminent Domain: Should an Expert's Appraisal Report be Subject to Pretrial Discovery?, 67 Miss. L.J. 801, Spring, 1998.

Practice References. Bender's Forms of Discovery (Matthew Bender).

Rule 27. Depositions before action or pending appeal.

(a) Before action.

(1) Petition. A person who desires to perpetuate his own testimony or that of another person regarding any matter that may be cognizable in any court of this state may file a verified petition in the circuit or chancery court in the county of the residence of any expected adverse party. The petition shall be entitled in the name of the petitioner and shall show: (1) that the petitioner expects to be a party to an action cognizable in a court of this state but is presently unable to bring it or cause it to be brought, (2) the subject matter of the expected action and his interest therein, (3) the facts which he desires to establish by the proposed testimony and his reasons for desiring to perpetuate it, (4) the names or a description of the persons he expects will be adverse parties and their addresses so far as known, and (5) the names and addresses of the persons to be examined and the substance of the testimony which he expects to elicit from each, and shall ask for an order authorizing the petitioner to take the depositions of the persons to be examined named in the petition, for the purpose of perpetuating their testimony.

(2) Notice and service. The petitioner shall thereafter serve a notice upon each person named in the petition as an expected adverse party, stating that the petitioner will apply to the court, at a time and place named therein, for the order described in the petition. At least twenty days before the date of hearing the notice shall be served in the same manner for service of summons; but if such service cannot with due diligence be made upon any expected adverse party named in the petition, the court may make such order as is just for service by publication or otherwise, and shall appoint, for persons not served in the manner provided by law, an attorney who shall represent them, and, in case they are not otherwise represented, shall cross-examine the deponent.

(3) Order and examination. If the court is satisfied that the perpetuation of the testimony may prevent a failure or delay of justice, it shall make an order designating or describing the persons whose depositions may be taken and specifying the subject matter of the examination and whether the depositions shall be taken upon oral examination or written interrogatories. The depositions may then be taken in accordance with these rules; and the court may make orders of the character provided for by Rule 34. For the purpose of applying these rules to depositions for perpetuating testimony, each reference therein to the court in which the action is pending shall be deemed to refer to the court in which the petition for such deposition was filed.

(4) Use of deposition. If a deposition to perpetuate testimony is taken under these rules, it may be used in any action involving the same subject matter subsequently brought in a circuit, chancery or county court in accordance with Rule 32(a).

(b) Pending appeal. If an appeal has been taken from a judgment of a court, or before the taking of an appeal if the time therefor has not expired, the court in which the judgment was rendered may allow the taking of the depositions of witnesses to perpetuate their testimony for use in the event of further proceedings in the court. In such case the party who desires to perpetuate the testimony may make a motion in the court for leave to take the depositions, upon the same notice and service thereof as if the action were pending in the court. The motion shall show (1) the names and addresses of persons to be examined and the substance of the testimony which he expects to elicit from each; (2) the reasons for perpetuating their testimony. If the court finds that the perpetuation of the testimony is proper to avoid a failure or delay of justice, it may make an order allowing the depositions to be taken and may make orders of the character provided for by Rule 34, and thereupon the depositions may be taken and used in the same manner and under the same conditions as are prescribed in these rules for depositions taken in actions pending in the court.

(c) Perpetuation by action. This rule does not limit the power of a court to entertain an action to perpetuate testimony.

COMMENT

Miss. Code Ann. § 13-1-243 (1972) has been included as subdivision (d) of M.R.C.P. 27; otherwise, Rule 27 is identical to Miss. Code Ann. § 13-1-227 (1972).

See Pyle, Ott, Rumfelt, Mississippi Rules of Discovery, 46 Miss.L.J. 681, 699-709 (1975).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Applicability.
Procedure.

Applicability.

Insofar as they may be applicable, procedures contemplated by this rule are available to either party in a bar disciplinary matter for the taking of depositions of parties or witnesses. Mississippi State Bar v. Attorney L., 511 So. 2d 119 (Miss. 1987).

Procedure.

In a case in which plaintiff filed a petition to perpetuate testimony in a circuit court, the matter was then removed to federal court, wherein plaintiff sought dismissal, and plaintiff filed a complaint in the circuit court raising the same claims against the same parties before the federal court had dismissed the matter, the circuit court erred in dismissing plaintiff's post-dismissal complaint because the record supported a finding that the federal court's dismissal was based upon a "matter of form" not affecting the merits—namely, a lack of jurisdiction due to the absence of a complaint—as its order stated that no "civil action" yet existed. Plaintiff had inadvertently found himself in a procedural quagmire, but he made a good-faith effort to preserve his claim, at no time envincing an intent to abandon his claim, and, accordingly, application of the savings statute, Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-69, to his post-dismissal complaint was appropriate and consistent with the purposes of the statute because he filed the complaint within one year of the federal court's dismissal. Crawford v. Morris Transp., Inc., 990 So. 2d 162 (Miss. 2008).

Rule 28. Persons before whom depositions may be taken.

(a) Within the united states. Within the United States or within a territory or insular possession subject to the dominion of the United States, depositions shall be initiated by an oath or affirmation administered to the deponent by an officer authorized to administer oaths by the laws of the United States or of the place where the examination is held, or by a person specially appointed by the court in which the action is pending.

(b) In foreign countries. In a foreign country, depositions may be taken: (1) on notice before a person authorized to administer oaths in the place in which the examination is held, either by the law thereof or by the law of the United States, or (2) before a person commissioned by the court, and a person so commissioned shall have the power by virtue of his commission to administer any necessary oath and take testimony, or (3) pursuant to a letter rogatory. A commission or a letter rogatory shall be issued on application and notice and on terms that are just and appropriate. It is not requisite to the issuance of a commission or a letter rogatory that the taking of the deposition in any other manner is impracticable or inconvenient; and both a commission and a letter rogatory may be issued in proper cases. A notice or commission may designate the person before whom the deposition is to be taken either by name or descriptive title. A letter rogatory may be addressed To the Appropriate Authority in (here name the country). Evidence obtained in response to a letter rogatory need not be excluded merely for the reason that it is not a verbatim transcript or that the testimony was not taken under oath or for any similar departure from the requirements for depositions taken within the United States under these rules.

(c) Disqualification for interest. No deposition shall be taken before a person who is a relative or employee or attorney or counsel of any of the parties, or is a relative or employee of such attorney or counsel, or is financially interested in the action.

COMMENT

Except for important modifications in M.R.C.P. 28(a), this rule is identical to Miss. Code Ann. § 13-1-228 (1972); the modifications in 28(a) are necessitated by new provisions in M.R.C.P. 30 which provide for the taking of testimony by telephone and for recording testimony by other than stenographic methods. M.R.C.P. 28(a) dispenses with the requirement that an officer authorized to administer oaths be present during an entire deposition, it is sufficient under the rule if the deposition is begun with the administration of the oath or affirmation.

Even in those cases where the deposition is taken by a stenographer, if the administrator of the oath or affirmation is different from the stenographer, there is no reason for the former to remain in attendance during the taking of the deposition. The rule retains the power of the court to appoint specially a person capable of administering the oath which initiates the deposition. See, Special Committee for the Study of Discovery Abuse, Section of Litigation, A.B.A., Report, at 7, 8 (1977); also, Pyle, Ott, Rumfelt, Mississippi Rules of Discovery, 46 Miss L.J. 681, 709-14 (1975).

Rule 29. Stipulations regarding discovery procedure.

Unless the court orders otherwise, the parties may by written stipulation (1) provide that depositions may be taken before any person, at any time or place, upon any notice, and in any manner and when so taken may be used like other depositions, and (2) modify the procedures provided by these rules for other methods of discovery, except that stipulations extending the time provided in

Rules 33, 34 and 36 for responses to discovery may be made only with the approval of the court.

COMMENT

Rule 29 is identical to Miss. Code Ann. § 13-1-229 (1972). See Pyle, Ott, Rumfelt, Mississippi Rules of Discovery, 46 Miss.L.J. 681, 714-15 (1975).

Rule 30. Depositions upon oral examination.

(a) When depositions may be taken. After commencement of the action, any party may take the testimony of any person, including a party, by deposition upon oral examination. Leave of court, granted with or without notice, must be obtained only if the plaintiff seeks to take a deposition prior to the expiration of thirty days after service of the summons upon any defendant, except that leave is not required (1) if a defendant has served a notice of taking deposition or otherwise sought discovery, or (2) if special notice is given under subsection (b)(2) of this rule. The attendance of witnesses may be compelled by subpoena. The deposition of a person confined in prison may be taken only by leave of court on such terms as the court prescribes.

(b) Notice of examination: general requirements; special notice; non-stenographic recording; production of documents and things; deposition of organization.

(1) A party desiring to take the deposition of any person upon oral examination shall give reasonable notice in writing to every other party to the action. The notice shall state the time and place for taking the deposition and the name and address of each person to be examined, if known, and, if the name is not known, a general description sufficient to identify him or the particular class or group to which he belongs. If a subpoena duces tecum is to be served on the person to be examined, the designation of the materials to be produced as set forth in the subpoena shall be attached to or included in the notice. A notice may provide for the taking of testimony by telephone. If necessary, however, to assure a full right of examination of any deponent, the court in which the action is pending may, on motion of any party, require that the deposition be taken in the presence of the deponent.

(2) Leave of court is not required for the taking of a deposition by plaintiff if the notice: (A) states that the person to be examined is about to go out of the state and will be unavailable for examination unless his deposition is taken before expiration of the thirty-day period, and (B) sets forth facts to support the statement. The plaintiff's attorney shall sign the notice, and his signature constitutes a certification by him that to the best of his knowledge, information, and belief the statement and supporting facts are true.

If a party shows that when he was served with notice under this subsection (b)(2) he was unable through the exercise of diligence to obtain counsel to represent him at the taking of the deposition, the deposition may not be used against him.

(3) The court may for cause shown enlarge or shorten the time for taking the deposition.

(4) The notice of deposition required under (1) of this subsection (b) may provide that the testimony be recorded by other than stenographic means, in which event the notice shall designate the manner of recording and preserving the deposition. A court may require that the deposition be taken by stenographic means if necessary to assure that the recording be accurate. A motion by a party for such an order shall be addressed to the court in which the action in pending; a motion by a witness for such an order may be addressed to the court in the district where the deposition is taken.

(5) The notice to a party deponent may be accompanied by a request made in compliance with Rule 34 for the production of documents and tangible things at the taking of the deposition. The procedure of Rule 34 shall apply to the request.

(6) A party may in his notice and in a subpoena name as the deponent a public or private corporation or a partnership or association or governmental agency and describe with reasonable particularity the matters on which examination is requested. In that event, the organization so named shall designate one or more officers, directors, or managing agents, or other persons who consent to testify on its behalf, and may set forth, for each person designated, the matters on which he will testify. A subpoena shall advise a non-party organization of its duty to make such a designation. The persons so designated shall testify as to matters known or reasonably available to the organization. This subsection (b)(6) does not preclude taking a deposition by any other procedure authorized in these rules.

(7) For purposes of this Rule, and Rules 28(a), 37(a)(1), 37(b)(1), and 45(b), a deposition shall be deemed to be taken in the county where the deponent is physically present to answer questions propounded to him.

(c) Examination and cross-examination; record of examination; objections. Examination and cross-examination of witnesses may proceed as permitted at the trial. The testimony of the witness shall be recorded either stenographically or as provided in subsection (b)(4) of this rule. If requested by one of the parties, the testimony shall be transcribed upon the payment of the reasonable charges therefor. All objections made at the time of the examination to the qualifications of the person taking the deposition, or to the manner of taking it, or to the evidence presented, or to the conduct of any party, and any other objection to the proceedings, shall be noted upon the transcription or recording. Evidence objected to shall be taken subject to the objections. In lieu of participating in the oral examination, parties may serve written questions on the party taking the deposition, who shall propound them to the witness and see that the answers thereto are recorded verbatim.

(d) Motion to terminate or limit examination. At any time during the taking of the deposition, on motion of a party or of the deponent and upon a showing that the examination is being conducted in bad faith or in such manner as unreasonably to annoy, embarrass, or oppress the deponent or party, the court in which the action is pending may order the officer conducting the examination to cease forthwith from taking the deposition or may limit the scope and manner of the taking of the deposition as provided in Rule 26(d). If the order made terminates the examination, it shall be resumed thereafter only upon the order of the court in which the action is pending. Upon demand of the objecting party or deponent, the taking of the deposition shall be suspended for the time necessary to make a motion for an order. Rule 37(a)(4) applies to the award of expenses incurred in relation to the motion.

(e) Submission to witness; changes; signing. When the testimony is taken by stenographic means, or is recorded by other than stenographic means as provided in subsection (b)(4) of this rule, and if the transcription or recording thereof is to be used at any proceeding in the action, such transcription or recording shall be submitted to the witness for examination, unless such examination is waived by the witness and by the parties. Any changes in form or substance which the witness desires to make shall be entered upon the transcription or stated in a writing to accompany the recording, together with a statement of the reasons given by the witness for making them. Notice of such changes and reasons shall promptly be served upon all parties by the party taking the deposition. The transcription or recording shall then be affirmed in writing as correct by the witness, unless the parties by stipulation waive the affirmation. If the transcription or recording is not affirmed as correct by the witness within thirty days of its submission to him, the reasons for the refusal shall be stated under penalty of perjury on the transcription or in a writing to accompany the recording by the party desiring to use such transcription or recording. The transcription or recording may then be used fully as though affirmed in writing by the witness, unless on a motion to suppress under Rule 32(d)(4) the court holds that the reasons given for the refusal to affirm require rejection of the deposition in whole or in part.

(f) Certification; exhibits; copies; notice of filing.

(1) When a deposition is stenographically taken, the stenographic reporter shall certify, under penalty of perjury, on the transcript that the witness was sworn in his presence and that the transcript is a true record of the testimony given by the witness. When a deposition is recorded by other than stenographic means as provided in subsection 30(b)(4) of this Rule, and thereafter transcribed, the person transcribing it shall certify, under penalty of perjury, on the transcript that he heard the witness sworn on the recording and that the transcript is a correct writing of the recording. A deposition so certified shall be considered prima facie evidence of the testimony of the witness.

(2) Documents and things produced for inspection during the examination of the witness, shall, upon the request of a party, be marked for identification and annexed to the deposition, and may be inspected and copied by any party. Whenever the person producing materials desires to retain the originals, he may substitute copies of the originals, or afford each party an opportunity to make copies thereof. In the event the original materials are retained by the person producing them, they shall be marked for identification and the person producing them shall afford each party the subsequent opportunity to compare any copy with the original. He shall also be required to retain the original materials for subsequent use in any proceeding in the same action. Any party may move for an order that the original be annexed to and returned with the deposition to the court, pending final disposition of the case.

(3) Upon payment of reasonable charges therefor, the stenographic reporter, or in the case of a deposition taken pursuant to subsection 30(b)(4) of this rule, the party taking the deposition shall furnish a copy of the deposition to any party or to the deponent.

(4) If all or part of the deposition is filed with the court, the party making the filing shall give prompt notice thereof to all other parties.

(g) Failure to attend or to serve subpoena; expenses.

(1) If the party giving the notice of the taking of a deposition fails to attend and proceed therewith and another party attends in person or by attorney pursuant to the notice, the court may order the party giving the notice to pay to such other party the reasonable expenses incurred by him and his attorney in attending, including reasonable attorney's fees.

(2) If the party giving the notice of the taking of a deposition of a witness fails to serve a subpoena upon him and the witness because of such failure does not attend, and if another party attends in person or by attorney because he expects the deposition of that witness to be taken, the court may order the party giving the notice to pay to such other party the reasonable expenses incurred by him and his attorney in attending, including reasonable attorney's fees.

(h) Expenses generally not treated as court costs. No part of the expenses of taking depositions, other than the serving of subpoenas, shall be adjudged, assessed or taxed as court costs. (Amended effective March 1, 1989; July 1, 1997.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective March 1, 1989, Rule 30 was amended to abrogate the requirement that the party taking a deposition out of state pay certain expenses of the other party incident thereto. 536-538 So. 2d XXV (West Miss. Cas. 1989).

Effective July 1, 1997, Rule 30(b)(7) was amended to correct the reference to Rule 45. — So. 2d — (West Miss. Cases).

[Amended effective July 1, 1997.]

COMMENT

M.R.C.P. 30(a), (d), and (g) are identical to Miss. Code Ann. § 13-1-230(a), (d), and (g), respectively. M.R.C.P. 30(b) is modified to provide for the taking of testimony by telephone without court order. It is intended that the word "telephone" embrace any other recognized form of telecommunications between distant points. The recipient of a notice calling for a deposition by telephone may apply to the court for an order requiring the noticing party to appear in the presence of the deponent for the taking of the deposition when physical confrontation is necessary for proper examination, to protect against coaching, or to permit the exchange and reading of documents.

M.R.C.P. 30(b)(4) reverses the statutory predilection against non-stenographic recording of testimony and permits the party noticing a deposition to provide for such without court order; Miss. Code Ann. § 13-1-230(b)(4) (1972) requires a court order for non-stenographic recordings.

Electronic recording is now reliably developed. A blanket requirement for live stenography may often entail unnecessary expense. Moreover, in many instances, the parties simply wish to know what a particular witness will say; there is no need for a transcript for trial. Accordingly, there is no basis for an automatic rule that requires transcription or compels the parties to apply to the court to lift that requirement.

Under this rule, a party or witness aggrieved by the taking of a non-stenographic deposition can simply arrange for transcription at his own expense. In addition, an application may be made by a party to the court in which the action is pending, or by a witness to that court or to the court in which the deposition is to be taken, to compel stenography if there is a basis to believe that accuracy requires it.

M.R.C.P. 30(b)(7) resolves any ambiguity which might otherwise arise in the case of a telephonic deposition and provides that a deposition is taken in the county where the deponent is physically present to answer questions propounded to him. The court in that county is therefore the appropriate court for purposes of orders pursuant to Rules 37(a)(1) and 37(b)(1), and an officer authorized to administer oaths in that county or by the laws of that place may administer the oath to the deponent as provided in Rule 28(a).

The changes in M.R.C.P. 30(c) are required to provide for the more informal methods of taking depositions permitted under M.R.C.P. 30(b). If a party does not desire to disclose the nature of his questions to his adversary, he may put them to the witness by telephone, thereby obviating the need for the sealed envelope technique.

The changes in M.R.C.P. 30(e) are designed to improve the language in the rule and to provide for the authentication of a deposition taken by other than stenographic means as contemplated by M.R.C.P. 30 (b)(4).

The changes in M.R.C.P. 30(g) are required by the less formal manner prescribed by other rule changes for the taking of depositions. The rule also clarifies procedures for the marking, copying, and retention of exhibits. Unless disputed by a participant in the deposition, the court should presume the correctness of the certified transcript; a dispute over the correctness of the transcript is to be treated as a dispute of fact.

The preceding modifications of M.R.C.P. 30 were adapted from the Special Committee for the Study of Discovery Abuse, Section of Litigation, A.B.A., Report, at 9-17 (1977).

[Comment amended effective March 1, 1989; July 1, 1997.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Applicability.
Non-stenographic depositions.
Place of deposition.
Preserving objections.

Applicability.

Insofar as they may be applicable, procedures contemplated by this rule are available to either party in a bar disciplinary matter for the taking of depositions of parties or witnesses. Mississippi State Bar v. Attorney L., 511 So. 2d 119 (Miss. 1987).

Non-stenographic depositions.

Trial courts must allow the use of video depositions at the discretion of the party taking the deposition without any requirement of stipulation by the other party or prior court approval unless a deposition taken by stenographic means is necessary to assure the accuracy of the recording. Robert v. Colson, 729 So. 2d 1243 (Miss. 1999).

Place of deposition.

Party seeking to take deposition has original prerogative of designating place, and if any other party objects, that party has burden of persuasion that designated place would result in undue hardship or expense; such a burden may seldom be carried by mere conclusory allegations, and questions regarding place of taking of deposition are committed to sound discretion of trial court. H & W Transf. & Cartage Serv., Inc. v. Griffin, 511 So. 2d 895 (Miss. 1987).

Preserving objections.

Counsel for plaintiff at deposition properly preserved his objection to alleged hearsay statement, where parties stipulated that substantive objections would be reserved until trial. Moody v. RPM Pizza, Inc., 659 So. 2d 877 (Miss. 1995).

Rule 31. Depositions upon written questions.

(a) Serving questions; notice. After commencement of the action, any party may take the testimony of any person, including a party, by deposition upon written questions. The attendance of witnesses may be compelled by the use of subpoena as provided by law. The deposition of a person confined in prison may be taken only by leave of court on such terms as the court prescribes.

A party desiring to take a deposition upon written questions shall serve them upon every other party with a notice stating (1) the name and address of the person who is to answer them, if known, and if the name is not known, a general description sufficient to identify him or the particular class or group to which he belongs, and (2) the name or descriptive title and address of the officer before whom the deposition is to be taken. A deposition upon written questions may be taken of a public or private corporation or a partnership or association or governmental agency in accordance with Rule 30(b)(6).

Within thirty days after the notice and written questions are served, a party may serve cross questions upon all other parties. Within ten days after being served with cross questions, a party may serve redirect questions upon all other parties. Within ten days after being served with redirect questions, a party may serve recross questions upon all other parties. The court may for cause shown enlarge or shorten the time.

(b) Officer to take responses and prepare record. A copy of the notice and copies of all questions served shall be delivered by the party taking the deposition to the officer designated in the notice, who shall proceed promptly, in the manner provided by Rule 30(c), (e), and (f), to take the testimony of the witness in response to the questions and to prepare, certify, and file or mail the deposition, attaching, thereto the copy of the notice and the questions received by him.

COMMENT

M.R.C.P. 31(a) is identical to Miss. Code Ann. § 13-1-231(a) (1972). However, the rule differs from the statute by deleting all references to filing, as provided by M.R.C.P. 5 and 30. See Pyle, Ott, Rumfelt, Mississippi Rules of Discovery, 46 Miss.L.J. 681, 725-26 (1975); and Special Committee for the Study of Discovery Abuse, Section of Litigation, A.B.A., Report, at 17 (1977).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Applicability.
Illustrative cases.

Applicability.

Insofar as they may be applicable, procedures contemplated by this rule are available to either party in a bar disciplinary matter for the taking of depositions of parties or witnesses. Mississippi State Bar v. Attorney L., 511 So. 2d 119 (Miss. 1987).

Illustrative cases.

Wife failed to object under Miss. R. Civ. P. 31 to the deposition questions or the certification by the deposing officer with reasonable promptness. Because the wife waived any objection to the deposition questions pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 32, the appellate court found no error in the chancellor's admission of the deposition testimony into evidence. McCullough v. McCullough, 52 So. 3d 373 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Rule 32. Use of depositions in court proceedings.

(a) Use of depositions. At the trial or upon the hearing of a motion of an interlocutory proceeding, any part or all of a deposition, so far as admissible under the rules of evidence applied as though the witness were then present and testifying, may be used against any party who was present or represented at the taking of the deposition or who had reasonable notice thereof, in accordance with any of the following provisions:

(1) Any deposition may be used by any party for the purpose of contradicting or impeaching the testimony of deponent as a witness, or for any other purpose permitted by the Mississippi Rules of Evidence.

(2) The deposition of a party or of anyone who at the time of taking the deposition was an officer, director, or managing agent, or a person designated under Rule 30(b)(6) or 31(a) to testify on behalf of a public or private corporation, partnership or association or governmental agency which is a party, may be used by an adverse party for any purpose.

(3) The deposition of a witness, whether or not a party, may be used by any party for any purpose if the court finds: (A) that the witness is dead; or (B) that the witness is at a greater distance than one hundred miles from the place of trial or hearing, or is out of the state, unless it appears that the absence of the witness was procured by the party offering the deposition; or (C) that the witness is unable to attend or testify because of age, illness, infirmity, or imprisonment; or (D) that the party offering the deposition has been unable to procure the attendance of the witness by subpoena; or (E) that the witness is a medical doctor or (F) upon application and notice, that such exceptional circumstances exist as to make it desirable, in the interest of justice and with due regard to the importance of presenting the testimony of witnesses orally in open court, to allow the deposition to be so used.

(4) If only part of a deposition is offered in evidence by a party, an adverse party may require him to introduce any other part which ought in fairness to be considered with the part introduced, and any party may introduce any other parts.

Substitution of parties does not affect the right to use depositions previously taken; and, when an action in any court has been dismissed and another action involving the same subject matter is afterward brought between the same parties or their representatives or successors in interest, all depositions lawfully taken and duly filed in the former action may be used in the latter as if originally taken therefor. A deposition previously taken may also be used as permitted by the Mississippi Rules of Evidence.

(b) Objections to admissibility. Subject to the provisions of Rule 28(b) and subsection (d)(3) of this rule, objection may be made at the trial or hearing to receive in evidence any deposition or part thereof for any reason which would require the exclusion of the evidence if the witness were then present and testifying.

(c) [Abrogated].

(d) Effect of errors and irregularities in depositions.

(1) As to Notice. All errors and irregularities in the notice for taking a deposition are waived unless written objection is promptly served upon the party giving the notice.

(2) As to Disqualification of Officer. Objection to taking a deposition because of disqualification of the officer before whom it is to be taken is waived unless made before the taking of the deposition begins or as soon thereafter as the disqualification becomes known or could be discovered with reasonable diligence.

(3) As to Taking of Deposition.

(A) Objections to the competency of a witness or to the competency, relevancy, or materiality of testimony are not waived by failure to make them before or during the taking of the deposition, unless the ground of the objection is one which might have been obviated or removed if presented at that time.

(B) Errors and irregularities occurring at the oral examination in the manner of taking the deposition, in the form of the questions or answers, in the oath or affirmation, or in the conduct of the parties, and errors of any kind which might be obviated, removed, or cured if promptly presented, are waived unless seasonable objection thereof is made at the taking of the deposition.

(C) Objections to the form of written questions submitted under Rule 31 are waived unless served in writing upon the party propounding them within the time allowed for serving the succeeding cross or other questions and within five days after service of the last questions authorized.

(4) As to Completion and Return of Deposition. Errors and irregularities in the manner in which the testimony is transcribed or the deposition is prepared, signed, certified, sealed, endorsed, transmitted, filed, or otherwise dealt with by the officer under Rules 30 and 31 are waived unless a motion to suppress the deposition or some part thereof is made with reasonable promptness after such defect is, or with due diligence might have been, ascertained. (Amended effective January 10, 1986; March 1, 1989; October 21, 1999.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective March 1, 1989, Rule 32 was amended by providing that the deposition of a medical doctor may be used by any party for any purpose. 536-538 So. 2d XXV (West Miss. Cas. 1989).

Effective January 10, 1986, Rule 32 was amended by deleting references to the Mississippi Rules of Evidence; and Rule 32(c) [Effect of Taking or Using Depositions] was abrogated. 478-481 So. 2d XXIII (West Miss. Cas. 1986).

COMMENT

Rule 32 as originally adopted was based on Miss. Code Ann. § 13-1-232 (1972). See Pyle, Ott, Rumfelt, Mississippi Rules of Discovery, 46 Miss.L.J. 681, 726-35 (1975).

Subsection (a) has been amended to reflect the admissibility of depositions, apart from Rule 32, as permitted by the Mississippi Rules of Evidence.

Mississippi Rule of Evidence 801(d)(1)(A) permits the introduction for substantive purposes of a prior inconsistent statement made by a witness while testifying under oath in a judicial proceeding or deposition. See 4 J. Weinstein & M. Berger, Weinstein's Evidence ¶ 801(D)(01)[01] (1985).

Mississippi Rule of Evidence 804(b)(1) permits the introduction of the deposition testimony of an unavailable witness. Though the deposition of the unavailable witness need not have been taken in the same proceeding as that in which it is offered, the party against whom the deposition is offered, including a predecessor in interest in civil actions, must have had both an opportunity and a similar motive for cross-examination. See 4 J. Weinstein & M. Berger, Weinstein's Evidence ¶ 801(D)(01)[01] (1985).

Subsection (c) of the Rule has been deleted. The original purpose of subsection (c) was to avoid in certain situations application of the common law rule that prohibited a party from impeaching his own witness. See C. McCormick Handbook on the Law of Evidence § 38 (C. Cleary 3d ed. 1984). Subsection (c) precluded the application of the so-called voucher rule to a party by the mere act of taking the deposition of a witness. Subsection (c) *See*med to apply the voucher rule to a party who introduced a deposition of a witness for any purpose other than contradicting or impeaching the deponent. To this extent, subsection (c) was inconsistent with Rule 43(b)(4) as originally enacted. See Dunbar, Discovery-Rules 26-34, 36 and 37, 52 Miss.L.J. 119, 136-37 (1982).

The adoption of Mississippi Rule of Evidence 607 has rendered subsection (c) superfluous and negated any contention that a party introducing a deposition might be precluded from impeaching the deponent. Mississippi Rule of Evidence 607 provides that any party, including the calling party, may impeach the credibility of any witness.

[Amended effective January 10, 1986.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Construction.
Applicability.
Illustrative cases.

In general.

Trial court did not err by excluding the deposition testimony of plaintiffs' expert to be used at trial as the trial court excluded the testimony on the defense objection that the expert was not qualified. Poole v. Avara, 908 So. 2d 716 (Miss. 2005).

It is not necessary either for a witness to be unavailable or that he must first testify at trial for a deposition to be admissible as evidence. Keller v. Keller, 763 So. 2d 902 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Construction.

Whether testimony of witness in investigatory hearing against attorney was a deposition or earlier sworn testimony was a question of form over substance, and did not hinder introduction of the testimony. Emil v. Mississippi Bar, 690 So. 2d 301 (Miss. 1997).

Applicability.

Insofar as they may be applicable, procedures contemplated by this rule are available to either party in a bar disciplinary matter for the taking of depositions of parties or witnesses. Mississippi State Bar v. Attorney L., 511 So. 2d 119 (Miss. 1987).

Illustrative cases.

Wife failed to object under Miss. R. Civ. P. 31 to the deposition questions or the certification by the deposing officer with reasonable promptness. Because the wife waived any objection to the deposition questions pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 32, the appellate court found no error in the chancellor's admission of the deposition testimony into evidence. McCullough v. McCullough, 52 So. 3d 373 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Granting of a directed verdict in favor of a physician provider, a physician, and a medical center, in a claim for medical malpractice was appropriate pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 32(a) because, although the circuit court erred in refusing to allow the patient to play an edited video deposition of a doctor, the error was legally harmless since the patient was permitted to examine the doctor and then impeach him with his videotaped deposition statements on cross-examination if it was inconsistent with his live testimony. Hartel v. Pruett, 998 So. 2d 979 (Miss. 2008).

Where a son sought to set aside a warranty deed that transferred property from the son's mother to a daughter, the case was properly dismissed for failure to prosecute because, inter alia, (1) there was a significant delay during the litigation, and (2) the daughter was prejudiced because of their mother's intervening death since the purpose of the mother's deposition was not to conduct discovery or elicit testimony for trial. Cox v. Cox, 976 So. 2d 869 (Miss. 2008).

Finding in favor of the patient in his medical malpractice action was improper pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(3)(C) because his mother-in-law's deposition should not have been excluded solely on the basis of drug use. Blake v. Clein, 903 So. 2d 710 (Miss. 2005).

In a dispute over a construction contract, a trial court did not err in admitting an expert's deposition into evidence because the expert was unavailable due to the fact that the expert was out of state during part of the trial; moreover, the evidence showed that a builder had an opportunity to question the expert about an existing report at the time of the deposition. DiMa Homes, Inc. v. Stuart, 873 So. 2d 140 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

The trial court committed reversible error when it allowed the defendant in a personal injury action to introduce a video deposition of a witness who did not appear at trial; although the video deposition was obtained after the defendant learned that the witness had had a heart attack after the incident at issue, the clerk's docket sheet did not reflect proof of service of a subpoena on the witness, there was no evidence of the health of the witness at the time of trial, and there was no suggestion that any effort was made to determine the health of the witness at the time of trial. Robinson v. Lee, 821 So. 2d 129 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Injured patient should have been permitted to enter portions of nurse's deposition into evidence without calling nurse as a witness, even though nurse was available to be called as a witness, since nurse was an employee of defendant hospital and statements were categorized as admissions by a party-opponent under M.R.E. Rule 801(d)(2)(D), which was incorporated by general reference into M.R.C.P. Rule 32(a)(1). McMillan v. King, 557 So. 2d 519 (Miss. 1990).

In absence of prejudice, failure to procure presence of surgeon at trial, and use of his deposition instead, did not constitute reversible error. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Estate of Wesson, 517 So. 2d 521 (Miss. 1987), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1043, 108 S. Ct. 2035, 100 L. Ed. 2d 620 (1988).

Rule 33. Interrogatories to parties.

(a) Availability; procedures for use. Any party may serve as a matter of right upon any other party written interrogatories not to exceed thirty in number to be answered by the party served or, if the party served is a public or private corporation or a partnership or association or governmental agency, by any officer or agent, who shall furnish such information as is available to the party. Each interrogatory shall consist of a single question. Interrogatories may, without leave of court, be served upon the plaintiff after commencement of the action and upon any other party with or after service of the summons and complaint upon that party. Leave of court, to be granted upon a showing of necessity, shall be required to serve in excess of thirty interrogatories.

(b) Answers and Objections.

(1) Each interrogatory shall be answered separately and fully in writing under oath, unless it is objected to, in which event the objecting party shall state the reasons for the objection and shall answer to the extent the interrogatory is not objectionable.

(2) The answers are to be signed by the person making them, and the objections signed by the attorney making them.

(3) The party upon whom the interrogatories have been served shall serve a copy of the answers, and objections if any, within thirty days after the service of the interrogatories, except that a defendant may serve answers or objections within forty-five days after service of the summons and complaint upon that defendant. The court may allow a shorter or longer time.

(4) All grounds for an objection to an interrogatory shall be stated with specificity. Any ground not stated in a timely objection is waived unless the party's failure to object is excused by the court for good cause shown.

(5) The party submitting the interrogatories may move for an order under Rule 37 (a) with respect to any objection to or other failure to answer an interrogatory.

(c) Scope; use at trial. Interrogatories may relate to any matters which can be inquired into under Rule 26(b), and the answers may be used to the extent permitted by the rules of evidence.

An interrogatory otherwise proper is not necessarily objectionable merely because an answer to the interrogatory involves an opinion or contention that relates to fact or the application of law to fact, but the court may order that such an interrogatory need not be answered until after designated discovery has been completed or until a pre-trial conference or other later time.

(d) Option to produce business records. Where the answer to an interrogatory may be derived or ascertained from the business records of the party upon whom the interrogatory has been served or from an examination, audit, or inspection of such business records, or from a compilation, abstract, or summary based thereon, and the burden of deriving or ascertaining the answer is substantially the same for the party serving the interrogatory as for the party served, it is a sufficient answer to such interrogatory to specify the records from which the answer may be derived or ascertained and to afford to the party serving the interrogatory reasonable opportunity to examine, audit, or inspect such records and to make copies, compilations, abstracts, or summaries. The specification provided shall include sufficient detail to permit the interrogating party to identify readily the individual documents from which the answer may be ascertained. (Amended effective April 13, 2000.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective April 13, 2000, Rule 33 was amended to require parties to produce all nonobjectionable information and to clearly state the ground for objection to each interrogatory. So. 2d (West Miss.Cas. 2000).

COMMENT

M.R.C.P. 33(a) places a numerical limitation on the number of interrogatories that may be posed as a matter of right.

The thirty interrogatories permitted as of right are to be computed by counting each distinct question as one of the thirty, even if labeled a sub-part, subsection, threshold question, or the like. In areas well suited to non-abusive exploration by interrogatory, such as inquiries into the names and locations of witnesses, or the existence, location, and custodians of documents or physical evidence, greater leniency may be appropriate in construing several questions as one interrogatory.

MRCP 33(b)(1) emphasizes the duty of the responding party to provide full responses to the extent not objectionable. MRCP 33(b)(4) requires that the grounds for any objection be stated with specificity. Answers may not be provided subject to an objection. Instead, the responding party should quote or otherwise identify the part of the interrogatory that is objectionable, state the grounds for the objection, and respond in full to the remainder. If, for example, an interrogatory seeking information about 30 facilities is deemed objectionable, but an interrogatory seeking information about 10 facilities would not have been objectionable, the interrogatory should be answered with respect to the 10 facilities, and the grounds for objection to providing the information with respect to the remaining facilities should be stated specifically.

The final sentence of M.R.C.P. 33(d) is designed to eliminate the mechanical response of an invitation to "look at all my documents." The rule makes it clear that the responding party has the duty to specify precisely, by category and location, which documents apply to which question. Further, such answers being given under oath are intended to eliminate subsequent evasive use of additional documents at trial on issues confronted by the interrogatory request. See Special Committee for the Study of Discovery Abuse, Section of Litigation, A.B.A., Report, at 18-21 (1977); Pyle, Ott, Rumfelt, Mississippi Rules of Discovery, 46 Miss.L.J. 681, 735 42 (1975).

[Comment amended effective April 13, 2000.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Generally.
Failure to disclose witnesses.
Failure to respond.
Medical malpractice.
Waiver of objections.

Generally.

Medical malpractice complaint was properly dismissed with prejudice because, when plaintiffs (1) did not submit answers to interrogatories until 435 days past the deadline in Miss. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(3), (2) did not begin discovery until almost a year past the deadline in Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 4.04(A), and (3) did not reply to the motion to dismiss within ten days, under Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 4.03(2), it was unnecessary to show plaintiffs' contumacious conduct, prejudice from plaintiffs' unreasonable delay was presumed, even though defendants did not show witnesses' fading memories and no aggravating factors were present, and lesser sanctions would not suffice, since the case was not an isolated incident of one missed deadline or a short, delayed response. Holder v. Orange Grove Med. Specialties, P.A., 54 So. 3d 192 (Miss. 2010).

Order by a trial court that granted the individuals' motion to compel a doctor to respond to a set of interrogatories was reversed; the state supreme court held that the trial court abused its discretion in granting the order as one interrogatory alone had more than 1000 subparts and the interrogatories were unduly burdensome, and oppressive as many were confusing, and therefore, ambiguous. Moreover, the individuals had not obtained leave of court to propound more than 30 interrogatories as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 33(a). Haley v. Harbin, 933 So. 2d 261 (Miss. 2005).

Where an invitee's responses to a motion to compel did not comply with Miss.

R. Civ. P. 33, the invitee sought late discovery in violation of Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 4.04, and did not show good cause for failing to prosecute after two notices of dismissal under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(d), the trial court properly dismissed the lawsuit and denied a motion for reconsideration. Guidry v. Pine Hills Country Club, Inc., 858 So. 2d 196 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Failure to disclose witnesses.

Since witness's testimony was elicited by plaintiff's cross-examination, any objection based upon failure to provide witness's name in answers to interrogatories was waived. Maryland Cas. Co. v. City of Jackson, 493 So. 2d 955 (Miss. 1986).

Failure to respond.

Dismissal of the patient's medical-negligence action under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b) was inappropriate because there was no clear record of actual prejudice caused to the physician or medical center, or even that of presumptive prejudice; thus, the trial court erred in its decision to dismiss the patient's case with prejudice. Holder v. Orange Grove Med. Specialties, P.A., 54 So. 3d 244 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), reversed by 54 So. 3d 192, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 640 (Miss. 2010).

Medical malpractice.

Administratrix was not precluded from maintaining that a nursing home owner and its operator were liable for the negligence of individual nursing home staff members because an answer to an interrogatory made it clear that the administratrix was pursuing two theories of negligence, which were not inconsistent with one another. The administratrix never admitted through her answer to the interrogatory at issue or otherwise that no caregivers breached the standard of care. Estate of Guillotte v. Delta Health Group, Inc., 5 So. 3d 393 (Miss. 2009).

Waiver of objections.

Since defendant did not object to plaintiff's discovery requests within the allotted time, defendant's objections were waived. Taylor Mach. Works v. Great Am. Surplus Lines Ins. Co., 635 So. 2d 1357 (Miss. 1994).

Rule 34. Production of documents and things and entry upon land for inspection and other purposes.

(a) Scope. Any party may serve on any other party a request (1) to produce and permit the party making the request, or someone acting on his behalf, to inspect and copy, any designated documents (including writings, drawings, graphs, charts, photographs, phono-records, and other data compilations from which information can be obtained, translated, if necessary, by the respondent through detection devices into reasonably useable form), or to inspect and copy, test, or sample any tangible things which constitute or contain matters within the scope of Rule 26(b) and which are in the possession, custody, or control of the party upon whom the request is served; or (2) to permit entry upon designated land or other property in the possession or control of the party upon whom the request is served for the purpose of inspection and measuring, surveying, photographing, testing, or sampling the property or any designated object or operation thereon, within the scope of Rule 26 (b).

(b) Procedure. The request may, without leave of court, be served upon the plaintiff after commencement of the action and upon any other party with or after service of the summons and complaint upon that party. The request shall set forth the items to be inspected either by individual item or by category, and describe each item and category with reasonable particularity. The request shall specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection and performing the related acts. The party upon whom the request is served shall serve a written response within thirty days after the service of the request, except that a defendant may serve a response within forty-five days after service of the summons and complaint upon that defendant. The court may allow a shorter or longer time. The response shall state, with respect to each item or category, that inspection and related activities will be permitted as requested, unless the request is objected to, in which event the reasons for objection shall be stated. If objection is made to part of an item or category, the part shall be specified. The party submitting the request may move for an order under Rule 37(a) with respect to any objection to or other failure to respond to the request or any part thereof, or any failure to permit inspection as requested.

When producing documents, the producing party shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the request that call for their production.

(c) Persons not parties. This rule does not preclude an independent action against a person not a party for production of documents and things and permission to enter upon land.

COMMENT

M.R.C.P. 34(a) and (c) are identical to Miss. Code Ann. §§ 13-1-234 (a) and (c) (1972). Subdivision (b) of the rule differs from subdivision (b) of the statute in that the words "and complaint" are added after the word "summons" in the first sentences of the first and second paragraphs, and a new third paragraph is added to the rule. The former addition conforms to M.R.C.P. 4(a)(2) (copy of complaint to be served with summons); the latter tracks the recommendation of the Special Committee for the Study of Discovery, Abuse, Section of Litigation, A.B.A., Report, at 21-23 (1977).

The new paragraph, prescribing the manner of document production, is intended to deter deliberate attempts by a producing party to burden discovery with volume or disarray or deliberately mixing critical documents with others in an effort to obscure significance.

Generally, the most convenient and least burdensome method of producing documents would entail production in the order in which the documents are actually kept in the usual course of business, so that there is an internal logic reflecting business use. If this method is not elected, then the producing party may organize his paper production in accordance with the categories specified in the request. See also Pyle, Ott, Rumfelt, Mississippi Rules of Discovery, 46 Miss.L.J. 681, 764-83 (1975).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction.
Dismissal.
Photographs.

Construction.

If objection is made to part of an item or category, the part shall be specified, and "general objections" applicable to each and every interrogatory or request for production are clearly outside the bounds of this rule; if a party wishes to lodge an objection to a question or request submitted by the opposition, that party must make such objection to that specific question or request. Ford Motor Co. v. Tennin, 960 So. 2d 379 (Miss. 2007).

This rule does not require party receiving a discovery request to deliver requested materials to opposing party, merely to make such materials available for inspection. Harrison v. Mississippi Bar, 637 So. 2d 204 (Miss. 1994).

Dismissal.

Dismissal of action for discovery misconduct was proper where requested documentation regarding revenues and expenses was not produced despite court orders by employee who was alleging improper termination of his employment, and the willfulness and bad faith of the employee was clearly demonstrated where he refused to answer interrogatories and to produce documents for well over one year, in the face of at least two court orders. Smith v. Tougaloo College, 805 So. 2d 633 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Photographs.

While the trial court's frustration with the discovery process was understandable, the ordering of a new trial after a unanimous jury verdict for a vehicle manufacturer, based on a perceived violation of court orders which were never placed on record, was an abuse of discretion; the manufacturer violated a single order concerning the time frame for the submission of documents which it submitted two days late. Ford Motor Co. v. Tennin, 960 So. 2d 379 (Miss. 2007).

Photographs should not have been admitted into evidence in condemnation proceeding where they were not disclosed pursuant to both specific request and court order compelling discovery; remand was required since court could not say that introduction of the photographs could not have adversely affected integrity of the verdict. State Highway Comm'n v. Jones, 649 So. 2d 201 (Miss. 1995).

Rule 35. Physical and mental examinations of persons.

(a) Order for examination. When the mental or physical condition (including the blood group) of a party or of a person in the custody or under the legal control of a party is in controversy, the court in which the action is pending may order the party to submit to a physical or mental examination by a suitably licensed or certified examiner or to produce for examination the person in the party's custody or legal control. The order may be made only on motion for good cause shown and upon notice to the person to be examined and to all parties and shall specify the time, place, manner, conditions, and scope of the examination and the person or persons by whom it is to be made. A party or person may not be required to travel an unreasonable distance for an examination. The party requesting the examination shall pay the examiner and shall advance all necessary expenses to be incurred by the party or person in complying with the order.

(b)(1) Report of examiner. If requested by the party against whom an order is made under Rule 35(a) or the person examined, the party causing the examination to be made shall deliver to the requesting party a copy of the detailed written report of the examiner setting out the examiner's findings, including results of all tests made, diagnoses and conclusions, together with like reports of all earlier examinations of the same condition. After delivery the party causing the examination shall be entitled upon request to receive from the party against whom the order is made a like report of any examination, previously or thereafter made, of the same condition unless, in the case of a report of examination of a person not a party, the party shows that the party is unable to obtain it. The court on motion may make an order against a party requiring delivery of a report on such terms as are just, and if an examiner fails or refuses to make a report the court may exclude the examiner's testimony if offered at trial.

(2) By requesting and obtaining a report of the examination so ordered or by taking the deposition of the examiner, the party examined waives any privilege the party may have in that action or any other involving the same controversy, regarding the testimony of every other person who has examined or may thereafter examine the party in respect of the same mental or physical condition.

(3) This subdivision applies to examinations made by agreement of the parties, unless the agreement expressly provides otherwise. This subdivision does not preclude discovery of a report of an examiner or the taking of a deposition of the examiner in accordance with the provisions of any other rule.

(c) Limited applicability to actions under Title 93 of the Mississippi Code of 1972. This rule does not apply to actions under Title 93 of the Mississippi Code of 1972, except in the discretion of the Chancery Judge. (Adopted effective January 16, 2003.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Denial of motion to compel appropriate.

In general.

Chancery court did not err by refusing to order the husband to undergo a mental evaluation under Miss. R. Civ. P. 35(a) before awarding him unsupervised visitation; although the wife cited various incidents, the record did not support her contention that the husband had harmed their minor child in the past or that he would have presented an immediate danger to her health and safety in the future. LeBlanc v. Andrews, 931 So. 2d 683 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Denial of motion to compel appropriate.

In the client's tort action against the attorney and law firm, given the dearth of Mississippi caselaw on Miss. R. Civ. P. 35, rendering the issue one of first impression for the supreme court, along with the limited nature of the record with respect to the issue (only the motion and subsequent order), the circuit court did not abuse its discretion in denying the law firm's motion to compel physical and mental examination of the client. Baker Donelson Bearman Caldwell & Berkowitz, P.C. v. Seay, 42 So. 3d 474 (Miss. 2010).

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective January 16, 2003, Rule 35 was adopted to allow a court to order a physical or mental examination of a person for good cause on motion.

COMMENT

Rule 35(a)(1) is modeled, in general, after Fed. R. Civ. P. 35. The purpose of Rule 35(a)(1) is to allow a court to order a physical or mental examination of a person for good cause on motion. Previously, the omission in the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure of a counterpart to Federal Rule 35 was held to preclude a court from ordering an examination under any circumstances. See Swan v. I. P. Inc., 613 So. 2d 846 (Miss. 1993).

The order may be made only upon good cause and is limited to cases in which the condition of the party or person to be examined is in controversy. For a discussion of the showing required, see Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil, § 2234.1 (1994). Although some states allow examinations under Rule 35 without an order of the court, Mississippi Rule 35, like the federal counterpart, requires such an order, and, generally, the choice of physicians is left to the party seeking the examination. Addressing federal practice, Wright & Miller have said: "The usual attitude is that the moving party has no absolute right to the choice of the physician, but that when no serious objection arises, it is probably best for the court to appoint the doctor of the moving party's choice." Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil, § 2234.2 (1994).

Rule 35(c) provides that in divorce, child custody, and other actions under Title 93 of the Mississippi Code of 1972, examinations are entirely within the discretion of the Chancery Judge.

[Adoptive effective, January 16, 2003.]

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Law Reviews — Mississippi's Adoption of Rule 35 Independent Medical Examinations: A Whole New Can of Worms, 23 Miss. C. L. Rev. 41, Fall, 2003.

Now Open for Business: The Transformation of Mississippi's Legal Climate, 24 Miss. C. L. Rev. 393, Spring, 2005.

Taming an Elephant: A Closer Look at Mass Tort Screening and the Impact of Mississippi Tort Reforms, 26 Miss. C. L. Rev. 253, 2006/2007.

Rule 36. Requests for admission.

(a) Request for admission. A party may serve upon any other party a written request for the admission, for purposes of the pending action only, of the truth of any matters within the scope of Rule 26(b) set forth in the request that relate to statements or opinions of fact or of the application of law to fact, including the genuineness of any documents described in the request. Copies of documents shall be served with the request unless they have been or are otherwise furnished or made available for inspection and copying. The request may, without leave of court, be served upon the plaintiff after commencement of the action and upon any other party with or after service of the summons upon that party.

Each matter of which an admission is requested shall be separately set forth. The matter is admitted unless, within thirty days after service of the request, or within such shorter or longer time as the court may allow, the party to whom the request is directed serves upon the party requesting the admission a written answer or objection addressed to the matter, signed by the party or by his attorney, but, unless the court shortens the time, a defendant shall not be required to serve answers or objections before the expiration of forty-five days after service of the summons upon him. If objection is made, the reasons therefor shall be stated. The answer shall specifically deny the matter or set forth in detail the reasons why the answering party cannot truthfully admit or deny the matter. A denial shall fairly meet the substance of the requested admission, and when good faith requires that a party qualify his answer or deny only a part of the matter of which an admission is requested, he shall specify so much of it as is true and qualify or deny the remainder. An answering party may not give lack of information or knowledge as a reason for failure to admit or deny unless he states that he has made reasonable inquiry and that the information known or readily obtainable by him is insufficient to enable him to admit or deny. A party who considers that a matter of which an admission has been requested presents a genuine issue for trial may not, on that ground alone, object to the request; he may, subject to Rule 37(c), deny the matter or set forth reasons why he cannot admit or deny it.

The party who has requested the admissions may move to determine the sufficiency of the answers or objections. Unless the court determines that an objection is justified, it shall order that an answer be served. If the court determines that an answer does not comply with the requirements of this section, it may order either that the matter is admitted or that an amended answer be served. The court may, in lieu of these orders, determine that final disposition of the request be made at a pre-trial conference or at a designated time prior to trial. Rule 37(a)(4) applies to the award of expenses incurred in relation to the motion.

(b) Effect of admission. Any matter admitted under this rule is conclusively established unless the court on motion permits withdrawal or amendment of the admission. Subject to the provisions governing amendment of a pre-trial order, the court may permit withdrawal or amendment when the presentation of the merits of the action will be subserved thereby and the party who obtained the admission fails to satisfy the court that withdrawal or amendment will prejudice him in maintaining his action or defense on the merits. Any admission made by a party under this rule is for the purpose of the pending action only and is not an admission by him for any other purpose nor may it be used against him in any other proceeding.

COMMENT

Rule 36 is identical to Miss. Code Ann. § 13-1-236 (1972). See Pyle, Ott, Rumfelt, Mississippi Rules of Discovery, 46 Miss.L.J. 681, 748-62 (1975).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Construction.
Conclusiveness.
Deemed admission.
Failure to admit.
Time to respond.
Withdrawal or amendment.

In general.

Where an employee was mounting a moving locomotive when a foot slipped due to mud, causing the employee to fall and sustain serious leg injuries, the employed sued the railroad for his injuries under the Federal Employer's Liability Act, 45 U.S.C. § 51; the employee's admission at trial that the employee was speculating as to whether employee's boots contained the slippery substance was not a judicial admission for purposes of Miss. R. Civ. P. 36. Canadian Nat'l/Ill. Cent. R.R. v. Hall, 953 So. 2d 1084 (Miss. 2007).

Order by a trial court granting the individuals' motion to compel a doctor to respond to 250 requests for admissions was reversed; the state supreme court held that the trial court had abused its discretion in granting the order, finding the requests, requiring the doctor to respond to more than 1000 questions, excessive in number, unduly burdensome, and oppressive in violation of Miss. R. Civ. P. 36. Haley v. Harbin, 933 So. 2d 261 (Miss. 2005).

Where defendants failed to respond to plaintiff's requests for admissions in a proper legal format after being ordered to do so by the trial court following plaintiff's motion to compel responses, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in ordering that the responses be deemed admitted.

Prime Rx, LLC v. McKendree, Inc., 917 So. 2d 791 (Miss. 2005).

Defendant school district denied plaintiff student's request to admit that "sexual contact" had occurred between her and two male students; the trial court did not err in allowing school board members to testify about their disciplining of the students based on the principal's assessment that some sexual contact had occurred, as that court's determination of what remedy was warranted given the differences between the responses to the requests for admission and the testimony had to be viewed in a discretionary light and the court's decision was entitled to deference, as it was the trier of fact and its decision took into consideration the differences when it weighed the credibility of the school board members' testimony. T.K. v. Simpson County Sch. Dist., 846 So. 2d 312 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

The fact that answers to requests for admission, when compared with the testimony of other witnesses at trial, might raise doubts about the credibility of the answering party is not a reason to reject their evidentiary value; thus, regardless of testimony given at trial, answers to requests for admission are admissible as evidence. Keller v. Keller, 763 So. 2d 902 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Construction.

Rule was meant to provide, and should provide, an authoritative manner of procedure; where trial court made a ruling within its authority under the Rule, the attorney's affidavit could not be used to negate the admissions, even though the affidavit could be viewed as contradictory. DeBlanc v. Stancil, 814 So. 2d 796 (Miss. 2002).

This rule is to be enforced according to its terms, and facts set forth in request for admissions were therefore taken as admitted, where defendant filed no response or objection to request, and failed to offer any explanation or excuse as to why he could not have responded. Educational Placement Services v. Wilson, 487 So. 2d 1316 (Miss. 1986).

Purpose of this rule is to bind party making the admission, not party requesting it. Shell Oil Co. v. Murrah, 493 So. 2d 1274 (Miss. 1986).

Defendants' timely filed motion to stay the requirement that they respond to plaintiffs' request for admissions was equivalent to a motion for an extension of time within which to respond, and the motion operated to prevent matters set forth in request from being deemed admitted. Schmidt v. City of Jackson, 494 So. 2d 348 (Miss. 1986).

Conclusiveness.

In a divorce proceeding, where the husband failed to answer the wife's requests for admissions, and they were deemed admitted, it was not error to deny the wife's motion to alter or amend judgment in regard to the weight given to the admissions, because the admissions were taken into consideration, but they were not conclusive, in and of themselves, of the ultimate issue. Kumar v. Kumar, 976 So. 2d 957 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Conclusiveness of matters deemed admitted, due to defendant's failure to file a timely response, was not established. Skipworth v. Rabun, 704 So. 2d 1008 (Miss. 1996).

Deemed admission.

Because each element of legal malpractice was fulfilled, including both proximate cause and the amount of damages, by the failure to answer or deny requests for admission, and because Miss. R. Civ. P. 36 was self-executing and did not differentiate matters that would not be deemed admitted, admissions were properly used as a basis for granting summary judgment and for entering an award of damages of $2,000,000, jointly and severally, against a law firm and individual lawyers. Byrd v. Bowie, 992 So. 2d 1202 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Summary judgment was properly awarded to a contractor in a subcontractor's action for nonpayment where the subcontractor had waited to file its responses to requests for admissions and its motion to withdraw the deemed admitted requests for admissions until after the contractor had moved for summary judgment; the trial court determined that the contractor would be prejudiced if the admissions were allowed to be withdrawn. Triangle Constr. Co. v. Foshee Constr. Co., 976 So. 2d 978 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In a tort suit filed against a nursing home and its administrators following the death of a patient, the estate failed to provide sufficient responses to a request for admissions concerning the standard of care; under Miss. R. Civ. P. 36, the deemed admissions established that none of the caregivers deviated from the standard of care in treating the patient, and therefore summary judgment was entered in favor of the caregivers. Estate of Finley v. Beverly Health & Rehab. Servs., 933 So. 2d 1026 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Requests for admission did not violate the Rule as the requests clearly applied the legal standard of care to the facts of the case and the husband was aware that the doctor had made discovery requests. Cole v. Buckner, 819 So. 2d 527 (Miss. 2002).

The court properly deemed a request for admissions admitted for lack of timeliness pursuant to subsection (a) where there was a five-month delay before the defendants responded to the request for admissions and they did not object to the request for admissions, request withdrawal or amendment, or seek from the court any extension of time for responding. Deblanc v. Stancil, — So. 2d —, 2000 Miss. App. LEXIS 453 (Miss. Ct. App. Sept. 26, 2000), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 2001 Miss. App. LEXIS 39 (Miss. Ct. App. Jan. 23, 2001).

Failure to admit.

M.R.C.P. Rule 37(c) did not contemplate sanctions where party denied requests for admissions which were, in effect, an accusation of arson, and therefore trial court did not err in failing to award sanctions for alleged discovery violations. Cooper v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co., 568 So. 2d 687 (Miss. 1990).

Time to respond.

Grant of summary judgment against the child and parents in their medical malpractice action against the doctors, medical center, and clinic, was appropriate pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 36(b) because the conduct of the child and parents' counsel after his illness had resolved was insufficient to merit withdrawal of the deemed admissions. Langley v. Miles, 956 So. 2d 970 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 957 So. 2d 1004, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 305 (Miss. 2007).

Notwithstanding that the defendant failed to timely respond to the plaintiff's requests for admission in an action to set aside two deeds from the plaintiff to the defendants, remand was necessary to determine the issue of whether the plaintiff intended to deed her property to the defendants as this was a genuine issue of material fact that went directly to the merits of the case, and to pursue the answer to the question would not serve any prejudice upon the plaintiff. Deblanc v. Stancil, — So. 2d —, 2001 Miss. App. LEXIS 39 (Miss. Ct. App. Jan. 23, 2001), reversed by 814 So. 2d 796, 2002 Miss. LEXIS 95 (Miss. 2002).

Withdrawal or amendment.

In a child custody modification case, a trial court did not err by failing to deem a mother's requests for admission admitted since a father filed a motion to amend his responses, and the decision to grant such was in the trial court's discretion. Giannaris v. Giannaris, 962 So. 2d 574 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), reversed by, remanded in part by 960 So. 2d 462, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 399 (Miss. 2007).

Where the lawyer, a defendant in a malpractice case, did not respond to plaintiff's request for admissions for over nine months, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to allow the lawyer to withdraw his admissions, since (1) he never sought an extension of time to respond to the request; (2) he had no legal justification for his delay in responding; and (3) his dilatory response had prejudiced the plaintiff by delaying his case. Earwood v. Reeves, 798 So. 2d 508 (Miss. 2001).

Trial court erred in allowing defendant on oral motion to withdraw admissions and file responses out of time, where there was no record of good and sufficient reason offered by defendant and if argument was that defendant was financially unable to defend himself, this was not a justifiable excuse. Skipworth v. Rabun, 568 So. 2d 289 (Miss. 1990).

Chancellor properly held that defendants' Request for Admissions would be deemed admitted, where plaintiffs filed their response eleven days late, and failed to move for withdrawal or amendment of admissions under subdivision (b) of this rule. Martin v. Simmons, 571 So. 2d 254 (Miss. 1990).

Rule 37. Failure to make or cooperate in discovery: sanctions.

(a) Motion for order compelling discovery. A party, upon reasonable notice to other parties and all persons affected thereby, may apply for an order compelling discovery as follows:

(1) Appropriate court. An application for an order may be made to the court in which the action is pending.

(2) Motion. If a deponent fails to answer a question propounded or submitted under Rules 30 or 31, or a corporation or other entity fails to make a designation under Rules 30(b)(6) or 31(a), or a party fails to answer an interrogatory submitted under Rule 33, or if a party, in response to a request for inspection submitted under Rule 34, fails to respond that inspection will be permitted as requested or fails to permit inspection as requested, the discovering party may move for an order compelling an answer, or a designation, or an order compelling inspection in accordance with the request. When taking a deposition on oral examination, the proponent of the question may complete or adjourn the examination before he applies for an order.

If the court denies the motion in whole or in part, it may make such protective order as it would have been empowered to make on a motion made pursuant to Rule 26(d).

(3) Evasive or incomplete answer. For purposes of this section, an evasive or incomplete answer is to be treated as a failure to answer.

(4) Award of expenses of motion. If the motion is granted, the court shall, after opportunity for hearing, require the party or deponent whose conduct necessitated the motion or the party or attorney advising such conduct or both of them to pay to the moving party the reasonable expenses incurred in obtaining the order, including attorney's fees, unless the court finds that the opposition to the motion was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

If the motion is denied, the court shall, after opportunity for hearing, require the moving party of the attorney advising the motion or both of them to pay to the party or deponent who opposed the motion the reasonable expenses incurred in opposing the motion, including attorney's fees, unless the court finds that the making of the motion was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expense unjust.

If the motion is granted in part and denied in part, the court may apportion the reasonable expenses incurred in relation to the motion among the parties and persons in a just manner.

(b) Failure to comply with order.

(1) Sanctions by Court. If a deponent fails to be sworn or to answer a question after being directed to do so by the court, the failure may be considered a contempt of court.

(2) Sanctions by Court in Which Action Is Pending. If a party or an officer, director, or managing agent of a party or a person designated under Rules

30(b)(6) or 31(a) to testify in behalf of a party fails to obey an order to provide or permit discovery, including an order made under subsection (a) of this rule, the court in which the action is pending may make such orders in regard to the failure as are just, and among others the following:

(A) an order that the matters regarding which the order was made or any other designated facts shall be taken to be established for the purposes of the action in accordance with the claim of the party obtaining the order;

(B) an order refusing to allow the disobedient party to support or oppose designated claims or defenses, or prohibiting him from introducing designated matters in evidence;

(C) an order striking out pleadings or parts thereof, or staying further proceedings until the order is obeyed, or dismissing the action or proceeding or any part thereof, or rendering a judgment by default against the disobedient party;

(D) in lieu of any of the foregoing orders or in addition thereto, an order treating as a contempt of court the failure to obey any orders.

In lieu of any of the foregoing orders or in addition, thereto, the court shall require the party failing to obey the order or the attorney advising him or both to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure, unless the court finds that the failure was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

(c) Expenses on failure to admit. If a party fails to admit the genuineness of any document or the truth of any matter as requested under Rule 36, and if the party requesting the admissions thereafter proves the genuineness of the document or the truth of the matter, he may apply to the court for an order requiring the other party to pay him the reasonable expenses incurred in making that proof, including reasonable attorney's fees. The court shall make the order unless it finds that (1) the request was held objectionable under Rule 36(a), or (2) the admission sought was of no substantial importance, or (3) the party failing to admit had reasonable ground to believe that he might prevail on the matter, or (4) there was other good reason for the failure to admit.

(d) Failure of party to attend at own deposition or serve answers to interrogatories or respond to request for inspection. If a party or an officer, director, or managing agent of a party or a person designated under Rules 30(b)(6) or 31(a) to testify on behalf of a party fails (1) to appear before the officer who is to take his deposition, after being served with a proper notice, or (2) to serve answers or objections to interrogatories submitted under Rule 33, after proper service of interrogatories, or (3) to serve a written response to a request for inspection submitted under Rule 34, after proper service of the request, the court in which the action is pending on motion may make such orders in regard to the failure as are just, and among others it may take any action authorized under subsections (A), (B), and (C) of subsection (b)(2) of this rule. In lieu of any order or in addition thereto, the court shall require the party failing to act or the attorney advising him or both to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure, unless the court finds that the failure was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

The failure to act described in this subsection may not be excused on the ground that the discovery sought is objectionable unless the party failing to act has applied for a protective order under Rule 26(d).

(e) Additional sanctions. In addition to the application of those sanctions, specified in Rule 26(d) and other provisions of this rule, the court may impose upon any party or counsel such sanctions as may be just, including the payment of reasonable expenses and attorneys' fees, if any party or counsel (i) fails without good cause to cooperate in the framing of an appropriate discovery plan by agreement under Rule 26(c), or (ii) otherwise abuses the discovery process in seeking, making or resisting discovery.

COMMENT

M.R.C.P. 37 contains a new subdivision (e) which does not appear in Miss. Code Ann. § 13-1-237 (1972).

The statutory rule requires that each failure to respond to a discovery request be dealt with by a separate motion; the successful result of the first motion is usually an order to comply with the discovery request. Sanctions customarily are not imposed until after there has been a refusal to comply with a second order; moreover, under the statute there are no sanctions directed against a party who seeks unnecessary discovery. M.R.C.P. 37(e) gives greater flexibility to the trial court in the form of a general grant of power which would enable it to deal summarily with discovery abuses, whenever and however the abuse is brought to the attention of the court. For example, for the failure of a party to have made proper discovery, or for the misuse of the various discovery vehicles, the court may, at the conclusion of the case, impose monetary penalties according to the unnecessary expense to which the adverse party was put. It is significant that Rule 37(e) does not enumerate the sanctions available to the court; courts should have considerable latitude in fashioning sanctions suitable for particular applications. But See: Karenina by Vronsky v. Presley, 526 So.2d 518 (Miss.1988).

MRCP 37(e) was adapted from the Special Committee for the Study of Discovery Abuse, Section of Litigation, A.B.A., Report, at 23-25 (1972). See also Pyle, Ott, Rumfelt, Mississippi Rules of Discovery, 46 Miss. L. J. 681, 764-83 (1975).

[Amended effective February 1, 1990.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Construction.
Applicability.
Attorney's fees.
Dismissal.
Expenses.
Preclusion.
Requirements.
Sanctions available.
Sanctions properly denied.
Setting aside answer.

In general.

Chancellor did not err in denying a husband's motion to compel a wife's responses to interrogatories in a divorce case as the husband did not give reasonable notice to the wife of the motion, as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 37(a), in that the husband did not file his motion until less than one business day prior to the hearing and after the trial court had already rescheduled the hearing. Moreover, the husband failed to show that he was prejudiced by the wife's untimely responses. Vaughn v. Vaughn, 56 So. 3d 1283 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Where an employee sued the railroad for injuries sustained while mounting a moving locomotive, the trial court did not err by allowing an expert to testify regarding reasons why the major railroads were amending their safety rules and to refer to statistical information; the subject matter contained in the expert report included the subject matter testified to at trial, and there was no discovery violation. Canadian Nat'l/Ill. Cent. R.R. v. Hall, 953 So. 2d 1084 (Miss. 2007).

While the trial court's frustration with the discovery process was understandable, the ordering of a new trial after a unanimous jury verdict for a vehicle manufacturer, based on a perceived violation of court orders which were never placed on record, was an abuse of discretion; the manufacturer violated a single order concerning the time frame for the submission of documents which it submitted two days late. Ford Motor Co. v. Tennin, 960 So. 2d 379 (Miss. 2007).

Trial judge did not err by denying the passenger a mistrial for the driver's discovery violations under Miss. R. Civ. P. 37 as there was no evidence that the driver's interrogatory response was intended to mislead opposing counsel, and the driver clearly did not exhibit a pattern of such, and there was no indication that the passenger was prejudiced by the driver's incomplete answer to Interrogatory No. 10; there was no indication of how the passenger's trial strategy would have changed in the event the driver had divulged the kissing episode at an earlier stage in the litigation process. Payne v. Whitten, — So. 2d —, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 620 (Miss. Oct. 26, 2006), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 948 So. 2d 427, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 38 (Miss. 2007).

Where defendants failed to respond to plaintiff's requests for admissions in a proper legal format after being ordered to do so by the trial court following plaintiff's motion to compel responses, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in ordering that the responses be deemed admitted even though Miss. R. Civ. P. 37 allowed for a lesser sanction as plaintiff propounded requests for admissions and Miss. R. Civ. P. 36 provided for a specific sanction for the failure to respond. Prime Rx, LLC v. McKendree, Inc., 917 So. 2d 791 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court's suspension of monetary sanctions against defendant school district's attorneys for a discovery violation was not an abuse of discretion: (1) there was not an unequivocal showing that the district or its attorneys intended to deceive, nor was it clear where the fault in failing to disclose arose; and (2) as the discovery violation went to breach of duty and proximate cause, and plaintiff student could not have prevailed had she proven breach of duty and proximate cause, because no causation in fact was shown, she was not prejudiced by the discovery violation. T.K. v. Simpson County Sch. Dist., 846 So. 2d 312 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial court did not err in excluding evidence not identified during discovery, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(B); a witness testified about census results, but an objection to the introduction of the witness's written findings was properly sustained because the findings were not furnished during discovery and there was no showing that the exclusion of the evidence had any prejudicial effect. Prestridge v. City of Petal, 841 So. 2d 1048 (Miss. 2003).

In a divorce case, the chancellor cured any error that might have occurred in denying the husband's motion to compel when the chancellor allowed the husband leniency in questioning the wife at trial; therefore, the chancellor's denial of the husband's motion to compel did not warrant an interlocutory appeal. Boutwell v. Boutwell, 829 So. 2d 1216 (Miss. 2002).

Where there was no violation of discovery rules or pre-trial court order, circuit judge was without authority to impose sanctions against plaintiff for scheduling deposition for a date two days before Pre-Trial Conference, after plaintiff had requested that Pre-Trial Conference be set. Jones v. Wiese, 652 So. 2d 175 (Miss. 1995).

A motion for sanctions against a party unable to comply is not per se an abuse of discovery. Read v. Southern Pine Elec. Power Ass'n, 515 So. 2d 916 (Miss. 1987).

Construction.

Imposition of a $10,000 sanction against the tire company was improper where the trial court effectively held the tire company in constructive criminal contempt and the company therefore had the right to present its defense regarding contempt. Under Miss. R. Civ. P. 37 and the inherent power to protect the integrity of its process, the trial court had the broad authority to impose sanctions for discovery violations and violations of its orders; however, a purely punitive fine could be imposed only after the offending party be held in contempt. Cooper Tire & Rubber Co. v. McGill, 890 So. 2d 859 (Miss. 2004).

Subdivision (b)(2) of this rule did not totally control trial court's authority to impose sanctions, and $200 fine against plaintiff's counsel, and not plaintiff, for counsel's failure to notify court of his planned absence was authorized under subdivision (e). Cunningham v. Mitchell, 549 So. 2d 955 (Miss. 1989).

Applicability.

Under Miss. R. Civ. P. 37(c), the chancellor abused his discretion by not imposing sanctions against the wife for admitted perjury and destruction of evidence as the wife resisted discovery; the wife resisted discovery by admitted lying under oath about staying the night at another man's hours and having sexual intercourse with him, and she lied about when her sexual relationship began and intentionally destroyed her personal computer immediately after her March 8 deposition. Jones v. Jones, 995 So. 2d 706 (Miss. 2008).

With respect to a casino customer who was injured when a security guard collided with her, a trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying a motion to compel production of copies of the casino's rules for handling customer injuries because the production request did not include what the customer actually sought, which was security manuals. Smith v. Ameristar Casino Vicksburg, Inc., 991 So. 2d 1228 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 997 So. 2d 924, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 504 (Miss. 2008).

Finding that the passenger was 30 percent at fault for an accident was improper pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 37(e), where the driver never elaborated on his contributory negligence claim during discovery and instead waited until he was testifying at trial before asserting that the passenger was partially negligent because the two were kissing. That testimony resulted in a discovery violation. Payne v. Whitten, 948 So. 2d 431 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), reversed by 2006 Miss. LEXIS 620 (Miss. Oct. 26, 2006).

Where the heirs' motion for extension of time to designate an expert was filed two months after the deadline for such designation and more than a month after the filing by defendants of one or more motions for summary judgment, the trial court granted defendants summary judgment, as the heirs were unable to make out a prima facie case of medical malpractice without a medical expert. Bowie v. Montfort Jones Mem'l Hosp., 861 So. 2d 1037 (Miss. 2003).

Correct standard for awarding sanctions for a vexatiously overbroad subpoena is that under M.R.C.P. Rule 45, not Rules 26 or 37. SLM v. Clinton Pub. Sch. Dist., 677 So. 2d 737 (Miss. 1996).

Deponent in a deposition taken in Mississippi for use in an out-of-state case could not be compelled to respond to questions which he had declined to answer pursuant to privilege provided by other state's law, but not available under Mississippi law. Barnes v. A Confidential Party, 628 So. 2d 283 (Miss. 1993).

Attorney's fees.

Because the trial court's finding of multiple, intentional discovery violations was erroneous, so too was its award of attorney fees and expenses in amount in excess of $200,000 to plaintiffs (presumably under Miss. R. Civ. P.37(e)), although plaintiffs were owed some amount of reasonable attorney fees and expenses; the court should have assessed the reasonable expenses incurred by plaintiffs caused by defendant's compliance with the court's ruling two days later than ordered. Ford Motor Co. v. Tennin, 960 So. 2d 379 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court erred by denying plaintiffs attorney's fees under subdivision (a)(4) of this rule, where plaintiffs succeeded on their motion to compel discovery. Willard v. Paracelsus Health Care Corp., 681 So. 2d 539 (Miss. 1996).

Dismissal.

Affirmation of a default judgment in favor of the property owners was appropriate because the city's discovery response was false and despite an offer from the trial court, the city declined to offer any evidence to explain its discovery failure. City of Jackson v. Rhaly, — So. 3d —, 2011 Miss. App. LEXIS 224 (Miss. Ct. App. Apr. 19, 2011), affirmed by 2012 Miss. LEXIS 207 (Miss. Apr. 26, 2012).

Dismissal of the patient's medical-negligence action under Miss. R. Civ. P. 37(d) was inappropriate because there was no clear record of actual prejudice caused to the physician or medical center, or even that of presumptive prejudice, and the delays were solely the result of the negligence of plaintiff's counsel; thus, the trial court erred in its decision to dismiss the patient's case with prejudice and should have applied lesser sanctions. Holder v. Orange Grove Med. Specialties, P.A., 54 So. 3d 244 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), reversed by 54 So. 3d 192, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 640 (Miss. 2010).

Plaintiff's failure to reply to discovery requests was a result of his attorney being unable to contact him for an extended period of time. Since plaintiff repeatedly missed the deadlines to respond to discovery and failed to file completed responses, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in dismissing the case with prejudice. Young v. Merritt, 40 So. 3d 587 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Trial court did not err by ordering the customer's case against the restaurant to be dismissed without prejudice for failing to respond to discovery, Miss. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(c), as the customer's noncompliance was based on inability to comply; the customer was fully aware of the trial court's order requiring him to respond to the interrogatories, and still he chose not to fully comply. Marshall v. Burger King, 2 So. 3d 702 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Trial court properly granted a contractor's motion to dismiss with prejudice plaintiffs' complaint on the basis of plaintiffs' repeated failure to timely provide full and complete supplemental responses to written discovery requests; although the result may have been harsh for plaintiffs, the record on appeal did not provide sufficient reasons for finding the trial court abused its discretion in dismissing the action. Beck v. Sapet, 937 So. 2d 945 (Miss. 2006).

Where an assistant conductor sued the railroad for personal injuries pursuant to the Federal Employers' Liability Act, 45 USCS § 51 et seq., the trial court did not abuse its discretion in ordering a Miss. R. Civ. P. 37 dismissal due to the conductor's failure to disclose a previous back injury and workers' compensation claim. Allen v. AMTRAK, 934 So. 2d 1006 (Miss. 2006).

Court did not err in dismissing insured's action against insurers for payment of full benefits under a policy because the insured failed to comply with the court's discovery order. Trial judge's action in dismissing the case without prejudice was clearly within his discretion. Ngo v. Centennial Ins. Co., 893 So. 2d 1076 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In an insurance case, a court properly dismissed funeral home owners' suit against an insurer where the owners chose to disregard the trial court's order and did not submit themselves for their scheduled depositions. Salts v. Gulf Nat'l Life Ins. Co., 872 So. 2d 667 (Miss. 2004).

As a trial court did not find that appellees' misrepresentations during discovery were manifestly false and it was not convinced that there had been any lying, its refusal to dismiss the action as a sanction for discovery misconduct was affirmed. Ross v. Nat'l Forms & Sys. Group, Inc., — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 70 (Miss. Ct. App. Feb. 3, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 882 So. 2d 245, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 603 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Dismissal of action for discovery misconduct was proper where requested documentation regarding revenues and expenses was not produced, despite court orders, by employee who was alleging improper termination of his employment, and the willfulness and bad faith of the employee was clearly demonstrated where he refused to answer interrogatories and to produce documents for well over one year, in the face of at least two court orders. Smith v. Tougaloo College, 805 So. 2d 633 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

In an action against a pharmaceutical company and a physician arising from a massive stroke suffered by the plaintiff after taking a medication manufactured by the pharmaceutical company, an expert witness was properly allowed to testify on behalf of the pharmaceutical company where the expert had been designated as an expert witness by the physician and a supplemental discovery response by the pharmaceutical company stated that it reserved the right to call in its case-in-chief any treating physician, any expert witness listed by the plaintiffs and any expert witness listed by any co-defendant; although the supplemental response was evasive or incomplete, the plaintiff failed to meet her burden to seek relief from the court prior to trial, by requesting the court to enter an order compelling additional information and, instead, waited until trial to object to the presentation of the expert witness. Her appeal was dismissed. Warren v. Sandoz Pharms. Corp., 783 So. 2d 735 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

It was error for the court to dismiss a personal injury action arising from an automobile accident where (1) an answer by the plaintiff to an interrogatory stated that his injuries "affected my attitude, my concentration, my school work, and my ability to do manual labor. I no longer am able to enjoy tinkering with automobiles as the stooping, bending, and squatting are painful;" but (2) video surveillance of the defendant showed him bending, twisting, and squatting while performing manual tasks and performing manual tasks at the tire shop at which he worked. Dismissal was inappropriate as the answer to the interrogatory was ambiguous and could be interpreted to not assert that he was completely incapable of bending, lifting, or performing manual labor, but rather that he was unable to enjoy performing such tasks. Wood v. Biloxi Pub. Sch. Dist., 757 So. 2d 190 (Miss. 2000).

The dismissal of the plaintiff's slip and fall case was not an abuse of discretion where the plaintiff willfully submitted false answers to interrogatories and knowingly did not answer deposition questions truthfully. Scoggins v. Ellzey Bevs., Inc., 743 So. 2d 990 (Miss. 1999).

It was an abuse of discretion for the trial judge to impose the death penalty of dismissal where (1) discovery proceedings were controlled and managed by the parties and the trial court was involved only when the defendant could not through a good faith effort persuade the plaintiff to comply with his request to name an expert, and (2) after the plaintiff complied, discovery continued. Robert v. Colson, 729 So. 2d 1243 (Miss. 1999).

Trial court's dismissal of suit, as a sanction against plaintiffs who were dilatory in the prosecution of their claim, was reversed and remanded in view of defendant's own dilatory conduct. Palmer v. Biloxi Regional Medical Ctr., 564 So. 2d 1346 (Miss. 1990).

Dismissal of divorce defendant's pleading as a sanction for his discovery violations was reversed, where trial court made no finding of willfulness or bad faith, plaintiff was not prejudiced, and other sanctions were available. White v. White, 509 So. 2d 205 (Miss. 1987).

Expenses.

Because expenses incurred on behalf of heirs and their attorneys were a direct result of a railroad company's failure to attend scheduled depositions as ordered by the trial court, and the heirs acted reasonably in relying on the trial court's order that the depositions proceed, with which order the company chose not to comply, an award of sanctions was proper and reasonable. Ill. Cent. R.R. v. Winters, 863 So. 2d 955 (Miss. 2004).

Miss. R. Civ. P. 37 required a railroad to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by its failure to comply with a discovery order to produce certain officers for oral depositions by the heirs in a wrongful death action; however, the sanction should have only included the heirs' expenses to attend the scheduled depositions, not the expenses to attend rescheduled depositions, which the heirs would have incurred anyway. Illinois Cent. R.R. v. Winters, 815 So. 2d 1168 (Miss. Apr. 25, 2002).

As losing party in motion to compel discovery, husband in divorce action was required to pay expenses incurred by deponent in opposing motion, where deponent was entitled to assert privilege, husband's motion was not substantially justified, and circumstances did not make the award unjust. Barnes v. A Confidential Party, 628 So. 2d 283 (Miss. 1993).

Trial court erred in failing to award defendant reasonable expenses and attorney's fees incurred in preparing for and attending trial on date originally set; continuance was due to plaintiff's failure to timely disclose expert's name, and defendant was prepared to go to trial on date originally scheduled, as were its experts. Read v. Southern Pine Elec. Power Ass'n, 515 So. 2d 916 (Miss. 1987).

Preclusion.

Chancery court did not err in denying the husband's motion for sanctions against the wife pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 37(e), in part because the chancery court was faced with misconduct from both parties. Thus, it was within the chancellor's discretion to refuse to award sanctions. Jones v. Jones, 995 So. 2d 743 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), affirmed in part and reversed in part by, remanded by 995 So. 2d 706, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 581 (Miss. 2008).

After dismissing an insured's suit against insurers for payment of full benefits under a policy, the court abused its discretion in ordering, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 37(e), that the insured respond to prior discovery requests prior to refiling suit against the insurers because the order essentially enjoined the insured from proceeding with his claims anew until he complied with the prior order of the court. There was no evidence that the court considered any of the relevant factors for an injunction in its order. Ngo v. Centennial Ins. Co., 893 So. 2d 1076 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Less than two business days before the trial was scheduled was not "reasonable" notice for a motion to compel discovery. Boutwell v. Boutwell, 829 So. 2d 1216 (Miss. 2002).

Where a party fails to comply with a court order permitting discovery, court may refuse to allow disobedient party to support its claims with the undisclosed evidence. Broadhead v. Bonita Lakes Mall, Ltd. Partnership, 702 So. 2d 92 (Miss. 1997).

Trial court erred by excluding written timber bid, where plaintiff disclosed its possible existence in answer to defendant's interrogatory; defendant could have discovered the document via a notice of deposition and subpoena duces tecum directed to witness, and therefore defendant was not ambushed by mid-trial discovery of the written bid. Kinard v. Morgan, 679 So. 2d 623 (Miss. 1996).

Photographs should not have been admitted into evidence in condemnation proceeding where they were not disclosed pursuant to both specific request and court order compelling discovery; remand was required since court could not say that introduction of the photographs could not have adversely affected integrity of the verdict. State Highway Comm'n v. Jones, 649 So. 2d 201 (Miss. 1995).

Chancery court was within its authority in excluding testimony of defendant's expert witness, where defendant failed to disclose expert's name in response to interrogatories and failed to supplement its answers before trial. Simmons v. Bank of Mississippi, 593 So. 2d 40 (Miss. 1992).

Permanent disability was a separate subject matter from causation, and plaintiffs' supplemental answer to expert interrogatory was insufficient to put defendant on notice that extent of disability might be a part of expert's testimony; expert's opinion therefore should have been excluded. T.K. Stanley, Inc. v. Cason, 614 So. 2d 942 (Miss. 1992).

Trial court did not err in applying sanctions and disallowing testimony and appraisal of expert not disclosed until day prior to trial. Varner v. Patrick, 523 So. 2d 319 (Miss. 1988).

Trial court was not required to exclude testimony of defendants' expert, where plaintiff did not request an order compelling discovery when defendants gave what plaintiff deemed to be unsatisfactory responses to its expert witness interrogatory. State Highway Comm'n v. Havard, 508 So. 2d 1099 (Miss. 1987).

Requirements.

Due to the lateness of the husband's motion to compel, coupled with the fact that the hearing date was set two months previously by agreed order, the chancellor determined that the hearing should proceed with limitations on the wife's presentation of evidence, Miss. R. Civ. P. 37(a). That resolution of the matter was within the chancellor's sound discretion. Pool v. Pool, 989 So. 2d 920 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 993 So. 2d 832, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 383 (Miss. 2008).

A prior written court order is not required for issuance of sanctions under this rule. Herrington v. Herrington, 660 So. 2d 215 (Miss. 1995).

Not only may willful and intentional conduct be sanctioned, but courts have inherent power to impose sanctions to protect integrity of their processes, and when counsel's carelessness causes his opponent to expend time and money needlessly, it is not an abuse of discretion for court to require offending counsel to pay for his mistake, especially where out-of-town travel is involved. Vicksburg Refining, Inc. v. Energy Resources, Ltd., 512 So. 2d 901 (Miss. 1987).

Trial court did not err in allowing plaintiff's expert to testify; although expert's name had not been provided to defendant until three days before scheduled trial, court granted plaintiff a continuance of almost three months and therefore there was no surprise to defendant. Read v. Southern Pine Elec. Power Ass'n, 515 So. 2d 916 (Miss. 1987).

Medical malpractice action was properly dismissed due to plaintiff's procrastination, disobedience to lower court's orders, willful failure to comply with most areas of discovery, and obvious contempt for court's processes. Williams v. Puryear, 515 So. 2d 1231 (Miss. 1987).

Sanctions available.

Chancery court did not abuse its discretion in excluding various documents relating to a husband's alleged gambling problems, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 37, because a wife failed to provide a reasonable explanation for not having produced these documents in a timely manner. Irby v. Estate of Irby, 7 So. 3d 223 (Miss. 2009).

In a child custody case, a chancellor's exclusion of all of a mother's witnesses was justified because the father had requested their identities during discovery, but the mother did not respond to the discovery request until two days before trial. Klink v. Brewster, 986 So. 2d 1060 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Trial court properly exercised its authority to impose sanctions for abuse-of-discovery violations; while the striking of the corporation's expert witnesses was an extreme measure, the trial court acted within its discretion to do so. E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Co. v. Strong, 968 So. 2d 410 (Miss. 2007).

In a wrongful death action against defendant nursing home, exclusion of labor-hour reports was well within the discretion of the trial court; the trial judge, in considering whether a continuance to review the daily time sheets would have cured the prejudice to plaintiff estate, determined that a continuance would have pushed the trial back almost a year, and ruled that the only means of preventing prejudice was to exclude the time sheets. Mariner Health Care, Inc. v. Estate of Edwards, 964 So. 2d 1138 (Miss. 2007).

When an injured employee, who brought suit against her employer and a related casino alleging bad faith in connection to her workers' compensation claim, failed to comply with a trial court's discovery deadline, the trial court properly struck the employee's expert's affidavit. Buchanan v. Ameristar Casino Vicksburg, Inc., 957 So. 2d 969 (Miss. 2007).

Court properly denied defendant's motion for relief from a default judgment in plaintiff's action to recover damages for timber that was cut from land; plaintiff was not required to first obtain an entry of default by the clerk of the court, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 55(a), prior to obtaining the default judgment based on the entirely separate ground of discovery abuse, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(C). Miss. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(C) is a totally distinct avenue for obtaining a default judgment than the provisions of Miss. R. Civ. P. 55. Hood v. Mordecai, 900 So. 2d 370 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 898 So. 2d 679 (Miss. 2005).

Although Miss. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2) gave a trial judge several options to compel a party to comply with discovery, and the decision to impose sanctions for discovery abuse was vested in the trial court's discretion, a trial court had to consider other alternatives before summarily dismissing a case, thereby depriving a litigant of his rights; the circumstances of the case did not warrant such an extreme and harsh remedy as a dismissal with prejudice. Harvey v. Stone County Sch. Dist., 862 So. 2d 545 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Sanction for providing an unsworn supplementation to a prior sworn response should possibly be monetary, but should not be the complete exclusion of that evidence, when an apparent good faith effort was made to disclose the evidence. Caracci v. International Paper Co., 699 So. 2d 546 (Miss. 1997).

Chancellor erred in imposing same discovery sanctions on second defendant that it imposed on first, where second defendant was not a named party in chancellor's earlier order compelling discovery. TXG Intrastate Pipeline Co. v. Grossnickle, 716 So. 2d 991 (Miss. 1997).

Imposition of monetary sanctions could not be upheld in absence of a discovery order which was violated. January v. Barnes, 621 So. 2d 915 (Miss. 1992).

Circuit judge did not err in assessing $500 sanction against plaintiff for his false answer to interrogatory, which neither he nor his counsel ever attempted to correct. Nichols v. Munn, 565 So. 2d 1132 (Miss. 1990).

M.R.C.P. Rule 37(c) did not contemplate sanctions where party denied requests for admissions which were, in effect, an accusation of arson, and therefore trial court did not err in failing to award sanctions for alleged discovery violations. Cooper v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co., 568 So. 2d 687 (Miss. 1990).

Trial court was required to state with particularity its reasons for denying defendant's motion for sanctions under subdivision (c) of this rule, and court's failure to comply with that requirement was error. Cooper v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co., 568 So. 2d 687 (Miss. 1990).

Sanctions properly denied.

Circuit court properly denied passenger's motion for sanctions against a truck driver and a trucking company under Miss. R. Civ. P. 37(c) for their failure to admit fault for the underlying accident in responses to requests for admission because they had reasonable grounds to conclude that the automobile driver's negligence contributed to the collision. While the truck driver and company admitted liability during the trial, the issue of whether automobile driver was partially at fault was an issue to be tried regardless of the fact that the truck driver and/or the company denied or conceded their negligence. Perkins v. Star Transp., Inc., 75 So. 3d 1065 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011), writ of certiorari denied by 76 So. 3d 169, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 556 (Miss. 2011).

Setting aside answer.

The trial court properly set aside the defendant's answer where (1) he was advised by his own attorney, both verbally and through certified mail, as well as the circuit clerk's mailed copy of the order compelling response to discovery, that discovery had to be complied with, yet he took no action, and (2) during a hearing held upon his motion to set aside the default judgment, he admitted that after he retained an attorney, he made no further contact with him even though he was aware of the pending action. Duckworth v. Strite, 748 So. 2d 794 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. Sanctions available under Rule 37, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, other than exclusion of expert testimony, for failure to obey discovery order not related to expert witness. 156 A.L.R. Fed. 601.

CHAPTER VI. TRIALS

Rule 38. Jury trial of right.

(a) Right preserved. The right of trial by jury as declared by the Constitution or any statute of the State of Mississippi shall be preserved to the parties inviolate.

(b) Waiver of jury trial. Parties to an action may waive their rights to a jury trial by filing with the court a specific, written stipulation that the right has been waived and requesting that the action be tried by the court. The court may, in its discretion, require that the action be tried by a jury notwithstanding the stipulation of waiver.

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 38 is to guarantee to litigants their right to a trial by jury as declared by § 31 of the Mississippi Constitution, while simultaneously providing for more flexibility in the uses of juries.

Rule 38(a) neither broadens nor restricts the pre-Rule 38 right to a trial by jury; it takes a neutral position and affirms the right to a trial by jury in cases where it was guaranteed before the Rule. See In re Extension of Boundaries of City of Meridian, 237 Miss. 486, 115 So.2d 323 (1959) (Miss. Cõnst. § 31 applies only to those cases where a jury trial was required at common law); Talbot & Higgins Lumber Co. v. McLeod Lumber Co., 147 Miss. 186, 113 So. 433 (1927).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Waiver.

In general.

Neither Art. 3, § 31 of the Mississippi Constitution nor M.R.C.P. 38, both of which provide for the right to a jury trial, require that right extend to appellate proceedings. Cockrell v. City of Southaven, 730 So. 2d 1119 (Miss. 1998), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 817, 120 S. Ct. 57, 145 L. Ed. 2d 50 (1999).

Chancery court was not required to transfer case to circuit court in order to provide injured bus passengers with a jury trial, where plaintiff insurer, in good faith, interpled $25,000 coverage on bus involved, and chancellor, in good faith, received and proceeded with jurisdiction of case in his court. Cossitt v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 551 So. 2d 879 (Miss. 1989).

Waiver.

An implied waiver cannot be derived from a plaintiff's election of forum; a specific, written stipulation waiving the right to a jury is required. Burnette v. Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co., 770 So. 2d 948 (Miss. 2000).

Rule 39. Trial by jury or by the court. [Omitted].

COMMENT

Federal Rule 38 requires that a party desiring a trial by jury demand same in writing; if such a demand is not timely made, the right to trial by jury may be deemed waived and the action will be tried by the court. Federal Rule 39 prescribes the procedures for designating on the docket which actions are to be tried by a jury and which by the court.

Mississippi Rule 38 merely recites that a party's right to a jury trial is unabridged by these rules, but permits the right to be waived. There is no need for docketing actions according to whether they are to be tried by the court or by a jury; hence, Rule 39 is omitted.

Rule 40. Assignment of cases for trial.

(a) Methods. Courts shall provide for placing of actions upon the trial calendar

(1) without request of the parties; or

(2) upon request of a party and notice to the other parties; or,

(3) in such other manner as the court deems expedient.

Prior to the calling of a case for trial, the parties shall be afforded ample opportunity, in the sound discretion of the court, for completion of discovery.

(b) Notice. The court shall provide by written direction to the clerk when a trial docket will be set. The clerk shall at least five (5) days prior to the date on which the trial docket will be set notify all attorneys and parties without attorneys having cases upon the trial calendar of the time, place, and date when said docket shall be set. All cases shall be set on the trial docket at least twenty (20) days before the date set for trial unless a shorter period is agreed upon by all parties or is available under Rule 55. The trial docket shall be prepared by the clerk at the time actions are set for trial and shall state the case to be tried, the date of trial, the attorneys of record in the case, and the place of trial. Additionally, said trial docket shall reflect such attorneys of record and parties representing themselves as were present personally or by designee when the trial docket was set. The clerk shall within three (3) days after a case has been placed on the trial docket notify all parties who were not present personally or by their attorney of record at the docket setting as to their trial setting. Notice shall be by personal delivery or by mailing of a notice within said three (3) day period. Matters in which a defendant is summoned to appear and defend at a time and place certain pursuant to Rule 81 or in which a date, time and place for trial have been previously set shall not be governed by this rule.

(c) Trial by agreement. Parties, including those who are in a representative or judicial capacity, may waive any waiting period imposed by these rules or statute and agree to a time and place for trial. (Amended effective July 1, 1986; September 1, 1987; March 1, 1989.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective March 1, 1989, Rule 40(a) was amended by abrogating reference to local rules. 536-538 So. 2d XXX (West Miss. Cas. 1989).

Effective September 1, 1987, Rule 40 was amended by adding subsection (c) providing for the scheduling of trials by agreement of the parties. 508-511 So. 2d XXVIII (West Miss. Cas. 1987).

Effective July 1, 1986, Rule 40(b) was amended by substantially rewriting it to shorten the time period provided for giving interested attorneys and parties notice of the setting of the trial docket; to provide for at least twenty days between the time of the setting of a case on the docket and the time of the trial; to provide for certain information to be recorded on the docket; and for other purposes. 486-490 So. 2d XXI (West Miss. Cas. 1986).

COMMENT

Rule 40 establishes an orderly but flexible method of scheduling cases for trial, while assuring that the parties receive appropriate notice at important stages of the process. It accomplishes this function through the mechanisms of the trial calendar and the trial docket. The trial calendar, also required by Rule 79(c), is a list of pending actions that the court has found ready for trial. The order in which the cases appear on the trial calendar generally corresponds to the order in which they will be tried. Rule 40(a) requires that each court define the method of placing actions on the trial calendar. The precise method chosen is within the court's discretion, subject only to the requirement that it allow adequate time for discovery.

The trial docket reflects the trial dates for cases on the trial calendar, and is governed by Rule 40(b). The rule requires that the trial docket be prepared at the time the cases are set down for trial and that it state (i) the date, time, and place of trial; (ii) the names of the attorneys of record; (iii) and the names of attorneys and litigants who were present when the case was set for trial. Rule 40(b) requires that at least five (5) days notice be given to litigants of the date the case is to be set down for trial. This provision will allow attorneys and litigants the opportunity to be heard in the scheduling of their case for trial.

In addition, Rule 40(b) requires that the trial date be at least twenty (20) days after the time the case is set for trial, unless the parties agree to a shorter period. The purpose of this requirement is, of course, to allow the parties adequate time to prepare for trial. Parties who are present at the setting receive notice of the date and time of trial at that time. Rule 40(b) requires the clerk to mail or personally to deliver notice of the date and time of trial within three (3) days to all parties not present or represented by their attorney at the setting. Thus, all parties will have received notice of the date, time and place of trial seventeen (17) days before that date, less the time necessary for the delivery of notice by mail. This time is adequate, first, since all cases covered by the rule will already have been found ready for trial under Rule 40(a). Moreover, all parties will have received notice of the setting of the docket and will therefore be aware that their trial may be imminent.

The twenty-day waiting period is inapplicable to hearings conducted by the court in connection with default judgments under Rule 55.

Rule 40(b) is subject to two (2) general exceptions. First, in actions in which the defendant is summoned to appear at a particular time and place, the rule is inapplicable, although in such cases, the court should give all parties notice appropriate to the nature of the case. Second, if a case has been placed on the trial docket under Rule 40(b) and for whatever reason is not tried at the scheduled time, the court may reschedule the trial for any date without further notice. To require five (5) days notice of the resetting and twenty (20) days notice of trial in all such cases would unduly hinder the prompt rescheduling of cases that are fully prepared for trial.

1985 Revision. Rule 40(b) was completely revised in 1985. The earlier version of the rule was ambiguous, but appeared to require that parties be given twenty (20) days notice of the proceeding at which the trial calendar is prepared, but established no mandatory time between that proceeding and the trial date. The committee determined that this rule required too much notice of the date the case was to be set, and failed to require adequate notice of the trial date.

Paragraphs (a) and (b) provide the manner in which a trial date is obtained in instances where parties are unable to agree on such date. Paragraph (c), added in 1987, makes clear that parties are not bound to follow the formalities of paragraphs (a) and (b), but may agree upon a trial date. Paragraph (c) also provides that any rule or statutory waiting period required prior to hearing or trial may be waived by parties, including those in a representative or fiduciary capacity.

[Amended effective September 1, 1987; March 1, 1989.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Notice.

In general.

The parties to the action did not agree to a trial date and the clerk did not provide mandatory written notice of the trial date; thus, the judgment should have been set aside and a new trial date fixed. King v. King, 556 So. 2d 716 (Miss. 1990).

Notice.

Trial court did not err in denying appellant's motion to set aside a judgment entered in favor of appellees because appellant had sufficient notice of his trial when he admittedly signed the agreed order setting the trial, appellant's presence at the hearing for setting the trial date was sufficient notice to satisfy Miss. R. Civ. P. 40(b), and his agreement to reschedule the trial date was explicitly allowed under Rule 40(c); appellant provided no evidence that the trial court awarded relief to appellees based solely on the fact that he was not present on the day of trial because testimony and other documentary evidence were received and admitted into evidence. Dufrene v. Slade, 21 So. 3d 703 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Chancery court was not required, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 40(b), to send a husband notice of a divorce hearing because the husband did not respond to the chancery court regarding the action, after he was personally served with process, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(h), within 120 days of the filing of the complaint by a wife. Carlisle v. Carlisle, 11 So. 3d 142 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Appellate court in no way suggests, intimates or holds that the date of a divorce trial must be set on the trial docket at least 20 days prior to trial. In many instances, if not most, complaints for divorce may be set for trial outside of the normal docket setting of the civil trial docket because a divorce case may not be set down on the issue docket unless at the request of one of the parties. Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-7. The appellate court simply holds that once a party appears in a temporary phase of the divorce proceeding, the party is entitled to notice of the subsequent hearing on the underlying divorce proceeding unless the party is so notified during the temporary proceeding. Brown v. Brown, 872 So. 2d 787 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Subsection (b) does not require that a notice of hearing be sent to a party who never answered the complaint. Stinson v. Stinson, 738 So. 2d 1259 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

The notice requirement of subsection (b) does not apply to the uncontested motion schedule. Stinson v. Stinson, 738 So. 2d 1259 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Although the mailing of a notice to an incorrect address — the last number in the zip code was incorrect — negated the presumption of delivery, the trial court properly found that there was proper and timely delivery based on the evidence. Thames v. Smith Ins. Agency, Inc., 710 So. 2d 1213 (Miss. 1998).

Rule 41. Dismissal of actions.

(a) Voluntary dismissal effect thereof.

(1) By Plaintiff By Stipulation. Subject to the provisions of Rule 66, or of any statute of the State of Mississippi, and upon the payment of all costs, an action may be dismissed by the plaintiff without order of court:

(i) by filing a notice of dismissal at any time before service by the adverse party of an answer or of a motion for summary judgment, whichever first occurs; or

(ii) by filing a stipulation of dismissal signed by all parties who have appeared in the action.

Unless otherwise stated in the notice of dismissal or stipulation, the dismissal is without prejudice.

(2) By Order of Court. Except as provided in paragraph (a)(1) of this rule, an action shall not be dismissed at the plaintiff's instance save upon order of the court and upon such terms and conditions as the court deems proper. If a counter-claim has been pleaded by a defendant prior to the service upon him of the plaintiff's motion to dismiss, the action may be dismissed but the counter-claim shall remain pending for adjudication by the court. Unless otherwise specified in the order, a dismissal under this paragraph is without prejudice.

(b) Involuntary dismissal: effect thereof. For failure of the plaintiff to prosecute or to comply with these rules or any order of court, a defendant may move for dismissal of an action or of any claim against him. After the plaintiff, in an action tried by the court without a jury, has completed the presentation of his evidence, the defendant, without waiving his right to offer evidence in the event the motion is not granted, may move for a dismissal on the ground that upon the facts and the law the plaintiff has shown no right to relief. The court may then render judgment against the plaintiff or may decline to render any judgment until the close of all the evidence. If the court renders judgment on the merits against the plaintiff, the court may make findings as provided in Rule 52(a). Unless the court in its order for dismissal otherwise specifies, a dismissal under this subdivision and any other dismissal not provided for in this rule, other than a dismissal for lack of jurisdiction, for improper venue, or for failure to join a party under Rule 19, operates as an adjudication upon the merits.

(c) Dismissal of counter-claim, cross-claim or third-party claim. The provisions of this rule apply to the dismissal of any counter-claim, cross-claim, or third-party claim. A voluntary dismissal by the claimant alone pursuant to paragraph (a)(1) of this rule shall be made before a responsive pleading is served or, if there is none, before the introduction of evidence at the trial or hearing.

(d) Dismissal on clerk's motion.

(1) Notice. In all civil actions wherein there has been no action of record during the preceding twelve months, the clerk of the court shall mail notice to the attorneys of record that such case will be dismissed by the court for want of prosecution unless within thirty days following said mailing, action of record is taken or an application in writing is made to the court and good cause shown why it should be continued as a pending case. If action of record is not taken or good cause is not shown, the court shall dismiss each such case without prejudice. The cost of filing such order of dismissal with the clerk shall not be assessed against either party.

(2) Mailing Notice. The notice shall be mailed in every eligible case not later than thirty days before June 15 and December 15 of each year, and all such cases shall be presented to the court by the clerk for action therein on or before June 30 and December 31 of each year. These deadlines shall not be interpreted as a prohibition against mailing of notice and dismissal thereon as cases may become eligible for dismissal under this rule. This rule is not a limitation upon any other power that the court may have to dismiss any action upon motion or otherwise.

(e) Cost of previously dismissed action. If a plaintiff whose action has once been dismissed in any court commences an action based upon or including the same claim against the same defendant, the court may make such order for the payment of costs of the action previously dismissed as it may deem proper and may stay the proceedings in the action until the plaintiff has complied with the order.

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 41 is to establish a uniform rule governing voluntary and involuntary dismissals of actions. Rule 41(a), which permits a plaintiff voluntarily to dismiss his action, is intended to give him the right to take the case out of court if no other party will be prejudiced. The right is limited by the rule to the period before answer or motion for summary judgment; thereafter dismissal can be had only with consent of the court and on such conditions as are just.

Rule 41(a)(1) provides two methods by which a plaintiff may dismiss an action without obtaining the consent of the court: He may do so at any time by stipulation of all the parties; he may do so prior to service of an answer or of a motion for summary judgment by his own unilateral act of filing a notice of dismissal with the court.

The defenses listed in Rule 12(b) may, at the option of the defendant, be asserted in an answer or by motion to dismiss. If they are included in an answer, the service of the answer terminates plaintiff's right to dismiss by notice. Plaintiff's right of voluntary dismissal is not cut off if the defense is put forward by motion to dismiss. A motion to dismiss is neither an answer nor, unless accompanied by affidavits stating matters outside the pleadings that are not excluded by the court, a motion for summary judgment; a motion to dismiss does not terminate the right of dismissal by notice, nor does a motion for a stay or a motion for change of venue.

The other procedure for voluntary dismissal, in addition to dismissal by notice, a dismissal by stipulation of all the parties. Dismissal by stipulation may be had at any time. A stipulation will not be construed as being for dismissal in the absence of an unequivocal statement by the parties that it was so intended.

Dismissal by stipulation is without prejudice unless the stipulation provides that it is to be with prejudice. A voluntary dismissal by stipulation is effective immediately and does not require judicial approval.

The procedure under MRCP 41(a)(1) is contrary to past Mississippi nonsuit practice, which permitted the plaintiff to voluntarily dismiss his suit without prejudice at any time before the case was submitted to the jury. Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-125; See also Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-127 (1972) (plaintiff may take a nonsuit before the clerk in vacation); Allison v. Camp Creek Drainage Dist., 211 Miss. 354, 364, 51 So.2d 743, 747 (1951) (plaintiff in chancery action may nonsuit without prejudice up to time cause is submitted to chancellor for final decision on the merits); but see Adams v. Lucedale Commercial Co., 113 Miss. 608, 74 So. 435 (1917). It is also contrary to practice under Federal Rule 41(a), which permits only one voluntary nonsuit at any time before defendant's responsive pleading is made.

Although Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-27-125 and 11-27-127 (1972) are couched in terms ostensibly granting an absolute right to the plaintiff to nonsuit before the cause is submitted, the statutes have not been so interpreted, particularly in chancery practice: "When in any respect the cause has proceeded to that point . . . that the defendant has . . . secured some substantial right which would be destroyed by the dismissal, it should not be permitted." Mitchell v. Film Transit Co., 194 Miss. 550, 13 So.2d 154 (1943). See also V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice, § 534 (2d ed. 1950).

The trial court has no power to impose terms and conditions if a plaintiff properly dismisses by notice under Rule 41(a)(1). Nor may the plaintiff seek to make a conditional dismissal under that portion of the rule. If dismissal is by stipulation under Rule 41(a)(1), the parties work out for themselves the conditions on which they will enter into the stipulation. Accordingly, the authority of the court to require "such terms and conditions as the court deems proper" is limited to a motion for dismissal under Rule 41(a)(2).

The terms of conditions that may be imposed upon the granting of a motion for voluntary dismissal are for the protection of the defendant, although if one of several plaintiffs moves for dismissal conditions may be imposed for the protection of the remaining plaintiffs. The court may dismiss without conditions if they have not been shown to be necessary, but should at least require that the plaintiff pay the costs of the litigation. In imposing conditions the court is not limited to taxable costs, but may require the plaintiff to compensate for all of the expenses to which his adversary has been put; the court may require plaintiff to pay the defendant's attorney's fees as well as other costs and disbursements.

Dismissal on motion under Rule 41(a)(2) is within the sound discretion of the court, and its order is reviewable only for abuse of discretion. The discretion given the court by Rule 41(a)(2) is a judicial, rather than an arbitrary, discretion. If necessary, a hearing should be held and the court should endeavor to ensure substantial justice to both parties.

The purpose of Rule 41(a)(2) is primarily to prevent voluntary dismissal which unfairly affects the other side, and to permit the imposition of curative conditions. Accordingly, the dismissal should be allowed generally unless the defendant will suffer some plain legal prejudice other than the mere prospect of a second law suit. It is not a bar to dismissal that plaintiff may obtain some tactical advantage thereby.

The second sentence of Rule 41(a)(2) provides that if a counter-claim has been pleaded by a defendant prior to the service upon him of the plaintiff's motion to dismiss, the action shall not be dismissed against the defendant's objection unless the counter-claim can remain pending for independent adjudication by the court. The purpose of the rule is to preserve the court's jurisdiction over the parties and the counter-claim. Ordinarily the counter-claim can stand on its own and dismissal can be granted without affecting the counter-claim. If the counter-claim is compulsory, the court has jurisdiction to decide it even though the plaintiff claim is dismissed; if the counter-claim is permissive, it will ordinarily require independent grounds for jurisdiction and these independent grounds permit it to remain pending. Thus, the rule applies only when there is a permissive counter-claim that can be maintained without an independent ground of jurisdiction, as when it is a setoff, or in other unusual circumstances in which the counter-claim would fall if the plaintiff's claim were dismissed.

Rule 41(b) allows the court to dismiss an action involuntarily for three different causes: dismissal at the close of the plaintiff's evidence for failure to show a right to relief, which operates as a decision on the merits, dismissal for want of prosecution, which is a penalty for dilatoriness, See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-53-25 (1972) (dismissal for want of prosecution); and dismissal for failure to comply with "these rules" or any order of the court; see Sherwin Williams Co. v. Feld Bros. & Co., 139 Miss. 21, 28, 103 So. 795, 796 (1925) (plaintiff may be nonsuited by the court for failure to comply with order to make declaration more specific). Unless otherwise specifically ordered by the court, an involuntary dismissal under Rule 41(b) ordinarily operates as an adjudication upon the merits and is with prejudice. See 9 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 2369-2373 (1971). However, past Mississippi practice has tempered this harsh result by allowing dismissed cases to be reinstituted, except in extreme situations. See, e. g. Ross v. Milner, 194 Miss. 497, 505-06, 12 So.2d 917, 918 (1943) (where order did not recite that cause was dismissed without prejudice, it was considered as being dismissed with prejudice); Peoples Bank v. D'Lo Royalties, Inc., 206 So.2d 836, 837 (Miss.1968) (dismissal is a drastic punishment which should not be invoked except where conduct of parties has been so deliberately careless as to call for such action).

Rule 41(c) provides that the other subdivisions of Rule 41, stating the procedures for and consequences of dismissals, apply to the dismissal of a counter-claim, cross-claim, or third-party claim.

One exception is allowed for Rule 41(c) matters because the right of voluntary dismissal with notice, MRCP 41(a)(1), is terminated by an answer. This will not work for counter-claims, cross-claims, or third-party claims, since defendant will ordinarily assert these with or subsequent to his answer. Accordingly, Rule 41(c) provides that a voluntary dismissal by a defendant, or other claimant, of a counter-claim, cross-claim, or third-party claim must be made before a responsive pleading is served or, if none, before the introduction of evidence at the trial. MRCP 41(a)(1) also provides that the service of a motion for summary judgment also terminates the right to dismiss by notice. As a matter of logic and judicial consistency, if a motion for summary judgment defeats plaintiff's right to dismiss, then it should also defeat the right of a defendant to dismiss his counter-claim, cross-claim, or third-party claim. See 9 Wright & Miller, supra, § 2374.

Rule 41(d) authorizes the clerk to move for dismissal of cases in which there has been no action of record during the preceding 12 months. The clerk is required to give notice of such action to the opposing parties who may counter the clerk's motion to retain the case on the court's docket. This provision supersedes Miss. Code Ann. § 11-53-25 (1972) (clerk shall move for dismissal of any cause pending in which no action has been taken for the two preceding terms). The statute did not require notice of the dismissal — the parties were deemed to be before the court in cases pending on the active docket. Ross v. Milner, supra. If a court has implemented the Mississippi Electronic Court System, the notice required by Rule 41(d) may be sent in the same manner as other notices consistent with the Mississippi Electronic Court System procedures. Please refer to the Administrative Procedures for Mississippi Electronic Court System on the Supreme Court's website at www.mssc.state.ms.us.

Under Rule 41(e), if a plaintiff who has once dismissed an action in any court commences another action on the same claim against the same defendant, the court may require the payment of costs in the prior action before proceeding with the latter. The matter is discretionary with the court. Rule 41(e) by its terms is applicable only when the plaintiff "has once dismissed an action"; thus, it does not cover cases in which there was an involuntary dismissal of the prior action by the court. This accords with prior practice pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-7-127 and 11-53-25 (1972). (Comment amended December 11, 2008).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Construction.
Applicability.
Abuse of discretion.
Bench trials.
Dismissal for discovery misconduct.
Dismissal not warranted.
Dismissal warranted.
Dismissal without prejudice.
Failure to prosecute.
Findings.
Reinstitution of cases.
Requirements.
Res judicata.
Review.
Waiver.
What constitues "application in writing."

In general.

Aggravating factors to be considered include: (1) the extent to which the plaintiff, as distinguished from his counsel, was personally responsible for the delay, (2) the degree of actual prejudice to the defendant, and (3) whether the delay was the result of intentional conduct. Hillman v. Weatherly, 14 So. 3d 721 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in dismissing without prejudice, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b), the claims of severed plaintiffs which were not properly filed in Noxubee County; the trial court's actions were in conformity with a procedure later prescribed by the supreme court where upon plaintiffs could refile in a proper venue. Gordon v. Honeywell Int'l., Inc., 962 So. 2d 547 (Miss. 2007).

Where a divorce action was filed ten years earlier and temporary support was ordered, it was properly not considered the line of demarcation for the equitable division of marital assets because the case was subsequently dismissed as being stale under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41; the dismissal relieved the husband of his support obligations. Marshall v. Marshall, 979 So. 2d 699 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

There was nothing to prevent a chancellor in one case from dismissing litigation in another case, pursuant to the parties' agreement. Hayes v. Leflore County Bd. of Supervisors, 935 So. 2d 1015 (Miss. 2006).

Because the driver failed to prove that the State Aid defendants were negligent, the trial court properly dismissed the State Aid defendants under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b). Ladner v. Stone County, 938 So. 2d 270 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 937 So. 2d 450, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 542 (Miss. 2006).

Trial court's grant of the county's motion for voluntary dismissal without prejudice was an adverse and final appealable order, and the award of attorney's fees under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2) was well supported but the reasonableness of fee amount was never substantiated, therefore the fee award was vacated and the case was remanded for the trial court to determine the reasonableness of the fees pursuant to the factors provided in Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.5. BellSouth Pers. Commun., LLC v. Bd. of Supervisors, 912 So. 2d 436 (Miss. 2005).

Paramedic testified that the "hallmark signs" of a placental abruption, excruciating pain and excessive bleeding, were not present, and both paramedics testified that they did not see blood. The pregnant employee testified that blood was not found because her co-workers had wiped the blood from the floor, but the trial court properly found that since neither paramedic testified that they saw blood then it could only find such a decision to be discretionary; therefore, given that the employee's condition was abnormal, whether to have treated the situation as a "load and go" required the paramedics to use their own judgment, the trial court correctly deemed the paramedic's decision as discretionary, and it correctly granted the city's motion to dismiss the wrongful death action under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b). Sanders v. Riverboat Corp., 913 So. 2d 351 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Power to dismiss for failure to prosecute under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b) was inherent in any court of law or equity, being a means necessary to the orderly expedition of justice and the court's control of its own docket; no action in the client's case had been taken during the preceding 12 months and no application was made and good cause shown why his case should not have been dismissed, and the client's motion for reconsideration was void as it was not timely filed. Curry v. Walls, 871 So. 2d 762 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In the context of reviewing a dismissal for failure to prosecute under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b), there is no requirement that a party must be represented by an attorney, and dismissing a party's lawsuit simply because that party does not acquire an attorney is clearly an abuse of discretion. Camacho v. Chandeleur Homes, Inc., 862 So. 2d 540 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Though the testimony of a natural mother and maternal grandmother of an adopted child in support of the mother's complaint to revoke consent suggested at least an inference of undue influence, the chancellor had the opportunity to observe the witnesses' manner and demeanor; accordingly, the chancellor did not manifestly err by finding that the mother had failed to meet her burden of proof or err in granting dismissal to the adoptive parents under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b). C.T. v. R.D.H. (In re D.N.T.), 843 So. 2d 690 (Miss. 2003).

Federal court granted plaintiffs' motion to dismiss the removed action where plaintiffs filed a stipulation of dismissal in the state court action under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(a) after the notice of removal had been filed in the federal court but before the state court had been notified of the removal, as the state court's jurisdiction continued until it had notice of the removal, and the filing of defendants' answer in federal court had no effect on the state court's jurisdiction. Davis v. Estate of Harrison, 214 F. Supp. 2d 695 (S.D. Miss. 2002).

The applicable standard of review to an appeal of grant or denial of a motion to dismiss is substantial evidence/manifest error. Alexander v. Brown, 793 So. 2d 601 (Miss. 2001).

The rule is clear and unambiguous on its face and admits of no exceptions that call for the exercise of judicial discretion by any court; other than to determine, should the question arise, whether an answer or a motion for summary judgment has in fact been filed prior to the filing of a notice of dismissal, a court has no function under the rule. McGriggs v. Montgomery, 710 So. 2d 886 (Ct. App. 1998).

Unless otherwise specifically ordered by the court, an involuntary dismissal under subsection (b) ordinarily operates as an adjudication upon the merits and is with prejudice. Taylor v. GMC, 717 So. 2d 747 (Miss. 1998).

Standard of review applicable on motion to dismiss under subdivision (b) of this rule is distinguished from that applicable on motion for directed verdict. Stewart v. Merchants Nat'l Bank, 700 So. 2d 255 (Miss. 1997).

Construction.

Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b) embodies the tenet that any court of law or equity may exercise the power to dismiss for want of prosecution; this power, inherent to the courts, is necessary as a means to the orderly expedition of justice and the court's control of its own docket. However, the remedy of dismissal with prejudice is an extreme and harsh sanction that deprives a litigant of the opportunity to pursue his claim, and any dismissals with prejudice are reserved for the most egregious cases; what constitutes failure to prosecute is considered on a case-by-case basis. Hillman v. Weatherly, 14 So. 3d 721 (Miss. 2009).

Case should be dismissed with prejudice under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b) only if lesser sanctions are inadequate; lesser sanctions include fines, costs, or damages against plaintiff or his counsel, attorney disciplinary measures, conditional dismissal, dismissal without prejudice, and explicit warnings. Where there is no indication in the record that the lower court considered any alternative sanctions to expedite the proceedings, appellate courts are less likely to uphold a Rule 41(b) dismissal. Hillman v. Weatherly, 14 So. 3d 721 (Miss. 2009).

Letter in response to a Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(d) motion for dismissal that simply requests that a case remain on the docket is an action of record when the letter is: (1) timely sent within the 30-day period which begins upon the filing of the motion; (2) found to be a sufficient action on the record and that finding is not in contradiction to an existing statute or decision of the Supreme Court of Mississippi; and (3) considered as part of a hearing where the trial court determined good cause existed for allowing the case to remain on its docket. Cucos, Inc. v. McDaniel, 938 So. 2d 238 (Miss. 2006).

Under subdivision (b) of this rule, dismissal for lack of jurisdiction does not operate as an adjudication on the merits. Jones v. Starr, 586 So. 2d 788 (Miss. 1991).

Subdivision (a)(2) of this rule could not be interpreted and interposed to prevent State of Mississippi and Attorney General from proceeding with chancery court matter until they paid intervenor's attorneys' fees. State ex rel. Pittman v. Griffin, 450 So. 2d 426 (Miss. 1984).

Applicability.

Order of dismissal from the justice court stated that the matter came on the "motion of the defendant requesting this Court to dismiss the appeal filed herein," and the clerk's docket entry did not indicate that a written motion to dismiss was filed; there was no transcript of a proceeding that would indicate that an oral motion was presented to the court, and there appeared to be no basis under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41 for the circuit court to have dismissed this action. Statham v. Miller, 988 So. 2d 407 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Although the proper motion would have been one for an involuntary dismissal, a trial court erred when it granted a directed verdict in an action alleging fraud, breach of contract, and negligence because the evidence showed that a travel company held itself out as an agent of a foreign company operating an airplane, and an airport authority would not have incurred advertising costs had it known the true facts. Gulfport-Biloxi Reg'l Airport Auth. v. Montclair Travel Agency, Inc., 937 So. 2d 1000 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Circuit court erred in its application of the law when it denied a bank's motion to substitute itself as a plaintiff and to dismiss the litigation; the bank purchased the lawsuit as a chose in action when a summary judgment against a corporation was executed, and as such the bank owned the lawsuit, and it could substitute itself as a party. Citizens Nat'l Bank v. Dixieland Forest Prods., LLC, 935 So. 2d 1004 (Miss. 2006).

Even though presented as a summary judgment motion, the chancellor's dismissal of the buyers' complaint for lack of evidence was best categorized as an involuntary dismissal under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b); although the seller moved for summary judgment, he substantively argued a motion to dismiss, and the appellate court would not hold him in error for that. Little v. Miller, 909 So. 2d 1256 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Although defendant argued that the trial court erred in dismissing his appeal because it was dismissed by means of a procedure for dismissal of state civil, not criminal cases, and the appellate court initially agreed that Miss. R. Civ. P. 5 and 41 applied to civil and not criminal cases; an appeal was not perfected until a written notice of appeal and a cost bond were filed within 30 days of the judgment appealed, such that both a cost and appearance bond were required in appeals from municipal courts, and no Mississippi case permitted the filing of the required bonds past the 30-day appeal time. Riley v. Town of Lambert, 856 So. 2d 721 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial court properly dismissed former university professor's tortious interference with contract claim against the university that formerly employed her and its officials because the professor's claim was covered by the Mississippi Tort Claims Act, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-1 et seq.; accordingly, the professor had to comply with the Act's requirements as it was the exclusive remedy for the professor under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-7(1); furthermore, the professor's claim was time-barred under Miss. Code Ann § 11-46-11(3) as it was not timely filed. Black v. Ansah, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 502 (Miss. Ct. App. June 3, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 876 So. 2d 395, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 948 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where attorneys in trespass action discovered, on the day of trial, that plaintiffs had conveyed property in question to their daughter some five months earlier, trial court correctly granted plaintiffs' motion for a voluntary dismissal, with refiling of action conditioned upon payment of defendants' legal expenses incurred from date of conveyance to date of trial. Roebuck v. City of Aberdeen, 671 So. 2d 49 (Miss. 1996).

Chancellor properly dismissed husband's request to reduce child support payments; husband's admitted failure to report cash payments prevented him from showing the requisite inability to pay awarded amount of child support, and thus husband failed to prove the essential element of a material change in circumstances. Herrington v. Herrington, 660 So. 2d 215 (Miss. 1995).

Trial court's dismissal of intervenor as a party defendant did not constitute dismissal of action, and thus intervenor's argument that this rule required its consent before its dismissal as a party was not applicable. Country Club of Jackson, Inc. v. Saucier, 498 So. 2d 337 (Miss. 1986).

Abuse of discretion.

Trial court abused its discretion in dismissing an action for failure to obtain counsel, as: (1) there was no factual basis to support the entry of the order of dismiss all; (2) the procedural requirements were not followed and proper notice was not permitted by the court's action because Miss. R. Civ. P. 6 required that defendants give plaintiffs notice of their motion to dismiss and at least five days to respond, but the court entered an order one day after the motion was executed; and (3) there was no legal basis to support the dismissal because there was no requirement that a party be represented by an attorney. Holly v. Harrah's Tunica Corp., 962 So. 2d 136 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

While an adverse decision in a will contest was on appeal, the executor, who, acting pro se, had filed the appeal, filed a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or in the alternative, for a new trial, leading to the chancery court's imposition of sanctions; however, the executor had filed a notice of withdrawal of the motion, and on that same day, the decedent's daughter's attorney filed a motion for sanctions. While it was perhaps debatable whether the executor's motion for a new trial was considered an action within the meaning of Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(a), it was significant that the executor sought a dismissal before any responsive pleading was filed, thus,the appellate court held the chancery court had abused its discretion in ordering sanctions in the amount of $ 1,425, and reduced the amount of sanctions significantly. Volmer v. Volmer (In re Estate of Volmer), 869 So. 2d 1076 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Given the preference for merit-based dispositions of disputes, the chancellor abused his discretion in dismissing with prejudice a petition to establish heirship as a sanction for the petitioner's failure to return an automobile to the administratrix of the decedent's estate. Smith v. Hunter, 736 So. 2d 440 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Bench trials.

On appeal in favor of the son in the daughter's action seeking to set aside a conveyance of land to the son, the motion made in the case was improperly denominated as a motion for a directed verdict under Miss. R. Civ. P. 50(a). In a bench trial, the proper motion to make at the close of the case-in-chief was a motion for involuntary dismissal under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b). Lynch v. Summerlin (In re Summerlin), 989 So. 2d 466 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Dismissal for discovery misconduct.

Medical malpractice complaint was properly dismissed with prejudice because, when plaintiffs (1) did not submit answers to interrogatories until 435 days past the deadline in Miss. R. Civ. P. 33(b)(3), (2) did not begin discovery until almost a year past the deadline in Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 4.04(A), and (3) did not reply to the motion to dismiss within ten days, under Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 4.03(2), it was unnecessary to show plaintiffs' contumacious conduct, prejudice from plaintiffs' unreasonable delay was presumed, even though defendants did not show witnesses' fading memories and no aggravating factors were present, and lesser sanctions would not suffice, since the case was not an isolated incident of one missed deadline or a short, delayed response. Holder v. Orange Grove Med. Specialties, P.A., 54 So. 3d 192 (Miss. 2010).

Dismissal of action for discovery misconduct was proper where requested documentation regarding revenues and expenses was not produced, despite court orders, by employee who was alleging improper termination of his employment, and the willfulness and bad faith of the employee was clearly demonstrated where he refused to answer interrogatories and to produce documents for well over one year, in the face of at least two court orders. Smith v. Tougaloo College, 805 So. 2d 633 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Dismissal not warranted.

Dismissal of the patient's medical-negligence action under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b) was inappropriate because there was no clear record of actual prejudice caused to the physician or medical center, or even that of presumptive prejudice, and the delays were solely the result of the negligence of plaintiff's counsel; thus, the trial court erred in its decision to dismiss the patient's case with prejudice and should have applied lesser sanctions. Holder v. Orange Grove Med. Specialties, P.A., 54 So. 3d 244 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), reversed by 54 So. 3d 192, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 640 (Miss. 2010).

In a case in which plaintiff filed a petition to perpetuate testimony in a circuit court, the matter was then removed to federal court, wherein plaintiff sought dismissal, and plaintiff filed a complaint in the circuit court raising the same claims against the same parties before the federal court had dismissed the matter, the circuit court erred in dismissing plaintiff's post-dismissal complaint because the record supported a finding that the federal court's dismissal was based upon a "matter of form" not affecting the merits—namely, a lack of jurisdiction due to the absence of a complaint—as its order stated that no "civil action" yet existed. Plaintiff had inadvertently found himself in a procedural quagmire, but he made a good-faith effort to preserve his claim, at no time envincing an intent to abandon his claim, and, accordingly, application of the savings statute, Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-69, to his post-dismissal complaint was appropriate and consistent with the purposes of the statute because he filed the complaint within one year of the federal court's dismissal. Crawford v. Morris Transp., Inc., 990 So. 2d 162 (Miss. 2008).

Because two minor children were old enough to express their preference under Miss. Code Ann. § 93-11-65, a chancery court erred by dismissing a mother's custody modification request prior to hearing from the children; this would have been a main source of evidence regarding whether or not there was a substantial change of circumstances. Anderson v. Anderson, 961 So. 2d 55 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Trial court erred in dismissing plaintiffs' case without prejudice pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 11(a) and 41(b) based on the fact that plaintiffs were originally represented by a foreign attorney, who had not been admitted pro hac vice pursuant to Miss. R. App. P. 46 because a subsequent appearance by a member of the Mississippi bar cured the error; the foreign attorney's violation of Miss. R. App. P. 46 and La. St. Bar art. XVI, R. 5.5(a), which prohibited the unauthorized practice of law, warranted sanctions against the attorney and notification of the violation to the Louisiana state bar. Dinet v. Gavagnie, 948 So. 2d 1281 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in determining that plaintiffs' letter in response to the clerk's motion to dismiss, which requested that their personal injury action against the business not be dismissed, constituted an action of record such as would preclude a dismissal under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(d); additionally, considering the clerk's failure to record or file plaintiffs' letter, correctly identify the order to dismiss, or provide notice to plaintiffs that the order to dismiss was entered, the circumstances warranted relief under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(6). Cucos, Inc. v. McDaniel, 938 So. 2d 238 (Miss. 2006).

Mississippi Supreme Court adopted the federal test for associational standing; under that test, the Supreme Court found that the trial court erred in dismissing the manufactured housing association's bill of exceptions regarding the adoption of a zoning ordinance and map restricting manufactured housing developments in the city for lack of standing by the association because (1) one of the association's members owned property and managed a retail manufacturing housing center in the city; (2) the zoning decision would have a direct negative economic impact on any member of the association that sold manufactured homes in the city because their buyer's market would be diminished; and (3) the association's challenge to the city's zoning restrictions was of importance to the association's members. Miss. Manufactured Hous. Assn v. Bd. of Aldermen, 870 So. 2d 1189 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court had to consider other alternatives before summarily dismissing a case, thereby depriving a litigant of his rights; a reviewing court was less likely to uphold a Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b) dismissal when the lower court did not consider alternative sanctions, and the circumstances of the case did not warrant such an extreme and harsh remedy as a dismissal with prejudice. Harvey v. Stone County Sch. Dist., 862 So. 2d 545 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Dismissal with prejudice was inappropriate because there was no evidence of deliberate carelessness as to require drastic action, no evidence of prejudice or harm to defendant, and no evidence that lesser sanctions were considered by the court. Hoffman v. Paracelsus Health Care Corp., 752 So. 2d 1030 (Miss. 1999).

Dismissal warranted.

Trial court did not err in dismissing a mother's 1998 medical malpractice action with prejudice under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(d)(1) for failure to prosecute because from September 1999 to November 2002, the record was void of any actions by the mother to diligently pursue the cause of action; the mother was aware that the trial court had a duty to orderly dispose of the cases on its docket. Stacy v. Johnson, 25 So. 3d 365 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Dismissal under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b) and a finding that the decedent's grandchildren and his common-law wife's granddaughter failed to prove fraud in the transfer of title of real property was appropriate because the grandchildren clearly desired to transfer the subject property to granddaughter's psychiatrist's daughter and the daughter never stated that she was the granddaughter's daughter. Poe v. Summers, 11 So. 3d 129 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Dismissal under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b) was warranted in a case alleging undue influence because two daughters who participated in a conveyance of property were unable to assert that there was any undue influence asserted over their father; moreover, the evidence did not show that the father had a confidential relationship with the daughter who received the property. The father was not being cared for by the daughter who received the conveyances, she did not prepare the relevant documents, and the deeds at issue contained no language indicating that the father intended to reserve any rights in the property; in addition, the father was able to assist his attorney in his cause of action, and a guardian ad litem testified that the father was competent and did not require his services. Stevens v. Estate of Smith, 19 So. 3d 764 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 19 So. 3d 82, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 463 (Miss. 2009).

Dismissal of the passenger's action against the driver for personal injuries resulting from a car accident was appropriate under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b) due to the timing of the passenger's continuance request; her failure to provide documentation to support her mother's testimony; and the trial court's explicit instructions to the passenger to comply with the order or risk dismissal of her case. Wilson v. Nance, 4 So. 3d 336 (Miss. 2009).

Dismissal of a wrongful death suit was proper because the great-nephew lacked standing to institute a wrongful death suit under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-13, which conferred standing only to a decedent's spouse, parent, child, or sibling and not to distant relatives; the great-nephew also lacked standing because he was not the administrator of the decedent's estate when the wrongful death suit was commenced, and standing was to be determined as of the commencement of the action. Delta Health Group, Inc. v. Estate of Pope, 995 So. 2d 123 (Miss. 2008).

Involuntary dismissal under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b) was warranted because a disclaimer provision in a timber removal contract protected the Mississippi Forestry Commission from liability where the timber count was lower than the Commission's estimate; moreover, there was no negligent misrepresentation, fraud, or mistake due to the clear language of the disclaimer. Hazlehurst Lumber Co. v. Miss. Forestry Comm'n, 983 So. 2d 309 (Miss. 2008).

Dismissal without prejudice.

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in dismissing an injured party's claims of negligence, defective-design, and faulty product-inspection without prejudice, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b), because it was undisputed that no action of record took place for 19 months. Hill v. Ramsey, 3 So. 3d 120 (Miss. 2009).

Dismissal without prejudice, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 41, of a justice court complaint that included a claim for the recovery of repair costs did not preclude an award of the costs in a subsequent declaratory judgment action. Cavagnaro v. Coldwell Banker Alfonso Realty, Inc., 995 So. 2d 754 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 997 So. 2d 924, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 534 (Miss. 2008).

Failure to prosecute.

There is no set time limit for the prosecution of an action; a dismissal with prejudice will be affirmed only if there is a showing of a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct by the plaintiff, and where lesser sanctions would not serve the best interests of justice. The propriety of a dismissal with prejudice is bolstered by the presence of aggravating factors, including: (1) the extent to which the plaintiff, as distinguished from his counsel, was personally responsible for the delay, (2) the degree of actual prejudice to the defendant, and (3) whether the delay was the result of intentional conduct. Hillman v. Weatherly, 14 So. 3d 721 (Miss. 2009).

Circuit court was within its discretion in finding that there was a clear record of delay, that the interests of justice required no lesser sanction than dismissal with prejudice, and that aggravating factors were present in the form of the individual's personal responsibility for the delay and actual prejudice to the attorney; therefore, the circuit court did not abuse its discretion by dismissing the individual's complaint with prejudice under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b) for failure to prosecute. Hillman v. Weatherly, 14 So. 3d 721 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in dismissing an injured party's claims of negligence, defective-design, and faulty product-inspection without prejudice, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b), because it was undisputed that no action of record took place for 19 months. Hill v. Ramsey, 3 So. 3d 120 (Miss. 2009).

Where plaintiff wrongful death beneficiary filed a medical malpratice/wrongful death suit and failed to pursue the claim and where the wrongful death beneficiary essentially ignored the court clerk's first motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute filed five years after the filing of the complaint, the trial court did not err in granting the court clerk's second motion to dismiss filed 14 months after its first motion because the record established a clear history of delay stretching back more than five years, the delay presumptively prejudiced defendant health care providers, and the prejudice suffered by the health care providers could not be cured through a lesser sanction. Jenkins v. Tucker, 18 So. 3d 265 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 19 So. 3d 82, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 466 (Miss. 2009).

Widow's seven-year delay in taking any action in her suit against her deceased husband's employer other than letters to the clerk that were not served on the employer as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 5, and an absence of good cause shown for the delay, required dismissal of her action pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(d). Ill. Cent. R.R. Co. v. Moore, 994 So. 2d 723 (Miss. 2008).

Where a son sought to set aside a warranty deed that transferred property from the son's mother to a daughter, the case was properly dismissed for failure to prosecute because, inter alia, (1) there was a significant delay during the litigation, (2) lesser sanctions were considered, (3) the son bore some responsibility for the delay, (4) the daughter was prejudiced because of their mother's intervening death since the purpose of the mother's deposition was not to conduct discovery or elicit testimony for trial, and (5) it was not an abuse of discretion to refuse to provide specific findings of fact and conclusions of law. Cox v. Cox, 976 So. 2d 869 (Miss. 2008).

Pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b) and (d), the trial court did not err granting the doctor's motion and dismissing beneficiaries' case without prejudice for failure to prosecute as their conduct could be considered dilatory and trial court applied two, separate, lesser sanctions. Hasty v. Yoshinobu Namihira, 986 So. 2d 1036 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 987 So. 2d 451, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 370 (Miss. 2008).

Inmate's action against prison employees, alleging that the inmate was negligently denied proper medical treatment, was properly dismissed for want of prosecution pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(d) where the inmate gave no response to the clerk's motion as to why the case should not be dismissed; the trial court had no choice but to dismiss the action under the mandatory "shall dismiss" language of the rule. Madison v. Miss. Dep't of Corr., 966 So. 2d 216 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Dismissal of a wrongful death case based on counsel's failure to attend a special docket call was not improper even though the trial court erred in calculating the time that the case had been pending, because very little activity had occurred until the dismissal; moreover, the delay was caused by the parties bringing the suit because the first person filing lacked standing, and the second person waited until after the statute of limitations had expired to file. Tolliver ex rel. Wrongful Death Beneficiaries of Green v. Mladineo, 987 So. 2d 989 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Dismissal of a medical malpractice case under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41 was appropriate where no action was taken for four years, a first doctor was not served in the time required under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4, a patient failed to use other means of service available, service was not effectuated until the statute of limitations had expired, and proof of service was not filed until after the case was dismissed; there was no need to show contumacious conduct because there was a clear record of delay, and no lesser sanctions would have better served the interests of justice since the passage of time might have altered the evidence. Hensarling v. Holly, 972 So. 2d 716 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 973 So. 2d 244, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 2008).

Chancellor did not abuse his discretion in dismissing homeowners' complaint under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b) for failure to prosecute where homeowners admitted there had been significant delays and the chancellor's statements clearly showed that lesser sanctions were considered and rejected; also, the presence of aggravating factors was not necessary. Although some of the delays were caused by external factors, including the homeowner's battle with terminal kidney cancer and the breakup of the homeowners' marriage, the delays were not caused solely by illness and disability, but were due to a combination of factors, including the homeowners' financial constraints, which continued. Hine v. Anchor Lake Prop. Owners Ass'n, 911 So. 2d 1001 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Trial court erred in denying a summary judgment motion filed by a casino and its employee against the malicious prosecution claim filed by certain individuals. The individuals' first claim against the casino was dismissed for want of prosecution, and the savings clause in Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-69 did not prevent the second claim, which was based on the same facts, from being barred by the statute of limitation in Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-35. Jackpot Miss. Riverboat, Inc. v. Smith, 874 So. 2d 959 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court did not err in dismissing the driver's claims with prejudice under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b) where since the case was filed, the driver had taken virtually no positive action to prosecute his claim; the driver's failure to promptly act over such a lengthy period demonstrated that any further lesser sanctions would have been ineffective. Vosbein v. Bellias, 866 So. 2d 489 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where an invitee's responses to a motion to compel did not comply with Miss. R. Civ. P. 33, the invitee sought late discovery in violation of Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 4.04, and did not show good cause for failing to prosecute after two notices of dismissal under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(d), the trial court properly dismissed the lawsuit and denied a motion for reconsideration. Guidry v. Pine Hills Country Club, Inc., 858 So. 2d 196 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where the buyer sued defendants regarding defects in a mobile home, and buyer's first counsel withdrew, the buyer's five-month delay, outside of court's time limit for obtaining new counsel, was not egregious, defendants did not argue that they had suffered any prejudice, and the trial court's dismissal for failure to prosecute was error, especially where the trial court failed to consider other less severe sanctions. Camacho v. Chandeleur Homes, Inc., 862 So. 2d 540 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

In a contempt proceeding for failure to pay child support, although the husband had not filed a motion to dismiss, the trial court was within its discretion to raise sua sponte the issue of dismissing the petition for lack of prosecution. Miss. Dep't of Human Servs. v. Guidry, 830 So. 2d 628 (Miss. 2002).

In a contempt proceeding for the husband's failure to pay child support, the chancellor abused its discretion in dismissing the petition for contempt with prejudice because there was no contumacious conduct by the wife, no alternative sanctions were considered and no aggravating factors were present as (1) there was nothing in the record to suggest that the wife, as opposed to her counsel was responsible for any of the delays; (2) there would be little, if any prejudice to the husband, by proceeding to trial; and (3) there was nothing in the record to indicate the delay was an intentional attempt to abuse the judicial process. Miss. Dep't of Human Servs. v. Guidry, 830 So. 2d 628 (Miss. 2002).

Trial court abused its discretion in dismissing a case for failure to prosecute, because the delay was not intentional or due to the contumacious conduct by the plaintiff or his counsel, the defendant was not unduly prejudiced, and a less drastic sanction was not considered by the court. Tims v. City of Jackson, 823 So. 2d 602 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

An action was properly dismissed under subsection (d) where (1) the plaintiff did not make a motion for entry of default judgment until May 1995, and the default was given to him on June 8, 1995, (2) the defendant then filed a motion in a timely manner to set aside the default judgment, (3) the plaintiff answered, but did not fight the motion, (4) when the motion was dismissed as stale, the defendant had it reinstated within the time allowed, (5) when the motion was finally heard, the judge found cause for the default judgment to be set aside, and (6) it was then up to the plaintiff to prosecute the case, but he did nothing further until nine months after the case had again been dismissed as stale, and 18 months after the default judgment had been set aside. Cooley v. Burge, 797 So. 2d 294 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Conduct of counsel for the plaintiff can not be said to clearly constitute delay or contumacious conduct, notwithstanding that three terms of the circuit court passed without action by counsel for plaintiff where (1) the first full term of court following the filing of the action was avoided due to the defendants' motion to extend discovery, and (2) the second term was avoided, at least in part, due to the inability of counsel for defendants to appear at the docket call. AT & T v. Days Inn, 720 So. 2d 178 (Miss. 1998).

A judgment dismissing a stale case may be set aside during the same term of court, just as any other judgment; however, the judgment becomes final and may not be set aside after the term. Town of Winstonville v. Demco Distrib. Co., 630 So. 2d 40 (Miss. 1993).

Notice of motion to dismiss for want of prosecution was not given to plaintiffs or even to their last attorney of record, as required by rule; due to clerk's mistake, lower court should have allowed case to be reinstated. Walker v. Parnell, 566 So. 2d 1213 (Miss. 1990).

Findings.

Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b) makes specific findings of fact and conclusions of law discretionary with the trial court. Cox v. Cox, 976 So. 2d 869 (Miss. 2008).

Even though there were no findings of fact regarding whether a trial court considered lesser sanctions before dismissing a medical malpractice case under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b), the findings were presumed. Hensarling v. Holly, 972 So. 2d 716 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 973 So. 2d 244, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 2008).

Involuntary dismissal under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b) was properly entered in a dispute over a family business because a purported owner failed to establish a prima facie case that he was entitled to one-half of the business; therefore, it was unnecessary to determine the legal status of the business at the time of a father's death. Milligan v. Milligan, 956 So. 2d 1066 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

When trial judge grants a motion to dismiss at close of plaintiff's case, he should enter into record his findings of fact and conclusions of law; failure to do so leaves appellate court in position of having to guess at trial judge's reason for granting motion, and may result in finding of manifest error when in truth there was none. Davis v. Clement, 468 So. 2d 58 (Miss. 1985).

Reinstitution of cases.

Trial court had the authority to dismiss the customer's case against the restaurant where the customer waited too long to file his motion to reinstate the case and he provided no evidence that the trial court's dismissal was defective or the result of fraud, accident, or mistake. Marshall v. Burger King, 2 So. 3d 702 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Dismissed cases may be reinstituted, except in extreme situations. Taylor v. GMC, 717 So. 2d 747 (Miss. 1998).

Requirements.

Consideration of lesser sanctions cannot be presumed, but there should be some indication in the record that lesser sanctions were considered. Cox v. Cox, 976 So. 2d 869 (Miss. 2008).

Where a foreign attorney failed to submit and file an informational affidavit setting forth certain requirements contained in M.R.A.P. 46(b)(4)(i- xi), the trial court had no choice but to strike the plaintiff's complaint and dismiss the case pursuant to M.R.A.P. 41(b) for failure to comply with court rules. Taylor v. GMC, 717 So. 2d 747 (Miss. 1998).

In granting motion to dismiss made under subdivision (b) of this rule, trial court should consider evidence fairly, as distinguished from in the light most favorable to plaintiff, and court should dismiss case if it would find for the defendant; thus, appellate review of chancellor's decision to dismiss claim is limited to ascertaining whether record reveals substantial evidence to support trial court's findings in support of its decision. Singing River Elec. Power Ass'n v. State ex rel. Miss. Dep't of Envtl. Quality, 693 So. 2d 368 (Miss. 1997).

Proper motion for defendant to make at the close of plaintiffs' case was a motion to dismiss pursuant to M.R.C.P. Rule 41(b), rather than Rule 12(b)(6); under Rule 41(b), judge must consider the evidence fairly, rather than in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. Century 21 Deep S. Properties, Ltd. v. Corson, 612 So. 2d 359 (Miss. 1992).

When considering motion under subdivision (b) of this rule, trial judge considers plaintiff's evidence fairly, instead of in light most favorable to plaintiff; if trial court finds that evidence is insufficient to meet requisite burden of proof or to prove one or more key elements of plaintiff's claim, trial court should render judgment in favor of defendant, and if there is doubt, motion should be denied. Amyotte v. Hollingsworth, 585 So. 2d 731 (Miss. 1991).

Dismissal for failure to comply with a court order is appropriate only where there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct and lesser sanctions would not serve the best interests of justice; dismissal with prejudice is an extreme and harsh sanction that deprives litigant of opportunity to pursue his claim, and it is therefore reserved for the most egregious cases. Wallace v. Jones, 572 So. 2d 371 (Miss. 1990).

Under subdivision (b) of this rule, if when considering evidence fairly, as distinguished from in light most favorable to plaintiff, trial judge would find for defendant— because plaintiff has failed to prove one or more essential elements of his claim, because quality of proof offered is insufficient to sustain burden of proof cast upon plaintiff, or for whatever reason— the proceeding should be halted at that time and final judgment should be rendered in favor of defendant. Smith v. Smith, 574 So. 2d 644 (Miss. 1990).

When considering whether dismissal should be granted, trial court must consider effect on defendant and any other plaintiffs, and must assure fairness and protection for those affected; since a dismissal under subdivision (a) of this rule is without prejudice unless order states otherwise, trial court should grant a voluntary dismissal unless some legal prejudice occurs. Carter v. Clegg, 557 So. 2d 1187 (Miss. 1990).

When opposing a motion for dismissal pursuant to subdivision (a) of this rule, it is defendant's responsibility to demonstrate that dismissal will cause some legal prejudice; defendant can not demonstrate legal prejudice simply by relying on prospect of another lawsuit, or by showing that dismissal will result in tactical advantage for plaintiff. Carter v. Clegg, 557 So. 2d 1187 (Miss. 1990).

Trial court erred in granting plaintiff's motion for voluntary dismissal, and dismissing her complaint without prejudice, without giving defendant reasonable advance notice and an opportunity to be heard on the motion. Bolls v. Harris, 528 So. 2d 1128 (Miss. 1988).

Where motion for involuntary dismissal is presented to trial judge sitting without a jury, court is not required to look at evidence in light most favorable to plaintiff, giving plaintiff benefit of all reasonable favorable inferences, and standards applicable to motions for directed verdict or judgment notwithstanding the verdict do not apply. Mitchell v. Rawls, 493 So. 2d 361 (Miss. 1986).

Voluntary dismissal should generally be permitted unless prejudice to a party will occur, other than prospect of another lawsuit, since dismissal under this rule is without prejudice unless order states otherwise. Hudson v. Bank of Edwards, 495 So. 2d 1349 (Miss. 1986).

If, considering evidence fairly, as distinguished from in light most favorable to plaintiff, trial judge would find for defendant— because plaintiff has failed to prove one or more essential elements of his claim, because quality of proof offered is insufficient to sustain burden of proof cast upon plaintiff, or for whatever reason— the proceeding should be halted at that time and final judgment should be rendered in favor of defendant. Davis v. Clement, 468 So. 2d 58 (Miss. 1985).

Res judicata.

Chancellor properly granted trustee's requested dismissal under subdivision (b) of this rule, as action contesting power of trustee to harvest timber from certain real property was barred by doctrine of res judicata. Davis v. Deposit Guar. Nat'l Bank, 674 So. 2d 1254 (Miss. 1996).

Review.

After the trial court refused to dismiss the individuals' lawsuit against the railroad, wherein they claimed that they were damaged by exposure to various toxic substances, the appellate court denied the railroad's petition to appeal from an interlocutory order of the trial court, and a request for a stay because the amended complaints provided the railroad with sufficient notice of each of the individuals' claims, including the place, period of time, and instrumentality, asbestos and silica, of alleged injury, and were sufficient to meet minimum notice pleading requirements. Ill. Cent. R.R. Co. v. Easterwood, 939 So. 2d 769 (Miss. 2006).

In her wrongful death action, the pregnant employee claimed that the employer's failure to maintain and repair the elevator caused the malfunction that led to an additional 10 minute delay in her arrival at the hospital, and that the delay contributed to and was the proximate cause of her child's death. However, the testimony of her own expert showed that even with said delay, the child's survival was contingent upon being delivered within 30 minutes of a placental abruption, and even with said delay, the employee would not have arrived at the hospital in 30 minutes given the other facts; thus, the trial court properly granted the city's motion to dismiss under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b). Sanders v. Riverboat Corp., 913 So. 2d 351 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In a bench trial, the trial court properly dismissed plaintiffs' wrongful death suit on the merits (though defendant's motion was improperly made under Miss. R. Civ. P. 50), finding that defendant driver breached no duty to a pedestrian he struck and killed as she was walking near an entrance ramp; the driver was traveling at prudent speed, keeping proper lookout for traffic while preparing to merge, and the pedestrian was in his lane of travel when she was hit. Partlow v. McDonald, 877 So. 2d 414 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 66 (Miss. 2004).

Dismissal of the driver and passengers' action against the city and police officer pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b) after they were struck by the officer's vehicle was proper where the officer's action evinced no recklessness; he was remiss in paying attention to traffic directly in his lane, but was guilty of simple negligence and nothing more. Joseph v. City of Moss Point, 856 So. 2d 548 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 860 So. 2d 315 (Miss. 2003).

Where a defending or responding party, following the overruling of a motion for a directed verdict or a motion to dismiss, goes forward with evidence of his own, he waives the right to assign on appeal error in the failure of the trial judge to grant his motion. Clements v. Young, 481 So. 2d 263 (Miss. 1985).

Waiver.

Where defendants' motion to dismiss was made at conclusion of plaintiff's case, and after chancery court denied the motion defendants went forward with proof of their own, they waived the right to urge error in denial of their motion to dismiss. Stallings v. Bailey, 558 So. 2d 858 (Miss. 1990).

What constitues "application in writing."

"Application in writing" for purposes of avoiding dismissal under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(d) was required to be in the form of a motion to the court under Miss. R. Civ. P. 7. Ill. Cent. R.R. Co. v. Moore, 994 So. 2d 723 (Miss. 2008).

Rule 42. Consolidation: separate trials.

(a) Consolidation. When actions involving a common question of law or fact are pending before the court, it may order a joint hearing or trial of any matters in issue in the actions; it may order all the actions consolidated; and it may make such orders concerning proceedings therein as may tend to avoid unnecessary costs or delay.

(b) Separate trial. The court, in furtherance of convenience or to avoid prejudice, or when separate trials will be conducive to expedition and economy, may order a separate trial of any claim, cross-claim, counter-claim, or third-party claim, or of any separate issue or of any number of claims, cross-claims, counter-claims, third-party claims, or issues, always preserving inviolate the right of trial by jury as declared by Section 31 of the Mississippi Constitution of 1890.

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 42 is to give the court broad discretion to decide how cases on its docket are to be tried so that the business of the court may be dispatched with expedition and economy while providing justice to the parties. To this end, Rule 42(a) permits consolidation and a single trial of several cases on the court's docket, or of issues within those cases, while Rule 42(b) allows the court to order separate trials of particular issues within a single case.

Consolidation of actions presenting a common issue of law or fact is permitted as a matter of trial convenience and judicial economy. The court is given broad discretion to decide whether consolidation would be desirable; the consent of the parties is not required. It is for the court to weigh the savings of time and effort that consolidation would produce against any inconvenience, delay, or expense that it would cause.

Although the courts take a favorable view of consolidation, the mere fact that a common question is present, and that consolidation is therefore permissible under Rule 42(a), does not mean that the court must order consolidation. Consolidation may be denied if the common issue is not a central one, or if consolidation will cause delay, or will lead to confusion or prejudice. In exercising its discretion to consolidate cases or particular issues, the court must recognize that on some issues consolidation may be prejudicial. To avoid prejudice, consolidation should be invoked only where the issues of law or fact justifying consolidation predominate over individual issues which will be heard in the consolidated proceedings. The additional expense that consolidation may cost to some of the parties is a factor to be considered though it is not necessarily conclusive. A motion to consolidate may be made as soon as the issues become apparent, even though not yet formally joined. A motion is not required, however, since the court may order consolidation on its own motion. Separate cases should not be jointly considered without an order of consolidation. [Comment amended February 20, 2004.]

Consolidation is not new to Mississippi practice. See Vicksburg Chemical Co. v. Thornell, 355 So.2d 299 (Miss. 1978) (object of consolidating actions is to avoid a multiplicity of suits, to prevent delay, to clear congested dockets, to simplify the work of the trial court, and to save numerous costs and expenses); Planter's Oil Mill v. Yazoo & M. V.R.R. Co., 153 Miss. 712, 717-18, 121 So. 138, 140 (1929) (proper conditions existing, the court may consolidate actions on its own motion or on the motion of either party); Stoner v. Colvin, 236 Miss. 736, 748-49, 110 So.2d 920, 924 (1959) (courts posses an inherent power to consolidate appropriate actions); V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice, § 506 (2d ed. 1950) (consolidation by agreement entered on record by solicitors of parties, or by motion of any party, or by the court of its own motion; court has duty to consolidate appropriate actions). The court has complete discretion within the bounds of justice and its jurisdiction to consolidate whatever issues it deems expeditious or economical to consolidate. Stoner v. Colvin, supra (trial court in its sound discretion has a right to consolidate for trial separate actions by different plaintiffs against common defendants for damages arising out of the same accident; this rule applies to both law and equity actions); Columbus & G. Ry. Co. v. Missis- sippi Clinic, 152 Miss. 869, 871, 120 So.2d 187, 188 (1929) (consolidation in court of law, of two separate actions on appeal from justice of the peace court, where interests of expediency and economy would be served, merges several actions into one action with but one judgment); but See Stoner v. Colvin, supra (in court of law separate instructions were rendered in two actions which had been consolidated for trial); and Elliott v. Harrigill, 241 Miss. 877, 882, 133 So.2d 612, 614 (1961) (consolidation of causes in equity does not make parties to one cause parties to the oth er, and separate decrees are entered, unless the nature of matters be such that it is clearly proper to include them in one decree); V. Griffith, supra § 506 (equity cases preserve identity of the causes, pleadings are carried on as if no consolidation had arisen, and separate decrees are issued); Wilborn v. Wilborn, 258 So.2d 804, 806 (Miss. 1972) (refusal to consolidate divorced wife's citation for contempt and husband's petition to modify child support decree was within court's discretion). The granting or denying of an order of consolidation is not a final judgment and thus is not appealable. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-51-3 (1972) (final judgments or decrees appealable).

Rule 42(b) allows the courts to order a separate trial of any claim, cross-claim, counter-claim, or third-party claim, or of any separate issue or of any number of claims or issues. The court may do so in furtherance of convenience or to avoid prejudice, or when separate trials will be conducive to expedition and economy. The procedure authorized by Rule 42(b) may be distinguished from severance under Rule 21 as follows: Separate trials will usually result in one judgment; but severed claims become entirely independent actions to be tried and judgment will be entered thereon independently.

The provision for separate trials in Rule 42(b) is intended to further convenience, avoid delay and prejudice, and serve the ends of justice. It is the interest of efficient judicial administration that is to be controlling, rather than the wishes of the parties. The piecemeal trial of separate issues in a single suit is not to be the usual course. It should be resorted to only in the exercise of informed discretion when the court believes that separation will achieve the purposes of the rule.

If a single issue could be dispositive of the case, and resolution of it might make it unnecessary to try the other issues, separate trial of that issue may be desirable to save the time of the court and reduce the expenses of the parties. If, however, the preliminary and separate trial of an issue will involve extensive proof and substantially the same facts as the other issues, or if any saving in time and expense is wholly speculative, a separate trial should be denied. A separate trial may also be ordered to avoid prejudice, as where evidence admissible only on a certain issue may prejudice a party in the minds of the jury on other issues. For example, this principle may be applied, and a separate trial ordered though a single trial would otherwise be preferable, because in a single trial the jury would learn that defendant is insured. The possibility of such prejudice, however remote, justifies a separate trial if the issues are so unrelated that there is no advantage in trying them together. But if the issues are related, there is considerable authority to the effect that jurors today assume the presence of insurance, that knowledge of the fact of insurance is therefore not prejudicial, and that a separate trial should not be ordered.

Ultimately the question of separate trials should be, and is, within the discretion of the trial court. It must weigh whether one trial or separate trials will best serve the convenience of the parties and court, avoid prejudice, and minimize expense and delay. The major consideration, of course, must be which procedure is more likely to result in a just, final disposition of the litigation.

Any party may move for a separate trial. The motion may properly be made at a pre-trial conference; a motion is not required, however. The court may order a separate trial on its own motion. See Sherman v. Stewart, 216 Miss. 549, 556, 62 So.2d 876, 877-78 (1953) (although the submission for one trial of the issues of accord and satisfaction and the denial of the debt would have been better, the question of separate trials is a question within the sound discretion of the trial judge); Christopher v. Brown, 211 Miss. 322, 329, 51 So.2d 579, 582 (1951) (to prevent undue expense and loss of time and delay, discretion is vested in the trial judge to determine when and in what cases separate hearings may be had). An example is when a single issue could dispose of the case and make trial of the other issues unnecessary. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-59 (1972) (defense which used to be set up in a plea but is set up in the answer in such a manner as to be clearly distinct and readily separable, and which goes to the entire cause of action, may on motion of either party be separately disposed of before the principal trial of the cause, in the sound discretion of the court). As with MRCP 42(a), an order granting or denying separate trials under 42(b) is not appealable as a final judgment. See 9 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 2381-2392 (1971); 5 Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 42.02-.03 (1974).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Bifurcation.
Bifurcation appropriate.
Construction with other rules.

In general.

Chancellor did not abuse her discretion in consolidating the two cases where testimony from key witnesses that was relevant to both suits included the nature and value of the business, the ownership and relevance of the land, and the relationship between the shareholder's wife and the various employees. Cooper v. Winnie Gilder & Cooper Gilder, Inc., 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 219 (Miss. Ct. App. Apr. 21, 2009), dismissed by 2010 Miss. LEXIS 264 (Miss. May 27, 2010).

In a civil suit following an automobile accident in which both parties had the same liability insurer, the trial court abused its discretion under Miss. R. Civ. P. 42 by denying appellant's motion to sever appellant's breach of contract and bad faith claims against the insurer from appellee's property damages and medical claims against the insurer; appellant would be unduly prejudiced because the fact that she had liability insurance would be placed squarely before the jury in violation of Miss. R. Evid. 411. Hegwood v. Williamson, 949 So. 2d 728 (Miss. 2007).

Intervenor cited Miss. R. Civ. P. 42(a) for the proposition that equity cases preserved identity of the causes, pleadings were carried on as if no consolidation had arisen, and separate decrees were to be issued; however, the intervenor failed to recognize the exception that separate decrees were required in consolidated cases unless the nature of the matters be such that it was clearly proper to include them in one decree. Hayes v. Leflore County Bd. of Supervisors, 935 So. 2d 1015 (Miss. 2006).

Where trial court ordered two separate actions consolidated for all purposes, with full acquiescence and consent of each interested party, any matter could be properly presented, litigated and decided if it lay within the scope of either action. White v. Gautier Util. Dist., 465 So. 2d 1003 (Miss. 1985).

Bifurcation.

Trial court abused its discretion in not allowing a trial to be bifurcated in a contractor's action against a subcontractor and an insurance company, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 42 and Miss. R. Evid. 411, because the comment to Miss. R. Civ. P. 42 authorized a separate trial to avoid prejudice such as here where the jury would learn that the subcontractor was insured, and the issue of the amount of damages the contractor or subcontractor might owe one another was completely unrelated to the issues of whether there was insurance coverage provided by the insurance company. Capital City Ins. Co. v. G.B. 'Boots' Smith Corp., 889 So. 2d 505 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court did not err in granting request for bifurcation of trial into separate liability and damages components; although some evidence relevant to damages was reviewed in liability phase, bifurcation avoided needless complexity, expense and delay, and possible confusion to jury, without prejudicing either party. Terrain Enters., Inc. v. Mockbee, 654 So. 2d 1122 (Miss. 1995).

Trial court in medical malpractice action abused its discretion in severing plaintiff's claims against a second physician, where those claims involved the same nucleus of common facts and arose from the same transaction or occurrence. Kiddy v. Lipscomb, 628 So. 2d 1355 (Miss. 1993).

Where trial court's decision to sever claims against insurance company rested on an erroneous decision on a matter of law, its decision on severance was erroneous as well, since claims were highly intertwined. Necaise v. U.S.A.A. Casualty Co., 644 So. 2d 253 (Miss. 1992).

Bifurcation appropriate.

All parties elected for strategic reasons to try both the bad-faith claim and the breach-of-contract/indemnity cases together, making full disclosure to the jury of the settlement agreement between the employer and the employee; the case presented multiple legal theories, and the result was a completely confused jury. Ultimately, there was no way the two verdicts could be reconciled, as they created an uncertainty that was fundamentally unacceptable; after careful consideration, the appropriate remedy was determined to be to vacate both judgments and remand the case for a new trial. Gallagher Bassett Servs. v. Malone, 30 So. 3d 301 (Miss. 2010).

Construction with other rules.

Where plaintiffs, numerous former and present employees, sued defendant, a railroad company, for occupational lung disease (all but one plaintiff residing outside of Tunica County, Mississippi, where the suit was filed, and some plaintiffs residing in Tennessee), primarily due to alleged exposure to asbestos, the railroad company successfully argued that joinder was improper because their employment consisted of work in different crafts at different work sites during different periods of time, and there was no transaction or occurrence or "distinct litigable event" common to all plaintiffs. Moreover, all claims against out-of-state defendants based on causes of action that accrued out of state were dismissed based on forum non conveniens, and all other plaintiffs' claims had to be severed from those of the Tunica County resident, including claims of plaintiffs who alleged exposure in Tunica County; all cases that could not be brought individually in Tunica County were to be transferred to a venue in which each plaintiff could have originally brought his or her claim, as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 82(d). Ill. Cent. R.R. Co. v. Gregory, 912 So. 2d 829 (Miss. 2005).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Law Reviews — Litigation in Mississippi Today: A Symposium: Class Actions & Joinder in Mississippi, 71 Miss. L.J. 447, Winter, 2002.

Now Open for Business: The Transformation of Mississippi's Legal Climate, 24 Miss. C. L. Rev. 393, Spring, 2005.

State Court Class Actions in Mississippi: Why Adopt Them Now?, 24 Miss. C. L. Rev. 437, Spring, 2005.

Rule 43. Taking of testimony.

(a) Form and admissibility. In all trials the testimony of witnesses shall be taken orally in open court, unless otherwise provided by these rules or the Mississippi Rules of Evidence.

(b) [Abrogated].

(c) [Abrogated].

(d) Affirmation in lieu of oath. Whenever under these rules an oath is required to be taken, a solemn affirmation may be accepted in lieu thereof.

(e) Evidence on motions. When a motion is based on facts not appearing of record the court may hear the matter on affidavits presented by the respective parties, but the court may direct that the matter be heard wholly or partly on oral testimony or depositions.

(f) Interpreters. The court may appoint an interpreter of its own selection and may fix his reasonable compensation. The compensation shall be paid out of funds provided by law or by one or more of the parties as the court may direct and may be taxed ultimately as costs, in the discretion of the court. However, in the event and to the extent that such interpreters are required to be provided under the provisions of the Americans with Disabilities Act, 42 U.S. C. § 12131, et seq. or under rules or regulations promulgated pursuant thereto, such compensation and other costs of compliance shall be paid by the county in which the court sits, and shall not be taxed as costs. (Amended effective January 10, 1986; amended June 5, 1997.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective July 1, 1998, Rule 43(f) was amended in regard to compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act, 42 U.S.C. § 12131, et seq.

Effective January 10, 1986, Rule 43(a) was amended to provide that testimony may be taken other than in open court, as provided by the Mississippi Rules of Evidence, and to delete references to the admissibility of evidence; Rule 43(b) [Mode and Order of Interrogation], and Rule 43(c) [Record of Excluded Evidence] were abrogated. 478-481 So. 2d XXVII (West Miss. Cas. 1986).

COMMENT

Rule 43 is patterned in part after Federal Rule 43. Implicit in Rule 43 is a recognition of the controlling power of the Mississippi Rules of Evidence, which became effective January 1, 1986.

The admission of telephonic testimony in lieu of a personal appearance in open court by the witness is within the sound discretion of the trial court. Byrd v. Nix, 548 So.2d 1317 (Miss.1989).

Rules 43(b) and 43(c), which were originally adopted by the Supreme Court of Mississippi in 1981, have been abrogated by the later adoption of the Mississippi Rules of Evidence. The contents of former Rule 43(b)(1) are now found in Rule 611(a) of the Mississippi Rules of Evidence. Former Rule 43(b)(2) corresponds to Rule 611(b) of the Mississippi Rules of Evidence and former Rule 43(b)(3) is now found in Rule 611(c). Former Rule 43(b)(4) had previously abolished the voucher rule in civil cases. Rule 607 of the Mississippi Rules of Evidence completes the abolition of the voucher rule by abolishing the rule in criminal cases.

Rule 43(c), which pertained to an offer of proof, has been abrogated. Rules 103(a)(2), 103(b), and 103(c) of the Mississippi Rules of Evidence now govern.

Rule 43(d) provides that whenever an oath is required to be taken, a solemn affirmation may be accepted in lieu of the oath. This is in accordance with traditional Mississippi practice. This rule is consistent with Rule 603 of the Mississippi Rules of Evidence.

Rule 43(e) provides that motions based on facts not appearing of record may be heard on affidavit, although the court retains power to direct that they be heard wholly or partly on oral testimony or depositions. Thus the court may rely on affidavit on a motion to dismiss, a motion to quash service of process, a motion challenging the jurisdiction of the court, a motion for summary judgment, or a motion for a new trial.

The provision that the court may direct that motions be heard in whole or in part on oral testimony or depositions is permissive and not mandatory. Motions are usually decided on the papers rather than after oral testimony of witnesses. Although oral testimony may be heard on a motion for summary judgment, the court need not allow this, and its authority to do so should be exercised with care. The purpose of summary judgment — i. e. giving a speedy adjudication in cases that present no genuine issue of fact — is defeated if the hearing on the motion becomes a preliminary trial. 9 Wright & Miller, supra 2416.

Rule 43(f) allows the court to appoint an interpreter of its own selection. The rule speaks in general terms and gives the court discretion to determine when it is appropriate to appoint an interpreter. The compensation is to be paid out of funds provided by law or by one or more of the parties as the court may direct, and may be taxed ultimately as cost in the discretion of the court.

An interpreter should be qualified by knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education to act in that capacity. He should take an oath or affirmation that he will make a true translation. 9 Wright & Miller, supra 2417.

Rule 43(f) should be read in conjunction with Rule 604 of the Mississippi Rules of Evidence.

[Amended effective January 10, 1986; March 13, 1991.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Telephonic testimony.

The chancellor did not abuse his discretion in disallowing telephonic testimony where the petitioner testified that his mother, who lived in Arizona, was in poor health due to diabetes, hypertension, and a nervous condition, but produced no other documentation or testimony supporting his motion. Smith v. Hunter, 736 So. 2d 440 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Rule 44. Proof of documents.

(a) Authentication.

(1) Domestic. An official record kept within the United States or any state, district, commonwealth, territory, or insular possession thereof, or within the Panama Canal Zone, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, or the Ryukyu Islands, or an entry therein, when admissible for any purpose, may be evidenced by an official publication thereof or by a copy attested by a person purporting to be the officer having the legal custody of the record, or his deputy. If the official record is kept outside the State of Mississippi, the copy shall be accompanied by a certificate under oath of such person that he is the legal custodian of such record and that the record is kept pursuant to state law.

(2) Foreign. A foreign official record, or an entry therein, when admissible for any purpose, may be evidenced by an official publication thereof, or a copy thereof, attested by a person authorized to make the attestation, and accompanied by a final certification as to the genuineness of the signature and official position (i) of the attesting person or (ii) of any foreign official whose certificate of genuineness of signature and official position relates to the attestation or is in a chain of certificates of genuineness of signature and official position relating to the attestation. A final certification may be made by a secretary of an embassy or legation, consul general, consul, vice consul, or consular agent of the United States, or a diplomatic or consular official of the foreign country assigned or accredited to the United States. If reasonable opportunity has been given to all parties to investigate the authenticity and accuracy of the documents, the court may, for good cause shown, (i) admit an attested copy without final certification or (ii) permit the foreign official record to be evidenced by an attested summary with or without a final certification.

(b) Lack of record. A written statement that after diligent search no record or entry of a specified tenor is found to exist in the records designated by the statement, authenticated as provided in subdivision (a)(1) of this rule in the case of a domestic record, or complying with the requirements of subdivision (a)(2) of this rule for a summary in the case of a foreign record, is admissible as evidence that the records contain no such record or entry.

(c) This rule does not prevent the proof of official records or of entry or lack of entry therein by any other method authorized by law.

COMMENT

The purpose of this rule is to provide a simple and uniform method of proving public records and entry or lack of entry therein.

Rule 44 is a codification of rules for proving official records. Its limited purpose should be clearly understood: Both subdivisions (1) and (2) of Rule 44(a) state that official records "when admissible for any purpose" may be evidenced by the procedures there set out. Rule 44 has not attempted to state what the existence or nonexistence of any official record tends to prove; Rule 44 prescribes how such records are to be qualified for admission in evidence when considered probative of some proposition in the case. Even though a document has been authenticated as required by this rule, it may still be excluded from evidence if, for example, it is irrelevant, or is hearsay, or is otherwise objectionable.

If an official record is otherwise admissible, Rule 44 creates an exception to the documentary originals rule by allowing a copy to be used in place of the original and states several ways in which the copy or record may be authenticated. Even though a document may be an official record and even though it may be within an exception to the hearsay rule, it cannot be admitted unless authenticated as required by this rule by some other permissible means. The methods of authentication authorized by Rule 44 are additional and supplementary; they are not exclusive of other methods made available by Mississippi law. A party desiring to introduce an official record in evidence has the option of proceeding under Rule 44 or under any other applicable provision of law (See the listing of Mississippi Code sections at the end of this comment).

The key term in Rule 44 is "official record;" the term is not defined but should cause no difficulty. An official record need not be a public record in the sense that it is open to public inspection; the term in the counterpart federal rule was defined in one early case in which it was said that "official" means "work done by a person in the employment of the government in the course of the performance of the duties of his positions" and that "record" refers to papers, demands, and writings made in the regular course of business. United States v. Aluminum Co. of America, 1 F.R.D. 71, 75-76 (D.C.N.Y.1939). A more helpful approach, rather than defining the term, is to read it as applicable to any document that would be admissible under the official records exception to the hearsay rule. See Ludlow Corp. v. Arkwright-Boston Mfrs. Mut. Ins. Co., 317 So.2d 47 (Miss.1975).

Rule 44(a)(1) deals with two types of official documents; those kept within the state and those kept without the state. A copy of the document need only be attested in the former case, certified under oath in the latter. See, e. g., Miss. Code Ann. § 13-1-77 (1972) (public officers of this state need only certify copies to make them competent); Middleton v. State, 214 Miss. 697, 699, 59 So.2d 320, 321 (1952) (copy certified by commissioner of public safety was deemed competent); Vincent v. State, 200 Miss. 423, 427, 27 So.2d 556, 556-57 (1946) (certified copy by justice of the peace admissible); and § 13-1-81 (certificate, attestation, or authentication purportedly given by officer of any state or United States is prima facie evidence of official character); § 13-1-79 (copies certified by U.S. officer); § 13-1-99 (copies certified by officers of other states).

Rule 44(a)(2) provides for the authentication of official records of foreign origin by one of four methods: (1) official publication; (2) attested copy; (3) chain-certificate, all accompanied by a final certificate; and, (4) discretion of the court to admit without final certification with a showing of good cause by the proponent. See Miss. Code Ann. § 13-1-101 (1972) (copies of foreign law or record admissible when certified by officer having custody and authenticated by certificate by public minister, secretary of legation, or consul of the United States).

Rule 44(b) allows the proving of lack of record by simply stating in writing that the record was not found, and by authentication in the same method as for an official record. See Miss. Code Ann. § 13-1-83 (1972) (certificate by official custodian that record cannot be found is admissible).

Rule 44(c) makes it clear that these rules are additional and supplementary and are not exclusive. The following Mississippi Code Annotated (1972) references should also be consulted: §§ 13-1-77 through -117.

Rule 44.1. Determination of foreign law. [Omitted].

COMMENT

Rule 44.1 is omitted from the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure because it is more a rule of evidence than of procedure and because Mississippi already has an excellent method for determining the law of foreign jurisdictions: Miss. Code Ann. § 13-1-149 (1972) provides that courts shall take judicial notice of all foreign law. See Parker v. McCaskey Register Co., 177 Miss. 347, 171 So. 337 (1936).

Rule 45. Subpoena.

(a) Form; issuance.

(1) Every subpoena shall be issued by the clerk under the seal of the court, shall state the name of the court and the title of the action, and shall command each person to whom it is directed to attend and give testimony, or to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, documents or tangible things in the possession, custody or control of that person, or to permit inspection of premises, at a time and place therein specified. The clerk shall issue a subpoena signed and sealed, but otherwise in blank, to a party requesting it, who shall fill it in before service. A command to produce or to permit inspection may be joined with a command to appear at trial or hearing or at deposition, or may be issued separately.

(2) Subpoenas for attendance at a trial or hearing, for attendance at a deposition, and for production or inspection shall issue from the court in which the action is pending.

(3) In the case of discovery to be taken in foreign litigation, the subpoena shall be issued by a clerk of a court for the county in which the discovery is to be taken. The foreign subpoena shall be submitted to the clerk of court in the county in which discovery is sought to be conducted in this state. When a party submits a foreign subpoena to a clerk of court in this state, the clerk, in accordance with that court's procedure, shall promptly issue a subpoena for service upon the person to which the foreign subpoena is directed.

The subpoena under subsection (3) must incorporate the terms used in the foreign subpoena and it must contain or be accompanied by the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of all counsel of record in the proceeding to which the subpoena relates and any party not represented by counsel.

A subpoena issued by a clerk of court under subsection (3) must otherwise be issued and served in compliance with the rules of this state. An application to the court for a protective order or to enforce, quash or modify a subpoena issued by a clerk of court under subsection (3) must comply with the rules of this state and be submitted to the issuing court in the county in which discovery is to be conducted.

(b) Place of examination. A resident of the State of Mississippi may be required to attend a deposition, production or inspection only in the county wherein he resides or is employed or transacts his business in person, or at such other convenient place as is fixed by an order of the court. A non-resident of this state subpoenaed within this state may be required to attend only in the county wherein he is served, or at such other convenient place as is fixed by an order of the court.

(c) Service.

(1) A subpoena may be served by a sheriff, or by his deputy, or by any other person who is not a party and is not less than 18 years of age, and his return endorsed thereon shall be prima facie proof of service, or the person served may acknowledge service in writing on the subpoena. Service of the subpoena shall be executed upon the witness personally. Except when excused by the court upon a showing of indigence, the party causing the subpoena to issue shall tender to a non-party witness at the time of service the fee for one day's attendance plus mileage allowed by law. When the subpoena is issued on behalf of the State of Mississippi or an officer or agency thereof, fees and mileage need not be tendered in advance.

(2) Proof of service shall be made by filing with the clerk of the court from which the subpoena was issued a statement, certified by the person who made the service, setting forth the date and manner of service, the county in which it was served, the names of the persons served, and the name, address and telephone number of the person making the service.

(d) Protection of persons subject to subpoenas.

(1) In General.

(A) On timely motion, the court from which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it (i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance; (ii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, (iii) designates an improper place for examination, or (iv) subjects a person to undue burden or expense.

(B) If a subpoena (i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or (ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(2) Subpoenas for Production or Inspection.

(A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or to permit inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded by the subpoena to appear for deposition, hearing or trial. Unless for good cause shown the court shortens the time, a subpoena for production or inspection shall allow not less than ten days for the person upon whom it is served to comply with the subpoena. A copy of all such subpoenas shall be served immediately upon each party in accordance with Rule 5. A subpoena commanding production or inspection will be subject to the provisions of Rule 26(d).

(B) The person to whom the subpoena is directed may, within ten days after the service thereof or on or before the time specified in the subpoena for compliance, if such time is less than ten days after service, serve upon the party serving the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials, or to inspection of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the material except pursuant to an order of the court from which the subpoena was issued. The party serving the subpoena may, if objection has been made, move at any time upon notice to the person served for an order to compel the production or inspection.

(C) The court, upon motion made promptly and in any event at or before the time specified in the subpoena for compliance therewith, may (i) quash or modify the subpoena if it is unreasonable or oppressive, or (ii) condition the denial of the motion upon the advance by the person in whose behalf the subpoena is issued of the reasonable cost of producing the books, papers, documents, or tangible things.

(e) Duties in responding to subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

(f) Sanctions. On motion of a party or of the person upon whom a subpoena for the production of books, papers, documents, or tangible things is served and upon a showing that the subpoena power is being exercised in bad faith or in such manner as unreasonably to annoy, embarrass, or oppress the party or the person upon whom the subpoena is served, the court in which the action is pending shall order that the subpoena be quashed and may enter such further orders as justice may require to curb abuses of the powers granted under this rule. To this end, the court may impose an appropriate sanction.

(g) Contempt. Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon him may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued. (Amended effective March 13, 1991; July 1, 1997; July 1, 1998; amended effective July 1, 2009 to provide a procedure for foreign subpoenas. This provision shall take effect and be in force from and after July 1, 2009, and applies to requests for discovery in cases pending on July 1, 2009.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective March 13, 1991, Rule 45(c) was amended to require the party causing a subpoena to issue to tender to a non-party witness the fee for one day's attendance plus mileage allowed by law. Rule 45(e) was amended by deleting the provision for tendering the fee for one day's attendance plus the mileage allowed by law to certain witnesses when subpoenaed. Rule 45(d) was amended to provide that when a deposition is to be taken on foreign litigation the subpoena shall be issued by the clerk for the county in which the deposition is to be taken. 574-576 So. 2d XXIV-XXV (West Miss. Cas. 1991).

Effective July 1, 1997 a new Rule 45 was adopted.

[Amended effective July 1, 1997.]

COMMENT

A "subpoena" is a mandate lawfully issued under the seal of the court by the clerk thereof. Its function is to compel the attendance of witnesses, the production of documents and the inspection of premises so that the court may have all available information for the determination of controversies. 9 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 2451 (1971).

Subpoenas are of two types: a subpoena ad testificandum compels the attendance of a witness; a subpoena duces tecum compels the production of documents and things. Both kinds of subpoenas may be issued either for the taking of a deposition or for a trial or hearing; Rule 45 governs the availability and use of both kinds of subpoenas. The rule has no application to subpoenas issued in support of administrative hearings or by administrative agencies; those subpoenas are governed by statute. See, e. g., Miss. Code Ann. § 5-1-21 (witnesses before legislative bodies); § 7-1-49 (examiner of public accounts); § 19-3-51 (county boards of supervisors); § 27-3-35 (tax commission); § 31-3-13(c) (state board of public contracts); § 43-9-13 (old age assistance investigations); § 43-11-11 (investigations of institutions for the aged or infirm); § 43-13-121 (medicaid commission); § 43-33-11 (housing authority); § 49-1-43 (wildlife, fisheries and parks board); § 49-17-21 (air and water pollution board); § 51-3-51 (water commission); § 53-1-35 (oil and gas board); § 59-21-127 (boat and water safety commission); § 61-1-35 (aeronautics commission); § 63-1-53 (hearings to suspend driver's license); § 63-17-97 (motor vehicle commission); § 63-19-29 (motor vehicle sales finance law administrator); § 67-1-37 (alcoholic beverage commission); § 73-7-27 (cosmetology license revocation or suspension); § 73-13-15 (engineer and land surveyor registration board); § 73-21-99 (disciplinary proceedings against pharmacists); § 73-25-27 (disciplinary proceedings against physicians); § 73-29-37 (disciplinary proceedings against polygraph examiners); § 73-35-23 (disciplinary proceedings against real estate brokers); § 75-35-315 (meat inspections); § 75-49-13 (proceedings involving mobile homes); § 75-67-223 (hearings on denials of small loan licenses); § 75-71-709 (securities regulations hearings); § 77-5-17(4) (board of directors of rural electrification authority); § 81-1-85 (bank examinations); § 81-13-1 (hearings on denial of application for license of credit union); § 81-13-17 (examinations of credit union license applications by department of bank supervision); and § 83-5-39(4) (1972) (hearing on charges of unfair business practices by insurance companies).

Rule 45(a)(1) provides that a subpoena shall command each person to whom it is directed to attend and give testimony, or to produce and permit inspection of evidence, or to permit inspection of premises, and provides further that a command to produce evidence or to permit inspection may be joined with a command to appear at trial or hearing or at deposition, or may be issued separately. A subpoena for the attendance of a witness at the taking of a deposition is issued as of course by the clerk upon proof of service of notice to depose as provided in MRCP 30(b) and 31(a). A notice to depose is not a condition precedent to the issuance of a subpoena for production or inspection.

Under Rule 45(a)(2), all subpoenas (except those pertaining to foreign litigation) shall be issued from the court in which the action is pending and may be served anywhere in the State. Subpoenas for depositions in foreign litigation must be issued by a clerk of a court for the county in which the deposition is to be taken. However, a Mississippi resident may be subpoenaed to attend an examination only in a county where he resides, or is employed or transacts business in person, unless the court fixes another convenient place. A nonresident subpoenaed within the State may be required to attend only in the county where he is served, unless the court fixes another convenient place. Rule 45(b).

A "foreign subpoena" means a subpoena issued under authority of a court of record of a foreign jurisdiction. "Foreign jurisdiction" means a state other than this state.

See the exclusion in Rule 46(b)(11)(i) of the Rules of Appellate Procedure Admission of Foreign Attorneys Pro Hac Vice.

Rule 45(c)(1) authorizes that subpoenas may be served by a sheriff, his deputy, or any person not a party over the age of eighteen years; this provision permits attorneys to serve subpoenas. The proof of service required by paragraph (c)(2) must show, inter alia, the county in which the subpoena was served, in order to ascertain where a nonresident may be required to appear for examination in accordance with Rule 45(b).

Rule 45(c) requires advance payment of statutory witness fees and mileage; this subsection is complementary to Miss. Code Ann. §§ 25-7-47 through 25-7-59 (1972).

Rule 45(d)(1) sets out the grounds for objecting to any type of subpoena.

Rule 45(d)(2) sets out additional protections available to persons subject to subpoenas for production or inspection. Subsection (d)(2)(A) is intended to ensure that there be no confusion as to whether a person not a party in control, custody, or possession of discoverable evidence can be compelled to produce such evidence without being sworn as a witness and deposed. Further, a subpoena shall allow not less than 10 days for production or inspection, unless the court for good cause shown shortens the time. The subpoena must specify with reasonable particularity the subjects to which the desired writings relate. The force of a subpoena for production of documentary evidence generally reaches all documents under the control of the person ordered to produce, saving questions of privilege or unreasonableness.

Paragraph (d)(2)(A) requires that the party serving a subpoena for production or inspection must serve a copy of the subpoena upon all parties to the action immediately after it is served on the person to whom it is directed. Thus, the rule does not contemplate that the party serving a subpoena may delay serving a copy of the subpoena on the other parties to the action until 10 days before the date designated for the production or inspection. A failure to immediately serve a copy of the subpoena on the other parties may be grounds for extending the time for compliance with the subpoena. Service must be made in accordance with Rule 5.

A subpoena for production or inspection is also subject to the provisions of Rule 26(d).

Paragraph 45(d)(2)(C), provides that upon motion the court may (1) quash or modify the subpoena if it is unreasonable or oppressive, or (2) condition the denial of the motion upon the advancement by the person in whose behalf the subpoena is issued of the reasonable cost of producing the books, papers, documents, or tangible things. A subpoena duces tecum is subject to a motion, as just described, and is also subject to the provision for protective orders in Rule 26(c).

Rule 45(e), which specifies the duties of persons served with a subpoena, does not require the witness to prepare papers for the adverse party or to compile information contained in the documents referred to, but only to produce designated documents. If the subpoena calls for relevant information which must be compiled or selected from records which are largely irrelevant or privileged, the party compelling production should be required to bear the expense of extracting the relevant material. See 5A Moore's Federal Practice,

¶ 45.05(1) (1975); Ulrich v. Ethyl Gasoline Corp., 2 F.R.D. 357 (W.D.Ky.1942).

The court is authorized by Rule 45(f) to impose an appropriate sanction on a party who is shown to have exercised the subpoena power in bad faith or in such manner as unreasonably to annoy, embarrass, or oppress the party or the person upon whom the subpoena is served, which ordinarily will include attorney's fees and costs, and may also include compensation for wages lost by a witness in objecting to the subpoena.

Disobedience of a subpoena without adequate excuse may be punished as a contempt of the court. MRCP 45(g). An order for contempt may require the person subject to the subpoena to pay the attorney's fees and costs incurred by the party seeking to enforce the subpoena. The rule leaves undefined what is an adequate excuse for failure to obey a subpoena. Adequate excuse would exist when a subpoena purports to require a non-party to attend or produce at a place not within the limits provided by paragraph (b).

[Comment amended effective March 13, 1991; April 18, 1995; July 1, 1997; July 1, 1998; July 1, 2009.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Applicability.
Illustrative cases.

Applicability.

Correct standard for awarding sanctions for a vexatiously overbroad subpoena is that under M.R.C.P. Rule 45, not Rules 26 or 37. SLM v. Clinton Pub. Sch. Dist., 677 So. 2d 737 (Miss. 1996).

Illustrative cases.

Chancellor was publicly reprimanded for misconduct in violation of, inter alia, Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 1, 2A, 3B(2), 3C(1) because the chancellor had issued subpoenas to two members of county board of supervisors, and during a later meeting with the board of supervisors, the chancellor admitted that he had failed to comply with the law in doing so; further, the commission found by clear and convincing evidence that the chancellor had engaged in willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brought the office into disrepute, under Miss. Const. art. VI, § 177A. The record did not indicate any aggravating factors. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Buffington, 55 So. 3d 167 (Miss. 2011).

Decision to impose sanctions under Miss. R. Civ. P. 45(f) and Miss. Code Ann. § 11-55-5(1), including an award of attorney's fees, against creditors was consistent with the decision that the garnishment was unreasonable as a result of the considerable evidence that creditors knew or should have known prior to filing for garnishment of the good efforts debtors made with regard to making the payment at issue. Deliman v. Anthony Clarke Thomas & Act Envtl., Inc., 16 So. 3d 721 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 17 So. 3d 99, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 415 (Miss. 2009).

Non-parties to the litigation, upon whom a party had sought to compel the production of documents, correctly pointed out that service of a subpoena could only performed by personal service. There was no authority, statutory or otherwise, that would have allowed a Mississippi court to compel these nonresident, non-parties to produce documents. Syngenta Crop Prot., Inc. v. Monsanto Co., 908 So. 2d 121 (Miss. 2005).

Letters between the mother's and the father's attorneys indicated the dates on which the subpoena and notice thereof were served, the subpoena on a Friday, and the notice to the mother's attorney on the following Monday. Those letters did show that the father's attorney had failed to serve notice of the subpoena immediately under Miss. R. Civ. P. 45, but the father's attorney's failure to follow correct procedure did not rise to the level of abuse of process; the trial court properly granted summary judgment in favor of the father and his attorney as to the abuse of process claim. Ayles v. Allen, 907 So. 2d 300 (Miss. 2005).

Finding in favor of the patient in his medical malpractice action was improper pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 45 because the judge's decision to quash the mother-in-law's subpoena was based on a fax from a doctor and an ex parte conversation, without notice to either party, without the benefit of observing witnesses, and without the doctor and clinic having the right to confront the witness or the doctors advocating her unavailability as a witness. Blake v. Clein, 903 So. 2d 710 (Miss. 2005).

Defendant failed to serve copies of the subpoenae to the State, which was error; as well, defendant had received the records before either the State or the circuit court knew that the subpoenae had been issued. Cox v. State, 849 So. 2d 1257 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court did not err in declining to require railroad to respond to subpoena to produce notes and drawings of its investigator regarding accident at crossing; decedent's representative failed to allow at least ten days for documents to be produced, and she also had same opportunity as railroad to observe crossing in an unaltered state subsequent to accident. Mitcham v. Illinois Cent. G.R.R., 515 So. 2d 852 (Miss. 1987).

Rule 46. Exceptions unnecessary.

An exception at any stage or step of the case or matter is unnecessary to lay a foundation for review whenever a matter has been called to the attention of the court by objection, motion, or otherwise and the court has ruled thereon. However, if a party has no opportunity to object to a ruling or order at the time it is made, the absence of an objection does not thereafter prejudice him.

COMMENT

Rule 46 is an adaptation of Miss. Code Ann. § 9-13-31 (1972) and conforms to traditional Mississippi practice. This rule does not repeal or modify the cited statute; an objection noted in the record of a trial or hearing and the court's ruling thereon is sufficient to preserve the matter for appellate review. However, the bill of exception is still necessary to preserve for appellate review matters not appearing of record. See, e. g., Benjamin v. Virginia-Carolina Chem. Co., 126 Miss. 57, 87 So. 895 (1921); Alexander v. Hancock, 174 Miss. 482, 164 So. 772, 165 So. 126 (1935).

Rule 47. Jurors.

(a) Examination of jurors. Any person called as a juror for the trial of any cause shall be examined under oath or upon affirmation as to his qualifications. The court may permit the parties or their attorneys to conduct the examination of the prospective jurors or may itself conduct the examination. In the latter event, the court shall permit the parties of their attorneys to supplement the examination by further inquiry.

(b) Selection of jurors; jury service. Jurors shall be drawn and selected for jury service as provided by statute.

(c) Challenges. In actions tried before a 12-person jury, each side may exercise four peremptory challenges. In actions tried before a 6-person jury, each side may exercise two peremptory challenges. Where one or both sides are composed of muliple parties, the court may allow challenges to be exercised separately or jointly, and may allow additional challenges; provided, however, in all actions the number of challenges allowed for each side shall be identical. Parties may challenge any juror for cause.

(d) Alternate jurors. The trial judge may, in his discretion, direct that one or two jurors in addition to the regular panel be called and empaneled to sit as alternate jurors. Alternate jurors, in the order in which they are called, shall replace jurors who, prior to the time the jury retires to consider its verdict, become unable or disqualified to perform their duties. Alternate jurors shall be drawn in the same manner, shall have the same qualifications, shall be subject to the same examination and challenges for cause, shall take the same oath and shall have the same functions, powers, facilities, and privileges as the regular jurors. Each party shall be allowed one peremptory challenge to alternate jurors in addition to those provided by subdivision (c) of this rule. The additional peremptory challenges provided for herein may be used against an alternate juror only, and other peremptory challenges, provided by subdivision (c) of this rule, may not be used against an alternate juror. (Amended effective June 24, 1992.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective June 24, 1992, Rule 47 was amended to provide that the court may allocate peremptory challenges to a side, rather than to a party, and, in the case of multiple parties on a side, may allow them to be exercised jointly or separately, and may allow additional peremptory challenges. 598-602 So. 2d XXIII (West Miss. Cas. 1992).

COMMENT

Rule 47(a) requires that jurors be examined under oath as to their qualifications; the examination may be by the court or by the attorneys (or parties, if unrepresented). In no event can the court deny counsel their right to examine jurors; such probably would constitute reversible error under Miss. Code Ann. § 13-5-69 (1972).

Rule 47(b) provides that the drawing and selecting of trial jurors shall be as provided by statute. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 13-5-2 et seq. (1972).

Rule 47 (c) provides that each side may exercise peremptory challenges to prospective jurors. Under the liberal provisions of these rules for joinder of claims and parties, problems may arise where there are multiple parties on a side, or deep divisions of interest among parties comprising a side. In such cases, it is implicit that the court may apportion the challenges among the parties comprising that side when they cannot agree on the apportionment themselves.

Rule 47(d) is adapted from Miss. Code Ann. § 13-5-67 (1972) and tracks prior practice for empaneling alternate jurors.

[Amended April 18, 1995.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Alternates.
Peremptory challenges.
Illustrative cases.

Alternates.

Alternate jurors must be discharged as soon as the jury retires to deliberate. Department of Human Servs. v. Moore, 632 So. 2d 929 (Miss. 1994).

Peremptory challenges.

In a landowner's action against a lumber company for trespass and wrongful cutting of timber, the trial judge offered no reason why the fees of the landowner's attorneys were not reasonable, except that they did not prevail on all their claims; rather, the trial court awarded fees in proportion to the damages awarded. Such an arbitrary method of calculation was an abuse of discretion, and the appellate court reversed and remanded the matter. Smith v. Parkerson Lumber, Inc., — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 326 (Miss. Ct. App. Apr. 20, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 888 So. 2d 1197, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 1149 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Illustrative cases.

Trial court in an eminent domain proceeding did not abuse its discretion when it declined to grant some of the comdemnor agency's challenges for cause, so that the agency eventually used up its peremptory challenges on some of those panel members; it was clear that the trial court extensively questioned those jurors before determining that they could be fair and impartial. Miss. Transp. Comm'n v. Highland Dev., LLC, 836 So. 2d 731 (Miss. 2002).

Defendant was not entitled to eight peremptory challenges on theory that two cross-claimants, each of whom had been allowed four peremptory challenges, were in concert with each other; trial court did not abuse its discretion in determining question of adversity between parties. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Estate of Wesson, 517 So. 2d 521 (Miss. 1987), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1043, 108 S. Ct. 2035, 100 L. Ed. 2d 620 (1988).

Rule 48. Juries and jury verdicts.

(a) Circuit and chancery courts. Jurors in circuit and chancery court actions shall consist of twelve persons, plus alternates as provided by Rule 47(d). A verdict or finding of nine or more of the jurors shall be taken as the verdict or finding of the jury.

(b) County court. Juries in county court actions shall consist of six persons, plus alternates as provided by Rule 47(d). A verdict or finding of five or more of the jurors shall be taken as the verdict or finding of the jury.

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 48 is to promote trial convenience and efficiency by providing for smaller juries and non-unanimous verdicts.

Rule 48(a) provides that in circuit and chancery courts a decision of nine of the twelve jurors shall be the verdict. A doctrine consistent with past Mississippi procedure. See Miss. Code Ann. § 13-5-93 (1972) (nine or more jurors may return verdict in civil suits in chancery and circuit courts). Ulmerr v. Pistole, 115 Miss. 485, 76 So. 522 (1917).

The six-man jury is required in county courts by Rule 48(b); provision is made for a non-unanimous verdict. Cf. Miss. Code Ann. § 9-9-33 (1972) (county court jury shall consist of twelve, any nine of whom can return a verdict in a civil case).

Traditionally, Mississippi civil practice has required the use of twelve-person juries. See Brame v. Garwood, 339 So.2d 978 (Miss. 1976) (trial court erred in permitting action to be tried to eleven-person jury, over defendant's objection, after juror was excused for personal reasons); Dement v. Summer, 175 Miss. 290, 165 So. 791 (1936) (trial by jury is universally held to mean a jury of twelve persons); Tillman v. Ailles, 13 Miss. 373 (1845) (verdict by a less number than twelve would be void, but a verdict of a greater number than twelve is not so on that account); but cf. Wolfe v. Martin, 2 Miss. 30 (1834) (a jury of thirteen persons empaneled to try an issue is an illegal jury). Rule 48 supersedes Mississippi case authority mandating twelve-person juries in county courts and repeals Miss. Code Ann. § 9-9-33 (1972) (juries in county court actions to consist of twelve persons), but has no application to county courts when convened as a special court of eminent domain. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-27-13 (1972) (in eminent domain proceedings a jury of twelve shall be empaneled).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Applicability.

Six person juror requirement in M.R.C.P. Rule 48(b) applied to paternity proceeding transferred from chancery court to county court following defendant's demand for jury trial, since nothing in statute governing such proceedings suggested the number of jurors that may be required. Clark v. Whiten, 508 So. 2d 1105 (Miss. 1987).

Rule 49. General verdicts and special verdicts.

(a) General verdicts. Except as otherwise provided in this rule, jury determination shall be by general verdict. The remaining provisions of this rule should not be applied in simple cases where the general verdict will serve the ends of justice.

(b) Special verdict. The court may require a jury to return only a special verdict in the form of a special written finding upon each issue of fact. In that event the court may submit to the jury written questions susceptible of categorical or other brief answer or may submit written forms of the several special findings which might properly be made under the pleadings and evidence; or it may use such other method of submitting the issues and requiring written findings thereon as it deems most appropriate. The court shall give to the jury such explanation and instruction concerning the matter thus submitted as may be necessary to enable the jury to make its findings upon each issue. If in so doing the court omits any issue of fact raised by the pleadings or by the evidence, each party waives his right to a trial by jury of the issue so omitted unless before the jury retires he demands its submission to the jury. As to an issue omitted without such demand the court may make a finding; or if it fails to do so, it shall be deemed to have made a finding in accord with the judgment on the special verdict.

(c) General verdict accompanied by answers to interrogatories. The court, in its discretion, may submit to the jury, together with instructions for a general verdict, written interrogatories upon one or more issues of fact the decision of which is necessary to a verdict. The court shall give such explanation or instruction as may be necessary to enable the jury both to make answers and to render a general verdict. When the general verdict and the answers are harmonious, the appropriate judgment upon the verdict and answers shall be entered. When the answers are consistent with each other but one or more is inconsistent with the general verdict, judgment may be entered consistent with the answers, notwithstanding the general verdict, or the court may return the jury for further consideration of its answers and verdict or may order a new trial. When the answers are inconsistent with each other and one or more is likewise inconsistent with the general verdict, judgment shall not be entered, but the court shall return the jury for further consideration of its answers and verdict or shall order a new trial.

(d) Court to provide attorneys with questions. In no event shall the procedures of subdivisions (b) or (c) of this rule be utilized unless the court, within a reasonable time before final arguments are made to the jury, provides the attorneys for all parties a copy of the written questions to be submitted to the jury. (Amended effective March 1, 1989.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective March 1, 1989, Rule 49 was amended to provide for a General Verdict Accompanied by Answers to Interrogatories in jury trials. 536-538 So. 2d XXVI-XXVII (West Miss. Cas. 1989).

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 49 is to continue the commonly-used general verdict practice in Mississippi and to also authorize the practice of special verdicts and general verdicts with interrogatories.

Rule 49(a) makes it clear that in the usual case the general verdict will be used. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-157 (1972) (no special form of verdict is required).

Rule 49(b) offers, as an alternative to the general verdict, the special verdict, which requires the jury to make specific written findings on every submitted issue of fact. The special verdict is not new in Mississippi civil practice; clearly, it was utilized as early as the 1880's in the civil case of State v. Allen, 69 Miss. 508, 517-18, 10 So. 473, 475 (1891). Apparently, the special verdict was so accepted as an integral feature of civil litigation in this state that the reporters (Brame & Alexander) did not deem the supreme court's comments thereon worthy of headnoting. State v. Allen, supra.

Over the years, however, use of the special verdict appears to have waned; in 1946 the Supreme Court of Mississippi stated that "... there is no provision in our law whereby a litigant may address interrogatories to a jury and require answers thereto in the form of special verdicts preparatory to a general verdict, which must be in harmony therewith. After verdict, a jury must be polled, but not interrogated otherwise." Flournoy v. Brown, 200 Miss. 171, 181, 26 So.2d 351, 355 (1946).

The distinction between special verdicts and jury polls must be borne in mind: the jury poll still is the only recognized means of ascertaining whether a juror was induced to yield to assent to a verdict against his conscientious convictions, James v. State ex rel. Doss, 55 Miss. 57, 59 (1877); the special verdict requires that the jury find specifically submitted factual issues. The jury poll practice will continue to be the only method for asking jurors "Is this your verdict?"

At common law the rule was that the special findings of the jury had to cover every material issue, at pain of judgment against the party carrying the burden of proof. See C. Wright, Law of Federal Courts § 94 (3d ed. 1976). MRCP 49(b) avoids this pitfall by providing that a party waives his right to jury trial of any omitted issue unless he demands its submission before the jury retires. The court may make a finding on such an omitted issue; if the court does not it will be deemed to have made a finding in accord with the judgment he orders entered.

The use of special verdicts is intended to emphasize the facts, prevent the jury from acting on bias, and make the law more certain. Their use is always in the discretion of the trial judge, who must exercise the practice with prudence:

> ... this often-desirable practice should be resorted to with discrimination and foresight; it should never be used for mere cross-examination of the jury to create error for the record. Its purpose and best achievement is to enable errors already potential because of confusions of fact or law "to be localized so that the sound portions of the verdict may be saved." ...

It is hence best available, when, as the judge can foresee, the issues can be thus clearly and simply differentiated, to save an appeal on at least that portion which cannot be questioned; it is of more doubtful value in a relatively simple factual situation ... where the details asked for may not be the whole story. Morris v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 187 F.2d 837, 841 (2d Cir. 1951); C. Wright, supra.

Rule 49(c) provides for general verdicts with interrogatories, a practice that is new to Mississippi procedure, but that is well known in the federal courts. See Federal Rules of Civil Procedure Rule 49.

Rule 49(d) requires that the court provide to all counsel copies of the written questions that will be submitted to the jury. In practice, the attorneys will prepare proposed questions for the jury and will have same granted or denied in the same manner as instructions. See MRCP 51.

[Amended effective March 1, 1989.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Interrogatories.
Jury instructions.
Omitted issues.
Standards.

In general.

In a negligence case (slip and fall), the trial judge abused his discretion in twice orally reinstructing the jury. That was not to say that a trial judge could never instruct a jury that the verdict was not in proper form; however, the trial judge stretched his comments beyond the bounds of merely seeking to have the jury clarify the verdict, and the conflicting special verdicts, coupled with the series of intervening erroneous oral instructions constituted reversible error, requiring a new trial. HWCC-Tunica, Inc. v. Jenkins, 908 So. 2d 150 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

To avoid problem of appellate court being unable to determine on which of two alternate grounds a verdict was based, jury should be instructed to return a separate verdict on each issue. Larkin v. Perry, 427 So. 2d 138 (Miss. 1983).

Interrogatories.

Where neither side requested any special interrogatories on the issue of damages as to the particular claims, and the appellant failed to object to the verdict forms submitted to the jury, the trial court acted within its discretion in not submitting a special verdict or a general verdict accompanied by answers to interrogatories, and the appellant failed to preserve the issue for review. Missala Marine Servs. v. Odom, 861 So. 2d 290 (Miss. 2003).

A verdict satisfied the requirements of subsection (c) of this rule as the jury's answers to the interrogatories were not inconsistent with the jury's general verdict. Sentinel Indus. Contracting Corp. v. Kimmins Indus. Serv. Corp., 743 So. 2d 954 (Miss. 1999).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to submit personal injury case to jury on special written interrogatories, given that evidence of defendant's negligence was not isolated from that of co-defendant with whom plaintiff settled before trial. W.J. Runyon & Son v. Davis, 605 So. 2d 38 (Miss. 1992).

Jury instructions.

In the stopped driver's action against another driver after she was struck from behind, considering the facts and reading the instructions as a whole, the trial court erred by refusing a peremptory jury instruction regarding liability and by refusing a jury instruction explaining how to calculate damages, Miss. R. Civ. P. 49(b). Furthermore, the jury continuously posing questions to the court during deliberation suggested that the jurors were confused by the instructions. Thompson v. Dung Thi Hoang Nguyen, 86 So. 3d 251 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011), reversed by 86 So. 3d 232, 2012 Miss. LEXIS 195 (Miss. 2012), reversed by 86 So. 3d 232, 2012 Miss. LEXIS 195 (Miss. 2012).

Omitted issues.

Appropriate method for preserving claim of error concerning omitted issue in special verdict instruction is to either make clear objection for record, stating basis for objection, or propose a special interrogatory which includes omitted issue, but a party is not required to do both. Jones v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 694 So. 2d 1249 (Miss. 1997).

Standards.

Case was reversed and remanded for new trial on issue of damages, due to obvious confusion inherent in jury's response to instructions on special verdicts. First Bank of Southwest Mississippi v. Bidwell, 501 So. 2d 363 (Miss. 1987).

Rule 50. Motions for a directed verdict and for judgment notwithstanding the verdict.

(a) Motion for directed verdict: when made; effect. A party who moves for a directed verdict at the close of the evidence offered by an opponent may offer evidence in the event that the motion is not granted without having reserved the right to do so and to the same extent as if the motion had not been made. A motion for a directed verdict which is not granted is not a waiver of trial by jury even though all parties to the action have moved for directed verdicts. A motion for a directed verdict shall state the specific grounds therefor. The order of the court granting a motion for a directed verdict is effective without any assent of the jury.

(b) Motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Not later than ten days after entry of judgment in accordance with a verdict, a party may file a motion to have the verdict and any judgment entered thereon set aside; or if a verdict was not returned, a party, within ten days after the jury has been discharged, may file a motion for judgment. If no verdict was returned the court may direct the entry of judgment or may order a new trial.

(c) Conditional rulings on grant of motion.

(1) If the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict provided for in subdivision (b) of this rule is granted, the court shall also rule on the motion for a new trial, if any, by determining whether it should be granted if the judgment is thereafter vacated or reversed, and shall specify the grounds for granting or denying the motion for the new trial. If the motion for a new trial is thus conditionally granted, the order thereon does not affect the finality of the judgment. In case the motion for a new trial has been conditionally granted and the judgment is reversed on appeal, the new trial shall proceed unless the appellate court has otherwise ordered. In case the motion for a new trial has been conditionally denied, the appellee on appeal may assert error in that denial; and if the judgment is reversed on appeal, subsequent proceedings shall be in accordance with the order of the appellate court.

(2) The party whose verdict has been set aside on motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict may file a motion for a new trial pursuant to Rule 59 not later than ten days after entry of the judgment notwithstanding the verdict.

(d) Denial of motion. If the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is denied, the party who prevailed on the motion may, as appellee, assert grounds entitling him to a new trial on the event the appellate court concludes that the trial court erred in denying the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. If the appellate court reverses the judgment nothing in this rule precludes it from determining that the appellee is entitled to a new trial or from directing the trial court to determine whether a new trial shall be granted. (Amended effective July 1, 1994; July 1, 1997.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective July 1, 1994, Rule 50(b) was amended so that a motion for directed verdict is not a prerequisite to file a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. 632-635 So.2d XXX-XXXI (West Miss. Cases 1994).

Effective July 1, 1997, Rule 50(b) was amended to clarify that Rule 50(b) motions must be filed not later than ten days after entry of judgment. — So. 2d — (West Miss. Cases).

[Adopted August 21, 1996; amended effective July 1, 1997.]

COMMENT

Simplistically stated, it is the law in Mississippi that questions of fact are for the jury and questions of law are for the court. Cantrell v. Lusk, 113 Miss. 137, 73 So. 885 (1917). Yet there are situations in which the process of applying the law to the facts may sometimes be for the court. See generally, authorities cited in 14 Miss. Digest, Trial, key numbers 134-181 (1973). Rule 50 is a device for the court to enforce the rules of law by taking away from the jury cases in which the facts are sufficiently clear that the law requires a particular result. Rule 50 applies only in cases tried to a jury with a power to return a binding verdict. It does not apply to cases tried without a jury nor to those tried to the court with an advisory jury.

Rule 50(a) provides for a motion for a directed verdict at the close of the plaintiff's evidence or at the close of all evidence and before the case is submitted to the jury. The rule enables the court to determine whether there is any question of fact to be submitted to the jury and whether any verdict other than the one directed would be erroneous as a matter of law; it is conceived as a device to save the time and trouble involved in a lengthy jury determination. This provision requires that the motion for a directed verdict state the specific grounds therefor, which is contrary to prior Mississippi practice. Cf. Covington County v. Morris, 122 Miss. 496, 84 So. 462 (1920) (defendant need not point out specific reasons for request for peremptory instruction).

Rule 50(a) also provides that if a motion for a directed verdict made by a party at the close of his opponent's evidence is not granted, the movant may offer evidence as if the motion had not been made without expressly preserving the right to do so. In ruling on the motion for a directed verdict, the court should proceed along the same guidelines and standards that have governed prior peremptory instruction and directed verdict practice in Mississippi: the court should look solely to the testimony on behalf of the opposing party; if such testimony, along with all reasonable inferences which can be drawn therefrom, could support a verdict for that party, the case should not be taken from the jury. See White v. Thomason, 310 So.2d 914 (Miss. 1975); Ezell v. Metropolitan Ins. Co., 228 So.2d 890 (Miss. 1969); Holmes v. Simon, 71 Miss. 245, 15 So. 70 (1893); but see Paymaster Oil Mill Co. v. Mitchell, 319 So.2d 652, 656-7 (Miss. 1975) (suggests different standards for testing the sufficiency of evidence on motions for directed verdict and motion for peremptory instruction or judgment n. o. v.). A motion for a directed verdict, pursuant to MRCP 50(a), supersedes both the former peremptory instruction practice and the demurrer to the evidence.

Rule 50(b) differs from its federal rule counterpart in that a motion for a directed verdict is no longer a prerequisite to file a motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict. New Hampshire v. Sid Smith & Associates, Inc., 610 So.2d 340 (Miss. 1992). A party waives his right to a directed verdict if the motion is made at the close of his opponent's case and thereafter the movant introduces evidence in his own behalf, Patrick v. Michigan Nat. Bank, 220 So.2d 273 (Miss. 1969); Broadhead v. Gatlin, 243 Miss. 386, 137 So.2d 909 (1962); however, the movant may renew the motion at the close of all the evidence. The renewed motion will be judged in the light of the case as it stands at that time. Even though the court may have erred in denying the initial motion, such error is cured if subsequent testimony on behalf of the moving party repairs the defects of his opponent's case. See 9 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 2534 (1971).

Rule 50(b), governing motions for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict, effectuates a major change in Mississippi practice: formerly, motions for judgment notwithstanding the verdict were required to be made prior to the close of the term of court rendering the judgment, Evers v. Truly, 317 So.2d 414 (Miss. 1975); under Rule 50(b) the motion must be filed within ten days after the judgment is entered, irrespective of the date court is adjourned. MRCP 6(c).

Rule 50(c) authorizes conditional rulings on Rule 50(b) motions. Under this practice there are four courses the trial court may take when a motion in the alternative for a new trial or a judgment notwithstanding the verdict is filed: (1) it may deny the motion for judgment and grant a new trial; (2) it may deny both motions; (3) it may grant both motions; (4) it may grant the motion for judgment but deny the motion for a new trial. Questions of appealability and of the power of the appellate court depend on which of these courses is followed.

1. If the trial court denies the motion for judgment but grants the motion for a new trial, the order, as is true of orders for a new trial generally, is not appealable and the new trial will proceed.

2. If the trial court denies both motions, the verdict stands and the appeal is from the judgment entered on the verdict. Both the refusal of judgment notwithstanding the verdict and errors of law in the trial may be raised on appeal. If the appellate court affirms, the case is finished.

If the appellate court concludes that it was error to deny the motion for judgment, it has the same choices of ordering entry of judgment for the moving party, ordering a new trial, or remanding for the trial court to determine whether there should be a new trial, that it has whenever it reverses a denial of a motion for judgment. In making that choice it will consider, but is not limited to, any grounds that the winning party below has asserted as appellee for grant of a new trial if the decision below is reversed.

If the appellate court concludes that the court below was correct in denying the motion for judgment, it may also consider whether the court below erred in denying the alternative motion for a new trial. The scope of review of the denial of a new trial is the same as that under Rule 59 for denials of new trials generally.

3. The trial court may grant both motions. If it does so the grant of a new trial is conditional only and becomes effective only if the grant of judgment is reversed. The conditional grant of the new trial does not affect the finality of the judgment and appeal can be taken from the grant of judgment. In opposing the motion for judgment the party for whom the verdict was returned is entitled to urge that errors were committed during the trial that at least entitled him to a new trial rather than to any entry of judgment against him. He may file a motion for a new trial within ten days after entry of the judgment notwithstanding the verdict and, whether he has moved for a new trial or not, may argue on appeal that he is entitled to a new trial.

If the appellate court affirms the grant of judgment the case is ended. If it reverses the grant of judgment the new trial must proceed, in accordance with the conditional order by the trial court, "unless the appellate court has otherwise ordered."

4. The trial court may grant the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and conditionally deny the new trial. The party in whose favor the motion for judgment was granted may assert on appeal that the denial of the alternative motion was error, and need not take a cross-appeal to do so. If the denial of the motion for new trial is challenged in this fashion the appellate court, after reversing the grant of judgment, will determine whether judgment should be entered on the verdict or whether there should be subsequent proceedings. 9 Wright & Miller, supra § 2540.

[Comment amended effective July 1, 1994; July 1, 1997.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Applicability.
Bench trials.
Conditional rulings.
Damages.
Directed verdict improperly granted.
Judgment notwithstanding the verdict.
Motions.
Reconsideration.
Requirements.
Review.
Waiver.
Illustrative cases.

In general.

Finding that an insured had not provided an explanation for the cause of the damage to the right side of his motorcycle from a left side slide accident, the trial court's grant of the insurer's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict was proper. King v. Progressive Gulf Ins. Co., 913 So. 2d 1065 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Trial court did not err in denying plaintiffs' motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict because when looking at all of the evidence, even that which plaintiffs argued was objectionable, the appellate court could not say that the jury could have only properly found for plaintiffs. As conflicting evidence existed as to whether the doctors' malpractice or CPR caused a tear in the anastomosis seam, which could cause fair minded jurors to reach different conclusions, granting the motion would have been improper. Poole v. Avara, 908 So. 2d 716 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court did not err in granting a directed verdict in favor of the casino on the patron's slip and fall complaint where the patron failed to present credible evidence to establish the necessary elements of her right to recover; the patron failed to produce credible evidence of actual or constructive notice on the part of the casino; the patron produced no evidence to show how the substance came to be in and around the jacuzzi, or whether the casino had actual or constructive notice of any not readily apparent condition of slipperiness in and around the jacuzzi. Elgandy v. Boyd Miss., Inc., 909 So. 2d 1202 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

After carefully reviewing the testimony of two experts in the light most favorable to the patient, it was clear that no question of fact existed concerning whether an orchiectomy (removal of a testicle), was a known risk of undergoing a vasectomy. There was no testimony to contradict the assertions made by the two expert physicians that removing a testicle was not a known risk faced by patients who chose to have a vasectomy; because the patient failed to present evidence that his experience was a risk that was legitimately known to exist, he did not show that information given to him by the operating physician was inadequate, and therefore, a directed verdict for the latter physician was not improper. Whittington v. Mason, 906 So. 2d 10 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), aff'd, 905 So. 2d 1261 (Miss. 2005).

Language, "unless the appellate court has otherwise ordered," in Miss. R. Civ. P. 50(c) has not altered the interlocutory nature of a decision by the trial court to grant a new trial motion based on its decision that the verdict as to liability is against the weight of the evidence. Hearn v. Brown, 876 So. 2d 380 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 66 (Miss. 2004).

Directed verdict should have been granted in favor of the corporation where the trial court should have taken the case from the jury because at no point in the trial was even a scintilla of evidence presented to support the existence of a renegotiated contract; the manufacturer was provided the opportunity under law to amend the pleadings and present evidence to show a contract existed, but it failed to do so. Murray Envelope Corp. v. Atlas Envelope Corp., 851 So. 2d 426 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Defendant's motions for a directed verdict, for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or for new trial, operated as challenges to the weight and sufficiency of the evidence supporting the verdict. Because the evidence in defendant's wire fraud trial was sufficient to support the jury's finding, defendant's motions were properly denied. McGee v. State, 853 So. 2d 125 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 852 So. 2d 577 (Ct. App. 2003).

A motion for directed verdict does not apply to cases tried without a jury nor to those tried to the court with an advisory jury. Breland v. Gulfside Casino Partnership, 736 So. 2d 446 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

The standards employed for a summary judgment and directed verdict are the same, just employed at different times during a proceeding. Breland v. Gulfside Casino Partnership, 736 So. 2d 446 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Motions for new trial are addressed to sound discretion of trial court, and require a lesser showing before they can be sustained than does the motion for j.n.o.v. Investors Property Mgt., Ltd. v. Watkins, Pitts, Hill & Assocs., 511 So. 2d 1379 (Miss. 1987).

Applicability.

Trial court did not err in denying the owners' motion for a directed verdict where the evidence contradicted not only the fact that the decedent was not allowed in the office, but also the fact that the decedent had been demoted from invitee to licensee; therefore, the issue as to the decedent's status was disputed and as a result, it was a question of fact to be determined by the jury. Gibson v. Wright, 870 So. 2d 1250 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Although circuit court's order referred to reduction in damages as a "remittitur" and as being "in lieu of a new trial," correct reading of order was that it was a judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Investors Property Mgt., Ltd. v. Watkins, Pitts, Hill & Assocs., 511 So. 2d 1379 (Miss. 1987).

Bench trials.

On appeal in favor of the son in the daughter's action seeking to set aside a conveyance of land to the son, the motion made in the case was improperly denominated as a motion for a directed verdict under Miss. R. Civ. P. 50(a). In a bench trial, the proper motion to make at the close of the case-in-chief was a motion for involuntary dismissal under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(b). Lynch v. Summerlin (In re Summerlin), 989 So. 2d 466 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Conditional rulings.

In a slip and fall case where the trial court granted a JNOV and conditionally ordered a new trial, the appellate court lacked jurisdiction to disturb the trial court's order granting a new trial because it was an interlocutory determination that was not the proper subject of an appeal. Coleman v. Jitney Jungle Stores of Am., Inc., 894 So. 2d 610 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Subdivision (c) of this rule expressly provides for an appeal where a judgment notwithstanding the verdict has been entered and a new trial conditionally granted. Spradlin v. Smith, 494 So. 2d 354 (Miss. 1986).

Damages.

Plaintiffs' evidence was adequate such that a hypothetical reasonable juror could have found damages for plaintiffs at some amount above nominal damages, and therefore circuit court erred in granting defendants' motion for directed verdict at conclusion of plaintiffs' case-in-chief. Wall v. Swilley, 562 So. 2d 1252 (Miss. 1990).

Directed verdict improperly granted.

Motion for a directed verdict was improperly granted in a medical malpractice case because a jury could have found for a patient where an expert testified that the patient should have received targeted post-surgical physical therapy if a fixed abduction contracture existed on the date of the patient's last medical visit following a hip replacement; moreover, the patient demonstrated that a substantial leg length disparity still existed at the time of trial. Cantrell v. Green, 987 So. 2d 1002 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari dismissed by 2008 Miss. LEXIS 373 (Miss. July 31, 2008).

Whether ambulance service workers knew or should have known that a hospital was not capable of managing the daughter's condition and whether their alleged negligence, if any, in taking her to that hospital was only a remote and thus not proximate cause of her death, was question to be determined by the jury; the directed verdict in favor of the workers was not proper, as the issue of causation was a jury question. Entrican v. Ming, 962 So. 2d 28 (Miss. 2007).

Circuit court erred in granting a directed verdict pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 50(a) in favor of a manufacturer in a driver's products liability suit; the driver introduced sufficient evidence to allow a jury to find that the manufacturer was liable under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-1-63(a)(i)(4) for failure of the driver's air bag to deploy in a collision where the owner's manual and the salesman from whom the driver purchased the car stated that the air bag would deploy if the collision was hard enough. Forbes v. GMC, 935 So. 2d 869 (Miss. 2006).

Trial court erred granting an insurer's motion for directed verdict because issues as to whether the insurer breached a duty of confidentiality and whether negligent infliction of emotional distress occurred when the insurer allegedly used a pejorative term in describing an insured to a third party were issues for the jury to decide. Robley v. Blue Cross/Blue Shield, 935 So. 2d 990 (Miss. 2006).

Where an insured claimed damages for intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress and for breach of contract for the release of her confidential medical information from her medical insurer for its failure to maintain its duty of confidentiality, the trial court erred in granting a directed verdict to the insurer; the subscriber's agreement created a fiduciary relationship and the issue of the propriety of the disclosure was simply not suitable for directed verdict because the testimony at trial was mixed. Robley v. Blue Cross/Blue Shield, 935 So. 2d 1021 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), affirmed in part and reversed in part by, remanded by 935 So. 2d 990, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 407 (Miss. 2006).

Where an insured claimed damages for intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress and for breach of contract for the release of her confidential medical information from her medical insurer for its failure to maintain its duty of confidentiality, the trial court erred in granting a directed verdict to the insurer; sufficient evidence existed at trial of a causal connection between the release of the insured's confidential information and her alleged injuries to allow her cause to survive the insurer's motion for directed verdict. Robley v. Blue Cross/Blue Shield, 935 So. 2d 1021 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), affirmed in part and reversed in part by, remanded by 935 So. 2d 990, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 407 (Miss. 2006).

Judgment notwithstanding the verdict.

Circuit court did not err when it denied defendant's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict under Miss. R. Civ. P. 50 because the evidence presented at trial was sufficient to allow a jury to conclude that: (1) the principal murdered the victim; (2) defendant knew that the principal had committed the murder; and (3) defendant knowingly assisted the principal in his attempt to evade the law. There was nothing in the record that would lead the court to question the jury's judgment that defendant was guilty of being an accessory after the fact to murder. Miller v. State, 18 So. 3d 898 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Plaintiff's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict (JNOV) was properly denied because the testimony of the driver and defendants' expert was legally sufficient to support the verdict and it was for the jury to determine the weight and credibility of witnesses. Solanki v. Ervin, 21 So. 3d 552 (Miss. 2009).

Housing group's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict was properly denied where the appellate court could not, as a matter of law, determine that the entire liability was attributable to the errors of the architect; thus, it reversed and remanded for a new trial to determine what portion, if any, of the architectural firm's liability may be imposed to the architect individually. Lambert Cmty. Hous. Group, L.P. v. Wenzel, 987 So. 2d 468 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Trial court did not err in denying the landowners' motion for JNOV or new trial where the jury was free to accept or reject any or all of the testimony and evidence presented by Mississippi Transportation Commission (MTC) and the landowners; the jury accepted the testimony and evidence that supported MTC and rendered a verdict in its favor. Adcock v. Miss. Transp. Comm'n, 981 So. 2d 942 (Miss. 2008).

Circuit court correctly denied the patient's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or in the alternative, a new trial, where the record reflected sufficient evidence to sustain the jury verdict, a verdict that was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence. Johnson

v. St. Dominics - Jackson Mem'l Hosp., 967 So. 2d 20 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court erred in failing to grant a judgment notwithstanding the verdict for the builder individually where the homeowner failed to meet the established standards for piercing the corporate veil; there was no proof that the builder was using a shell corporation as a shield from personal liability. Rosson v. McFarland, 962 So. 2d 1279 (Miss. 2007).

Inadmissible evidence cannot contribute to a legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a verdict, and therefore in a case involving breach of contract, computer generated invoices did not meet the standard for admission under Miss. R. Evid. 803(6) where there was no explanation of how they were created or testimony that the reprints were created at or near the time that the charges were incurred for the sale or lease of large equipment; as such, the trial court did not err by removing this evidence when it considered a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. H & E Equip. Servs., LLC v. Floyd, 959 So. 2d 578 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a breach of contract case, a chancellor did not err by refusing to grant a new trial under Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(a)(2) because the decision was supported by the weight of the evidence where a renter testified that he failed to maintain insurance on property, as agreed upon by the parties to a rental contract; the chancellor was entitled to accept the version of events that he found most credible in determining whether or not the renter attempted to make a timely balloon payment under the terms of the contract, and moreover a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict was also properly denied since the evidence was sufficient to support the judgment. Kendrix v. Huckaby, 955 So. 2d 950 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Trial court did not err by denying the boyfriend's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict in the husband's alienation of affection action because a reasonable juror could conclude that all elements of the tort were met; the evidence showed that: (1) the husband was granted a divorce on the grounds of adultery; (2) after the daughter of the wife and the boyfriend was born, the husband began finding large amounts of cash throughout the house; (3) the wife told a coworker that the boyfriend had given her money to buy a car; (4) the coworker testified that the wife told her that if she quit her job the boyfriend would take their daughter away from her; and (5) the husband testified that his marriage failed because his wife could not resist all of the boyfriend's money and absent the boyfriend his marriage would have remained intact. Fitch v. Valentine, 959 So. 2d 1012 (Miss. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 552 U.S. 1100, 128 S. Ct. 911, 169 L. Ed. 2d 730, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 127, 76 U.S.L.W. 3345 (2008).

In an attorney disciplinary matter, a judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or in the alternative a new trial, was properly denied because the attorney was given the opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses when a private reprimand was vacated in favor of a formal hearing, a telephone conference dealt only with a client's failure to appear, prior sanctions against the attorney were properly considered, the evidence was sufficient to support a finding that the attorney violated several ethical rules, and there were no discovery violations shown. Shah v. Miss. Bar, 962 So. 2d 514 (Miss. 2007).

Defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict was properly denied where the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant where the evidence presented against defendant at trial included direct evidence by way of an audio-visual recording and testimony that defendant received money and handed the undercover officer cocaine in exchange for that money. Hudderson v. State, 941 So. 2d 221 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Trial court erred in granting the purchasers' motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict because the evidence did not support the granting of the motion as it was necessary to determine the proper amount of compensation due to both the purchasers for damages incurred due to fraudulent misrepresentation and the seller, for amounts due to him under promissory note. Garris v. Smith's G&G, LLC, 941 So. 2d 228 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Where a car collision was caused when the driver of a commercial vehicle swerved to avoid hitting an unknown driver, the jury rendered a verdict for defendant driver and his employer in plaintiff's personal injury suit; by setting aside the jury verdict, granting plaintiff's motion for a new trial, and directed that the new jury be peremptorily instructed that defendant driver was negligent as a matter of law, the trial court essentially granted the plaintiff a J.N.O.V. White v. Stewman, 932 So. 2d 27 (Miss. 2006).

State supreme court affirmed the grant of a judgment notwithstanding the verdict pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 50 because the utility company was only held to a reasonable standard of care when the sagging power line involved in the accident was known to be a dead wire and not a live one. McFarland v. Entergy Miss., Inc., 919 So. 2d 895 (Miss. 2005).

Seller was entitled to a JNOV concerning all of the invoices associated with signed delivery tickets, delivery tickets with printed names, and delivery tickets for directly shipped items. The evidence pointed so overwhelmingly in favor of the seller that reasonable jurors could not have arrived at a finding that the purchaser was not indebted to the seller. Natchez Elec. & Supply Co. v. Johnson, 968 So. 2d 444 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), reversed by 2007 Miss. LEXIS 20 (Miss. Jan. 18, 2007).

Appellate court affirmed the trial court's verdict and the denial of plaintiffs' motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict; under the doctrine of res ipsa loquitor, the jury was not bound to make an inference of negligence. Since the employee testified to the procedures he took before the trailer broke free, the jury was free to find defendants were not negligent, and the evidence was not overwhelmingly in favor of plaintiffs. Townsend v. Skelton, 911 So. 2d 639 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Jury verdict defied all logic, as the evidence presented at trial established that the driver was negligent as a matter of law for failing to maintain a proper lookout and to yield the right-of-way by executing a turn across the insured's lane of travel. A verdict should have been returned in favor of the insured because the violation of said statutory duties by the driver was the unequivocal proximate cause of the insured's injury; even if the driver was not negligent per se, the facts presented at trial unconditionally demonstrated that the collision was the result of her negligence and the trial court committed reversible error in failing to apply Miss. R. Civ. P. 50, and by denying the insured's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. State Farm Auto Ins. Cos. v. Davis, 887 So. 2d 192 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where during a difficult birth, the child incurred a condition called shoulder dystocia, and later suffered from Erb's Palsy, the physician's testimony, as well as his expert's testimony was that the physician was not negligent. Moreover, portions of the child's testimony suggested that the physician was not negligent in electing not to perform a cesarean section; accordingly, a reasonable hypothetical juror heard sufficient evidence to determine that the physician was not negligent and the trial court did not err by denying the child's motions for new trial or for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Brumfield v. Langston, 906 So. 2d 48 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Driver testified that the tire was low after the trailer was loaded with cattle, but that he did not know whether it had a leak. He further testified that the trailer was "tracking" properly while being towed, that nothing was out of the ordinary until the accident occurred, and that he did not lose control of his truck at the time of the accident wherein two wheels came off the trailer. striking the injured person's car; while reasonable and fair minded jurors may have reached a different conclusion, there was sufficient evidence introduced at trial to reasonably conclude that the driver was not negligent, and the trial court did not err in denying the injured person's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Ferguson v. Snell, 905 So. 2d 516 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court did not err in refusing to grant a judgment notwithstanding the verdict in a case involving the destruction of trees because it was within the province of the jury to believe the testimony of witnesses regarding who was responsible for the cutting; the evidence showed that a person not associated with a lumber company actually cut down some of the owner's trees. Smith v. Parkerson Lumber, Inc., 888 So. 2d 1197 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Due to disputed facts as to whether a nursing home was negligent and whether the elderly resident had suffered damages, a trial court did not err in refusing to issue a peremptory instruction directing a verdict in favor of the resident. Dupree v. Plantation Pointe, L.P., 892 So. 2d 228 (Miss. 2004).

When the evidence presented by the State was taken together with all reasonable inferences, there was more than sufficient credible evidence in support of the court's denial of defendant's motions for judgment notwithstanding the verdict (JNOV) and a new trial; confidential informant identified defendant as the person who sold marijuana to a special agent. In addition, the special agent who purchased the marijuana also identified defendant as the individual who sold the marijuana to him. Anderson v. State, 904 So. 2d 973 (Miss. 2004).

Defendant's conviction for possession of cocaine with intent to distribute and the denial of his motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict were proper where his proposal of scenarios that the jury could have considered, but did not, in rendering a guilty verdict did not create any reason to overturn the jury's verdict. Williams v. State, 892 So. 2d 272 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 901 So. 2d 1273 (Miss. 2005).

Due to the conflicting facts presented at trial, the outcome of the case hinged on the jury's determination of which rendition of facts the jury believed occurred, and based on the injured person's own testimony regarding his approach to the tractor trailer which was negotiating a turn (and which the injured person skidded into from behind), and the testimony of the accident reconstructionist regarding the speeds and distances involved, the injured person's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict was properly denied. McKenzie v. Supervalu, Inc., 883 So. 2d 1188 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

After having a car repossessed, the injured party's complaint for damages was based on a claim of emotional distress which consisted primarily of loss of sleep, but the injured party neither sought nor received any medical treatment or professional counseling regarding her alleged emotional distress. Thus, the trial court did not err in finding that the injured party's evidence was insufficient to support a claim for emotional distress for ordinary negligence, and it properly granted the finance company's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Wilson v. GMAC, 883 So. 2d 56 (Miss. 2004).

There was no evidence that the finance company or the repossessor did anything that would be seen as extreme or outrageous and except for the injured party's complaint that she lost sleep, was upset, and had bad dreams; thus, there was no evidence that would support a judgment for emotional distress. Therefore, the trial court correctly determined that the injured party was not entitled to damages for emotional distress for outrageous conduct, and it properly granted the finance company's and the repossessor's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Wilson v. GMAC, 883 So. 2d 56 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court did not err in finding that recovery for breach of contract was not in order because the injured party was already put back in the position she was originally in before any breach of contract and because (1) the injured party got a complete refund of the extension agreement payment which she accepted; (2) she did not intend to retain the car that was repossessed; (3) she surrendered attempts to re-claim the car once it was repossessed; (4) for a while she had use of the car without making any payments on the obligation; and (5) the amount brought by the sale of the car was substantially less than the obligation still owed on the car. Thus, the trial court did not err in granting the finance company's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the breach of contract claim. Wilson v. GMAC, 883 So. 2d 56 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court did not err in finding that the injured party was not entitled to recover any damages for conversion of the car by the finance company because (1) the evidence reflected the fact that the injured party abandoned the car because the injured party and her attorney told the finance company that the injured party did not want to keep the car; (2) the injured party accepted and cashed the full refund of what she paid for the extension agreement, receiving back what she had paid to the finance company; (3) despite making no payments on the account, the injured party had use of the car until it was repossessed; and (4) the car sold for considerably less than the secured obligation owed on the car. Thus, the trial court did not err in granting the finance company's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the conversion claim. Wilson v. GMAC, 883 So. 2d 56 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court did not err in finding that the repossessor did not commit a breach of the peace because (1) the repossession agent testified that the injured party told him that he could have the car; (2) he testified that the injured party gave him the keys to the car; (3) he testified that he did not curse at the injured party or her sister; (4) there was no physical altercation involved in the repossession; and (5) the injured party testified that she was not touched by either of the repossession agents and that she relinquished the car's keys to the repossession agents. Thus, the trial court properly granted the repossessor's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the breach of the peace claim. Wilson v. GMAC, 883 So. 2d 56 (Miss. 2004).

In the former employees' malicious prosecution action against the corporation after a federal court had dismissed the corporation's defamation action, although the trial court denied the corporation's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, the Mississippi Supreme Court, after reviewing all the evidence in the record regarding the question of malice, determined that only one conclusion could have reasonably been drawn from the evidence. It was so overwhelmingly in favor of the corporation, which had brought the underlying action to clear its name as to damaging statements by the former managers, that reasonable persons could not have arrived at a contrary verdict; thus, the judgment of the trial court was reversed, and judgment was rendered in favor of the corporation. Condere Corp. v. Moon, 880 So. 2d 1038 (Miss. 2004).

In a negligence action, the trial testimony clearly established that the accident occurred when the parties tried to avoid colliding with the so-called "phantom car," for which the driver was never identified, which had abruptly stopped in front of the injured person's vehicle and was then struck from behind by a defendant driver who was also forced to take evasive action. Thus, after a county court jury found defendant driver was not at fault, on appeal, the circuit court correctly reversed the county court's order granting the injured person's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict and sua sponte award of damages; the circuit court also properly retained jurisdiction and granted a new trial in the circuit court. Baham v. Sullivan, — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 714 (Miss. Ct. App. July 27, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at, remanded by 924 So. 2d 580, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 1032 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In a wrongful death action, in the wife's strict liability claim against the tobacco company, because there was evidence that there existed no safe cigarette and that the tobacco company constantly did research to provide the safest, consumer-desirable cigarette possible, that the wife was not aware that her husband had ever tried to quit smoking and, therefore, would have avoided any danger from the product, and that the wife put on evidence only to support the unreasonably dangerous aspect of the case and failed to provide evidence of any type of defect, the trial court did not err in refusing to grant a judgment notwithstanding the verdict or, in the alternative, a new trial. Nunnally v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 869 So. 2d 373 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court did not err in denying the mother's motion for directed verdict as to the issue of negligence where it was undisputed that both the mother and employee violated the applicable traffic laws on the day of the accident; however, the negligence and reasonableness of the employee's actions was a question for the jury, who found that a reasonable person in the mother's position would recognize the need to slow her vehicle as she approached the intersection. Clark v. Clark, 863 So. 2d 1027 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Because conflicting facts were presented by the driver and the injury victim as to the automobile accident that caused the injury victim's damages, the entire case hinged on the jury's determinations, therefore, the trial court did not err in denying the injury victim's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Hopkins v. Schaeffer, 840 So. 2d 737 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where an insurer sought indemnity against a company for a personal injury claim the insurer had paid on behalf of its insured, who was sued as a result of an automobile accident in which the company's employee was involved, the trial court erred in denying the company's motion for a directed verdict as the insurer had no legal obligation to pay the plaintiffs who sued the employee and the company. T & S Express, Inc. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 847 So. 2d 270 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial court properly denied the patient's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict because there existed a conflict in the evidence as to whether the physician had exercised reasonable care, and where such conflict existed, a peremptory instruction was not appropriate. Daughtry v. Kuiper, 852 So. 2d 675 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

If facts and inferences properly considered point so overwhelmingly in favor of movant that reasonable men could not have arrived at a contrary verdict, granting motion is required, but if there is substantial evidence opposed to motion, evidence of such quality and weight that reasonable and fairminded men in exercise of impartial judgment might reach different conclusions, then motion should be denied and jury's verdict allowed to stand. Coca Cola Bottling Co. v. Reeves, 486 So. 2d 374 (Miss. 1986).

Motions.

Directed verdicts against both defendants were properly entered by trial judge, even though motions for directed verdicts did not appear in record, since it was clear from record that lower court and attorneys were under impression that motions for directed verdicts had been made but not recorded by court reporter. South Cent. Bell Tel. Co. v. Parker, 491 So. 2d 212 (Miss. 1986).

Reconsideration.

A trial court cannot itself entertain its own reconsideration under subsection (b). Edwards v. Roberts, 771 So. 2d 378 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Requirements.

Granting of a directed verdict in favor of a telecommunications company in a driver's negligence action was appropriate because the driver failed to prove that a sagging wire was more likely than not caused by a negligent act of the telecommunications company. The driver failed to meet the second element of res ipsa loquitur and without the application of that doctrine, there was no evidence of the telecommunications company's negligence for a jury to consider. Gray v. BellSouth Telcom., Inc., 11 So. 3d 1269 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Directed verdict on the issue of the negligence of a driver was properly granted by the trial court, where unrebutted testimony established that the driver was negligent in crossing in front of an oncoming motorist when the collision occurred; when reviewing requests for peremptory instructions, courts considered the evidence in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, giving that party the benefit of all favorable inferences that could reasonably be drawn from the evidence, and Mississippi rules and case law allowed for questions to be removed from the jury's consideration when there existed no factual question for the jury to resolve under Miss. R. Civ. P. 50(a). Entergy Miss., Inc. v. Bolden, 854 So. 2d 1051 (Miss. 2003).

Action against physician for unauthorized removal of intrauterine device presented a classic jury question of credibility, since both parties testified to events which could not be reconciled, and therefore entry of directed verdict was improper. Fox v. Smith, 594 So. 2d 596 (Miss. 1992).

When a motion for directed verdict or j.n.o.v. is made, court must consider all evidence in light most favorable to the nonmoving party; in considering evidence and all reasonable inferences, court must determine whether the evidence is so overwhelmingly against nonmoving party that no reasonable juror could have found in their favor. Illinois Cent. R.R. v. White, 610 So. 2d 308 (Miss. 1992).

A lesser showing is required for new trial than that necessary to grant a motion for j.n.o.v.; reason behind this rule is that a motion for j.n.o.v. challenges legal sufficiency of evidence to support the verdict, whereas motion for new trial challenges weight of the evidence. James v. Mabus, 574 So. 2d 596 (Miss. 1990).

When a party moves for directed verdict at close of evidence, circuit court must consider evidence before it at that time in light most favorable to non-moving party, giving that party the benefit of all favorable inferences that may reasonably be drawn therefrom; supreme court takes a like view of evidence when considering, on appeal, whether circuit court erred in directing a verdict. Gray v. Edgewater Landing, Inc., 541 So. 2d 1044 (Miss. 1989).

Where a motion for j.n.o.v. has been made, trial court must consider all evidence in light most favorable to non-movant, who must also be given benefit of all favorable inferences that may be reasonably drawn from evidence; if facts and inferences so considered point so overwhelmingly in favor of movant that reasonable men could not have arrived at a contrary verdict, granting the verdict is required, but if there is substantial evidence opposed to motion, i.e., evidence of such quality and weight that reasonable and fair-minded men in exercise of impartial judgment might reach different conclusions, motion should be denied and jury's verdict allowed to stand. Maxwell v. Illinois Cent. G.R.R., 513 So. 2d 901 (Miss. 1987).

Where motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict has been made, trial court must consider all evidence— not just evidence which supports non-movant's case— in light most favorable to party opposed to motion; credible evidence tending to support non-movant's case must be presumed true, and non-movant must also be given benefit of all favorable inferences that may reasonably be drawn from the evidence. Coca Cola Bottling Co. v. Reeves, 486 So. 2d 374 (Miss. 1986).

Review.

Miss. R. Civ. P. 50(c) gives the Supreme Court of Mississippi the authority to review the grant of a new trial. White v. Stewman, 932 So. 2d 27 (Miss. 2006).

Court reviewing denial of motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict must consider evidence in light most favorable to non-moving party, giving that party benefit of all favorable inferences that may be reasonably drawn from evidence, and if facts so considered point so overwhelmingly in favor of moving party that reasonable men could not have arrived at a contrary verdict, court is required to reverse and render; however, if there is substantial evidence in support of verdict, that is, evidence of such quality and weight that reasonable and fair minded jurors in exercise of impartial judgment might have reached different conclusions, affirmance is required. McMillan v. King, 557 So. 2d 519 (Miss. 1990).

Trial judge's determination whether jury issue has been presented should be given great respect on appeal, although neither jury verdicts nor trial court denials of judgments notwithstanding the verdict may change impossibilities into fact nor convert possibilities into probabilities. Coca Cola Bottling Co. v. Reeves, 486 So. 2d 374 (Miss. 1986).

Waiver.

Where individuals failed to file a motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict, they were procedurally barred from challenging the sufficiency of the weight of the evidence relied upon for the jury verdict on appeal. Thus, the jury verdict for the driver was affirmed. Lamartiniere v. Jones, 915 So. 2d 1112 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Where defendant convicted of aggravated assault claimed that the evidence presented at trial was legally insufficient to support his conviction, the appellate court was procedurally barred from considering this issue. Defendant never filed a JNOV motion. Wilks v. State, 909 So. 2d 1252 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Any error by trial court in denying defendant's motion for directed verdict upon close of plaintiff's case was waived when defendant introduced evidence in its own behalf. James W. Sessums Timber Co. v. McDaniel, 635 So. 2d 875 (Miss. 1994).

Any error in failing to grant directed verdict at end of plaintiff's case was waived when defendant introduced evidence in its own behalf. PACCAR Fin. Corp. v. Howard, 615 So. 2d 583 (Miss. 1993).

Illustrative cases.

Trial court's error in denying the stopped driver's request for a directed verdict on the issue of liability was not harmless. There was a substantial discrepancy between the amount of damages proven by the stopped driver and the amount of damages awarded by the jury; the stopped driver was entitled to all past, present, and future medical damages and compensation for pain and suffering proximately caused by the other driver's negligence and although the stopped driver submitted medical bills equal to $234,316.49, the jury only awarded $9,131. Thompson v. Dung Thi Hoang Nguyen, 86 So. 3d 251 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011), reversed by 86 So. 3d 232, 2012 Miss. LEXIS 195 (Miss. 2012), reversed by 86 So. 3d 232, 2012 Miss. LEXIS 195 (Miss. 2012).

Where a patient sought emergency medical care after his windshield shattered and glass sprayed into his face and eyes, where the treating doctors allegedly misdiagnosed his condition and delayed the patient's receipt of proper care, and where the patient was transferred to another hospital where he underwent surgery and suffered a retinal detachment during the procedure, which left him almost blind in one eye, the trial court did not err in granting a directed verdict in favor of the treating doctors in the patient's medical malpractice case because, although the patient's expert witness established the applicable standard of care and an alleged breach thereof, he failed to express with a reasonable degree of medical certainty that the doctors' alleged misdiagnosis and the resulting delay in proper treatment caused or contributed to the patient's vision loss. The expert testified that retinal detachment was a known complication of the surgery and was unable to say whether it was the glass in the patient's eye, blunt force trauma, the surgery, or the alleged improper care that caused the retinal detachment. Ryals v. Bertucci, 26 So. 3d 1090 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 27 So. 3d 404, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 53 (Miss. 2010).

Motions for a directed verdict and judgment notwithstanding the verdict, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 50(a), (b), were properly denied in a medical malpractice suit against a physician and medical clinic because the physician did not meet his duty of care by requesting lab results to rule out a life-threatening infection, and his failure to follow up with the lab proximately caused the patient's persistent vegetative state and eventual death. Estate of Jones v. Phillips, 992 So. 2d 1131 (Miss. 2008).

In a products liability action, several manufacturers were entitled to a judgment notwithstanding the verdict because the trial court determined that it had erroneously admitted the testimony of a consumer's expert witness on the issue of causation, as the studies upon which the expert relied did not support his opinion that benzene exposure caused small-cell lymphocytic lymphoma, and because the consumer offered no other evidence to establish causation. Watts v. Radiator Specialty Co., 990 So. 2d 143 (Miss. 2008).

Where a decedent suffering from Alzheimer's, dementia, and other problems signed a will naming the decedent's recently-married widow as the sole beneficiary, sufficient evidence supported a jury's verdict against the widow and it was not error to deny the widow's post trial motion because a confidential relationship existed and a presumption of undue influence arose which the widow failed to rebut since the decedent was dependent on the widow and the attorney did not question the decedent as to the decedent's understanding that the decedent was leaving the decedent's daughters nothing. Pope v. White (In re Estate of Pope), 5 So. 3d 427 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 11 So. 3d 1250, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 132 (Miss. 2009).

In a breach of contract case between a rehabilitative services company, a nursing home, and their two owners, a covenant not to hire employees was ambiguous in nature because it was impossible to tell if the covenant embraced all past, present, or future employees; therefore, a directed verdict was properly granted on this issue because the agreement constituted an unreasonable restraint on trade. Cain v. Cain, 967 So. 2d 654 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a breach of contract case between a rehabilitative services company, a nursing home, and their two owners, a directed verdict was properly granted on the issue of punitive damages since they were not warranted in an ordinary breach of contract case. Cain v. Cain, 967 So. 2d 654 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Directed verdict in favor of the medical providers in the patient's medical malpractice action was inappropriate because the patient's proffered expert was a neurologist who had never performed middle ear surgery, which was the type of surgery performed on the patient; thus, that proffered expert was unable to offer an opinion on the appropriate standard of care that was owed to the patient. Troupe v. McAuley, 955 So. 2d 848 (Miss. 2007).

Where an employee was mounting a moving locomotive when a foot slipped due to mud, causing the employee to fall and sustain serious leg injuries, the railroad was liable to the employee for damages under the Federal Employer's Liability Act, 45 U.S.C. § 51; the trial court was correct in denying the railroad's motion for a directed verdict where the evidence showed the railroad was warned of the slippery conditions, but did nothing to remedy the potential hazard. Canadian Nat'l/Ill. Cent. R.R. v. Hall, 953 So. 2d 1084 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court erred in finding that the son presented insufficient evidence that his father died as a result of the collision, and therefore erred in granting defendants' motion for a directed verdict on that ground because the accident report contained an indication that the father was killed in the accident. Birrages v. Ill. Cent. R.R., 950 So. 2d 188 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Because the plaintiff offered no authority for his argument that a trial judge has no authority to raise the lack of proof of an essential element as justification for granting a motion for directed verdict, his argument was procedurally barred. Birrages v. Ill. Cent. R.R., 950 So. 2d 188 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Trial court did not err in granting defendants' motion for a directed verdict because the son did not present a prima facie case of negligence as to his failure to maintain a proper lookout claim in his wrongful death claim for the death of his father in a collision with a train; the son's expert did not offer any testimony that indicated just how the engineer's and the conductor's breach of their duty to maintain a proper lookout was the proximate cause of the father's death, and he admitted that they could not have done anything to prevent the collision in the split-second to two seconds that the father pulled out in front of the train. Birrages v. Ill. Cent. R.R., 950 So. 2d 188 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In a tort action arising from an incident in a retail store, a family's motion for judgment nothwithstanding the verdict or a motion for a new trial were properly denied as there were two versions of events; the evidence was not overwhelming in favor of the family where the store offered evidence that one member was removed due to loud and disruptive behavior and an attempt to conceal merchandise. Anderson v. McRae's, Inc., 931 So. 2d 674 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Where a car collision was caused when the driver of a commercial vehicle swerved to avoid hitting an unknown driver, reasonable minds could have differed as to liability; the jury's verdict for defendant driver and his employer was supported by substantial evidence, and therefore the trial court erred by setting aside the verdict and granting the plaintiff a new trial under Miss. R. Civ. P. 50(c). Anderson v. McRae's, Inc., 931 So. 2d 674 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In a case in which a bank sued a borrower for deficiency on a promissory note that was secured by the borrower's car, the trial court properly granted the bank's motion for a directed verdict; the trial court was correct in concluding that the note had not been paid off because of the borrower's failure to provide insurance coverage for the car. McDaniel v. Citizens Bank, 937 So. 2d 26 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 936 So. 2d 367, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 480 (Miss. 2006).

Directed verdict was properly entered in favor of a driver in a wrongful death case because speeding was insufficient to show liability since it was not the cause of an accident with a lawnmower, there was no duty to blow a horn under Miss. Code Ann. § 63-7-65(1) for a sudden action, and she used due care in passing and giving the lawnmower space. Lias v. Flowers, 955 So. 2d 337 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ denied by 956 So. 2d 228, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 212 (Miss. 2007).

In an action under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, 29 U.S.C.S. §§ 621-634, there was substantial evidence from which the jury could have inferred that the employer (a beer distributor), wanted to fire the employee due to his age. Same was based on memos of the chief executive which basically derided older employees as a burden, the conflict apparent by the employee's otherwise most recent job rating which was excellent, and the fact that several other employees had mistakenly delivered out-of-date beer but they were not fired. In sum, there was sufficient evidence for the jury to find that the employer's non-discriminatory reasons for firing the former employee for alleged poor performance were pretextual and the employer's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict was properly denied. Cash Distrib. Co. v. Neely, 947 So. 2d 317 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), affirmed by 947 So. 2d 286, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 23 (Miss. 2007).

Directed verdict in favor of the corporation in the driver's products liability action pursuant to the Mississippi Products Liability Act, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-1-63, was proper under Miss. R. Civ. P. 50(a), because there was no evidence that the driver or her husband relied on any express warranty or other factual representation about the air bag in question before the accident. Forbes v. GMC, 929 So. 2d 958 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), affirmed in part and reversed in part by, remanded by 935 So. 2d 869, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 285 (Miss. 2006).

Directed verdict in favor of an insurer was affirmed as the individual failed to prove by clear and convincing evidence that the insurer committed fraud because the individual rejected the insurer's first offer to pay for some medical expenses, and the individual did not prove that the insurer had made a promise to pay some medical expenses. Moreover, the individual failed to establish the existence of a fiduciary relationship that would hold the insurer to a higher duty of care. Mooneyham v. Progressive Gulf Ins. Co., 910 So. 2d 1223 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Directed verdict was improperly granted to a driver in a personal injury case because the incorrect standard of review was used on appeal; an insurer presented evidence showing that a driver was involved in the accident, and medical expenses should not have been excluded since there was no requirement that reasonableness be shown prior to admission; however, a directed verdict filed by the insurer was properly denied because the driver should have been permitted to rebut the evidence presented. Alfa Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cascio, 909 So. 2d 174 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Trial court erred in entering judgment for a limited partner in an action for negligent misrepresentation, fraud, and breach of contract against his former partners; the limited partner failed to prove that his former partners had made a fraudulent statement, intending to induce him to sell his interest in the partnership, and the former partners' promise to bid on his property at a foreclosure sale could not form the basis for negligent misrepresentation, because it involved future conduct. There was no breach of contract, because the foreclosure sale did not occur within the time specified by the contract; the trial court erred by denying the former partners' motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Moran v. Fairley, 908 So. 2d 805 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), substituted opinion at 919 So. 2d 969, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 1044 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Directed verdict for defendant under Miss. R. Civ. P. 50(a) was proper in a products liability action under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-1-63 where a wife was injured in an automobile accident and there was evidence that her air bag did not deploy because the only express warranty made was that the automobile had air bags, there was no evidence that plaintiffs justifiably relied on statements in the owners' manual, and plaintiffs offered no expert testimony to show that the impact was hard enough that the air bag should have deployed. Forbes v. GMC, — So. 2d —, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 95 (Miss. Ct. App. Feb. 1, 2005), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at, modified by 929 So. 2d 958, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 716 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In a trip and fall case where the injured person asserted that Christmas garland on a handrail prevented her from breaking her fall on a staircase, no reasonable hypothetical juror could have found negligence on the part of the casino for hanging said garland on the staircase in an unobtrusive manner, and in fact, the injured person's own witnesses testified that they used the handrail with no significant problem. Accordingly, the trial judge was not in error for directing a verdict in favor of the casino. Tucker v. Riverboat Corp., 905 So. 2d 741 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where the jury returned a verdict for the customer who had injured her shoulder when she slipped and fell in the store, the trial court erred in granting a JNOV. The store manager testified that the store had knowledge of a leaky freezer that created the dangerous condition causing the customer's injuries, but failed to remedy the problem in more than a year. Coleman v. Jitney Jungle Stores of Am., Inc., 894 So. 2d 610 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

District court should have granted the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict of defendants, a state university and professors, regarding the applicability of the Mississippi Tort Claims Act in a doctoral student's action alleging that defendants' conduct prevented her from receiving her doctoral degree because although the student claimed that the action was in contract, clearly tort claims were before the jury, and the statute of limitations had run. Univ. of S. Miss. v. Williams, 891 So. 2d 160 (Miss. 2004).

District court should have granted the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict of defendants, a state university and professors, in a doctoral student's 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 claim, because when the verdict was rendered, there were not individual defendants in the case—only the university and the professors in their official capacity and therefore defendants were immune. Univ. of S. Miss. v. Williams, 891 So. 2d 160 (Miss. 2004).

Considering the evidence in the light most favorable to the injured person, it was clear that reasonable jurors could have found the casino was negligent, either because the lighting in the area was poor, the steps presented a slippery surface, or were too narrow to negotiate safely. The facts and testimony were not so one-sided as to require that a reasonable jury reach a contrary decision, the the trial court properly denied the casino its motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. HWCC-Tunica, Inc. v. Jenkins, 908 So. 2d 150 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

What was readily apparent from the record excerpt was that the patient's own expert agreed that based on the physician's diagnosis at the time the physician saw the patient in the emergency room, there was no indication that the patient needed to be transferred to a surgeon or a burn center, and the treatment the physician rendered was appropriate and within the standard of care, thus, the trial court properly granted the physician's motion for a directed verdict. Medicomp, Inc. v. Marshall, 878 So. 2d 193 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 125 S. Ct. 671, 160 L. Ed. 2d 508 (2004).

Conflicting evidence raised a genuine fact issue as to whether appellant was actually the president of appellee company and thus had fiduciary duties towards it; therefore, the trial court erred in granting appellees a directed verdict on this issue. Ross v. Nat'l Forms & Sys. Group, Inc., — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 70 (Miss. Ct. App. Feb. 3, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 882 So. 2d 245, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 603 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a suit against a bar for furnishing alcohol to a minor who later caused an auto accident, the trial court erred by directing a verdict for the bar, as the evidence created a fact question as to whether the bar knew or should have known that the buyer of drinks (who presented a false Mississippi driver's license showing he was 21) was giving them to minors.

In a medical negligence case, as the patient was treated by defendant doctor not at the request of defendant hospital, but at the request of her primary care physician, the hospital was not vicariously liable for the doctor's alleged negligence and was properly granted a directed verdict. Kent v. Baptist Mem'l Hosp. - N. Miss., Inc., 853 So. 2d 873 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where the trial court granted defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict (JNOV) and conditionally granted his motion for a new trial on liability, the JNOV was reversed, but the verdict in plaintiff's favor was not reinstated, as the appellate court lacked jurisdiction to rule on the interlocutory order granting a new trial. Hearn v. Brown, 876 So. 2d 380 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 66 (Miss. 2004).

In a personal injury suit, as the jury could reasonably have inferred from plaintiff's testimony that defendant property owner had actual notice of the hidden, dangerous condition of the part of his roof through which plaintiff fell, but failed to timely warn him of the latent defect, the trial court erred in entering judgment notwithstanding the verdict in favor of the owner. Hearn v. Brown, 876 So. 2d 380 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 66 (Miss. 2004).

Will contestants' motions for directed verdict should have been granted where those present during the will's execution found the decedent lucid, alert, oriented, and capable of identifying the natural objects of her bounty; there was no suggestion that the decedent was unaware of what she was doing or that her personal desires had been overwhelmed by someone else. McClendon v. McClendon (In re Estate of Pigg), 877 So. 2d 406 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 66 (Miss. 2004).

Where an accident occurred at a grocery store parking lot intersection, the evidence indicated that a reasonable juror could easily have concluded that the driver's view was obstructed at the intersection, so that the driver chose to creep up to get a better look at oncoming traffic, and it was not factually impossible for a reasonable juror to have believed that the injured person failed to maintain a proper look out, and reasonable control of the injured person's vehicle, by continuing on in the injured person's lane at 35 miles per hour, without attempting to slow or stop, before colliding with the driver's vehicle, thus the trial court did not err in denying the injured person's motion for a directed verdict. Busick v. St. John, 856 So. 2d 304 (Miss. 2003).

In a suit against a bar for furnishing alcohol to a minor who later caused an auto accident, the trial court erred by directing a verdict for the bar, as the evidence created a fact question as to whether the bar knew or should have known that the buyer of drinks (who presented a false Mississippi driver's license showing he was 21) was giving them to minors. Moore v. K&J Enters., 856 So. 2d 621 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. dismissed, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 198 (Miss. 2004).

Where a medical malpractice defendant's interrogatory response negligently identified an expert as a urologist rather than an expert in infectious diseases, but adequately described the proposed substance of the testimony, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing the testimony, or in denying the patient's surviving relatives' motions for directed verdict, judgment notwithstanding the verdict, and a new trial. Buskirk v. Elliott, 856 So. 2d 255 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court applied the correct legal standard in directing verdicts on both the plaintiffs' negligence claims against the car manufacturer, following their minor daughter's death caused by an air bag that deployed, as the jury was properly instructed on the plaintiffs' claim of design defect under the the Mississippi Products Liability Act, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-1-63, and the additional negligence instructions would have been redundant. Palmer v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 905 So. 2d 564 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, remanded, 904 So. 2d 1077 (Miss. 2005).

Customer's photograph, which was not shown to the jury, created a question of fact upon which reasonable minds could differ, therefore, the question should have been submitted to the jury and the trial court erred in granting the store a directed verdict. Ducksworth v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 832 So. 2d 1260 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

The trial court erroneously directed a verdict for the defendant restaurant in an action by a patron who was injured when his chair collapsed where (1) there was evidence that all the chairs in the restaurant had been there for some time and that, on occasion, chairs were discovered to be in less-than-serviceable condition, (2) the restaurant owner and others testified to periodic inspections of all the chairs to attempt to detect those that might be in need of repair, but there was no evidence as to the regularity or the thoroughness with which these inspections were undertaken, and (3) there was evidence that the very chair in which the patron was sitting when the accident occurred had been the subject of previous repairs. Thomas v. Smith, 786 So. 2d 418 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Overwhelming weight of evidence was totally contrary to verdict rendered for defendant in negligence action stemming from automobile accident, where there was no evidence of any negligence by plaintiff, and defendant's negligence was established as a matter of law. McKinzie v. Coon, 656 So. 2d 134 (Miss. 1995).

Trial court acted correctly when it denied defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict; since causation and the fact of some damage were essentially conceded, circuit court had no authority to set aside the verdict. City of Jackson v. Ball, 562 So. 2d 1267 (Miss. 1990).

Where plaintiff admitted in documents he signed, and under cross-examination, that his contract with defendant had been fully performed, trial court erred in failing to direct a verdict for defendant. Brewer v. Williams, 542 So. 2d 1186 (Miss. 1989).

Any error from trial court's refusal to direct a verdict for plaintiff on liability was rendered harmless, since on evidence before it, the jury's damage award to plaintiff was not unreasonably low. Dunn v. Jack Walker's Audio Visual Center, 544 So. 2d 829 (Miss. 1989).

Rule 51. Instructions to jury.

(a) Procedural instructions. At the commencement of and during the course of a trial, the court may orally give the jury cautionary and other instructions of law relating to trial procedure, the duty and function of the jury, and may acquaint the jury generally with the nature of the case.

(b) Substantive instructions. Each party to an action may submit six instructions on the substantive law of the case. However, the court may permit the submission of additional instructions as justice requires. The court may instruct the jury of its own initiative.

(1) When submitted. Instructions proposed by parties shall be submitted to the court at the pre-trial hearing as provided by Rule 16. In the event a pre-trial hearing is not conducted, proposed instructions shall be delivered to the court and counsel for all parties not later than twenty-four hours prior to the time the action is scheduled to be tried.

(2) Identification. The court's substantive instructions shall be numbered and prefixed with the letter C. Plaintiff's instructions shall be numbered and prefixed with the letter P. Defendant's instructions shall be numbered and prefixed with the letter D. In multi-party actions, Roman numerals shall be used to identify the proposed instructions of similarly aligned parties; the Roman numerals shall be placed after the alphabetical designation of P or D, as the case may be, and shall conform to the sequential listing of parties plaintiff or defendant as stated in the complaint.

Instructions shall not otherwise be identified with a party.

(3) Objections. No party may assign as error the granting or the denying of an instruction unless he objects thereto at any time before the instructions are presented to the jury; opportunity shall be given to make the objection out of the hearing of the jury. All objections shall be stated into the record and shall state distinctly the matter to which objection is made and the grounds therefor.

(c) Instructions to be written. Except as allowed by Rule 51(a), all instructions shall be in writing.

(d) When read; available to counsel and jurors. Instructions shall be read by the court to the jury at the close of all the evidence and prior to oral argument; they shall be available to counsel for use during argument. Instructions shall be carried by the jury into the jury room when it retires to consider its verdict.

COMMENT

Rule 51(a) and (b) tracks the requirements of the Supreme Court of Mississippi in Newell v. State, 308 So.2d 68 (Miss. 1975), and Newell v. State, 308 So.2d 71 (Miss. 1975), in mandating that the trial judge bear the responsibility for properly instructing the jury. The remainder of Rule 51 is, substantially, identical to Rules 14 and 28, Uniform Mississippi Circuit Court Rules.

Rule 51(b)(1) requires that jury instructions be submitted either at the pretrial hearing (MRCP 16) or, in the event a pretrial hearing is not held, at least twenty-four hours prior to the scheduled time for trial. Rule 16(k) guarantees that instructions may be amended or supplemented as necessary.

Rule 51(b)(2) is intended simply to implement a uniform method for identifying instructions for purposes of the trial record; it is not intended either to indicate to nor conceal from the jury the identify of the originators of instructions.

Rule 51(b)(3) parallels prior Mississippi practice for objecting to instructions. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-155 (1972) (instructions become part of record); Gowan v. Batson, 288 So.2d 468 (Miss. 1974) (continuing objection during trial to matters on which jury was later instructed preserved objection); Creel v. General Motors Corp., 233 So.2d 105 (Miss. 1970) (objection to instruction not made before instruction is delivered to jury is waived).

Rule 51(d) preserves traditional Mississippi practice permitting attorneys to argue the case after the jury has been instructed. Further, the rule ensures that attorneys will have access to the instructions during their arguments and that the instructions may be carried into the jury room by the jury. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-155 (1972) (jury may use instructions during deliberations).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Deliberations.
Instructions.
Objections.

Deliberations.

Although the jury was not given written jury instructions when it retired to deliberate, a new trial was not required where (1) the failure to send the instructions to the jury room was accidental, (2) the written instructions were given to the jury prior to the verdict, and (3) all of the instructions were read to the jury before it retired to deliberate. McNeil v. Bourn, 721 So. 2d 663 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998).

Instructions.

In a negligence case (slip and fall), the trial judge abused his discretion in twice orally reinstructing the jury. That was not to say that a trial judge could never instruct a jury that the verdict was not in proper form; however, the trial judge stretched his comments beyond the bounds of merely seeking to have the jury clarify the verdict, and the conflicting special verdicts, coupled with the series of intervening erroneous oral instructions constituted reversible error. HWCC-Tunica, Inc. v. Jenkins, 908 So. 2d 150 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Subsection (d) was substantially complied with, notwithstanding that the jury was not given the written instructions as required by the rule when its members retired to deliberate, where the jury did receive the written instructions prior to the jury verdict, all of the instructions which the trial court granted were read to the jury prior to its deliberations, the failure to send the instructions into the jury room was unintentional and accidental, and no prejudice was shown. McNeil v. Bourn, 721 So. 2d 663 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998).

Objections.

Finding in favor of the bank in the customer's action for fraud was improper because two jury instructions likely confused and misled the jury asto the correct principle of law; additionally, the customer's objections werenot waived because she objected to both instructions in a jury instruction conference held out of the jury's presence before the instructions were given. Savory v. First Union Nat'l Bank of Del., 954 So. 2d 930 (Miss. 2007).

Where defendant failed to object to a jury instruction that omitted an element listed in the indictment (the value of the tools) before the trial court, the objection was waived on appeal. Hill v. State, 929 So. 2d 338 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Defendant could not take issue with sufficiency of jury instructions on appeal, where record revealed absolutely no objection to instructions given by trial judge, and none of the instructions submitted by defendant was refused. North River Homes, Inc. v. Bosarge, 594 So. 2d 1153 (Miss. 1992).

Rule 52. Findings by the court.

(a) Effect. In all actions tried upon the facts without a jury the court may, and shall upon the request of any party to the suit or when required by these rules, find the facts specially and state separately its conclusions of law thereon and judgment shall be entered accordingly.

(b) Amendment. Upon motion of a party filed not later than ten days after entry of judgment or entry of findings and conclusions, or upon its own initiative during the same period, the court may amend its findings or make additional findings and may amend the judgment accordingly. The motion may accompany a motion for a new trial pursuant to Rule 59. When findings of fact are made in actions tried by the court without a jury, the question of the sufficiency of the evidence to support the findings may thereafter be raised regardless of whether the party raising the question has made in court an objection to such findings or has filed a motion to amend them or a motion for judgment or a motion for a new trial. (Amended effective, July 1, 1997.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective July 1, 1997, Rule 52(b) was amended to clarify that a motion to amend the trial court's findings must be filed not later that ten days after entry of judgment. — So. 2d — (West Miss. Cases).

[Adopted effective July 1, 1997.]

COMMENT

Rules 52(a) is adapted from Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-87 (1972); however, the statute indicates that findings of fact may be entered only upon the request of a party, while the rule authorizes the court to enter its findings whether or not requested. In Tricon Metals & Services, Inc. v. Topp, 516 So.2d 236 (Miss.1987), the Court stated that in cases of any significant complexity the trial court generally should find the facts specially and state separately its conclusions of law.

Under Rule 52(b) the court, upon the motion of a party or upon its own motion, may amend its findings or make additional findings for up to ten days after the entry of judgment. Again, this ten-day period is computed irrespective of the date a term of court is adjourned. See MRCP 6 (c).

The purpose of Rule 52(b) is to enable the appellate court to obtain a correct understanding of the factual issues determined by the trial court as a basis for the conclusions of law and judgment entered thereon. A party who failed to prove his strongest case is not entitled to a second opportunity by moving to amend a finding of fact and conclusion of law; the motion must raise questions of subtance by seeking reconsideration of material findings or conclusions. See 9 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 2582 (1971).

[Comment amended effective March 1, 1989.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Applicability.
Construction.
Findings.
Procedure.
Review.
Special findings.
Time.
Waiver on appeal.

In general.

Miss R. Civ. P. 52 applies only to decisions made after some proceeding in which contested facts need to be evaluated; it does not apply to a summary judgment. Estes v. Bradley, 954 So. 2d 455 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Because the appellate court was unable to determine the basis of a chancellor's decision, as the record contained neither a transcript of the proceedings in the trial court, nor any factual or legal foundation for the chancellor's decision to modify a decree, the case was remanded to the trial court for the chancellor to create a record of his factual findings as well as the legal basis for his decision. Daley v. Daley, 909 So. 2d 106 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Trial court's order requiring the county to assume some responsibility for the landowner's ditch and culvert, to fill in the ditch and service the culvert, was clear error where nothing in the record provided any factual support for the county's responsibility for creating the ditch, or after its creation by unknown persons, for the county's assuming any responsibility for it. Wash. County v. Graves, 875 So. 2d 1114 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Chancellor did not abuse his discretion in failing to enter specific factual findings without a request to do so where the information gleaned from the record suggested that the issue was straightforward, not complex. Thompson v. Miss. Dep't of Human Servs., 856 So. 2d 739 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where a circuit court issued a six—page opinion and order setting forth in detail its analysis of the case, and the opinion clearly related the evidence the circuit court found probative to each applicable issue, the order complied with Miss. R. Civ. P. 52, and the circuit court did not err in denying the plaintiff's request for particularized findings of fact and conclusions of law. T.K. v. Simpson County Sch. Dist., 846 So. 2d 312 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial court's failure, after a bench trial, to enter findings of fact and conclusions of law, was not error, as the case was far from complex, and no party requested it to make such findings. Miss. DOT v.

Trosclair, 851 So. 2d 408 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where a trial judge declined to make specific findings of fact on request of a party, but made general findings of fact and conclusions of law, he technically complied with the requirements of Miss. R. Civ. P. 52. Golleher v. Robertson, 830 So. 2d 694 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Trial court was permitted to use its discretion when deciding whether to issue findings of fact and conclusions of law; when a party requested the trial court to do so, however, the trial court's duty became obligatory. Culbert v. State, 800 So. 2d 546 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

The rule does not require a trial court to specifically refer to a party's exhibits in a dispositive order of a petition for relief. Magee v. State, 759 So. 2d 464 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Where a party fails to request special findings from the trial court under subsection (a), it waives any issue related to the absence of findings of fact. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 728 So. 2d 573 (Miss. 1999).

Subsection (a) does not require the court on its own initiative to set out the findings of fact relied on to support its judgment. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 728 So. 2d 573 (Miss. 1999).

Subsection (a) has been complied with if generalized findings of fact and conclusions of law have been made by the chancellor. TXG Intrastate Pipeline Co. v. Grossnickle, 716 So. 2d 991 (Miss. 1997).

Chancellor is not required to make a finding of fact and conclusion of law in absence of a timely made request. Bowser v. Tootle, 556 So. 2d 1373 (Miss. 1990).

Applicability.

Chancellor erred in awarding a father custody of his children as the chancellor did not refer to the factors in the best interests of the children or identify what Albright factors were considered, which was important as several of the factors that might have been in the father's favor were altered within a month of the court's ruling when the father and the children moved to California; specific findings were mandated due to the nature of the case, and Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 4.01 and Miss. R. Civ. P. 52(a) did not apply. Parra v. Parra, 65 So. 3d 872 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Construction.

In cases of any complexity, tried upon the facts without a jury, trial court generally should find facts specially and state its conclusions of law thereon. Tricon Metals & Services, Inc. v. Topp, 516 So. 2d 236 (Miss. 1987).

Findings.

Since a mother failed to raise to the chancellor her challenge to the reasonableness of the child-support guidelines, she was barred from challenging the chancellor's failure to make specific findings of fact on the reasonableness of the guidelines. Robinson v. Brown, 58 So. 3d 38 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

On a mother's counterclaim against a father for contempt concerning child support, medical insurance, and medical bills, a chancellor did not err by failing to provide specific findings of fact and conclusions of law under Miss. R. Civ. P. 52(a) because there was no record of any request by either counsel for specific findings of fact and conclusions of law. Farrior v. Kittrell, 12 So. 3d 20 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Where a son sought to set aside a warranty deed that transferred property from the son's mother to a daughter, the case was properly dismissed for failure to prosecute because, inter alia, it was not an abuse of discretion to refuse to provide specific findings of fact and conclusions of law since it was discretionary and the bench opinion was sufficient to explain and support the adjudication of the matter. Cox v. Cox, 976 So. 2d 869 (Miss. 2008).

If appellant sellers were dissatisfied with a county court's lack of specific factual findings regarding the factors for awarding reasonable attorneys' fess, they were provided a mechanism for requiring that the court make such findings pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 52(a), however, they did not make such a request, and the fees awarded were not so extreme as to be unreasonable. Cavagnaro v. Coldwell Banker Alfonso Realty, Inc., 995 So. 2d 754 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 997 So. 2d 924, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 534 (Miss. 2008).

Miss. R. Civ. P. 56 summary judgment hearing is not an action "tried upon the facts without a jury" so as to trigger Miss. R. Civ. P. 52 applicability; therefore, in a claim brought under the Fair Credit Reporting Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq., a trial court did not err by failing to make findings of fact, and at any rate the issues in the case were addressed by the trial court. Harmon v. Regions Bank, 961 So. 2d 693 (Miss. 2007).

Where a trial court made several findings on the record regarding its decision to deny a motion for reconsideration in a case filed under the Federal Employers Liability Act, no reversal was required; the findings were sufficiently situated as to allow an appellate court to make its own determinations. Ill. Cent. R.R. v. McDaniel, 951 So. 2d 523 (Miss. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 549 U.S. 1208, 127 S. Ct. 1332, 167 L. Ed. 2d 78, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2107, 75 U.S.L.W. 3435 (2007).

Finding against the employer, a railroad, in the employee's asbestos-related claims originally brought under the Federal Employers Liability Act was appropriate because the record was more than sufficient for appellate review; thus, the circuit court did not abuse its discretion in denying the employer's request for specific findings of fact and conclusions of law. Ill. Cent. R.R. v. Acuff, 950 So. 2d 947 (Miss. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 549 U.S. 1280, 127 S. Ct. 1826, 167 L. Ed. 2d 321, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 3060, 75 U.S.L.W. 3497 (2007).

Miss. R. Civ. P. 52 was not applicable to the facts of the appeal at bar because the circuit court was functioning as an appellate court in reviewing the city's determination to terminate two city streets, precluding further expansion of said streets. Charles E. Morgan Constr. Co. v. City of Starkville, 909 So. 2d 1145 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Trial court, in a tort claim brought by a business against a city, did not err; although abbreviated, its findings of facts and conclusions of law in its order and judgment were sufficient. City of Jackson v. Internal Engine Parts Group, Inc., 903 So. 2d 60 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court erred in failing to provide findings of fact and conclusions of law when requested to do so by party to divorce. West v. West, 881 So. 2d 188 (Miss. 2004).

Because the trial court failed to provide findings of fact and conclusions of law regarding the contracts case, the appellate court could not determine whether an error had occurred; the case was reversed and remanded. Fulop v. Suta, 847 So. 2d 893 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Procedure.

Chancellor on remand was required to make separate and specific findings of fact and conclusions of law, in view of convoluted and complex nature of facts and issues involved. TXG Intrastate Pipeline Co. v. Grossnickle, 716 So. 2d 991 (Miss. 1997).

Whether to adopt verbatim, in whole or in part, proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law submitted by a party is within the trial court's sound discretion. Rice Researchers, Inc. v. Hiter, 512 So. 2d 1259 (Miss. 1987).

Review.

In divorce proceedings, a chancellor applied the correct legal standards and made findings of fact that were supported by substantial evidence in compliance with Miss. R. Civ. P. 52(a) and did not err in denying a husband's request for additional findings and legal conclusions. Swiderski v. Swiderski, 18 So. 3d 280 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 19 So. 3d 82, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 465 (Miss. 2009).

There was no merit to the state's argument, based upon Miss. R. Civ. P. 52, that the owner waived his right to appeal since he failed to file a motion to reconsider after entry of the summary judgment, because after the entry of summary judgment, which decided all issues between all parties involved, the party seeking to appeal need only file a notice of appeal within the appropriate time to preserve his appeal, and the parties were not precluded from filing post-judgment motions, but they were not required to file further documents to preserve the appeal. 1999 Buick Century v. State, 966 So. 2d 841 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Although the supreme court preferred that trial courts made separate particularized findings of fact and conclusions of law, a trial court's general findings of fact and conclusions of law did not require reversal, and the findings and conclusions technically conformed to the requirements of Miss. R. Civ. P. 52. Ill. Cent. R.R. v. McDaniel, — So. 2d —, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 316 (Miss. June 15, 2006), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 951 So. 2d 523, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 468 (Miss. 2006).

Chancery court properly upheld a school board's decision to not renew a teacher's contract for the 2004-05 school year. The chancellor did not err in not making specific findings of fact pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 52(a), since the board was the finder of fact, not the chancellor. Gordon v. Lafayette County Sch. Dist., 923 So. 2d 260 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In the tax sale purchaser's appeal of the lower court's setting aside the conveyance to the purchaser after the property owner failed to redeem, the case was neither complex nor complicated. While the chancellor should have made findings of fact and conclusions of law, the chancery court's failure to do so did not constitute reversible error. Lawrence v. Rankin, 870 So. 2d 673 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Court of appeals erred in ruling that a chancellor's findings were insufficient to support granting a divorce to a wife on the grounds of the husband's habitual cruel and unusual treatment; the record showed that the husband's indictment and arrest on three counts of attempted murder, his pressuring the wife to run the family business after his arrest, and his probable placement of child pornography on the family computer, caused the wife to suffer from and be treated for depression. Bodne v. King, 835 So. 2d 52 (Miss. 2003).

Though after a bench trial the chancellor failed to cite any legal authority in her order, the case was not factually complex and the final judgment adequately stated her findings of fact and aptly explained what she did; thus, her order did not violate Miss. R. Civ. P. 52(a). Pilgrim Rest Missionary Baptist Church v. Wallace, 835 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2003).

The purpose of Miss. R. Civ. P. 52(a) is to obtain a detailed explanation of a bench trial result when requested, and it does not matter that the court dictates one in open court for the court reporter to transcribe, or dictates one while in chambers for a secretary to type; it is the content that matters, not the place at which the judge is sitting when expressing his reasoning. Davis v. Davis, 829 So. 2d 712 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Chancery court was required by the appellate court to make findings of fact in a divorce proceeding the chancellor had dismissed without making findings of fact because the case was hotly contested and the facts complex, and the failure to make findings of fact in the case was an abuse of discretion. Snoddy v. Snoddy, 791 So. 2d 333 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Trial court erred in failing to provide findings of fact and conclusions of law when requested to do so by party to divorce, requiring remand. Lowery v. Lowery, 657 So. 2d 817 (Miss. 1995).

Where chancery court was requested to make particularized findings of fact and conclusions of law but declined to do so, making general findings of fact and conclusions of law instead, chancellor technically complied with requirements of this rule, and although particularized findings would have aided court on appeal, reversal was not warranted. Century 21 Deep S. Properties, Ltd. v. Corson, 612 So. 2d 359 (Miss. 1992).

Special findings.

Siblings waived their issue on appeal regarding the validity of the decedent's inter vivos transfer to the daughter since the siblings failed to request special findings regarding the decedent's cash gift under Miss. R. Civ. P. 52(a). Howell v. May, 983 So. 2d 313 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 981 So. 2d 298, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 268 (Miss. 2008).

Where trial court modified an agreed judgment of paternity to adjust the father's visitation with his minor child, the judgment consisted of twelve pages and included detailed fact-findings and legal conclusions on the issues of modification of custody and visitation. The father was not entitled to have the chancellor revisit the judgment to make additional findings. Balius v. Gaines, 908 So. 2d 791 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 920 So. 2d 1008, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 495 (Miss. 2005).

Where contempt case pending before lower court in divorce action was simple, there was no need for special findings of facts and conclusions of law in the absence of a request by either party. Morreale v. Morreale, 646 So. 2d 1264 (Miss. 1994).

Time.

In a divorce case, a former husband's appeal was time-barred because it was not perfected within 10 days of a final judgment entered in January 2007; the husband's post-trial motions were untimely under Miss. R. Civ. P. 52 and Miss. R. Civ. P. 59, and a chancellor did not have the authority to extend the time for such. The January 2007 judgment was final because it attended to all of the issues before the chancellor, including the support of two minor children, the equitable distribution of marital assets and liabilities, whether to award a former wife alimony, and whether to award the former wife attorney's fees. Anderson v. Anderson, 8 So. 3d 264 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In a divorce case, a former husband's request for findings of fact was time-barred because it was filed more than 10 days after entry of a final judgment, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 52(b); the fact that a chancellor granted the request did not make the motion timely since the chancellor lacked authority to extend the time limitation. The chancellor's decision to grant the request and make additional findings was only harmless error. Anderson v. Anderson, 8 So. 3d 264 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Waiver on appeal.

Since a mother failed to assert an alleged error post-trial to the chancellor, as permitted by Miss. R. Civ. P. 52, she waived the right to complain as to this issue on appeal. Robinson v. Brown, — So. 3d —, 2011 Miss. App. LEXIS 31 (Miss. Ct. App. Jan. 25, 2011), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at, modified by 58 So. 3d 38, 2011 Miss. App. LEXIS 160 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. Power of Successor or Substituted Judge, in Civil Case, to Render Decision or Enter Judgment on Testimony Heard by Predecessor. 84 A.L.R.5th 399.

Rule 53. Masters, referees, and commissioners.

(a) Appointment and compensation. The court may appoint one or more persons in each county to be masters of the court, and the court in which any action is pending may appoint a special master therein. As used in these rules, the word "Master" includes a referee, an auditor, an examiner, a commissioner, and a special commissioner. The master shall receive a reasonable compensation for services rendered, as fixed by law or as allowed by the court and taxed in the costs and collected in the same manner as the fees of the clerk.

(b) Qualifications. The master shall be an attorney at law, authorized to practice law before all courts of the State of Mississippi. However, in extraordinary circumstances where the finding to be made is of a complex, technical, non legal nature, a person other than an attorney possessing the requisite qualifications of a person skilled in the field, area, or subject of the inquiry may be appointed as a master; additionally, persons other than attorneys may be appointed as special commissioners to conduct judicially-ordered sales and partitions of real or personal property.

(c) Reference: when made. With the written consent of the parties, the court may refer any issue of fact or law to a master. Otherwise, a reference shall be made only upon a showing that some exceptional condition requires it.

(d) Powers. The order of reference to the master may specify or limit his powers and may direct him to report only upon particular issues or to do or perform particular acts or to receive and report evidence only and may fix the time and place for beginning and closing the hearing and for the filing of the master's report. Subject to the specifications and limitations stated in the order, the master has and shall exercise the power to regulate all proceedings in every hearing before him and to do all acts and take all measures necessary or proper for the efficient performance of his duties under the order. He may require the production before him of evidence upon all matters embraced in the reference, including the production of all books, papers, vouchers, documents, and writings applicable thereto. He shall have the power to administer oaths, to take the examination of witnesses in cases pending in any court, to examine and report upon all matters referred to him, and to execute all decrees directed to him to be executed.

Masters shall have the power to direct the issuance of subpoenas for witnesses to attend before them to testify in any matter referred to them or generally in the cause. If any witness shall fail to appear, the master shall proceed by process to compel the witness to attend and give evidence.

(e) Proceedings. When a reference is made, the clerk shall forthwith furnish the master with a certified copy of the order of reference, which shall constitute sufficient certification of his authority. Upon receipt thereof, unless the order of reference otherwise provides, the master shall forthwith set a time and place for the first meeting of the parties or their attorneys which is to be held in any event within ten days following the date of the order of reference and shall notify the parties or their attorneys. It is the duty of the master to proceed with all reasonable diligence. Either party, on notice to the parties and master, may apply to the court for an order requiring the master to speed the proceedings and to make his report. If a party fails to appear at the time and place appointed, the master may proceed ex parte or, in his discretion, may adjourn the proceedings to a future day, giving notice of same to the absent party.

(f) Statements of account. The court may direct an account to be taken in any cause in vacation or in term, and when the master shall doubt as to the principles upon which the account shall be taken or as to the propriety of admitting any item of debit or credit claimed by either party, he may state in writing the points on which he shall doubt and submit same for decision to the court in vacation or in term.

(g) Report.

(1) Contents and filing. The master shall prepare a report upon the matters submitted to him by the order of reference and, if required to make findings of fact and conclusions of law, he shall set them forth in the report. He shall file the report with the clerk of the court and, unless otherwise directed by the order of reference, shall file with it a transcript of the proceeding and of the evidence in the original exhibits. The clerk shall forthwith mail to all parties notice of the filing.

(2) Acceptance and objections. The court shall accept the master's findings of fact unless manifestly wrong. Within ten days after being served with notice of the filing of the report any party may serve written objections thereto upon the other parties. Application to the court for action upon the report and upon objections thereto shall be by motion and upon notice as provided by Rule 6(d). The court after hearing may adopt the report or modify it or may reject it in whole or in any part or may receive further evidence or may recommit it with instructions.

(3) Stipulation as to findings. The effect of a master's report is the same regardless of whether the parties have consented to the reference; however, when the parties stipulate that a master's finding of fact shall be final, only questions of law arising upon the report shall thereafter be considered.

(4) Draft report. Before filing his report a master may submit a draft thereof to counsel for all parties for the purpose of receiving their suggestions.

(h) Bond; when required. The court may require a special commissioner appointed to conduct a sale of any property to give bond in such penalty and with sufficient sureties to be approved as the court may direct, payable to the State of Mississippi, and conditioned to pay according to law all money which may come into his hands as such special commissioner. The bond shall be filed with the court. For any breach of its condition, execution may be issued on order of the court for the sum due. However, when the clerk of the court or the sheriff is appointed to make a sale and the order does not provide for a bond, the official bond of the clerk or the sheriff shall be held as security in the premises. (Amended effective March 1, 1989; April 13, 2000.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective April 13, 2000, Rule 53(c) was amended to give the court discretion to appoint a master on the written consent of the parties without a showing of an exceptional condition. So. 2d. (West Miss. Case. 2000).

Effective March 1, 1989, Rule 53 was amended to correct a typographical error. 536-538 So. 2d XXVII (West Miss. Cas. 1989).

COMMENT

Rule 53 is an amalgamation of Rule 53, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, and prior Mississippi practice. Mississippi judges have long had the power to appoint masters, referees, and commissioners as assistants to the court. See Miss. Code Ann. § 9-5-241 (chancellor may appoint two or more persons in each county to serve as masters); § 9-5-251 (chancellor may appoint special commissioners in any case [Mississippi practice traditionally labeled as a "commissioner" any person appointed to make a judicial sale or to perform a special executive or ministerial act, V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice, 598, n. 2 at 636 (2d ed. 1950)]); and § 11-7-137 (1972) (circuit court judges may refer issues to referees).

The first change in prior practice effectuated by Rule 53 is the pronouncement that the term "master" include masters, referees, commissioners, and other judicial assistants heretofore recognized by Mississippi. Rule 53(a). The second change in the rule is the requirement that all masters — except as specified — be attorneys at law. Rule 53(b).

Rule 53(c) allows the court, in its discretion, to order the appointment of a master on the written consent of the parties. This Provision was added to permit courts to expedite certain cases when the court's caseload might otherwise delay the resolution of the matter. When a party objects, however, the court may refer a matter only when exceptional circumstances justify it.

Rule 53(d) provides that the order of reference may specify or limit the master's powers and may direct him to report only upon particular issues or to do or perform particular acts or to receive and report evidence only; the order may also fix the time and place for beginning and closing the hearing and for filing the master's report. Subject to the specifications and limitations stated in the order, the master has ant may exercise the power to regulate all proceedings in every hearing before him and to do all acts and take all measures necessary or proper for the efficient performance of his duties under the order. He may require the production before him of evidence upon all matters embraced in the reference, and he may rule upon the admissibility of evidence. He has the power to administer oaths to witnesses and to direct the issuance of subpoenas. However, the master may not himself serve subpoenas. Cf. MRCP 45(c).

To ensure that reference matters are not unduly delayed, Rule 53(e) contains several provisions intended to expedite proceedings before the master. The clerk is required to give the master a copy of the order of reference "forthwith"; the master must "forthwith" set a time and place for the hearing, in any event within ten days after the reference is made. The master is required to proceed with "all reasonable diligence," and any party may apply to the court for an order that the master speed the proceedings.

Rule 53(f) is adapted from Miss. Code Ann. § 9-5-247 (1972). See Felder v. Wall, 26 Miss. 595 (1853); Cobb v. Duke, 36 Miss. 60 (1858); Chapman v. Evans, 44 Miss. 113 (1870); Gaines v. Coney, 51 Miss. 323 (1875).

Rule 53(g)(1) contains specific, detailed directions for the making of the master's report. The master must prepare his report in accordance with the scope of his order of reference, setting forth findings of fact and conclusions of law if so required. The report is to be filed with the clerk and, unless otherwise directed, it is to be placed in the case file for that action. The clerk is required to notify all parties of the filing of the report. The rule also provides that the master may submit a draft report to counsel to receive their suggestions before finally reporting to the court. Rule 53 (g)(4).

Unless the master's report is manifestly wrong, the court shall accept same; however, parties may, within ten days, object to the report by serving on all other parties notice of their objections. Rule 53 (g)(2). Application to the court for action upon the report and objections to it are by motion and notice as prescribed in Rule 6(d).

Under Rule 53(g)(3) the effect of the master's report is the same regardless of whether the parties have consented to the reference; however, only questions of law arising upon the report may be considered if the parties stipulate that the master's findings of fact shall be final.

Rule 53(h) tracks prior Mississippi practice in allowing the court to require a bond of commissioners appointed to conduct judicial sales. See Miss. Code Ann. § 9-5-253 (1972).

[Comment amended effective April 13, 2000.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Objections.
Review.

Objections.

Siblings did not submit their objections to the special commissioners' report in the form of a motion and did not notice a hearing, they simply objected to the special commissioners' recommendations and suggested alternative partition methods commensurate with their position; their document failed to include a written notice of a hearing and did not even include are quest for hearing; nothing in their document placed the chancellor on notice that the siblings desired a hearing on their objections. Miles v. Miles, 949 So. 2d 774 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 949 So. 2d 37, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 155 (Miss. 2007).

Husband in divorce proceeding was not given opportunity to review master's report and make objections prior to its filing and approval by chancellor, requiring reversal and remand to chancery court for compliance with subdivision (g) of this rule. Thornton v. Thornton, 562 So. 2d 112 (Miss. 1990).

Review.

Special master's authority was limited to the assignment given to her by the chancellor, and the chancellor's specific delegation to the special master did not instruct her to address the merits of the partner's claims, nor did she address the partner's claims for breach of partnership, breach of fiduciary duties, and tortious breach of the partnership agreement; all of the partners' claims were not resolved by the special master's report. Cuevas v. Kellum, 12 So. 3d 1154 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Chancery court did not err by holding a hearing and taking additional evidence after a master's decision on a father's claim that he was unable to work and pay child support due to a medical condition because such was permitted under Miss. R. Civ. P. 53(g)(2); the master's decision regarding contempt had no effect until the chancery court accepted or rejected it. Davison v. Miss. Dep't of Human Servs., 938 So. 2d 912 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Where a chancery clerk was appointed as a special master to conduct a partition sale, Miss. R. Civ. P. 53 governed and the special master was not required to subscribe to the oath in Miss. Code Ann. § 11-21-17, as the rules governed over any conflicts between the rules of civil procedure and statutes. Dunaway v. Morgan, 918 So. 2d 872 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In a long, complicated dispute among decedent's eight heirs as to how to divide decedent's 50 acres of property, the chancellor did not err in rejecting the special commissioner's third report, and in modifying the commissioner's fourth and final report. Lynn v. Lynn (In re Will of Lynn), 878 So. 2d 1052 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Chancellor erred in refusing to hear appeal from master's conclusions of law on basis that parties had agreed to use a special master as a referee; parties were not bound by master's report solely because of their consent. Trovato v. Trovato, 649 So. 2d 815 (Miss. 1995).

Master's decision, that it was inequitable to require husband to pay his child support arrearage, was a conclusion of law, and therefore chancellor was correct in reviewing case on a motion for reconsideration. Williams v. Rembert, 654 So. 2d 26 (Miss. 1995).

CHAPTER VII. JUDGMENT

Rule 54. Judgments; costs.

(a) Definitions. "Judgment" as used in these rules includes a final decree and any order from which an appeal lies.

(b) Judgment upon multiple claims or involving multiple parties. When more than one claim for relief is presented in an action, whether as a claim, counter-claim, cross-claim, or third-party claim, or when multiple parties are involved, the court may direct the entry of a final judgment as to one or more but fewer than all of the claims or parties only upon an expressed determination that there is no just reason for delay and upon an expressed direction for the entry of the judgment. In the absence of such determination and direction, any order or other form of decision, however designated which adjudicates fewer than all of the claims or the rights and liabilities of fewer than all the parties shall not terminate the action as to any of the claims or parties and the order or other form of decision is subject to revision at any time before the entry of judgment adjudicating all the claims and the rights and liabilities of all the parties.

(c) Demand for judgment. A judgment by default shall not be different in kind from or exceed in amount that prayed for in the demand for judgment. Except as to a party against whom a judgment is entered by default, every final judgment shall grant the relief to which the party in whose favor it is rendered is entitled by the proof and which is within the jurisdiction of the court to grant, even if the party has not demanded such relief in his pleadings; however, final judgment shall not be entered for a monetary amount greater than that demanded in the pleadings or amended pleadings.

(d) Costs. Except when express provision therefor is made in a statute, costs shall be allowed as of course to the prevailing party unless the court otherwise directs, and this provision is applicable in all cases in which the State of Mississippi is a party plaintiff in civil actions as in cases of individual suitors. In all cases where costs are adjudged against any party who has given security for costs, execution may be ordered to issue against such security. Costs may be taxed by the clerk on one day's notice. On motions served within five days of the receipt of notice of such taxation, the action of the clerk may be reviewed by the court.

COMMENT

The first sentence of Rule 54(a) defines "judgment," for the purposes of these rules, to include a decree and any appealable order. Traditionally, in Mississippi courts in equity suits judges rendered a "decree," and an action at law resulted in the entry of a "judgment." There is no longer any purpose in preserving a technical distinction between a decree and a judgment. Therefore, Rule 54(a) indicates that a judgment at law and a decree in equity are to be treated in the same fashion.

Although it is not specifically described in the rule itself, there are several different stages that lead to the creation of a judgment that is final and appealable. It is important to differentiate the various steps that are part of this process. The first distinction is between the adjudication, either by a decision of the court or a verdict of the jury, and the judgment that is entered thereon. The terms "decision" and "judgment" are not synonymous under these rules. The decision consists of the court's findings of fact and conclusions of law; the rendition of judgment is the pronouncement of that decision and the act that gives it legal effect.

A second distinction that should be noted is between the judgment itself and the "filing," or the "entry," of the judgment. A judgment is the final determination of an action and thus has the effect of terminating the litigation; it is "the act of the court." "Filing" simply refers to the delivery of the judgment to the clerk for entry and preservation. The "entry" of the judgment is the ministerial notation of the judgment by the clerk of the court pursuant to Rule 58; however, it is crucial to the effectiveness of the judgment and for measuring the time periods for appeal and the filing of various motions. See 10 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 2651 (1973).

Rule 54(b) is designed to facilitate the entry of judgments upon one or more but fewer than all the claims or as to one or more but fewer than all the parties in an action involving more than one claim or party. It was proposed because of the potential scope and complexity of civil actions under these rules, given their extensive provisions for the liberal joinder of claims and parties. The basic purpose of Rule 54(b) is to avoid the possible injustice of a delay in entering judgment on a distinctly separate claim or as to fewer than all of the parties until the final adjudication of the entire case by making an immediate appeal available.

The rule does not require that a judgment be entered when the court disposes of one or more claims or terminates the action as to one or more parties. Rather, it gives the court discretion to enter a final judgment in these circumstances and it provides much needed certainty in determining when a final and appealable judgment has been entered. If the court chooses to enter such a final order, it must do so in a definite, unmistakable manner.

Absent a certification under Rule 54(b), any order in a multiple party or multiple claim action, even if it appears to adjudicate a separable portion of the controversy, is interlocutory.

If the court decides that an order that does not dispose of all the claims of all the parties and that is not appealable under any other statute or rule should be given the status of a final judgment, Rule 54(b) requires it to take two separate steps before an appeal can be perfected. The court must make "an express determination that there is no just reason for delay" and it must make "an express direction for the entry of judgment."

When the court is asked to direct the entry of a judgment under Rule 54(b), it must consider whether the entire case as a whole and the particular disposition that has been made and for which the entry of a judgment is sought falls within the scope of the rules. The general requirements are that the case include either multiple claims, multiple parties, or both, and that either one or more but fewer than all the claims have been decided, or that all the rights and liabilities of at least one party have been adjudicated.

Despite its apparently broad scope, Rule 54(b) may be invoked only in a relatively select group of cases and applied to an even more limited category of decisions. The rule itself sets forth three basic conditions on its applicability. The first requirement is that either multiple claims for relief or multiple parties be involved. If there are multiple parties, there need only be one claim in the action. All of the rights or liabilities or one or more of the parties regarding that claim must have been fully adjudicated. A decision that leaves a portion of the claim pending as to all defendants does not fall within the ambit of Rule 54(b). Whether multiple parties are before the court is, basically, a simple question that should pose no problems.

The second prerequisite for invoking Rule 54(b) is that at least one claim or the rights and liabilities of at least one party must be finally decided. The words "final judgment" in Rule 54(b) should not be construed too narrowly. A dismissal for lack of subject matter or personal jurisdiction may dispose of a claim completely and thus bring it within the scope of the rule; however, a dismissal for failing to state a claim upon which relief may be granted, made with leave to amend, clearly does not finally decide that claim and Rule 54(b) would not apply.

The third prerequisite to the issuance of a Rule 54(b) certificate is that the court must find that there is no just reason for delaying an appeal. A request that this determination be made is addressed to the trial judge's discretion and whether it will be granted depends on the facts of each case. See 10 Wright & Miller, supra § 2656.

Rule 54(c) has two central elements. The first sentence in the rule provides that a default judgment shall not give relief "different in kind from" or that "exceeds in amount that prayed for in the demand for judgment." The second sentence in Rule 54(c) provides that in non-default cases the judgment need not be limited in kind or amount by the demand, but may include the relief to which the successful party is deemed entitled. The rule must be read in conjunction with Rule 8, which requires that every pleading asserting a claim include a demand for the relief to which the pleader believes himself entitled. Thus, Rule 54(c) applies to any demand for relief, whether made by defendant or plaintiff or presented by way of an original claim, counter-claim, cross-claim, or third-party claim. But See, Cain v. Robinson, 523 So.2d 29 (Miss. 1988). A default judgment may not extend to matters outside the issues raised by the pleadings or beyond the scope of the relief demanded; a judgment in a default case that awards relief that either is more than or different in kind from that requested originally is null and void and defendant may attack it collaterally in another proceeding.

Three related concepts should be distinguished in considering Rule 54(d): These are costs, fees, and expenses. Costs refers to those charges that one party has incurred and is permitted to have reimbursed by his opponent as part of the judgment in the action. Although costs has an everyday meaning synonymous with expenses, taxable costs under Rule 54(d) is more limited and represents those official expenses, such as court fees, that a court will assess against a litigant. Costs almost always amount to less than a successful litigant's total expenses in connection with a law suit and their recovery is nearly always awarded to the successful party. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-53-27 (1972) (successful party to recover costs, generally).

Fees are those amounts paid to the court or one of its officers for particular charges that generally are delineated by statute. Most commonly these include such items as filing fees, clerk's and sheriff's charges, and witnesses' fees. In most instances an award of costs will include reimbursement for the fees paid by the party in whose favor the cost award is made.

Expenses include all the expenditures actually made by a litigant in connection with the action. Both fees and costs are expenses but by no means constitute all of them. Absent a special statute or rule, or an exceptional exercise of judicial discretion, such items as attorney's fees, travel expenditures, and investigatory expenses will not qualify either as statutory fees or reimbursable costs. These expenses must be borne by the litigants. 10 Wright & Miller, supra § 2666. See also 6 Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 54.01-.43 (1972).

[Amended effective February 1, 1990.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Construction.
Appeal.
Costs.
Demands.
Judgment.
Multiple claims or parties.
Presumptions.
Relief.
Timeliness.
Illustrative cases.

In general.

A summary judgment of liability, leaving for a jury determination the issue of damages or the relief to be awarded, is not a true Rule 54(b) judgment. White v. Mills, 735 So. 2d 428 (Miss. 1999).

Construction.

M.R.C.P. Rule 54(c) does not preclude a Rule 15(b) amendment after judgment has been entered; phrase "amended pleadings" in Rule 54(c) refers to and contemplates pleadings amended in accordance with procedures, including timeliness, authorized in Rule 15(b). Queen v. Queen, 551 So. 2d 197 (Miss. 1989).

Chancellor did not err in modifying judgment voiced in open court at conclusion of hearing, since chancellor's oral pronouncement did not constitute the court's final judgment. Banks v. Banks, 511 So. 2d 933 (Miss. 1987).

Appeal.

Because a summary judgment was not certified as final under Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b), and because a tenant neither sought nor was afforded permission under Miss. R. App. P. 5 to proceed with an interlocutory appeal, the appellate court lacked jurisdiction to hear the tenant's appeal. Anderson v. Britton & Koontz Bank, N.A., 55 So. 3d 1130 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Because the court could not see where postponing the final judgment for the pet food company until the remaining claims could be adjudicated would have resulted in any prejudice, hardship, or injustice to any of the parties, the trial judge abused his discretion in granting a Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b) judgment in favor of the company, and the appellate court dismissed the appeal of decdent's spouse for lack of jurisdiction. Myatt v. Peco Foods of Miss., Inc., 22 So. 3d 334 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Denial of a motion for Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b) certification may not be appealed. Wansley v. Speed Corp., 900 So. 2d 1167 (Miss. 2005).

Costs.

Pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(d), the creditor demonstrated that exceptional circumstances existed in order for him to receive accounting fees; it was entirely foreseeable by the debtor that his breach of the contract and his continued denial of its existence would lead to substantial litigation and accounting costs, which should be borne by the debtor. Allred v. Fairchild, 916 So. 2d 529 (Miss. 2005).

The chancellor properly ordered an equal division of costs in an adverse possession action, notwithstanding that the defendants were the prevailing parties, where the chancellor found that the defendants could have ameliorated the situation by other means, such as filing an action to remove cloud upon the title to the disputed property, rather than abruptly erecting a fence on the disputed land with such obvious sentimental value to the plaintiff. Stringer v. Robinson, 760 So. 2d 6 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Injured automobile passenger was not entitled to award of attorney fees and costs in declaratory judgment action against driver's insurer, where there was no contractual or statutory authority for such an award, nor was the case one for punitive damages. Miller v. Allstate Ins. Co., 631 So. 2d 789 (Miss. 1994).

Demands.

Patron's personal injury suit against a store was remanded to the state court in which it was originally filed because the store removed the suit after the expiration of the one-year period in 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b); the equitable exception to the one-year period did not apply because although the patron waited until just before trial to amend her complaint to seek more than $75,000, such was warranted by new medical findings concerning the patron's injuries and was allowable under Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(c) and Miss. R. Civ. P. 15. Smith v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 489 F. Supp. 2d 600 (N.D. Miss. 2007).

The chancellor did err in basing a finding of contempt in part on the defendant husband's failure to pay April, 1998 alimony and child support and in including the amount past due in the judgment against him, notwithstanding the contention that the wife did not specifically seek that relief in her amended counter-motion for contempt, which was filed on April 6, 1998, since she was not required to speculate as to the dollar amount of unpaid obligations that might accrue between the time her pleading was filed and a hearing held on the matter. Watkins v. Watkins, 748 So. 2d 808 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Chancellor did not err in imposing lien in wife's favor to secure lump sum alimony payment, despite absence in wife's pleadings of any request for lien. Smith v. Smith, 607 So. 2d 122 (Miss. 1992).

Language of subdivision (c) of this rule did not preclude award of monetary damages to plaintiff, where he alleged in his complaint that he was entitled to recover a certain amount from defendants; although in his prayer for relief he did not demand that amount or any monetary judgment against defendants, it was clear from his complaint that his allegations gave rise to such a demand and posed no surprise to defendants. Cain v. Robinson, 523 So. 2d 29 (Miss. 1988).

Judgment.

Appeal from a grant of summary judgment in favor of a painting subcontractor in a negligence action was properly dismissed because there was neither a Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b) certification in the record with regard to the subcontractor, nor was there a petition for an interlocutory appeal under Miss. R. app. P. 5. Thus, the order was not appealable as a final judgment. Lloyd G. Oliphant & Sons Paint Co. v. Logan, 12 So. 3d 614 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Order granting summary judgment was not a final appealable judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b) because, by its terms, the trial court reserved ruling on other issues raised in the petition for damages and injunctive relief; that the trial judge treated the order as a final judgment did not render it so. Wiggins v. Perry, 989 So. 2d 419 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Wife's appeal on a divorce action was dismissed where the appellate court lacked jurisdiction over the appeal because the chancellor's entry of judgment as to fewer than all of the claims before the court did not comply with the requirements of Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b). Walters v.

Walters, 956 So. 2d 1050 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Trial court's interlocutory order, finding that the personal representative's wrongful death action against a convenience store was not barred by the tolling of the statute of limitations, was not a final appealable judgment, as it left the action pending in the trial court; therefore, the order did not estop the convenience store from relitigating the tolling issue in a motion to reconsider . Anderson v. R & D Foods, Inc., 913 So. 2d 394 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Trial court's order of summary judgment was proper under Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b) in an action against the sellers of a home for fraud in connection with the sale of the home. Laird v. ERA Bayshore Realty, 841 So. 2d 178 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Final judgment issued by chancellor in paternity case was more than interlocutory in nature; it was a final, appealable judgment, comprehensive in scope, replete with extensive findings of fact and conclusions of law. Mississippi State Dep't of Human Servs. v. Barnett, 633 So. 2d 430 (Miss. 1993).

Multiple claims or parties.

In a case in which a car dealership employee appealed a circuit court's entry of summary judgment in favor of a sheriff's department, the appellate court lacked jurisdiction because the case against a car owner remained pending and there was no determination from the circuit court as to some danger of injustice caused by delay. The appeal was interlocutory. Melton v. Lawrence County Sheriff's Dep't, 20 So. 3d 762 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Insured's appeal was dismissed in an action against an insurer and a motorist, because summary judgment for the insurer did not terminate the action where the trial court did not make any adjudication concerning the motorist, and the insured failed to have the judgment as to the insurer certified as final pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b). Burnett v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins., 30 So. 3d 1260 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari dismissed by 39 So. 3d 5, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 334 (Miss. 2010).

Pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1), certain defendants waived the defenses of insufficiency of service of process and insufficiency of process by omitting these defenses from their answer and motion to dismiss. Therefore, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b) and 58, the order dismissing those defendants fully adjudicated the case as to all parties and it was a final, appealable judgment. Sauvage v. Meadowcrest Living Ctr., LLC, 28 So. 3d 589 (Miss. 2010).

Trial court improvidently granted a final judgment pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b) when it granted summary judgment to a homeowner on a claim of false filing of a construction lien because an intertwined slander of title claim, which arose out of the lien filing, remained to be adjudicated and involved a commonality of operative facts. Reeves Constr. & Supply, Inc. v. Corrigan, 24 So. 3d 1077 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

In insureds' suit against insurers and its agent regarding a deductible, summary judgment rulings for the insurers were erroneously certified under Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b) because the insureds' claims against the agent were not part of the appeals, and any damage award was predicated partly on resolution of the claims against the agent. Southern Healthcare Servs. v. Lloyd's of London, 20 So. 3d 84 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Law firm's appeal from judgment in favor of a school district and its legal counsel, finding that certain special meetings were not a nullity or void, was dismissed because the judgment did not fall within the purview of Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b) as factual allegations and remaining prayers for relief were still pending as to all defendants. Colom Law Firm, LLC v. Bd. of Trs., 16 So. 3d 692 (Miss. 2009).

Appeal from the dismissal of a negligence case filed against a first driver for lack of service of process was interlocutory and not appealable because the dismissal order did not dispose of claims against a second driver, and the order on its face was not certified as a final judgment in accordance with Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b). Milyanovich v. Feeley, 10 So. 3d 529 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Insured's appeal from the denial of his motion for an additur to his damage award in his negligence suit against a driver or, alternatively, a new trial was dismissed as the requirements of Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b) were not met where the insured's bad faith suit against his insurer, arising from the same automobile accident, was still proceeding. The order gave no indication that it was meant to be a final, appealable judgment with respect to the parties to the exclusion of the insured's cause of action against the insurer, which continued under the same styling and cause number, and the trial court made no express determination that there was no just reason for delay; nor did it expressly direct that a final judgment be entered pursuant to Rule 54(b). Jennings v. McCelleis, 987 So. 2d 1041 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Although the issue could not have been considered in a prior appeal from a case involving a bail bond where the claims against all parties had not yet been resolved, the granting of a motion to dismiss as to the agent of a bail bonding company was properly considered in a second appeal because it was no longer interlocutory in nature; however, the dismissal was found to be appropriate on the claims of respondent superior and agency since there were no pending claims against the agent's employer. Stringer v. Am. Bankers Ins. Co. of Fla., 969 So. 2d 113 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari dismissed by 552 U.S. 1306, 128 S. Ct. 1925, 170 L. Ed. 2d 741, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 3407, 76 U.S.L.W. 3556 (2008).

Where oil and gas lease royalty payment claims against two lessees were barred by limitations, summary judgment as to them was proper, but because a third lessee remained in litigation, there had been no final judgment for appeals purposes and absent certification under Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b), the appeal required dismissal. Nygaard v. Getty Oil Co., 877 So. 2d 559 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Because (1) the trial court mentioned only the insurance company's motion to dismiss and did not mention any other defendants, and (2) no Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b) certificate was entered by the trial court, the order was purely interlocutory and was not a final appealable judgment; thus, plaintiffs' appeal was not properly before the appellate court and was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. Salts v. Gulf Nat'l Life Ins. Co., 849 So. 2d 848 (Miss. 2002).

Appeals from an order not dismissing all the parties to a lawsuit was interlocutory, absent certification as a final judgment by the trial judge. Fairley v. George County, 800 So. 2d 1159 (Miss. 2001).

Trucking company's appeal of default judgment was dismissed because the judgment had not resolved all issues involving all parties and the company had not obtained the trial court certificate required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b) before attempting to appeal an interlocutory order. Wayne-Built & Son, Inc. v. Houpt, 797 So. 2d 1046 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

An appeal of a default judgment entered against a third party defendant was dismissed since the default judgment did not terminate the original cause of action and the trial court did not certify the case for appeal under subsection (b). Wayne-Built & Son, Inc v. Houpt Trucking, — So. 2d —, 2001 Miss. App. LEXIS 200 (Miss. Ct. App. May 15, 2001), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 797 So. 2d 1046, 2001 Miss. App. LEXIS 318 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

An appeal by the plaintiff in a medical malpractice case from the grant of summary judgment to one defendant was dismissed since the order appealed from did not adjudicate the plaintiff's claim against the other defendant and was not certified under Rule 54(b) as a final judgment as to the defendant to whom summary judgment was granted. Gilchrist v. Veach, 754 So. 2d 1172 (Miss. 2000).

In an action involving multiple defendants and in the absence of a Rule 54(b) certification, orders regarding a grant of interpleader, the transfer of the case to another county, and attorney's fees were interlocutory and were not appealable as final judgments. Scruggs v. Merkel & Cocke, P.A., 763 So. 2d 869 (Miss. 2000).

An order was interlocutory and not appealable where the action involved several defendants, the order disposed only of the claim for damages against one defendant, and the appellant failed to have the judgment certified as a final judgment. Mitchell v. Blackmon, 760 So. 2d 691 (Miss. 2000).

Presumptions.

In a father's challenge to the trial court's determination of his alimony obligation, notwithstanding the chancellor's failure to explicitly state that he was ruling on the tax liability from the year complained of, the judgment was a final judgment in compliance with Miss. R. Civ. P. 54; it was clear from the chancellor's order that the tax liability discussed in the motion for rehearing was different from the tax liability presented at trial. Parker v. Parker, 934 So. 2d 359 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Mississippi's procedural rules clearly create a presumption favoring the award of costs to the prevailing party; it is therefore incumbent upon unsuccessful party to overcome this presumption by showing some special circumstances. Northern Elec. Co. v. Phillips, 673 So. 2d 1384 (Miss. 1996).

Relief.

Insurance company was not entitled to an award of indemnity against a drilling company because the insurance company failed to show that it had made settlement-of-claims payments to injured parties under compulsion of law; since the insurance company paid the settlements as a volunteer, it was not entitled to recovery. Hartford Cas. Ins. Co. v. Halliburton Co., 826 So. 2d 1206 (Miss. 2001).

Complaint contained specific plea for punitive damages against defendant for its bad faith refusal to pay, and there was therefore no merit in defendant's contention that punitive damages were awarded on a ground not raised in plaintiff's complaint. Dynasteel Corp. v. Aztec Indus., Inc., 611 So. 2d 977 (Miss. 1992).

Timeliness.

In an action involving a dispute over an easement, the appellant property owner's appeal was not untimely because, when a trial court certified a claim for appeal under Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b), the time for taking the appeal began to run on the date of certification. Therefore, the chancellor's December 18th order constituted the final, appealable judgment and the appeal was filed within 30 days of that order. Calvert v. Griggs, 992 So. 2d 627 (Miss. 2008).

Illustrative cases.

Although the parties requested child support in their respective complaint and counter-complaint for divorce, the chancellor expressly declined to rule on the issue of child support and did not certify the judgment as final pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b); accordingly, the appellate court lacked jurisdiction to review the issues on appeal. S.E.B. v. R.E.B., 67 So. 3d 14 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Although Miss. R. Civ. P. 68 applied because the jury's award was less than the defendant's rejected offer of settlement, costs were limited to those allowable under Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(d) and, therefore, the plaintiff could not be taxed with costs for copying, trial materials, and court reporter fees, or for expert witnesses costs in excess of Miss. Code Ann. § 25-7-47. Hubbard v. Delta Sanitation of Miss., 64 So. 3d 547 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

While the agent argued that the circuit court's order was not a final judgment which expressly dismissed the claims with prejudice under Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b), the order clearly used words of finality and adjudication; the order concluded that the agent could not maintain the cause of action against the insurers and twice included the phrase "ordered and adjudged. Because the circuit court's opinion and order was final and appealable and agent's notice of appeal was untimely filed and she failed to file a motion for an extension of time under Miss. R. App. P. 4(g), ther appeal was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. Rigdon v. Miss. Farm Bureau Fed'n, 22 So. 3d 321 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In plaintiff's suit against the manufacturer of a forklift, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in excluding the testimony of plaintiff's expert witness under Miss. R. Evid. 702; the expert's findings were speculative and his methodology failed to meet the Daubert standard. The trial court did not err by entering a final judgment for the manufacturer under Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b). Townsend v. Doosan Infracore Am. Corp., 3 So. 3d 150 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Where the parents of a child killed in a drunk driving accident sued the store that sold alcohol to the driver minor, the trial court issued a declaratory judgment holding that the store's insurance policy covered the parents' claims. The trial court certified the declaratory judgment as a final judgment pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b); therefore, the insurance company was permitted to appeal. S.C. Ins. Co. v. Keymon, 974 So. 2d 226 (Miss. 2008).

In a case where partial summary judgment was granted to a utility company on the issue of trespass damages, an appeal from the ruling was dismissed because the trial court improperly entered a Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b) final judgment since the litigation was not complex, and the appeal would have resulted in piecemeal litigation; moreover, the case was not an appropriate example of an interlocutory appeal either since it did not involve merely questions of law. Byrd v. Miss. Power Co., 943 So. 2d 108 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Fact that a former wife included a claim for modification of alimony in her pleadings and attached a copy of a property agreement to the pleadings was sufficient to put the former husband on notice that an escalation clause in the agreement could be the basis of a decision. D'Avignon v. D'Avignon, 945 So. 2d 401 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Where an attorney did not immediately appeal a judgment pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b) that the law firm's president had not usurped corporate authority by transferring firm revenues to himself, the attorney waived her right to challenge that ruling after a final judgment was entered. Jowett v. Scruggs, 901 So. 2d 638 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 901 So. 2d 1273 (Miss. 2005).

Where the court of appeals affirmed the chancery court as to its order regarding temporary child custody, and where the father obtained further review by petition for certiorari, the evidence in the record supported the contention that the change of custody was intended to be temporary until the trial court could hold a full hearing on the merits after the litigation (then pending in federal district court against a special chancellor) was over. For that reason, the order was not final and permanent, and the Mississippi Supreme Court did not have jurisdiction to review the change of custody. McDonald v. McDonald, 876 So. 2d 296 (Miss. 2004), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 125 S. Ct. 355, 160 L. Ed. 2d 255 (2004).

Employee's claims for actual damages, and for attorney's fees remained pending, the trial court never made a Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b) certification, the trial court's order dismissing the punitive damages claim was interlocutory, and the question presented did not compel suspension of the procedural requirements of Miss. R. App. P. 5(a) to allow an interlocutory appeal, thus, the appeal was dismissed for lack of an appealable final judgment. Millsaps v. Stout, 860 So. 2d 852 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

In an appeal from what was in effect, a partial summary judgment, which resolved the ownership of the disputed life insurance policy as being owned by the decedent, the ultimate issue of who was the proper beneficiary, the decedent's former husband, or the decedent's child, was apparently reserved, there was no showing to justify a certification, and therefore, the appeal was an improper interlocutory appeal, and was dismissed. Evans v. Moore, 853 So. 2d 850 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Chancellor did not err in granting relief to divorced spouse beyond that requested by the spouse in her motion because, in light of the broad discretionary powers granted to a chancellor to fashion appropriate relief in resolving the financial aspects of a dissolving marriage, the pleadings were sufficient to fairly put the parties on notice that the chancellor would be asked to make an appropriate ruling on the parties' competing rights and obligations. Pope v. Pope, 803 So. 2d 499 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

The grant of summary judgment in favor of a medical center in a wrongful death medical malpractice action was not an appealable order as there were two defendants in the action and the lower court order made no adjudication with regard to the other defendant. Williams v. Delta Reg'l Med. Ctr., 740 So. 2d 284 (Miss. 1999).

Chancery court had only issued a ruling and denied motions, and there was nothing in record suggesting entry of any final order or judgment disposing of pending custody issues on merits, and therefore supreme court was required to dismiss appeal. Cortesi v. Cortesi, 566 So. 2d 702 (Miss. 1990).

Since a final judgment had been made dismissing one defendant from the action and the remaining defendant was impecunious, the appellate court decided to hear an interlocutory appeal regarding the summary judgment matter and not postpone its determination until after trial, because waiting would only result in inefficiency. May v. V.F.W. Post #2539, 577 So. 2d 372 (Miss. 1991).

Appeal was timely, where appellant gave notice of appeal to both final order and previous interlocutory order, and his notice of appeal was perfected within thirty days from date of entry of final order. O'Neill v. O'Neill, 551 So. 2d 228 (Miss. 1989).

Matter before supreme court was not an interlocutory appeal, but a case where more than one claim for relief had been presented; since chancery court had decided controlling legal issue in the case, supreme court treated chancery court's order as a determination that there was no just reason for delay and that appeal should be heard. First United Bank v. Philmont Corp., 533 So. 2d 449 (Miss. 1988).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. Propriety under 28 U.S.C.S § 1920 and Rule 54(d) of Federal Rules of Civil Procedure of allowing prevailing party costs for copies of depositions. 155 A.L.R. Fed. 445.

Taxation of costs associated with videotaped depositions under 28 U.S.C.S. § 1920 and Rule 54(d) of Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. 156 A.L.R. Fed. 311.

Rule 55. Default.

(a) Entry. When a party against whom a judgment for affirmative relief is sought has failed to plead or otherwise defend as provided by these rules and that fact is made to appear by affidavit or otherwise, the clerk shall enter his default.

(b) Judgment. In all cases the party entitled to a judgment by default shall apply to the court therefor. If the party against whom judgment by default is sought has appeared in the action, he (or if appearing by representative, his representative) shall be served with written notice of the application for judgment at least three days prior to the hearing of such application; however, judgment by default may be entered by the court on the day the case is set for trial without such three days' notice. If in order to enable the court to enter judgment or to carry it into effect it is necessary to take an account or to determine the amount of damages or to establish the truth of any averment by evidence or to make an investigation of any other matter, the court may conduct such hearing with or without a jury, in the court's discretion, or order such references as it deems necessary and proper.

(c) Setting aside default. For good cause shown, the court may set aside an entry of default and, if a judgment by default has been entered, may likewise set it aside in accordance with Rule 60(b).

(d) Plaintiffs, counter-claimants, and cross-claimants. The provisions of this rule apply whether the party entitled to the judgment by default is a plaintiff, a third-party plaintiff, or a party who has pleaded a cross-claim or counterclaim. In all cases a judgment by default is subject to the limitation of Rule 54(c).

(e) Proof required despite default in certain cases. No judgment by default shall be entered against a person under a legal disability or a party to a suit for divorce or annulment of marriage unless the claimant establishes his claim or rights to relief by evidence, provided, however, that divorces on ground of irreconcilable differences may be granted pro confesso as provided by statute.

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 55 is to provide a uniform procedure for acting upon and setting aside actions upon parties' defaults.

Prior to obtaining a default judgment, Rule 55(b), there must be an entry of default as provided by Rule 55(a). An entry of default may be made by the clerk only with regard to a claim for affirmative relief against a party who has failed to plead or otherwise defend; See MRCP App.B, Form 36. These elements of default must be shown by an affidavit or other competent proof.

Before a default can be entered, the court must have jurisdiction over the party against whom the judgment is sought, which also means that he must have been effectively served with process. Arnold v. Miller, 26 Miss. 152 (1853). If the court has jurisdiction over an action seeking affirmative relief, a default may be entered against any party who fails to plead or otherwise defend within the time allowed by Rule 12(a).

Entry of default for failure to plead or otherwise defend is not limited to situations involving a failure to answer a complaint, but applies to any of the pleadings listed in Rule 7(a).

Thus, plaintiff's failure to reply to a counter-claim may entitle defendant to an entry of default on the counter-claim. The same is true with regard to cross-claims.

The words "otherwise defend" refer to the interposition of various challenges to such matters as service, venue, and the sufficiency of the prior pleading, any of which might prevent a default if pursued in the absence of a responsive pleading. The authority in Rule 55(a) for the clerk to enter a default does not require that to escape default the defendant must not only file a sufficient answer to the merits but must also have a lawyer or be present in court when the case is called for trial; thus, a motion challenging the complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is within the notion of "otherwise defend."

The mere appearance by a defending party will not keep him from being in default for failure to plead or otherwise defend, but if he appears and indicates a desire to contest the action, the court can exercise its discretion and refuse to enter a default. This approach is in line with the general policy that whenever there is doubt whether a default should be entered, the court ought to allow the case to be tried on the merits.

Rule 55(a) does not represent the only source of authority in these rules for the entry of a default that may lead to judgment. As a result, a party who has filed a responsive pleading or otherwise defended may still find himself in default for noncompliance with the rules at some later point in the action. For example, Rule 37(b)(2)(C) and Rule 37(d) both provide for the use of a default judgment as a sanction for violation of the discovery rules.

When the prerequisites of Rule 55(a) are satisfied, an entry of default should be made by the clerk without any action being taken by the court. The clerk's function, however, is not perfunctory. Before he can enter a default he must examine the affidavits filed and satisfy himself that they meet the requirements of Rule 55(a). The fact that Rule 55(a) gives the clerk the authority to enter a default is not a limitation on the power of the court to do so.

Although an appearance by a defending party does not immunize him from being in default for failure to plead or otherwise defend, it does entitle him to at least three days written notice of the application to the court for the entry of a judgment based on his default. This enables a defendant in default to appear at a subsequent hearing on the question of damages and contest the amount to be assessed against him. Damages must be fixed before an entry of default can become a default judgment and there is no estoppel by judgment until the judgment by default has been entered.

When a judgment by default is entered, it is treated as a conclusive and final adjudication of the issues necessary to justify the relief awarded and is given the same effect as a judgment rendered after a trial on the merits. A judgment entered pursuant to Rule 55(b) may be reviewed on appeal to the same extent as any other judgment; however, an order denying a motion for a default judgment is interlocutory and not appealable. Rule 54(a).

The ability of the court to exercise its discretion and refuse to enter a default judgment is made effective by the two requirements in Rule 55(b) that an application must be presented to the court for the entry of judgment and that notice of the application must be sent to the defaulting party if he has appeared. The latter requirement enables the defaulting party to show cause to the court why a default judgment should not be entered or why the requested relief should not be granted. A party's failure to appear or be represented at any stage of the proceedings following an initial appearance does not affect this notice requirement. Service of the notice must be made at least three days before the hearing on the application, and must afford the party an opportunity to appear at the hearing. The purpose of this portion of Rule 55(b) is simple: It is intended to protect those parties who, although delaying in a formal sense by failing to file pleadings within the thirty day period, have otherwise indicated to the moving party a clear purpose to defend the suit. On the other hand, when a defaulting party has failed to appear, thereby manifesting no intention to defend, he is not entitled to notice of the application for a default judgment under this rule.

In determining whether to enter a default judgment, the court is free to consider a number of factors that may appear from the record. Among these are the amount of money potentially involved; whether material issues of fact or issues of substantial public importance are at issue, whether the default is largely technical; whether plaintiff has been substantially prejudiced by the delay involved; and whether the grounds for default are clearly established or are in doubt. Furthermore, the court may consider whether the default was caused by a good-faith mistake or excusable neglect, how harsh an effect a default judgment might have, and whether the court thinks it later would be obliged to set aside the default on defendant's motion.

Once the default is established, defendant has no further standing to contest the factual allegations of plaintiff's claim for relief. If he wishes an opportunity to challenge plaintiff's right to recover, his only recourse is to show good cause for setting aside the default under Rule 55(c) and, failing that, to contest the amount of recovery.

Once the court determines that a judgment by default should be entered, it will determine the amount and character of the recovery that should be awarded. If the defendant does not contest the amount prayed for in the complaint and the claim is for a sum certain or a sum that can be made certain by computation, the judgment generally will be entered for that amount without any further hearing.

If the sum is not certain or capable of easy computation the court may hold whatever hearing or inquiry it deems necessary; it may even direct an accounting or a reference to a master. See MRCP 53.

When defendant contests the amount of the claim, a full hearing may be required on the issue of damages since a default does not concede the amount demanded. This proceeding is the same as any other trial except that it is limited to the question of damages.

Rule 55(c) differentiates between relief from the entry of default and relief from a default judgment. This distinction reflects the different consequences of the two events and the different procedures that bring them about. The clerk of the court may enter a default upon the application of the nondefaulting party; the entry simply is an official recognition of the fact that one party is in default. The entry is an interlocutory step that is taken under Rule 55(a) in anticipation of a final judgment by default under Rule 55(b).

In sharp contrast, a final default judgment is not possible against a party in default until the measure of recovery has been ascertained, which typically requires a hearing, in which the defaulting party may participate; in some situations a trial may be made available to determine an issue of damages. Moreover, the entry of a default judgment is a final disposition of the case and is an appealable order.

The distinction between an entry of default and a default judgment also has significance in terms of the procedure for setting them aside. The party against whom a default has been entered typically will attempt to have his default set aside in order to enable the action to proceed. A motion for relief under Rule 55(c) is appropriate for this purpose even though there has not been a formal entry of default. For example, when defendant fails to answer within the time specified by the rules, he is in default even if that fact is not officially noted. Therefore, he must request that the default be "excused" and secure leave to answer before his responsive pleading will be recognized.

Relief from a default judgment must be requested by a formal application as required by Rule 60(b). Because the request is for relief from a final disposition of the case, the party in default must take affirmative action to bring the case before the trial court a second time. A motion for relief under Rule 55(c) is not the equivalent of or an alternative to appeal. Of course, if the motion is denied, it is ripe for immediate appeal, but the right to appeal may be lost for failure to pursue it in a timely fashion.

Rule 55(d) sets out two relatively straight-forward propositions. The first sentence of the subdivision states that the provisions of Rule 55 are applicable to any party seeking relief, whether a plaintiff, third-party plaintiff, counterclaimant, or cross-claimant. According to the second sentence of Rule 55(d), which simply serves as a cross-reference, a default judgment in any case is "subject to the limitation of Rule 54(d)." The latter provision states that a default judgment "shall not be different in kind from or exceed in amount that prayed for in the demand for judgment."

For detailed discussions of Federal Rule 55, after which MRCP 55 is patterned, see 6 Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 55.01-.11 (1972), and 10 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 2681-2690, 2692-2701 (1973).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction.
Applicability.
Appearance.
Damages.
Jurisdiction.
Notice.
Procedure.
Record of hearing.
Review.
Setting aside.
Illustrative cases.

Construction.

Default is not treated as a general admission or an absolute confession. Similarly, a general denial is not sufficient to set aside a default judgment; a meritorious defense is one that is demonstrated through an affidavit or sworn form of testimony and conclusions and unsubstantiated allegations will not suffice. Leach v. Shelter Ins. Co., 909 So. 2d 1283 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Neither attorney's letter to member of bar complaint tribunal nor her discovery requests constituted an "answer" or a sufficient responsive pleading to disciplinary complaint of Mississippi Bar, and therefore tribunal did not err in entering default against attorney. Harrison v. Mississippi Bar, 637 So. 2d 204 (Miss. 1994).

Subdivision (b) of this rule allowed court to hold subsequent hearings in order to carry a default judgment into effect, and therefore trial judge did not err in entering default judgment on issue of liability alone. Pointer v. Huffman, 509 So. 2d 870 (Miss. 1987).

Applicability.

Where a judgment debtor is only entitled to notice of the garnishment action if the garnishee suggests exemptions under § 11-35-33, the notice provisions of this rule are inconsistent with the statutes, and are not applicable. Folse v. Stennett-Yancey, 757 So. 2d 989 (Miss. 2000).

Mississippi State Bar rules of discipline contain no provisions concerning default judgments, and therefore Rules of Civil Procedure concerning default judgments apply to disciplinary proceedings. Harrison v. Mississippi Bar, 637 So. 2d 204 (Miss. 1994).

Pretrial order in divorce action required parties to file consolidated pleadings as a way to put an end to excessive pleading and satellite litigation, and therefore answers were neither contemplated nor required, and wife was not entitled to default judgment for husband's failure to answer. Cumberland v. Cumberland, 564 So. 2d 839 (Miss. 1990).

There are no specific procedures concerning entry of default judgment in attorney disciplinary actions by the State Bar Committee, and therefore M.R.C.P. Rule 55 applies. Vining v. Mississippi State Bar Ass'n, 508 So. 2d 1047 (Miss. 1987).

Although partial in nature, default resulted in a default judgment, which was more than the mere entry of default by the clerk, and therefore trial judge committed no error in addressing defendant's request for relief under M.R.C.P. Rule 60(b) instead of Rule 55(c). Pointer v. Huffman, 509 So. 2d 870 (Miss. 1987).

Appearance.

Default judgment entered against the automobile insurers was not void for failure to comply with Miss. R. Civ. P. 55(b) where a telephone conversation between the injured driver's attorney and a claims specialist was not an appearance in the action. Am. States Ins. Co. v. Rogillio, 10 So. 3d 463 (Miss. 2009).

Where the process issued to defendants was deficient and not in substantial compliance with Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(b), a pro se response by one defendant might have constituted an appearance under Miss. R. Civ. P. 55, but was not a valid answer because it did not comport with the filing requirement of Miss. R. Civ. P. 5(d). Fletcher v. Limeco Corp., 996 So. 2d 773 (Miss. 2008), remanded by 32 So. 3d 429, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 182 (Miss. 2010).

In a negligence case, the defense of lack of personal jurisdiction was waived under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1) because an out-of-state resident made a general appearance when he sought relief from a default judgment without raising that objection; therefore, the case was improperly dismissed for a failure timely serve process. Courtney v. McCluggage, 991 So. 2d 642 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In initial suit by homeowners against a seller, for fraud, where the homebuilder appeared for a deposition pursuant to a subpoena, the homebuilder did not make an appearance when the homebuilder was not yet named as a party. Thus, when the homebuilder was later added as defendant in the homeowners' negligence action, and failed to timely answer, entry of default judgment was proper; further, the homebuilder's alleged inability to contact the homeowners' counsel did not annul the homebuilder's obligation to timely answer under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12. Williams v. Kelly, 872 So. 2d 783 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where defendant paid underlying debt immediately after service of process, but took no further action of record, defendant did not make an appearance so as to be entitled to notice within meaning of subdivision (b) of this rule. Dynasteel Corp. v. Aztec Indus., Inc., 611 So. 2d 977 (Miss. 1992).

Damages.

Because the Mississippi Supreme Court had no evidence before it to judge whether the awarded damages to the patron were reasonable and supported by the evidence, the judgment was vacated as to damages and remanded for a damages hearing on the record. Greater Canton Ford Mercury, Inc. v. Lane, 997 So. 2d 198 (Miss. 2008).

State default judgment did liquidate and establish the amount of a claimant's damages, including punitive damages, which, under the Official Comment to Miss. R. Civ. P. 55, was a conclusive and final adjudication of the issues. Under the principles of res judicata, the court was bound by the amount of punitive damages established by the default judgment for purposes of the claim filed under 11 U.S.C.S. § 502. In re Young, — Bankr. —, 2008 Bankr. LEXIS 1820 (Bankr. N.D. Miss. May 9, 2008).

Pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 55(b), an on-the-record hearing must be held prior to the entry of default judgment under which unliquidated damages are requested. Hence, because plaintiffs sought unliquidated damages in their breach of contract action against a credit card company, court erred in not conducting an evidentiary hearing on the record prior to entering a default judgment against the company. Capital One Servs. v. Rawls, 904 So. 2d 1010 (Miss. 2004).

The rule does not require that the hearing to determine the amount of damages be of record. American 3-CI v. Farrow, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 61 (Miss. Ct. App. Feb. 23, 1999), subst. op., 749 So. 2d 298 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Because plaintiffs' claims were not for liquidated damages and there was no evidence supportive of determination of damages in the record, a hearing was required and the matter was remanded for further proceedings. Journey v. Long, 585 So. 2d 1268 (Miss. 1991).

Jurisdiction.

In an action arising from alleged defects in plaintiff purchasers' manufactured home, the trial court lacked jurisdiction to issue a default judgment pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 55(b) against defendant bank, a nonresident corporation, because defendant was never properly served with process under Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(c)(5) and (d)(4) where the uncontested evidence showed that the person who signed for the process was a mailroom clerk who was not defendant's agent for service of process. Flagstar Bank v. Danos, 46 So. 3d 348 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), reversed en banc by 46 So. 3d 298, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 457 (Miss. 2010).

Notice.

Denial of the operator, manager, and son's motion to set aside a default judgment was improper because the letter from their counsel to the waitress's counsel expressed an intent to defend against the claims asserted by the waitress and they were therefore entitled to three days' notice of the hearing on the default judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 55(b). Kumar v. Loper, 80 So. 3d 833 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011), vacated by, remanded by 80 So. 3d 808, 2012 Miss. LEXIS 94, 162 Lab. Cas. (CCH) P61233 (Miss. 2012).

Chancery court erred in entering a default judgment against a construction corporation in homeowners' action for slander of title because under Miss. R. Civ. P. 55(b), the homeowners were obligated to provide the corporation notice of the hearing on their application for default judgment; while the corporation had not filed an answer to the complaint, it did indicate its intent to file a counterclaim if the homeowners filed a complaint. Tucker v. Williams, 7 So. 3d 961 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Under Miss. R. Civ. P. 55, debtor was not entitled to notice of application of default judgment because he failed to answer state court summons and complaint. In re Young, — Bankr. —, 2008 Bankr. LEXIS 1820 (Bankr. N.D. Miss. May 9, 2008).

Although a debtor asserted that a state default judgment entered against him under Miss. R. Civ. P. 55(a) was issued without due process of law, a sheriff's proof of service demonstrated that the debtor received the summons and complaint. In re Young, — Bankr. —, 2008 Bankr. LEXIS 1820 (Bankr. N.D. Miss. May 9, 2008).

Although the purchaser's filing of his answer to the bank's motion for default judgment was untimely, it constituted an appearance and therefore resulted in the need for three days' notice and a hearing. Williams v. Chase Manhattan Bank, 834 So. 2d 718 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

The defendant was entitled to three days notice the plaintiff's application for default since communications between the defendant's attorney and the plaintiff were sufficient to satisfy the appearance requirements of subsection (b). Folse v. Stennet-Yancey, — So. 2d —, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 242 (Miss. Ct. App. May 4, 1999), reversed by 757 So. 2d 989, 2000 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 2000).

Defendant was entitled to have default judgment set aside for failure of notice and hearing; it was clear that defendant had made an appearance, and thus defendant was entitled to notice and a hearing on plaintiff's application for default. King v. Sigrest, 641 So. 2d 1158 (Miss. 1994).

Wife had "appeared" in divorce action so as to merit three-day notice required by this rule, where she promptly contacted an attorney, who wrote her husband's attorney and informed him that she was represented by counsel and wished to settle the case, making clear, however, her intent to defend the suit should no settlement be reached. Holmes v. Holmes, 628 So. 2d 1361 (Miss. 1993).

Notice requirement of this rule was applicable in divorce action, since statute governing such actions provided no guidance in the area of notice. Holmes v. Holmes, 628 So. 2d 1361 (Miss. 1993).

Procedure.

Court properly denied defendant's motion for relief from a default judgment in plaintiff's action to recover damages for timber that was cut from land; plaintiff was not required to first obtain an entry of default by the clerk of the court, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 55(a), prior to obtaining the default judgment based on the entirely separate ground of discovery abuse, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(C). Hood v. Mordecai, 900 So. 2d 370 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 898 So. 2d 679 (Miss. 2005).

County court erred in entering default judgment against defendant, where record failed to reveal any application for default or notice to defendant. Smith v. Everett, 483 So. 2d 325 (Miss. 1986).

Record of hearing.

The failure to make a record of the hearing to assess damages rendered a default judgment void and required a new hearing for the limited purpose of assessing the plaintiff's damages. American 3-CI v. Farrow, 749 So. 2d 298 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Review.

Because a husband did not challenge the granting of a divorce itself or the chancery court's decision to try the case in his absence, the husband's attempt to defend the case for the first time on appeal was improper, and the issues he raised were procedurally barred by Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-7 (Rev. 2004) and Miss. R. Civ. P. 55(e). Lee v. Lee, 78 So. 3d 337 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011), reversed by, remanded by 78 So. 3d 326, 2012 Miss. LEXIS 36 (Miss. 2012).

Trial court erred in sua sponte entering a default judgment against a city under Miss. R. Civ. P. 55 in a suit brought under the Mississippi Tort Claims Act, specifically Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(c); although the city did not timely answer plaintiff's amended complaint pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(a), the parties continued to engage in discovery for over four years and plaintiff had no intention of seeking of a default judgment. City of Jackson v. Presley, 942 So. 2d 777 (Miss. 2006).

When a trial court, after striking a responsive pleading, sua sponte entered a default judgment as to liability against a city under Miss. R. Civ. P. 55, which was akin to a summary judgment since the city was expressly foreclosed from presenting liability evidence at the trial of the case, the appellate court applied a de novo standard of review as to the trial court's entry of the default judgment as to liability against the city. City of Jackson v. Presley, 942 So. 2d 777 (Miss. 2006).

Trial judge did not abuse his discretion in denying the motorist's request to set aside the default judgment. Particularly since the evidence suggested that she did not have good cause for failing to answer as she was well educated and could have understood the complaint and the summons, she did not even go to her own insurer regarding a defense until she was already in default, and she did not present sufficient evidence that belied a colorable defense, or that the other insurer who sued her would not have suffered prejudice, with regard to its subrogation action, had the default judgment been set aside. Leach v. Shelter Ins. Co., 909 So. 2d 1283 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Applications for default are addressed to sound discretion of trial court, and court on appeal has no authority to disturb trial court's exercise of its discretion absent a firm conclusion that that discretion has been abused. Shannon v. Henson, 499 So. 2d 758 (Miss. 1986).

Setting aside.

In an action filed by a husband and wife against a driver, the housing authority of a city, and the housing authority's insurer, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in setting aside entries of default against the driver and the insurer pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 55(c) because vacation of the default entry for the driver and insurer would serve the interests of justice; the trial court determined that the insurer was never a proper defendant in the lawsuit, and under the Mississippi Tort Claims Act, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-7(2), the driver could not be held personally liable. King v. Bunton, 43 So. 3d 361 (Miss. 2010).

In an action filed by a husband and wife against a driver, the housing authority of a city, and the housing authority's insurer, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in setting aside entries of default against the driver and the insurer pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 55(c) because vacation of the default entry for the driver and insurer would serve the interests of justice; the trial court determined that the insurer was never a proper defendant in the lawsuit, and under the Mississippi Tort Claims Act, Miss. Code Ann. ' 11-46-7(2), the driver could not be held personally liable. King v. Bunton, 43 So. 3d 361 (Miss. 2010).

Trial court did not err in denying the car dealership's motion to set aside default judgment, Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(6), as the dealership did not put forth evidence of good cause and the patron put forth sufficient evidence of prejudice that would result if the motion was granted. Greater Canton Ford Mercury, Inc. v. Lane, 997 So. 2d 198 (Miss. 2008).

District court did not violate the Anti-Injunction Act, 28 U.S.C.S. § 2283, in setting aside an entry of default that had been made pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 55 against an insurer in a plaintiff's state court suit prior to the removal of the suit to the federal district court because the district court did not enjoin the state court proceedings, which had already been stayed when the insurer filed its notice of removal, and further the district court's power to set aside the pre-removal default judgment was well established. Burton v. Cont'l Cas. Co., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 79299 (S.D. Miss. Oct. 30, 2006).

Court did not err in refusing to set aside, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 55(c), a default judgment entered against a credit card company in plaintiffs' breach of contract action because the credit card company provided little explanation regarding its failure to appear for trial. Company also provided no explanation of why there was a 21-day delay between the filing of the entry of appearance and the filing of the motion to set aside the default judgment. Capital One Servs. v. Rawls, 904 So. 2d 1010 (Miss. 2004).

The circuit judge was within his discretion to set aside an entry of default where the appellee's motion provided numerous defenses that established good cause consistent with subsection (c). Tatum v. Barrentine, — So. 2d —, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 73 (Miss. Mar. 29, 2001), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 797 So. 2d 223, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 269 (Miss. 2001).

There is a more liberal standard for setting aside a default than for setting aside a default judgment. King v. Sigrest, 641 So. 2d 1158 (Miss. 1994).

Decision to grant or set aside a default judgment is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court; this discretion must be exercised in accordance with rules set forth in M.R.C.P. 55(c) and 60(b). Williams v. Kilgore, 618 So. 2d 51 (Miss. 1992).

Trial court did not err in declining to set aside default judgment against plaintiff who failed to appear for trial, where she showed throughout litigation that she had no intention of complying with court's directives; three day notice requirement was inapplicable where application for default judgment was not made until day after trial and judgment was not entered until four days afterward. Sartain v. White, 588 So. 2d 204 (Miss. 1991).

Absent a motion or independent action having been brought, circuit court was without authority to set aside forfeiture order entered by default, and court erred in vacating order on its own initiative. State ex rel. Mississippi Bureau of Narcotics v. One Chevrolet Nova Auto. & $9,800 Cash, 573 So. 2d 787 (Miss. 1990).

Refusal to set aside default judgment was within circuit court's authority and was not error; although defendant's answer was only four days overdue, he was experienced in lawsuits and had engaged in "stonewalling" when sued in the past, and moreover he had no colorable defense to merits of plaintiff's claim on an unpaid open account. Bailey v. Georgia Cotton Goods Co., 543 So. 2d 180 (Miss. 1989).

Circuit court did not exceed its authority in refusing to set aside default judgment; although defendant made a substantial showing of a colorable defense on merits, he had filed no answer and made no appearance at or before trial, despite being fully advised of his peril, and it would be inequitable to plaintiff to deny her judgment any future force or effect. Guaranty Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Pittman, 501 So. 2d 377 (Miss. 1987).

Illustrative cases.

Circuit court did not err in entering a default judgment against contractors and denying their motion to set aside the default judgment where they failed to present any evidence of good cause or excusable neglect for the failure to take action to protect their rights, and failed to present a colorable defense; the facts did not support the contractors' argument that they were unaware of homeowners' suit against them, where one of the contractors received and signed for the summonses. Woodkrest Custom Homes Inc. v. Cooper, 24 So. 3d 340 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Although the insurers' argument that the driver was not covered under the policy was a colorable defense, the trial court did not err in denying the motion under Miss. R. Civ. P. 55(c) where the insurers' inadvertent clerical error was inadequate to explain why they failed to answer the complaint, and the driver would have been prejudiced if the default judgment were set aside as he would be forced to continue his litigation in another court. Am. States Ins. Co. v. Rogillio, 10 So. 3d 463 (Miss. 2009).

Chancery court did not err in granting a divorce on the ground of desertion even though the proceedings were not heard in open court because the husband failed to answer the wife's complaint or enter an appearance. Luse v. Luse, 992 So. 2d 659 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Drilling company's motion seeking indemnity against insurance company was a motion for summary judgment even though the company did not attach affidavits or responses to discovery since the motion dealt with the merits of the insurance company's case and the insurance company could not rely merely upon its denials and allegations. Hartford Cas. Ins. Co. v. Halliburton Co., 826 So. 2d 1206 (Miss. 2001).

A default judgment was properly granted in an attorney disciplinary proceeding, notwithstanding that the attorney appeared at the hearing and filed an answer on the same day, where his answer was not served within 20 days of service of process and he failed to show good cause why the default should not have been entered against him. Alexander v. Mississippi Bar, 725 So. 2d 828 (Miss. 1998).

Respondent waived defenses of lack of personal jurisdiction or insufficiency of service of process where she failed to assert them by motion within prescribed 20 days, or in a responsive pleading or amendment thereof, and default judgment was properly entered where she failed to plead or otherwise defend a claim asserted against her. Terrell v. Mississippi Bar, 635 So. 2d 1377 (Miss. 1994).

Default was properly entered against defendants in replevin action, where they did nothing for over three months following service of process upon them, the court then ordered them to answer or otherwise plead within two weeks, and again they did nothing. Rush v. North Am. Van Lines, 608 So. 2d 1205 (Miss. 1992).

A divorce complainant must prove allegations of complaint, even when defendant has failed to answer, as a bill for divorce is never taken as confessed whether answered or not. Rawson v. Buta, 609 So. 2d 426 (Miss. 1992).

Rule 56. Summary judgment.

(a) For claimant. A party seeking to recover upon a claim, counter-claim, or cross-claim, or to obtain a declaratory judgment may, at any time after the expiration of thirty days from the commencement of the action or after service of a motion for summary judgment by the adverse party, move with or without supporting affidavits for a summary judgment in his favor upon all or any part thereof.

(b) For defending party. A party against whom a claim, counter-claim, or cross-claim is asserted or a declaratory judgment is sought may, at any time, move with or without supporting affidavits for a summary judgment in his favor as to all or any part thereof.

(c) Motion and proceedings thereon. The motion shall be served at least ten days before the time fixed for the hearing. The adverse party prior to the day of the hearing may serve opposing affidavits. The judgment sought shall be rendered forthwith if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law. A summary judgment, interlocutory in character, may be rendered on the issue of liability alone, although there is a genuine issue as to the amount of damages.

(d) Case not fully adjudicated on motion. If on motion under this rule judgment is not rendered on the whole case or for all the relief asked and a trial is necessary, the court at the hearing of the motion, by examining the pleadings and the evidence before it and by interrogating counsel, shall if practicable ascertain what material facts exist without substantial controversy and what material facts are actually and in good faith controverted. It shall thereupon make an order specifying the facts that appear without substantial controversy, including the extent to which the amount of damages or other relief is not in controversy, and directing such further proceedings in the action as are just. Upon the trial of the action the facts so specified shall be deemed established, and the trial shall be conducted accordingly.

(e) Form of affidavits; further testimony; defense required. Supporting and opposing affidavits shall be made on personal knowledge, shall set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence, and shall show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matter stated therein. Sworn or certified copies of all papers or parts thereof referred to in an affidavit shall be attached thereto or served therewith. The court may permit affidavits to be supplemented or opposed by depositions, answers to interrogatories, or further affidavits. When a motion for summary judgment is made and supported as provided in this rule, an adverse party may not rest upon the mere allegations or denials of his pleadings, but his response, by affidavits or as otherwise provided in this rule, must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. If he does not so respond, summary judgment, if appropriate, shall be entered against him.

(f) When affidavits are unavailable. Should it appear from the affidavits of a party opposing the motion that he cannot for reasons stated present by affidavit facts essential to justify his opposition, the court may refuse the application for judgment or may order a continuance to permit affidavits to be obtained or depositions to be taken or discovery to be had or may make such order as is just.

(g) Affidavits made in bad faith. Should it appear to the satisfaction of the court at any time that any of the affidavits presented pursuant to this rule are presented in bad faith or solely for the purpose of delay, the court shall forthwith order the party employing them to pay to the other party the amount of the reasonable expenses which the filing of the affidavits caused him to incur, including reasonable attorney's fees, and any offending party or attorney may be adjudged guilty of contempt.

(h) Costs to prevailing party when summary judgment denied. If summary judgment is denied the court shall award to the prevailing party the reasonable expenses incurred in attending the hearing of the motion and may, if it finds that the motion is without reasonable cause, award attorneys' fees.

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 56 is to expedite the determination of actions on their merits and eliminate unmeritorious claims or defenses without the necessity of a full trial.

Rule 56 permits any party to a civil action to move for a summary judgment on a claim, counter-claim, or cross-claim when he believes that there is no genuine issue of material fact and that he is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. The motion may be directed toward all or part of a claim or defense and it may be made on the basis of the pleadings or other portions of the record, or it may be supported by affidavits and other outside material. Thus, the motion for a summary judgment challenges the very existence or legal sufficiency of the claim or defense to which it is addressed; in effect, the moving party takes the position that he is entitled to prevail as a matter of law because his opponent has no valid claim for relief or defense to the action, as the case may be.

Rule 56 provides the means by which a party may pierce the allegations in the pleadings and obtain relief by introducing outside evidence showing that there are no fact issues that need to be tried. The rule should operate to prevent the system of extremely simple pleadings from shielding claimants without real claims or defendants without real defenses; in addition to providing an effective means of summary action in clear cases, it serves as an instrument of discovery in calling forth quickly the disclosure on the merits of either a claim or defense on pain of loss of the case for failure to do so. In this connection the rule may be utilized to separate formal from substantial issues, eliminate improper assertions, determine what, if any, issues of fact are present for the jury to determine, and make it possible for the court to render a judgment on the law when no disputed facts are found to exist.

A motion for summary judgment lies only when there is no genuine issue of material fact; summary judgment is not a substitute for the trial of disputed fact issues. Accordingly, the court cannot try issues of fact on a Rule 56 motion; it may only determine whether there are issues to be tried. Given this function, the court examines the affidavits or other evidence introduced on a Rule 56 motion simply to determine whether a triable issue exists, rather than for the purpose of resolving that issue. Similarly, although the summary judgment procedure is well adapted to expose sham claims and defenses, it cannot be used to deprive a litigant of a full trial of genuine fact issues.

Rule 56 is not a dilatory or technical procedure; it affects the substantive rights of litigants. A summary judgment motion goes to the merits of the case and, because it does not simply raise a matter in abatement, a granted motion operates to merge or bar the cause of action for purposes of res judicata. A litigant cannot amend as a matter of right under Rule 15(a) after a summary judgment has been rendered against him.

It is important to distinguish the motion for summary judgment under Rule 56 from the motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b), the motion for a judgment on the pleadings under Rule 12(c), or motion for a directed verdict permitted by Rule 50.

A motion under Rule 12(b) usually raises a matter of abatement and a dismissal for any of the reasons listed in that rule will not prevent the claim from being reasserted once the defect is remedied. Thus a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter or personal jurisdiction, improper venue, insufficiency of process or service of process, or failure to join a party under Rule 19, only contemplates dismissal of that proceeding and is not a judgment on the merits for either party. Similarly, although a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is addressed to the claim itself, the movant merely is asserting that the pleading to which the motion is directed does not sufficiently state a claim for relief; unless the motion is converted into one for summary judgment as permitted by the last sentence of Rule 12(b), it does not challenge the actual existence of a meritorious claim.

A motion for judgment on the pleadings, Rule 12(c), is an assertion that the moving party is entitled to a judgment on the face of all the pleadings; consideration of the motion only entails an examination of the sufficiency of the pleadings.

In contrast, a summary judgment motion is based on the pleadings and any affidavits, depositions, and other forms of evidence relative to the merits of the challenged claim or defense that are available at the time the motion is made. The movant under Rule 56 is asserting that on the basis of the record as it then exists, there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that he is entitled to a judgment on the merits as a matter of law. The directed verdict motion, which rests on the same theory as a Rule 56 motion, is made either after plaintiff has presented his evidence at trial or after both parties have completed their evidence; it claims that there is no question of fact worthy of being sent to the jury and that the moving party is entitled, as a matter of law, to have a judgment on the merits entered in his favor.

A Rule 12(c) motion can be made only after the pleadings are closed, whereas a Rule 56 motion always may be made by defendant before answering and under certain circumstances may be made by plaintiff before the responsive pleading is interposed. Second, a motion for judgment on the pleadings is restricted to the content of the pleading, so that simply by denying one or more of the factual allegations in the complaint or interposing an affirmative defense, defendant may prevent a judgment from being entered under Rule 12(c), since a genuine issue will appear to exist and the case cannot be resolved as a matter of law on the pleadings.

Subsections (b) and (h) are intended to deter abuses of the summary judgment practice. Thus, the trial court may impose sanctions for improper use of summary judgment and shall, in all cases, award expenses to the party who successfully defends against a motion for summary judgment.

For detailed discussions of Federal Rule 56, after which MRCP 56 is patterned, See 10 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 2711-2742 (1973); 6 Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 56.01-.26 (1970); C. Wright, Federal Courts § 99 (3d ed. 1976); See also Comment, Procedural Reform in Mississippi: A Current Analysis, 47 Miss.L.J. 33, 63 (1976).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Construction.
Applicability.
Affidavits.
Amendment of pleadings.
Burden of proof.
Conversion to summary judgment.
Costs.

Discovery.
Evidence.
Failure to respond.
Fraud.
Jury trial.
Limitations.
Materiality.
Multiple claims or multiple parties.
Notice.
Partial summary judgment.
Procedure.
Review.
Illustrative cases.

In general.

Appellate court found no error with a defendant's filing of a second motion for summary judgment where the defendant's first motion to dismiss only addressed summary judgment in the alternative in the last sentence; Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(a) did not limit the number of summary judgment motions. Riley v. F.A. Richard & Assocs., 16 So. 3d 708 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Court of appeals erred in reversing the trial court's grant of summary judgment for the bank in the mortgagor's action for wrongful foreclosure, based on the court of appeals finding that genuine issues of material fact existed as to whether mortgage had been paid in full and if the mortgagor was in default when the bank initiated foreclosure, because the property seller's assignment of the mortgage to the bank was absolute; therefore, the seller had no further interest in the mortgage and his cancellation of mortgage was invalid. Also, the record showed that there was no wrongful foreclosure because the foreclosure proceedings were terminated when the mortgagor filed bankruptcy and the mortgagor admitted he had missed payments. McKinley v. Lamar Bank, — So. 2d —, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 611 (Miss. Sept. 22, 2005), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 919 So. 2d 918, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 811 (Miss. 2005).

Summary judgment was properly granted to the bank in a foreclosure proceeding pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(c) because the mortgagor did not deny that he had executed the note and the deed of trust or that he had defaulted, the mortgagor's claims of error were nonsensical and irrelevant, and the mortgagor failed to provide a full and adequate record to support his claims. Weatherly v. Union Planters Bank, N.A., 914 So. 2d 1222 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Under Miss. R. Evid. 901 and Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(c), the unauthenticated documents provided by the workers should not have been considered because, in his deposition, one worker stated that there were two pumps made by the company in the plant, but he did not state that asbestos was present; the unauthenticated letter only established that a company pump was sold to the plant at some point, not that it contained asbestos components, and did not place asbestos-containing products attributable to the company in the plant. Gorman-Rupp Co. v. Hall, 908 So. 2d 749 (Miss. 2005).

Bridge contractor was hired by Mississippi Department of Transportation as an independent contractor, and under the language of the contract, said contractor bore responsibility for the signage at the construction site; however, under the Mississippi Torts Claim Act, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-1 etseq., MDOT could have still been liable under the narrow exceptions of Miss.Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(p) and (v), if MDOT had notice of the dangerous condition, and MDOT had adequate opportunity to protect or warn against the dangerous condition; in the latter respect, in the case at bar, MDOT's liability for the lack of warning signs and other measures at the bridge construction site was a question of fact, where it was clear that an MDOT representative made frequent visits to the construction site, and it was clear that at least on one occasion, MDOT requested that the contractor install additional warning devices. Chisolm v. Miss. DOT, 942 So. 2d 165 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), reversed by 942 So. 2d 136, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 638 (Miss. 2006).

Under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(v), the Mississippi Department of Transportation (MDOT) and its employees could not be liable for any claim resulting from a dangerous condition on the State's property if: (1) that condition was not caused by the negligence or wrongful conduct of the employee,or (2) MDOT lacked notice and an adequate opportunity to warn of the dangerous condition. However, in the case at bar, based on testimony of MDOT employees,the appellate court found that there were clearly issues of fact for the jury as far as MDOTs notice of a dangerous condition at the bridge construction site, and MDOTs opportunity to have warned or protected against the condition; thus, in the suit by the heirs of the decedent who was killed at said construction site, summary judgment for the MDOT was improper. Chisolm v. Miss. DOT, 942 So. 2d 165 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), reversed by 942 So. 2d 136, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 638 (Miss. 2006).

Summary judgment was properly granted for a doctor on a patient's informed consent and malpractice claims because the patient failed to present expert medical testimony which was required to establish what type of warning the doctor should have given her about the risks of facial laser resurfacing and the treatment proximally causing her injury. McMichael v. Howell, 919 So. 2d 18 (Miss. 2005).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the doctors on the patient's medical negligence, breach of contract, fraudulent concealment, and failure to secure informed consent claims where because the patient failed to provide any authority to support her claims, her issue on appeal was procedurally barred. Hodges v. Lucas, 904 So. 2d 1098 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the buyers on the homeowner's complaint to cancel deed, remove cloud, and confirm title to certain property; the issue of violations of restrictive covenants and zoning regulations had been litigated to conclusion in the federal court system and was res judicata, the buyers were found to be bona fide purchasers and the homeowner failed to identify any perfected claims, which should have encumbered their title to the property. Deramus v. Pierce, 904 So. 2d 1104 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the corporations on the doctor's allegations that the corporations prepared and published reports that contained false, defamatory, and libelous statements concerning him; a qualified privilege existed as to the corporations because the statements in the review were made to those with a direct interest in the subject matter, there was not excessive publication because the corporations confined the remarks about the doctor to those interested in the review process, and the doctor failed to meet his burden of production and persuasion on the issue of actual malice. Eckman v. Cooper Tire & Rubber Co., — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1161 (Miss. Sept. 9, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 893 So. 2d 1049, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 113 (Miss. 2005).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the doctor on the daughter's medical malpractice action where Miss. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4) mandated certain disclosures concerning expert witnesses, and the necessity for litigants to understand that there was an obligation to timely comply with the orders of trial courts; the daughter wholly failed in her duty to designate a medical expert, a crucial component of her cause of action. Brooks v. Roberts, 882 So. 2d 229 (Miss. 2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the lawyers on the client's legal malpractice action where the first lawyer, he could not be held liable because he had neither personally participated in a negligent act nor directly supervised anyone who had committed wrongful conduct; the client failed to show how the second lawyer was actively involved in his representation or that she acted negligently, and with regard to the remaining lawyers, the client made a conclusory statement that a fiduciary duty was violated, which was insufficient to avoid summary judgment. Keszenheimer v. Boyd, 897 So. 2d 190 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 896 So. 2d 373 (Miss. 2005).

Teacher alleged that the school board waited almost a year after the judgment before filing a notice of appeal. The difficulty with that argument was that the summary judgment finding a breach of the board's statutory obligations only resolved liability and left open the issue of damages; thus, for appeal purposes, the summary judgment was not final. Bd. of Educ. v. Fisher, 874 So. 2d 1019 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the clients in their action against the legal services where the pre-paid legal expense agreemen did not contain a valid, binding arbitration agreement. Pre-Paid Legal Servs. v. Mealey, 875 So. 2d 1075 (Miss. 2004), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 125 S. Ct. 625, 160 L. Ed. 2d 459 (2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted to defendants where plaintiff (witness to the accident) was not a foreseeable plaintiff to whom defendants owed a duty of care. Satchfield v. R. R. Morrison & Son, Inc., 872 So. 2d 661 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court erred in granting daughter's summary judgment motion as questions of fact were raised as to whether a prior order of dismissal by the court resolved all of the landowner's claims against the daughter and whether the landowner was competent to voluntarily dismiss his claims. Humphrey v. Smith, 868 So. 2d 371 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the doctor's estate in a patient's medical malpractice action where the patient's allegation of lack of informed consent was insufficient rebuttal in light of the doctor's estate's introduction of the form indicating that the patient's informed consent was obtained; the patient failed to show that a reasonable patient, once informed of the risks, would have withheld consent, and that, if left untreated, the patient's spinal stenosis would have progressed to the point that he would probably have had the same condition if he had not undergone the surgery. Barton v. Estate of Buckley, 867 So. 2d 271 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment for defendants in a medical malpractice case where, since the hospital was protected by the Mississippi Tort Claims Act (MTCA), the husband had to meet the requirements of Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-11; he did not substantially comply with the MTCA requirements; plaintiff filed his complaint after the one-year statute of limitations had expired. Davis v. Hoss, 869 So. 2d 397 (Miss. 2004).

As employee would have had to have been working on a vessel of navigation when injured in order to meet the requirements of the Jones Act, but was in fact doing repair work from a diver's platform, the trial court properly granted the employer's summary judgment motion against the employee. McArthur v. Ingalls Shipbuilding, Inc., 879 So. 2d 500 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 882 So. 2d 234 (Miss. 2004).

Summary judgment was improperly granted based on accord and satisfaction in favor of defendants in the patient's medical malpractice action where none of the parties referenced an agreement between the patient and any of the defendants; there was no accord and satisfaction, and neither the trial court nor defendants offered any analysis of the four requirements of an accord and satisfaction. Medlin v. Hazlehurst Emergency Physicians, — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 10 (Miss. Jan. 15, 2004), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1297 (Miss. Sept. 23, 2004), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1298 (Miss. Sept. 23, 2004), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1299 (Miss. Sept. 23, 2004), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1301 (Miss. Sept. 23, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 889 So. 2d 496, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1196 (Miss. 2004).

Summary judgment was properly denied as to defendants in the patient's medical malpractice action where genuine issues of material fact existed as to whether the remedies sought by the patient were inconsistent; the patient provided expert witness evidence in support of her medical negligence allegations, and the trial court's findings of good cause in denying the physicians' summary judgment motion based on the statute of limitations was proper. Medlin v. Hazlehurst Emergency Physicians, — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 10 (Miss. Jan. 15, 2004), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1297 (Miss. Sept. 23, 2004), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1298 (Miss. Sept. 23, 2004), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1299 (Miss. Sept. 23, 2004), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1301 (Miss. Sept. 23, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at

889 So. 2d 496, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1196 (Miss. 2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the insurer where, since the insured could not bring a legal action against the co-employee at the time of the accident, he was not entitled to recover uninsured motorist benefits from his insurer. Steen v. Metro. Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co., 858 So. 2d 186 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial court properly dismissed claims against a contractor on summary judgment, but improperly labeled its decision as a dismissal for failure to state a claim under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6); as the court made its decision after reviewing the complaint, the answer, the motion to dismiss, the response to it, and the accompanying exhibits, its decision was properly labeled a summary judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 56. Rein v. Benchmark Constr. Co., — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 282 (Miss. June 12, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at, remanded in part by 865 So. 2d 1134, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 180 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court properly granted city summary judgment where the owners could not bring a writ of mandamus against the city for a bridge closing where that decision was made as part of the city's discretionary authority as a public entity; the closing of the bridge also marked the end of the city's previously-existing duty to maintain and repair the bridge. Hobson v. City of Vicksburg, 848 So. 2d 199 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Summary judgment in favor of the employer was improperly denied where it was determined that the employee was acting in the course and scope of his employment when he was injured, that his injuries were not the result of an intentional tort, and that his injuries were compensable under the Mississippi Workers' Compensation Act, and, as such, that the exclusivity provision of the act barred his tort claims against the employer. Hurdle v. Holloway, 848 So. 2d 183 (Miss. 2003).

The standards employed for a summary judgment and directed verdict are the same, just employed at different times during a proceeding. Breland v. Gulfside Casino Partnership, 736 So. 2d 446 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

A trial judge is not required to grant a summary judgment based solely on the fact that the opposing party did not respond; the determining factor involved in granting a summary judgment is whether or not there is a "genuine issue as to any material fact." George County ex rel. Board of Supvrs. v. Davis, 721 So. 2d 1101 (Miss. 1999).

Subsection (e) does not entitle a party to summary judgment by default where the nonmoving party files no response, for even in the absence of a response the court may enter judgment only "if appropriate," i.e., if no genuine issue of material fact exists. Foster v. Noel, 715 So. 2d 174 (Miss. 1998).

Where one party swears to one version of the matter in issue and the other party says the opposite, an issue of fact sufficient to require denial of a motion for summary judgment is present. Daniels v. GNB, Inc., 629 So. 2d 595 (Miss. 1993).

Where a contract or deed is ambiguous within its "four corners," ultimate disposition of case— i.e., construction of contractual provisions— generally involves triable issues of fact and, thus, disposition is inappropriate at summary judgment stage. Pursue Energy Corp. v. Perkins, 558 So. 2d 349 (Miss. 1990).

Evidence must be viewed in light most favorable to party against whom motion has been made; if in this view moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law, summary judgment should forthwith be entered in his favor, otherwise motion should be denied. Brown v. Credit Ctr., Inc., 444 So. 2d 358 (Miss. 1983).

Construction.

Circuit court did not err in considering a purchaser's motion for summary judgment after a chancery court had denied the purchaser summary judgment based upon the same amended complaint because the circuit court was not bound by the doctrine of res judicata to deny the motion; a denial of a motion for summary judgment is not a final judgment, and Miss. R. Civ. P. 56 does not limit the number of motions for summary judgment that a party may file. Smith v. Campus

Edge of Hattiesburg, LLC, 30 So. 3d 1284 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Miss. R. Civ. P. 56 summary judgment hearing is not an action "tried up on the facts without a jury" so as to trigger Miss. R. Civ. P. 52 applicability; therefore, in a claim brought under the Fair Credit Reporting Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq., a trial court did not err by failing to make findings of fact, and at any rate the issues in the case were addressed by the trial court. Harmon v. Regions Bank, 961 So. 2d 693 (Miss. 2007).

In construing this rule, it was appropriate for Mississippi Supreme Court to rely on federal law. Murphree v. Federal Ins. Co., 707 So. 2d 523 (Miss. 1997).

M.R.C.P. 6(b) is a general rule and is therefore subject to specific provisions of M.R.C.P. 56(b), and therefore trial judge correctly granted defendant leave to file dispositive motion because, under M.R.C.P. 56(b), a motion for summary judgment is proper at any time. Diogenes Editions, Inc. v. State ex rel. Board of Trustees of Insts. of Higher Learning, 700 So. 2d 316 (Miss. 1997).

This rule means the same and should be construed the same whether motion for summary judgment is filed in circuit court or chancery court, and whether case is to be heard by a jury or is to be tried before the court without a jury. Dennis v. Searle, 457 So. 2d 941 (Miss. 1984).

Applicability.

When a victim was raped by a parolee accepted from another state for supervision, summary judgment was correctly granted to the State in the victim's action against it for negligently accepting supervision of the parolee and negligently supervising him because acceptance of the parolee's supervision was mandatory under the Uniform Act for Out-of-State Parolee Supervision, Miss. Code Ann. § 47-7-71, as he had family and a job in Mississippi, and decisions made by the parolee's supervising parole officer in the course of the parolee's supervision were discretionary, so the State could not be held liable under the Mississippi Tort Claims Act, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-1 et seq. Doe v. State ex rel. Miss. Dep't of Corr., 859 So. 2d 350 (Miss. 2003).

Where precautions were taken to warn motorists of a dangerous road condition, the city was not required to actively patrol areas containing warning signs to see if a third party had removed the signs, and no evidence was presented to indicate that the city knew or should have known that the sign was blown or tipped over; therefore, the city was entitled to immunity from suit and entitled to summary judgment. Mitchell v. City of Greenville, 846 So. 2d 1028 (Miss. 2003).

Where a Mississippi attorney challenged a Pennsylvania court's jurisdiction over him in a fee dispute with a Pennsylvania corporation and failed to appeal the Pennsylvania court's determination that it had such jurisdiction, the doctrine of res judicata barred the attorney from challenging the issue of jurisdiction in the corporation's proceedings to register in Mississippi the ultimate Pennsylvania judgment against the attorney; hence, the trial court improperly granted summary judgment to the attorney and improperly struck the foreign judgment from its judgment rolls. Global Oceanic Enters. v. Hynum, 857 So. 2d 659 (Miss. 2003).

Since circuit court acted entirely within the pleadings and struck all affidavits before ruling, supreme court treated judgment below as though court had dismissed complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted, as opposed to one disposed of on summary judgment. State ex rel. Moore v. Molpus, 578 So. 2d 624 (Miss. 1991).

Summary judgment practice under M.R.C.P. Rule 56 is inapplicable in contests of probated claims, because it is inconsistent with statutory procedure requiring claimant to enter court to introduce evidence in support of claim and permitting personal representative to rebut claim. Biloxi Regional Medical Ctr., Inc. v. Estate of Ross, 546 So. 2d 667 (Miss. 1989).

Course of proceedings and final judgment entered in plaintiff's previous lawsuit were matters extraneous to pleadings in plaintiff's later action, and circuit court correctly exercised authority granted it under M.R.C.P. Rule 12(b) and considered defendants' motion to dismiss as one for summary judgment. Walton v. Bourgeois, 512 So. 2d 698 (Miss. 1987).

Affidavits.

Plaintiff corporation failed to satisfy the requirements for the grant of summary judgment, as it provided only a conclusory, self-serving affidavit in support thereof. Likewise, defendant's agent's motion for partial summary judgment failed to show the lack of a genuine issue of material fact and therefore he was not entitled to summary judgment. Dalton v. Cellular South, Inc., 20 So. 3d 1227 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court's denial of a wife's motion under Miss. R. Civ. P. 59 to set aside an order granting summary judgment in favor of a logging company did not result in manifest injustice because the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the wife's request for an order of continuance pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(f) on the ground that her request was untimely under Rule 3(b) of the Local Rules for the Fifth Circuit Court District; almost two years passed between the filing of the wife's complaint and the filing of the company's motion for summary judgment, affording both parties ample time in which to conduct discovery in the case, and any information that the wife sought to "discover" was largely available to her immediately after the injury occurred. Moore v. M & M Logging, Inc., 51 So. 3d 216 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 50 So. 3d 1003, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 22 (Miss. 2011).

Summary judgment was improperly granted in a medical negligence case because, although affidavits submitted by two wrongful death beneficiaries were not as complete as they could have been, the pleadings, the answers to interrogatories, and the lack of a medical affidavit to contradict the allegations of negligence were sufficient to prevent summary judgment; therefore, the trial court should have allowed for supplementation of the affidavits offered by the beneficiaries and a continuance under Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(e), (f). Maxwell v. Baptist Mem. Hospital-Desoto, Inc., — So. 2d —, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 226 (Miss. Ct. App. Apr. 10, 2007), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 15 So. 3d 427, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 331 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In neglecting to provide the affidavit of a medical expert to support her medical malpractice claim, plaintiff failed to comply with Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(e); the anticipated expert opinion set forth by plaintiff could not have been based on her personal knowledge. Griffin v. Pinson, 952 So. 2d 963 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 951 So. 2d 563, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 523 (Miss. 2007).

Where employees of a subcontractor were injured while working on an electrical device on the premises of a casino, in pertinent part, their expert's affidavit simply stated that he had reviewed the materials in regard to the fire, and that it was "his professional opinion that fault lied in allowing installation of equipment under live ("hot") electrical conditions." The trial court properly concluded that said affidavit was conclusory in nature and failed to meet the requirements of Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(e); further, while the casino's liaison coordinated matters with the general contractor (who was immune under the workers' compensation statute), the record was clear that the general contractor assumed full responsibility for the work, and consequently, summary judgment for the casino on the issue of liability was proper. Matthews v. Horseshoe Casino, 919 So. 2d 278 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to an heir and in refusing to consider certain affidavits filed by beneficiaries where one affidavit was filed on the day of the hearing and not at least one day prior to the hearing as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(c) and the court found that the affidavit could have been filed months prior to hearing on the motion. Smith v. Smith (In re Will of Smith), 910 So. 2d 562 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to an heir and in refusing to consider an affidavit filed by a beneficiary on the day of the hearing on the heir's motion for summary judgment claiming that the executor had told him that a handwritting expert had been retained by the estate because the expert had not rendered a final report, and no affidavit had been obtained nor was the beneficiary's affidavit based on personal knowledge. The affidavit was basically hearsay and should have been executed by the executor, as to what the executor had done. Smith v. Smith (In re Will of Smith), 910 So. 2d 562 (Miss. 2005).

Court erred in granting one attorney's motion for summary judgment, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(c), in a client's legal malpractice action against two attorneys because the client's expert affidavit was timely filed; the affidavit raised a question of fact to be determined by a trier of fact. Luvene v. Waldrup, 905 So. 2d 697 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Evidence submitted by the landowners would not support a finding that the State actually conveyed the tracts during the pre-1890 window of opportunity; the skeletonized abstracts and other evidence did not support the landowners' adverse possession claim. Bd. of Educ. v. Warner, 853 So. 2d 1159 (Miss. 2003).

The need for additional time as allowed under subsection (f) is not proven merely through allegation; thus, where the party opposing summary judgment has not attempted discovery and presents only speculation of what might be uncovered, additional time will not be granted. Hobgood v. Koch Pipeline Southeast, Inc., 769 So. 2d 838 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1073, 121 S. Ct. 766, 148 L. Ed. 2d 666 (2001).

The court properly considered affidavits submitted by the movants on the day of the hearing since the affidavits only affirmed the contents of the complaint and since the judge granted an enlargement of time in which the plaintiffs could file affidavits. Quinn v. Mississippi State Univ., 720 So. 2d 843 (Miss. 1998).

Most, if not all, affidavits are hearsay, but they are nevertheless properly considered on summary judgment as long as they are based on personal knowledge and set forth facts such as would be admissible in evidence. Stewart v. Southeast Foods, Inc., 688 So. 2d 733 (Miss. 1996).

A party must move to strike an affidavit that violates this rule, and if he fails to do so he will waive his objection; in absence of a gross miscarriage of justice, court may consider the defective affidavit. Haygood v. First Nat'l Bank, 517 So. 2d 553 (Miss. 1987).

Trial court abused its discretion in declining to grant plaintiff's motion for continuance, due to her inability to file affidavit of her expert in opposition to defendant's motion for summary judgment. Terrell v. Rankin, 511 So. 2d 126 (Miss. 1987).

Although answer and amended answer alleged a defense, these pleadings were merely signed by counsel for defendant without verification or indication of personal knowledge, and they were insufficient to withstand summary judgment. Hill v. Consumer Nat'l Bank, 482 So. 2d 1124 (Miss. 1986).

Where party against whom a motion for summary judgment is made wishes to attack one or more affidavits upon which motion is based, he must file in trial court a motion to strike the affidavit. Brown v. Credit Ctr., Inc., 444 So. 2d 358 (Miss. 1983).

Amendment of pleadings.

Where leave to amend a complaint was sought at a hearing for summary judgment, but a motion for such was not filed until after summary judgment was granted, the motion was properly denied as untimely. Harmon v. Regions Bank, 961 So. 2d 693 (Miss. 2007).

Summary judgment was improperly entered against plaintiffs, where they should have been allowed leave to amend their complaint and should have been allowed a more complete exploration of the facts put in issue by their amended complaint. McDonald v. Holmes, 595 So. 2d 434 (Miss. 1992).

Burden of proof.

Mississippi courts are unified in their interpretation of the legislative mandate set forth in Miss. Code Ann. § 11-1-63, the Mississippi products liability statute. Moreover, in explicit terms, the statute requires that when a claimant asserts a design defect theory of liability, the claimant not only must provide proof that the seller knew, or in light of reasonably available knowledge or in the exercise of reasonable care should have known, about the danger causing injury, but also, the claimant must provide evidence that the product failed to function as expected by way of producing evidence of a feasible design alternative that could have reasonably prevented the claimant's injury. In the case at bar, where a handgun fell from plaintiff's car door and discharged (in part, it was undisputed that the safety was off), he failed to prove the aforementioned elements and summary judgment for defendant was proper. Williams v. Bennett, 921 So. 2d 1269 (Miss. 2006).

Summary judgment was properly awarded to a county under Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(c) in a wrongful death action filed by a driver's beneficiaries because the beneficiaries failed to present any evidence that the accumulation of excess gravel on roads constituted a dangerous condition. Lowery v. Harrison County Bd. of Supervisors, 891 So. 2d 264 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of medical defendants in the heirs' medical malpractice suit where the heirs' expert's affidavit was untimely filed and the heirs failed to show excusable neglect for their untimely filing. Bowie v. Montfort Jones Mem'l Hosp., 861 So. 2d 1037 (Miss. 2003).

In a wrongful death case, a court properly granted partial summary judgment to plaintiff on the issue of apportionment where the doctor's rebuttal evidence did not indicate any fault attributable to a third party. Eckman v. Moore, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 552 (Miss. Oct. 23, 2003), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. LEXIS 310 (Miss. Mar. 25, 2004), substituted opinion at 876 So. 2d 975, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 287 (Miss. 2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of a construction company where a passenger admitted that barriers and signs had been in place and that all who approached had notice of the road's status as closed for construction; this admission meant that the passenger could not prove an essential element of a negligence claim and one for which she would bear the burden to prove at trial that the company had breached its duty of care, but the passenger could not show that the driver had driven with the degree of care demanded by the circumstances. Spoo v. T. L. Wallace Constr. Co., 858 So. 2d 199 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Hearing on summary judgment was the flashpoint when a plaintiff's proof was evaluated, and summary judgment was entered against plaintiff motorist in a negligence action, as the motorist failed to bring forward any significant probative evidence demonstrating the existence of a triable issue of fact as to the motorist's claims of damages or injuries; motorist's unsubstantiated assertions were not enough to prevent summary judgment. Watson v. Johnson, 848 So. 2d 873 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment to widow of deceased patient in suit against doctor, nurses, and hospital since the widow showed through affidavits, depositions, and answers to interrogatories and the common knowledge of lay people that a material issue of fact existed as to the doctor's, nurses', and hospital's negligence in medical malpractice suit, and the doctor, nurses, and hospital failed to provide evidence to prove the non-existence of a genuine issue of fact. Dailey v. Methodist Med. Ctr., 790 So. 2d 903 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Once absence of genuine material issues has been shown, burden of rebuttal falls upon non-moving party to produce specific facts showing that there is a genuine material issue for trial, and non-moving party's claim must be supported by more than a mere scintilla of colorable evidence; it must be evidence upon which a fair-minded jury could return a favorable verdict. Wilbourn v. Stennett, Wilkinson & Ward, 687 So. 2d 1205 (Miss. 1996).

Summary judgment movant has a burden of persuasion, a burden to establish that there is no genuine issue of material fact to be tried; party opposing motion must rebut, if he is to avoid entry of an adverse judgment, by bringing forth probative evidence legally sufficient to make apparent the existence of triable fact issues. Erby v. North Miss. Medical Ctr., 654 So. 2d 495 (Miss. 1995).

Summary judgment movant has a burden of persuasion— a burden to establish that there is no genuine issue of material fact to be tried; party opposing motion must rebut, if he is to avoid entry of an adverse judgment, by bringing forth probative evidence legally sufficient to make apparent the existence of triable fact issues. Simmons v. Thompson Mach., 631 So. 2d 798 (Miss. 1994).

Party opposing summary judgment may not create an issue of fact by arguments and assertions in briefs or legal memoranda. Magee v. Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp., 551 So. 2d 182 (Miss. 1989).

Party opposing summary judgment must support his claims by facts sworn to on personal knowledge in depositions, answers to interrogatories or affidavits, or through such other appropriate forms as stipulations of fact or admissions procured under M.R.C.P. Rule 36. Walker v. Skiwski, 529 So. 2d 184 (Miss. 1988).

Burden of producing evidence in support of, or in opposition to, a motion for summary judgment is a function of rules regarding burden of proof at trial on issue in question; movant's burden is one of production and persuasion, not of proof, and movant has burden of production only where at trial the movant would have the burden of proof. Fruchter v. Lynch Oil Co., 522 So. 2d 195 (Miss. 1988).

Where a party opposes summary judgment on a claim or defense as to which that party will bear burden of proof at trial, and when moving party can show a complete failure of proof on an essential element of that claim or defense, then all other issues become immaterial, and moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Grisham v. John Q. Long VFW Post, No. 4057, Inc., 519 So. 2d 413 (Miss. 1988).

Where plaintiff failed to make an adequate showing on an essential element on which he would bear burden of proof at trial, summary judgment in favor of defendant on that claim was appropriate. Galloway v. Travelers Ins. Co., 515 So. 2d 678 (Miss. 1987).

Conversion to summary judgment.

When a party introduces evidence outside of the pleadings in defense or support of a Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) motion, the motion is converted into one for summary judgment. Sullivan v. Tullos, 20 So. 3d 1 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), reversed by, remanded by 19 So. 3d 1271, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 501 (Miss. 2009).

Even though a motion to dismiss should have been treated as a motion for summary judgment because facts outside of the pleadings were considered, the error was harmless because, even though an employment contract attached to the motion was considered, another almost identical contract was referenced in the pleadings. Therefore, a chancellor did not become privy to any knowledge by virtue of one contract that he did not already have from the other contract. Winters v. Calhoun County Sch. Dist., 990 So. 2d 238 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Costs.

Language in subdivision (h) of this rule is explicit regarding recovery of expenses for prevailing party, but rule is discretionary as to award of reasonable attorney's fees. Southwest Miss. Regional Medical Ctr. v. Lawrence, 684 So. 2d 1257 (Miss. 1996).

Cross-appeal for recovery of expenses by party who successfully defended against summary judgment motion was without merit, where there was no evidence in record as to the party's costs or attorneys' fees. Lamb Constr. Co. v. Town of Renova, 573 So. 2d 1378 (Miss. 1990).

Although insurer successfully defended against insureds' motion for summary judgment on issue of liability, insurer's cross-appeal for expenses and attorneys' fees was without merit, where record did not contain transcript of hearing on motion, and therefore court on appeal did not know whether insurer offered proof of reasonable expenses and attorneys' fees in connection with defending the motion. Cooper v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co., 568 So. 2d 687 (Miss. 1990).

Trial court did not err in failing to award plaintiff her expenses, costs and attorney's fees when defendants' M.R.C.P. Rule 12 motions to dismiss were denied; provision in Rule 56 (h) of award of costs to prevailing party was not applicable to motions under Rule 12. Joseph v. Tennessee Partners, Inc., 501 So. 2d 371 (Miss. 1987).

Discovery.

In a case alleging exposure to toxic mold and other substances, the action was properly dismissed by summary judgment where several injured parties did not show a need for additional time for discovery under Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(f); they had failed to designate an expert showing causation for over three years. Hosey v. Mediamolle, 963 So. 2d 1267 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

As an employee had not requested more time to conduct discovery, and no amount of additional discovery would pierce the employer and general contractor's workers' compensation immunity, the trial court did not act prematurely in granting summary judgment to those defendants. Powe v. Roy Anderson Constr. Co., 910 So. 2d 1197 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 942 So. 2d 164, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 640 (Miss. 2006).

When the patient discovered that the patient's child had died in the womb, the patient should have known that there was some causal connection between the death and the doctor's treatment. Moreover, even if the patient did not recognize the causal connection at the time of death, there was absolutely no indication that the patient made any attempts to determine the cause of the patient's child's death until after one year had elapsed; thus, there was no issue of fact with respect to whether the discovery rule tolled the statute of limitations, and accordingly, the state hospital and its doctor were entitled to summary judgment. Wright v. Quesnel, 876 So. 2d 362 (Miss. 2004).

Where two chemical companies failed to follow the procedure set forth in Miss. R. Civ. P. 56 and instead just filed an opposition to a motion for summary judgment filed by a toilet company in a contamination case, an appellate court rejected the chemical companies' later claim that summary judgment was prematurely granted; the chemical companies could have sought a continuance to allow additional time for discovery. Kerr-McGee Corp. v. Maranatha Faith Ctr., Inc., 873 So. 2d 103 (Miss. 2004).

Where the insured employer named in the policy put in writing the limits on uninsured motorist coverage that it wanted, that satisfied Miss. Code Ann. § 83-11-101(2), thus, the limits on uninsured motorist coverage solely to vehicles that the employer owned was effective; since the contract was unambiguous, there was no factual issue, and therefore, no need to conduct additional discovery. Trotter v. Fed. Ins. Co., 865 So. 2d 411 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where plaintiffs in a negligence action against defendants, a hospital and physicians, submitted their designated expert's affidavit over two months after the discovery deadline and a few days after the discovery deadline for defendants to submit their expert witnesses, the facts did not justify the ultimate penalty of summary judgment, where plaintiffs' expert's affidavit showed the elements of duty and causation, and there was a genuine issue of fact regarding negligence. Bowie v. Montfort Jones Mem'l Hosp., 850 So. 2d 1210 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Trial court did not err in denying request of wife of injured patient for additional time to conduct further discovery or in ruling for the doctor on his summary judgment motion as to the wife's medical malpractice claims since the wife failed to identify an expert witness in response to the doctor's discovery requests, but merely stated in reply that an expert's identity would be provided once retained. Hill v. Warden, 796 So. 2d 276 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion by denying the plaintiffs' motion to postpone adjudication of the defendants' motion for summary judgment, notwithstanding their contention that discovery was in the "embryonic stages," that the time in which the defendants were to designate their expert had not arrived under the parties' scheduling order, and that they would not be able to depose a defense expert as to the assertions made in his affidavit prior to the date of the hearing on the motion for summary judgment, since the plaintiffs had ample opportunity to obtain expert affidavits of their own regarding their claims, the earliest of the plaintiffs' actions was filed six years before the defendants filed their motion for summary judgment, and there was no indication in the record that during that six years the plaintiffs propounded any interrogatories, requests for production, or requests for admission. Prescott v. Leaf River Forest Prods., 1999 Miss. LEXIS 90 (Miss. Mar. 4, 1999), subst. op., 740 So. 2d 301 (Miss. 1999).

Plaintiff had ample time and opportunity to file discovery requests and to depose his own experts; thus, trial court did not err in refusing to grant a continuance to allow him to conduct further discovery prior to ruling on defendant's summary judgment motion. Holifield v. Pitts Swabbing Co., 533 So. 2d 1112 (Miss. 1988).

Party opposing summary judgment may not rely on vague assertions that discovery will produce needed, but unspecified, facts, particularly where there was ample time and opportunity for discovery; subdivision (f) of this rule is not designed to protect litigants who are lazy or dilatory, and normally party invoking this provision must show what steps have been taken to obtain access to information allegedly within exclusive possession of other party. Marx v. Truck Renting & Leasing Ass'n, Inc., 520 So. 2d 1333 (Miss. 1987).

Evidence.

Trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to a pharmacy that had allegedly caused a person's wrongful death by failing to fill a prescription because neither of two affidavits presented to show the pharmacy's legal duty set out the applicable standard of care. Sellars v. Walgreen Co., 971 So. 2d 1278 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Summary judgment was properly granted to an ambulance service on a passenger's negligence claim arising out of the service's transport of the passenger for treatment of a heart attack, because even though the ambulance broke down en route to a hospital: (1) records showed that the service routinely maintained the ambulance; (2) no evidence was offered as to how an inoperative air conditioner might have caused the ambulance to break down; (3) there was no evidence that the passenger's health condition suffered in any way from the service's alleged failure to use a heart monitor; (4) evidence showed that damage to the passenger's heart was not caused by the delay in transport but had occurred during the onset of his heart attack the night before the transport; and (5) regardless of whether a contract of carriage existed between the parties, no genuine issue of material fact existed as to damages. Stricklin v. Medexpress of Miss., LLC, 963 So. 2d 568 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Summary judgment was properly awarded to an attorney, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(c), in a client's legal malpractice/negligence action because the client failed to designate, offer, or list any expert on her list of witnesses who could support her allegations of legal malpractice. Montgomery v. Woolbright, 904 So. 2d 1027 (Miss. — 2004).

Summary judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(c) was not proper in a wrongful death action against a company where there were questions as to whether a driver who was involved in the accident that resulted in the death of the decedent was under the control of the company at the time of the accident. There was testimony that the driver was on his way to work in response to a call from the company offering him seasonal employment and that the company sometimes provided employees with gas for their personal vehicles. Moreland v. Kimes & Stone Constr. Co., 900 So. 2d 377 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 898 So. 2d 679 (Miss. 2005).

Appellate court reviewed defendants' Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6)motion to dismiss under the summary judgment standard as the trial court considered exhibits, including deposition testimony, to the motion along with defendants' answer. Gulledge v. Shaw, 880 So. 2d 288 (Miss. 2004).

In a contract dispute, a court properly granted summary judgment to a wood buyer where the seller claimed that the determination of the load's grade by visual inspection was inaccurate and should have been discredited by the trial court, but the only evidence offered was the testimony of a disgruntled ex-employee and his opinion that the method of determining the grade was inaccurate, neither of which were sufficient to create a question as to an issue of material fact. Boone v. Hercules, Inc., 872 So. 2d 730 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Term "re-subdivided" was not clearly defined in the restrictive covenant, and even if the appellate court had accepted the lot owners association's broad interpretation of the term, the evidence did not establish a re-subdivision where two homeowners revised their lot line to account for a drainage problem; no new lot was created, and there was nothing smaller created from the two lots, thus, because the language in the covenant was not specific enough to show a violation of the covenant or to allow for enforcement, summary judgment for the homeowners was proper. Lake Castle Lot Owners Ass'n v. Litsinger, 868 So. 2d 377 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

By refusing to offer an expert witness to support her claim for lack of informed consent to a medical procedure for removal of a bunion, the patient offered no genuine issues of material fact for the trial court's determination; thus, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(c), the doctor's motion for summary judgment was properly granted. Jamison v. Kilgore, 905 So. 2d 610 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), aff'd, 903 So. 2d 45 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court properly granted a workers' compensation carrier and adjuster summary judgment in connection with an employee's bad faith claim; though thepayment of benefits was delayed for a month, nothing more was established than simple negligence by the carrier and the adjuster, and the employee failed to cooperate with the carrier's properly handled investigation of the matter. Pilate v. Am. Federated Ins. Co., 865 So. 2d 387 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Summary judgment was inappropriately granted in favor of the apartment complex in the victim's negligence action where the criminal had testified that he had received a key to the victim's apartment from an apartment manager, and that in later depositions he refused to subject himself to cross-examination; it appeared from the testimony given by the criminal in his deposition that he knew the manager, had knowledge of other apartments in the complex, and had knowledge of a master key that would unlock all units including the unit in question, and the parties should have been given an opportunity to explore those matters. Doe v. Stegall, 900 So. 2d 363 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 898 So. 2d 679 (Miss. 2005).

Deputy responding to a call from a fellow officer was not speeding, and while the deputy failed to anticipate that another vehicle might be pulling out from the blind spot in front of the truck in front of the deputy, the deputy's decision to steer around that turning truck did not exhibit a wilful or wanton disregard for the safety of others or a willingness that harm should follow; thus, summary judgment for the county was proper. Kelley v. Grenada County, 859 So. 2d 1049 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Circuit court erred in granting a school district's motion for summary judgment where the factual circumstances surrounding a student's assault of another student, loud taunting and threatening gestures bore on the question of the level of care exercised by the teacher in supervising her class at the time.

Where conflicting evidence was presented on whether the police officer, who was engaged in a high speed chase when the officer struck the decedent, had the officer's blue lights flashing, summary judgment pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 56 was improperly granted in favor of the city in a wrongful death action; the conflicting testimony raised an issue of material fact as to whether the officer's behavior constituted reckless disregard under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(c). Johnson v. City of Cleveland, 846 So. 2d 1031 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court's grant of the employer's motion to dismiss or, in the alternative, motion for summary judgment, was proper where the letter in question was not sufficient to place an affirmative duty on the employer to preserve the machine; further, the Supreme Court refused to recognize a separate tort of negligent spoliation of evidence. Richardson v. Sara Lee Corp., 847 So. 2d 821 (Miss. 2003).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the insurer and its agent where no evidence was presented to suggest that the insurer had acted with malice, gross negligence or reckless disregard in handling the insured's life insurance claim; the insurer had an arguable and legitimate reason to deny the insured's claim, which the insurer subsequently paid in full, and there was no evidence that the insurer acted in bad faith. Gordon v. Nat'l States Ins. Co., 851 So. 2d 363 (Miss. 2003).

Grant of summary judgment in favor of a corporation was proper in an action involving the loss of bull semen where the evidence demonstrated that the relationship between the corporation and the representative was not one of employer/employee or of master/servant. Gray v. ABS Global, Inc., 850 So. 2d 180 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Circuit court erred in granting a school district's motion for summary judgment where the factual circumstances surrounding a student's assault and loud taunting and threatening gestures by the assailant, bore on the question of the level of care exercised by the teacher in supervising her class at the time. Henderson v. Simpson County Pub. Sch. Dist., 847 So. 2d 856 (Miss. 2003).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the restaurant in a patron's suit for negligence after an injury by an allegedly defective chair in one of the corporation's restaurants; the patron did not present evidence that either the restaurant or the corporation had notice that a dangerous condition existed on the premises and she admitted that she knew of no facts supporting her claim that the chair was defective or that the restaurant had notice of the alleged instability in the chair. Young v. Wendy's Int'l, 840 So. 2d 782 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

While any factual issue must be material to withstand motion for summary judgment, it is also true that evidentiary matters— admissions in pleadings, answers to interrogatories, depositions, affidavits— are viewed in light most favorable to non-moving party, who has the benefit of every reasonable doubt. Garrett v. Northwest Miss. Junior College, 674 So. 2d 1 (Miss. 1996).

Summary judgment in favor of city was improperly granted, where city failed to place into record a copy of its insurance policy by which it alleged its coverage for plaintiffs' claim was cancelled and its immunity reacquired, and absence of this document was not cured by mayor's affidavit which was conclusory, opinionated, and obviously based only on information and belief. Scott v. City of Biloxi, 592 So. 2d 1003 (Miss. 1991).

Defendant in medical malpractice action was entitled to summary judgment, where plaintiffs failed to supply evidence of defendant's malpractice in a form which would be competent evidence at trial. Walker v. Skiwski, 529 So. 2d 184 (Miss. 1988).

Assuming medical malpractice case involves an area not within common knowledge of laymen, absent expert medical testimony which (a) articulates duty of care physician owes to a particular patient under the circumstances, and (b) identifies particulars wherein physician breached that duty and caused injury to plaintiff, a plaintiff's claim for negligence must fail. Phillips v. Hull, 516 So. 2d 488 (Miss. 1987).

Failure to respond.

In a case alleging predatory lending practices, summary judgment was properly granted in favor of a creditor because two debtors failed to show the existence of a genuine issue of material fact by merely resting on their pleadings, which did not make any allegations based on personal knowledge; moreover, the debtors failed to comply with a scheduling order that required a response to the motion. Stuckey v. Provident Bank, 912 So. 2d 859 (Miss. 2005).

Where two chemical companies failed to refute an expert's affidavit that contamination did not come from a toilet company or result from a migration of contaminates over its property, summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the toilet company, and the opportunity for allocation of fault was not unfairly prejudiced. Kerr-McGee Corp. v. Maranatha Faith Ctr., Inc., 873 So. 2d 103 (Miss. 2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted for the defendant where the plaintiffs brought forth no counter affidavits to challenge an affidavit of a third party supporting the defendant. Roebuck v. McDade, 760 So. 2d 12 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Fraud.

Insurer, garnished by a gunshot victim, was entitled to summary judgment due to the policy's exclusion of its insured's wilful acts. In her suit against insured (in which she was awarded punitive damages) and before the judge who sentenced the insured for aggravated assault, the victim had alleged the shooting was intentional; she could not be allowed to later assert that the shooting was not intentional, as this was inconsistent with the facts which she previously pled and testified to under oath. Thomas v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 856 So. 2d 646 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, en banc, 866 So. 2d 473 (Miss. 2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted to the home sellers on the buyers' claims of fraud, because the buyers' new evidence claim was untimely and they gave no explanation of why they were unable to locate an ex-husband of a former owner, failed to state the steps they had taken to locate the prior owner, and there was no genuine issue of fact, as there was no evidence in the record of willful or intentional misconduct by the sellers. Mitchell v. Nelson, 830 So. 2d 635 (Miss. 2002).

Triable issues of fact exist when facts or evidence support allegations of fraud and misrepresentation; fraud is never assumed but is essentially a question of facts which clear and convincing evidence must prove, and thus it is essentially a question of fact best left for the jury. Allen v. Mac Tools, Inc., 671 So. 2d 636 (Miss. 1996).

Mere general allegations which do not reveal detailed and precise facts will generally not prevent the award of summary judgment; in an allegation of fraud, however, precise facts which would establish fraud will often be known only by party alleged to have committed the fraud, and because the factor of intent requires knowledge of the perpetrator's state of mind, it may not be possible for an opponent to reveal detailed precise facts in support of his claim. Crystal Springs Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., 554 So. 2d 884 (Miss. 1989).

Jury trial.

Trucker's right to a jury trial under Miss. Const. Art. 3, § 31 was not violated when summary judgment was granted in a case alleging malicious prosecution and false arrest because there was probable cause to arrest the trucker when a company's products were found on his truck. Moreover, informing the police about the potentially stolen product did not amount to an untruthful statement to support a defamation claim, the communication of the information to the police was privileged, there was no claim for tortious interference with business relations absent evidence of an intent to damage the trucker's business, and an intentional infliction of emotional distress claim failed since there was no evidence of any conduct on the part of a superintendent or a company that evoked outrage or revulsion. Richard v. Supervalu, Inc., 974 So. 2d 944 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

This rule does not conflict with the constitutional right to trial by jury; trial by jury is about disputes of fact, and what may be a material matter of fact, and ab initio a proof-requiring question of fact, does not remain for the trier of fact once an undisputed record reveals no genuine issue thereof. Towner v. Moore ex rel. Quitman County Sch. Dist., 604 So. 2d 1093 (Miss. 1992).

Summary judgment may never be granted in derogation of a party's constitutional right to trial by jury; on the other hand, there is no violation of this right when judgment is entered summarily in cases where there is no genuine issue of material fact and moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law, since there is no right to trial by jury in such cases. Brown v. McQuinn, 501 So. 2d 1093 (Miss. 1986).

Summary judgment may never be granted in derogation of a party's constitutional right to trial by jury; on the other hand, there is no violation of right of trial by jury when judgment is entered summarily in cases where there is no genuine issue of material fact and moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law, as there is no right of trial by jury in such cases. Brown v. Credit Ctr., Inc., 444 So. 2d 358 (Miss. 1983).

Limitations.

Where affidavits opposing a summary judgment motion were untimely, a trial court did not abuse its discretion by failing to grant a continuance because the proponents had almost two years after their complaint was filed to obtain expert testimony, and their failure to do so was inexcusable neglect. Maxwell v. Baptist Mem. Hospital-Desoto, Inc., 15 So. 3d 427 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In her negligence action against a homeowner, decided in the homeowner's favor on summary judgment, on appeal, the worker asserted that Miss. R. Civ. P. 8(c) clearly set forth that the defense of statute of limitations was an affirmative defense which had to be set forth in responsive pleadings and that Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b) required every defense to be asserted in responsive pleadings, except the seven which could be made by motion, and that the statute of limitations defense was not included therein; however, the defense of statute of limitations was proper for summary judgment where there existed no genuine issues of material fact on the issue. Robertson v. Moody, 918 So. 2d 787 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the contractor and the county in the homeowners' action to recover for water damage to their home based on allegation that the contractor was negligent in constructing the home and the county was negligent in inspecting the home and providing adequate drainage because the homeowners' claims were barred by Miss. Code Ann. §§ 15-1-41 and 14-1-49(1). Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-41 was a statute of repose and began to run at the time the homeowners first occupied the home regardless of when the injury incurred, and their cause of action accrued under Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-49 when the homeowners first asked the county to remedy the drainage problems. Baldwin v. Holliman, 913 So. 2d 400 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Grant of summary judgment against the insureds was proper where their claim against the insurer after the driver insured was injured in an accident was barred by the statute of limitation because the insurer was added as a defendant to the action more than three years after the extent of the driver insured's injuries was known. Jackson v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 880 So. 2d 336 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court, in granting summary judgment dismissing the landowner's money damages claims against the county, stated that the injury to the landowner was immediate rather than latent, so that the discovery rule would not apply; however, the trial court did not hold a hearing before making that finding of fact, genuine disputes as to the ability to discover a latent injury were questions of fact to be decided by the fact finder, not on summary judgment. Punzo v. Jackson County, 861 So. 2d 340 (Miss. 2003).

Affidavit submitted more than two months after summary judgment hearing was late and was not allowed under either M.R.C.P. Rule 6(d) or Rule 56(c); moreover, Rule 56(e) did not allow a supplemental affidavit to be submitted after time set out in Rule 56(c) or Rule 6(d). Jones v. James Reeves Contractors, 701 So. 2d 774 (Miss. 1997).

Materiality.

Where a client hired a law firm to pursue a medical malpractice claim on her behalf, where the law firm failed to effect service of process upon the health care provider and the suit was dismissed for lack of prosecution, where the client filed a legal malpractice claim against the law firm, and where the trial court granted summary judgment in favor of the law firm after finding that the client's lawsuit was not timely filed pursuant to the three-year statute of limitations under Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-49, the reviewing court held that the evidence submitted on summary judgment raised a genuine issue of material fact regarding when the client knew or, with reasonable diligence, could have discovered the alleged legal malpractice. The law firm failed to communicate the lack of service, and the client presented evidence that she lacked actual knowledge of the alleged malpractice prior to her new counsel's review of the case file; as such, summary judgment was improper. Bennett v. Hill Boren P.C., 52 So. 3d 364 (Miss. 2011).

Summary judgment was improper in a premises liability suit based on an injured party's slip and fall on a property owner's icy doormat because there was a genuine issue of material fact regarding whether the injured party was an invitee or a licensee at the time of the accident; the injured party was delivering mail to the owner's sister, who might have been an occupant that could confer invitee status on the injured party. Evans v. Hodge, 2 So. 3d 683 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 999 So. 2d 1280, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 78 (Miss. 2009).

Movie theater never disputed the fact that their cashier left her station and a fight ensued with the customer, who brought suit against the theater, but the appellate court failed to see how the words that were exchanged prior to the fight presented a material issue; the trial court did not err in granting the movie theater's motion for summary judgment. Adams v. Cinemark USA, Inc., 831 So. 2d 1156 (Miss. 2002).

Where parties dispute existence and legitimacy of insurance carrier's reason for delay or denial, these issues are ones of material fact, and plaintiff is entitled to have a jury pass upon his claim for punitive damages if reasonable minds could differ as to legitimacy of carrier's reason. Murphree v. Federal Ins. Co., 707 So. 2d 523 (Miss. 1997).

Accident at softball game resulting from batter's throwing of bat was not reasonably foreseeable and could not be prevented, thus even viewing evidence in light most favorable to plaintiff, there was no issue of material fact as to foreseeability of the accident occurring, and summary judgment was appropriate. Rolison v. City of Meridian, 691 So. 2d 440 (Miss. 1997).

Trial court correctly granted summary judgment for defendants in legal malpractice action, where plaintiff failed to make a causal connection between breach of attorney's duty of confidentiality and loyalty and his alleged damages. Wilbourn v. Stennett, Wilkinson & Ward, 687 So. 2d 1205 (Miss. 1996).

Trial court correctly granted summary judgment for attorney on adjoining landowner's claims against attorney in connection with rezoning matter, since there was no such tort as "the use of a falsehood to persuade the court to decide against a party." Roussel v. Robbins, 688 So. 2d 714 (Miss. 1996).

Trial court properly granted bank's motion for summary judgment in action by replacement trustee and trust beneficiaries, where there was no proof which would allow a hypothetical juror to find by a preponderance of the evidence that bank had actual knowledge that former trustee was embezzling from trust at the time of each transaction. Collier v. Trustmark Nat'l Bank, 678 So. 2d 693 (Miss. 1996).

Junior college was not entitled to summary judgment in negligence action brought by student following accident on milling machine, where there were genuine issues of material fact regarding extent of safety and use instructions student received, as well as adequacy of supervision by his teacher. Garrett v. Northwest Miss. Junior College, 674 So. 2d 1 (Miss. 1996).

Trial court erred in entering partial summary judgment against insurance company on grounds that aggravated assault defendant was an insured under his parents' homeowner's policy, where there were numerous material facts at issue concerning defendant's "household resident" status which should have been submitted to a jury. Merrimack Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. McDill, 674 So. 2d 4 (Miss. 1996).

Summary judgment should not have been granted to defendant supermarket in slip and fall case, where there was dispute as to timely and non-negligent removal of banana from produce bin by store employees. Downs v. Choo, 656 So. 2d 84 (Miss. 1995).

Where a jury could reasonably infer that defendant waived its right to terminate contract by continuing to conduct business as usual with plaintiff after passage of deadline, trial court's grant of summary judgment was erroneous and required reversal. Canizaro v. Mobile Communications Corp. of Am., 655 So. 2d 25 (Miss. 1995).

Presence of fact issues in record does not per se entitle party to avoid summary judgment; court must be convinced that factual issue is a material one, one that matters in an outcome determinative sense. Erby v. North Miss. Medical Ctr., 654 So. 2d 495 (Miss. 1995).

Although evidence of who was driving truck involved in collision with train was disputable, it was not material to the question of defendant's negligence and it was not a material fact precluding summary judgment. Strantz ex rel. Minga v. Pinion, 652 So. 2d 738 (Miss. 1995).

Since doctrine of open and obvious dangers had been abolished as a defense, case was remanded for trial in order for jury to find liability, if any, under statutory comparative negligence principles. Baptiste v. Jitney Jungle Stores of Am., Inc., 651 So. 2d 1063 (Miss. 1995).

Plaintiffs presented sufficient evidence of a causal connection between hospital's alleged breach of duty and their injury and damages to survive motion for summary judgment. Palmer v. Anderson Infirmary Benevolent Ass'n, 656 So. 2d 790 (Miss. 1995).

Summary judgment was inappropriate where case involved issues of contractual interpretation and allegations of fraudulent concealment; in addition, whether or not portion of property was located in actual floodway was contested by parties' respective witnesses. Yowell v. James Harkins Builder, Inc., 645 So. 2d 1340 (Miss. 1994).

Question whether letter advising manufacturer of fatality involving its product was a claim or not, following definition in manufacturer's insurance policy, was a vital fact issue, and where parties' evidence was in dispute as to what letter meant and as to what policy intended to be a "claim," summary judgment was improper. Taylor Mach. Works v. Great Am. Surplus Lines Ins. Co., 635 So. 2d 1357 (Miss. 1994).

Presence of fact issues in record does not per se entitle a party to avoid summary judgment; court must be convinced that the factual issue is a material one, one that matters in an outcome determinative sense. Simmons v. Thompson Mach., 631 So. 2d 798 (Miss. 1994).

Summary judgment in replevin action was improper, where defendant's affidavit, deposition, and documents in evidence demonstrated genuine issues of material fact within the context of his amended counterclaim. Simmons v. Thompson Mach., 631 So. 2d 798 (Miss. 1994).

Summary judgment in wrongful death action was inappropriate, where there was a disputed issue of fact over which contractor maintained responsibility for safety aspects of sand mining job. Hudgins v. Pensacola Constr. Co., 630 So. 2d 992 (Miss. 1994).

Defendant's purported inconsistent statements did not amount to a genuine issue of material fact necessitating trial, since a reasonable jury could not return a verdict for plaintiff, and gravamen of defendant's story remained the same among the different statements. Page v. Wiggins, 595 So. 2d 1291 (Miss. 1992).

Summary judgment was improper, where genuine issue of material fact existed as to correct interpretation of provision in contract between parties. Spartan Foods Sys. v. American Nat'l Ins. Co., 582 So. 2d 399 (Miss. 1991).

Limiting patient's testimony to that which a lay person without medical training could reasonably be expected to observe, understand and remember, patient's testimony in conflict with doctor's contemporaneous records created a genuine issue of material fact sufficient to defeat summary judgment in medical malpractice action. Kelley v. Frederic, 573 So. 2d 1385 (Miss. 1990).

Summary judgment was inappropriate, where question was whether individual who inherited property should be prohibited in equity from asserting his interest; record below did not establish absence of material factual issues, and estoppel and laches were affirmative defenses which were required to be pled and proven by party asserting them. Sumrall v. Doggett, 511 So. 2d 908 (Miss. 1987).

Not all disputed issues of fact may be sufficient to defeat motion for summary judgment or to require trial on merits, only material issues of fact; if, viewing evidence in light most favorable to party against whom motion has been made, that party's claim or defense still fails as a matter of law, summary judgment generally ought to be granted, even though there may be disputes regarding non-material facts. Vickers v. First Mississippi Nat'l Bank, 458 So. 2d 1055 (Miss. 1984).

Question whether cook injured at hospital was an employee, dual or otherwise, was a triable issue, because clear intention of hospital's contract with food services vendor was to preclude vendor's employees from being considered employees of hospital, and therefore summary judgment was not permitted. Russell v. Orr, 700 So. 2d 619 (Miss. 1997).

Issues of fact sufficient to require denial of motion for summary judgment are present where one party swears to one version of matter in issue and another says just the opposite; issues of fact also exist where there is more than one reasonable interpretation that may be given undisputed testimony, where materially differing but nevertheless reasonable inferences may be drawn from uncontradicted facts, or where purported establishment of facts has been sufficiently incomplete or inadequate that trial judge cannot say with reasonable confidence that full facts of the matter have been disclosed. Dennis v. Searle, 457 So. 2d 941 (Miss. 1984).

Multiple claims or multiple parties.

Trial judge properly determined that the malpractice action against the hospital and several physicians was for the same injuries and damages she had incurred and presented to the jury in the first suit against a driver and his employer. In that first suit, damages were assessed by the jury and the jury also found she was paid in full for those damages, per a prior settlement with yet another driver and his employer; thus, she had obtained satisfaction of her claim, she was not entitled to a double recovery or additional damages against the hospital and the physicians, and summary judgment for the hospital and physicians was proper. Medlin v. Hazlehurst Emergency Physicians, 889 So. 2d 496 (Miss. Sept. 23, 2004).

Trial court erred as a matter of law when it denied defendant equipment manufacturer's motion for summary judgment; a wrongful death claim was not assignable by a wrongful death beneficiary to one tortfeasor to be asserted against another joint tortfeasor. Mississippi's wrongful death statute did not confer upon a tortfeasor the right of assignment of a plaintiff's wrongful death cause of action. Coleman Powermate, Inc. v. Rheem Mfg. Co., 880 So. 2d 329 (Miss. 2004).

Supreme Court agreed that a physician in a medical malpractice suit raised an affirmative defense regarding the apportionment of damages, but failed to present sufficient evidence to create a genuine issue of material fact that would have attributed negligence to a third party. A partial summary judgment for the wife, who was the decedent's survivor, was proper. Eckman v. Moore, 876 So. 2d 975 (Miss. 2004).

Where the trial court dismissed the action as to one defendant, but other defendants remained in the action, and there was no subsection (b) certification, the order was not an appealable final judgment and the appeal would be dismissed. Owens v. Nasco Int'l, Inc., 744 So. 2d 772 (Miss. 1999).

Notice.

Dismissal of the claimant's petition for declaratory relief in an action involving the liquidation of an insurance company was improper pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(c) and Miss. R. Civ. P. 56 where the trial judge erred in converting a motion for judgment on the pleadings into a motion for summary judgment without giving the claimants 10-days notice of that intention. Huff-Cook, Inc. v. Dale, 913 So. 2d 988 (Miss. 2005).

The trial court committed reversible error in granting summary judgment when the plaintiff was not given 10 days notice of the hearing on the motion following the conversion of the defendant's motion for dismissal into a motion for summary judgment. Jones v. Regency Toyota, Inc., 798 So. 2d 474 (Miss. 2001).

Grant of summary judgment was improper, where defendant failed to supply sufficient notice of hearing on its motion. Hurst v. Southwest Miss. Legal Servs. Corp., 610 So. 2d 374 (Miss. 1992), overruled on other grounds, Rains v. Gardner, 731 So. 2d 1192 (Miss. 1999).

Trial court erred in entertaining defendant's summary judgment motion, made orally at hearing on summary judgment motions of co-parties, since defendant's motion was not filed at least ten days prior to hearing in compliance with subdivision (c) of this rule. Pope v. Schroeder, 512 So. 2d 905 (Miss. 1987).

Trial court should not have heard summary judgment motion without full compliance with ten-day notice rule, but where ruling was withheld pending completion of discovery, violation of this rule's time requirement was harmless. Sherrod v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 518 So. 2d 640 (Miss. 1987).

Partial summary judgment.

Order granting summary judgment was not a final appealable judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b) because, by its terms, the trial court reserved ruling on other issues raised in the petition for damages and injunctive relief; at most, the order was a partial summary judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(d). Wiggins v. Perry, 989 So. 2d 419 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Grant of partial summary judgment in favor of the individuals and against the corporation in an action involving prepaid legal services was proper where no valid, binding arbitration agreement existed in the prepaid legal expense agreement, Miss. Code Ann. § 83-49-1 et seq.; in essence, there was no clear showing that the parties had agreed to arbitration. Pre-Paid Legal Servs. v. Battle, 873 So. 2d 79 (Miss. 2004), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 125 S. Ct. 409, 160 L. Ed. 2d 321 (2004).

Procedure.

Summary judgment was properly granted in a medical malpractice suit, a patient's expert witness affidavit to support her claim was untimely filed nine days following the summary judgment hearing; discovery responses were to be supplemented seasonably pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 26(f). Dotson v. Jackson, 8 So. 3d 230 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 12 So. 3d 531, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 212 (Miss. 2009).

In an action alleging defendants published slanderous statements against plaintiffs on a radio talk show program, the trial court's exclusion of the radio show transcript allowed the trial court to refine its review of a motion for summary judgment based only on the pleadings and dismiss the complaint pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Chalk v. Bertholf, 980 So. 2d 290 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a medical malpractice suit where the court converted defendant's motions for dismissal into motions for summary judgment by considering matters outside the pleadings, plaintiff failed to take any action or move for a continuance to submit additional affidavits. Therefore, any objection plaintiff may have had to the way the court conducted the hearing on the motion for summary judgment was waived. Russell v. Williford, 907 So. 2d 362 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 910 So. 2d 574 (Miss. 2005).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the construction company and bank because the corporation failed to provide adequate notice containing information regarding the amount of payment claimed as required by Miss. Code Ann. § 31-5-51; to be sufficient, notice had to be given between the final work date and the expiration of the 90-day window, so that by failing to state an amount claimed, the corporation could not satisfy the statutory requirement that the written notice state with substantial accuracy the amount claimed, as required by Miss. Code Ann. § 31-5-51(3). Younge Mech., Inc. v. Max Foote Constr. Co., 869 So. 2d 1079 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Denial of an oral hearing was not reversible error where there was no issue of material fact with regard to the requirement that a landowner connect to the sewer system and pay for the connection. Croke v. Southgate Sewer Dist., 857 So. 2d 774 (Miss. 2003).

Where a trial court granted summary judgment to a Mississippi attorney in proceedings by a Pennsylvania corporation to enroll in Mississippi a Pennsylvania judgment against the attorney, on appeal the appellate court reviewed the grant of summary judgment de novo. Global Oceanic Enters. v. Hynum, 857 So. 2d 659 (Miss. 2003).

The trial judge properly complied with Rule 12(b) and subsection (c) of this rule in treating a motion to dismiss filed by the defendants as a motion for summary judgment; the plaintiff and her counsel were made aware that the judge reviewed a videotape of the incident at issue and the judge postponed making his final ruling for over three months, granting ample time for the plaintiff to respond and gather additional discovery, notwithstanding that no specific decree regarding the conversion of the motion was made. Jones v. Jackson Pub. Schs., 760 So. 2d 730 (Miss. 2000).

This rule does not entitle a party to summary judgment by default where nonmoving party files no response; even in absence of a response, court may enter judgment only if appropriate, i.e., if no genuine issue of material fact exists. Hurst v. Southwest Miss. Legal Servs. Corp., 610 So. 2d 374 (Miss. 1992), overruled on other grounds, Rains v. Gardner, 731 So. 2d 1192 (Miss. 1999).

Commencement of trial closes the season for granting motions for summary judgment; where trial has already begun, it is far preferable to allow plaintiff to present his case in chief and then, if plaintiff has failed to meet his burden of proof, direct a verdict in favor of defendant. Hurst v. Southwest Miss. Legal Servs. Corp., 610 So. 2d 374 (Miss. 1992), overruled on other grounds, Rains v. Gardner, 731 So. 2d 1192 (Miss. 1999).

Trial court improperly granted summary judgment to defendant, where defendant had not filed a motion for or requested a hearing on summary judgment, and therefore plaintiff did not receive ten day notice as required by subdivision (c) of this rule. Palmer v. Biloxi Regional Medical Ctr., Inc., 649 So. 2d 179 (Miss. 1994).

Summary judgment for defendant in medical malpractice case was reversed, where parties' affidavits raised triable questions of fact which, but for imposition of improperly promulgated local rule governing summary judgment, would have resulted in jury trial. Koerner v. Crittenden, 635 So. 2d 833 (Miss. 1994).

This rule imposes no affirmative requirement on the nonmoving party to respond before the hearing on the motion for summary judgment. O'Cain v. Harvey Freeman & Sons, 603 So. 2d 824 (Miss. 1991).

Trial judge did not err in issuing protective order in favor or defendant, which stayed all discovery until disposition of question of defendant's immunity during summary judgment proceedings. McQueen v. Williams, 587 So. 2d 918 (Miss. 1991).

It was error to grant summary disposition based solely on plaintiff's failure to file a written response to defendant's motion for summary judgment. Allen v. Mayer, 587 So. 2d 255 (Miss. 1991).

Defendant/third party plaintiff was not entitled to reversal of summary judgment against him based on argument that his answer and third party complaint raised genuine issues of material fact; allegations in third party complaint were not sworn and thus were not eligible for consideration in opposition to summary judgment, and moreover they were not allegations to which plaintiff was required to respond, since they were defendant's complaint against the third party defendant, not plaintiff. Jones v. Ballard, 573 So. 2d 783 (Miss. 1991).

Chancellor had an obligation to consider untimely filed interrogatory answers, and had he done so he would have found a genuine issue of material fact. Martin v. Simmons, 571 So. 2d 254 (Miss. 1990).

Dismissal under this rule can only be based on insufficiency of evidence, not on a party's violation of procedural rules governing discovery. Palmer v. Biloxi Regional Medical Ctr., 564 So. 2d 1346 (Miss. 1990).

Judge has as much power at summary judgment stage as he does at trial to resolve doubts as to qualifications of proffered experts. Palmer v. Biloxi Regional Medical Ctr., 564 So. 2d 1346 (Miss. 1990).

Circuit court did not abuse its discretion in disqualifying plaintiffs' expert witnesses, and absent expert testimony, record was devoid of significant, probative evidence from which a genuine issue of material fact could derive, and summary judgment for defendant was therefore proper. Palmer v. Biloxi Regional Medical Ctr., 564 So. 2d 1346 (Miss. 1990).

Trial court erred when, on its own motion, it refused to allow plaintiff an opportunity to cross-examine two admittedly hostile witnesses at summary judgment hearing, since this denied plaintiff a full and fair opportunity to oppose defendant's motion for summary judgment. Crain v. Cleveland Lodge 1532, 560 So. 2d 142 (Miss. 1990).

The only unsworn matters available to a party opposing summary judgment are undenied allegations in his pleadings and admissions secured under M.R.C.P. Rule 36; to generate a genuine issue of material fact, any other documents, including but not limited to depositions, answers to interrogatories, or affidavits, must be sworn, be made upon personal knowledge, and show that party giving them is competent to testify. Magee v. Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp., 551 So. 2d 182 (Miss. 1989).

Plaintiff should have been allowed time to file affidavits or other pertinent material in opposition to motion for summary judgment; since trial court considered "matters outside the pleadings" in ruling on defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings, M.R.C.P. Rule 12(c) required that plaintiff be given an opportunity to present all pertinent material, and since plaintiff's request was timely made, it should have been allowed. Cunningham v. Lanier, 555 So. 2d 685 (Miss. 1989).

Fact that cross-motions for summary judgment have been filed does not, without more, empower court to dispense with trial and enter judgment summarily. Brown v. Credit Ctr., Inc., 444 So. 2d 358 (Miss. 1983).

Review.

In a wrongful death action, the trial court erred, when considering defendant's summary judgment motion, in finding that plaintiff was not the decedent's common law wife because the trial court was not permitted to make such a factual determination at the summary judgment stage. Clark Sand Co. v. Kelly, 60 So. 3d 149 (Miss. 2011).

Appeal from the denial of a motion for summary judgment in a lease dispute was moot because a lessor did not file an interlocutory appeal under Miss. R. App. P. 5, and judgment was entered against him after a trial on the merits. Britton v. Am. Legion Post 58, 19 So. 3d 83 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In a case alleging exposure to toxic mold and other substances, a higher standard of review was not required just because a motion for summary judgment was authored by defense counsel; the same de novo standard was required. Hosey v. Mediamolle, 963 So. 2d 1267 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Apartment complex was properly granted summary judgment in the mother's wrongful death action for her son's shooting death because she failed to show that the apartment complex's failure to provide security proximately caused her son's death; the mother presented no evidence establishing that the shooter would have been prevented access to the apartment complex by security guards or a gated keypad entrance because there was undisputed evidence that the shooter and the son were seen socializing together peacefully prior to the shooting, and therefore it was reasonable to conclude that the shooter was on the premises as a guest. Davis v. Christian Bhd. Homes of Jackson, Miss., Inc., 957 So. 2d 390 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

When a trial court, after striking a responsive pleading, sua sponte entered a default judgment as to liability against a city under Miss. R. Civ. P. 55, which was akin to a summary judgment since the city was expressly foreclosed from presenting liability evidence at the trial of the case, the appellate court applied a de novo standard of review as to the trial court's entry of the default judgment as to liability against the city. City of Jackson v. Presley, 942 So. 2d 777 (Miss. 2006).

Grant of summary judgment against the decedent's husband and son was improper in part where a second landscaping company indicated, in its contract with the nursing home, that it was taking on express obligations concerning the duty to inspect and treat ant beds; the scope of its duty, the foreseeability of the event and the death in the presence of ants that had entered the building, as well as whether a breach of the landscaping company's duty caused the tragedy were proper questions for the trier of fact. Rein v. Benchmark Constr. Co., 865 So. 2d 1134 (Miss. 2004).

Because the summary judgment was not considered a final judgment, a board of education against which the judgment was entered was not procedurally barred from the appeal. Bd. of Educ. for the Holmes County Schs v. Fisher, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 823 (Miss. Ct. App. Sept. 9, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 874 So. 2d 1019, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 503 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In an appeal from what was, in effect, a partial summary judgment, which resolved the ownership of the disputed life insurance policy as being owned by the decedent, the ultimate issue of who was the proper beneficiary, the decedent's former husband, or the decedent's child, was apparently reserved, there was no showing to justify a certification, and therefore, the appeal was an improper interlocutory appeal, and was dismissed. Evans v. Moore, 853 So. 2d 850 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Standard of review in appeals where summary judgment has been granted is de novo; court reviews all evidence before lower court to determine if there were no genuine issues of material fact so that moving party was entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Mississippi Gaming Comm'n v. Treasured Arts, Inc., 699 So. 2d 936 (Miss. 1997).

When reviewing a decision to grant summary judgment, supreme court will conduct a de novo review, and evidentiary matters are viewed in a light most favorable to the non-moving party. Lamar Corp. v. State Highway Comm'n, 684 So. 2d 601 (Miss. 1996).

Due to extensive court filings, including interrogatory responses and other discovery tools, court considered that matters outside the pleadings had been presented and therefore action was reviewed as a summary judgment motion, despite plaintiff's assertions of error indicating that appeal was from a dismissal pursuant to M.R.C.P. 12(b)(6). Westbrook v. City of Jackson, 665 So. 2d 833 (Miss. 1995).

Illustrative cases.

Although the agency agreement between the defendant agent and the plaintiff corporation contained termination provisions which, when read together, lacked clarity and were unharmonious, so as to create an ambiguity, even resolving the ambiguity to give the agent the most favorable interpretation did not end the inquiry. Interpreting the intent of the termination provisions required the examination of parol or extrinsic evidence, and therefore, the question of whether the corporation honored or breached the contract was a task for a jury, and thus the grant of summary judgment to the corporation was error. Dalton v. Cellular South, Inc., 20 So. 3d 1227 (Miss. 2009).

Church member's fraudulent concealment claim against her former pastor was properly dismissed on summary judgment because a fiduciary relationship did not exist between the member and the pastor where the member was not dependent upon the pastor and did not repose any trust or confidence in him. Mabus v. St. James Episcopal Church, 13 So. 3d 260 (Miss. 2009).

Mother's evidence that her two-year-old daughter was seriously injured by a blow to the face while attending a church preschool, along with medical testimony that the injury was not consistent with a fall, was sufficient to present a jury question as to whether the teacher, who did not see the incident, met the appropriate standard of care. Todd v. First Baptist Church, 993 So. 2d 827 (Miss. 2008).

Patient failed to make out a prima facie case of medical negligence, where a physician lacerated the patient's bladder during a laparoscopic hysterectomy, because the standard of care required that the physician anticipate possible bladder injury during the performance of a vaginal or abdominal hysterectomy; the physician filled the bladder with a blue solution to serve as a marger for inadvertent cystotomy. Dotson v. Jackson, 8 So. 3d 230 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 12 So. 3d 531, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 212 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court erred by denying a seller's motion for summary judgment in the parents' wrongful death action because their negligent entrustment claim was without merit, as once the purchase was completed, ownership and control of the motorcycle passed to the son and the accident occurred three days later; therefore, at the time of the accident, the son clearly owned, controlled, and was in possession of the motorcycle, with no right to control enjoyed by the seller. Laurel Yamaha, Inc. v. Freeman, 956 So. 2d 897 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court erred by denying a seller's motion for summary judgment in the parents' wrongful death action, as Mississippi law did not impose a duty on the seller, sufficient to support a negligence, claim, to restrict motor vehicle sales to licensed drivers or to determine the competence of drivers as part of the sale; the son was not required to have an "E" endorsement on his license to purchase the motorcycle, but only to drive the motorcycle on a highway. Laurel Yamaha, Inc. v. Freeman, 956 So. 2d 897 (Miss. 2007).

Doctor, who was employed by a university medical center which was operated under Miss. Code Ann. § 37-115-25, was entitled to summary judgment in a medical malpractice suit because he acted as a state employee, and not an independent contractor, when he treated the patient in question; the medical center had complete control over the doctor's income and had a financial interest in his earnings, and because he was a state employee he was immune from suit. Meeks v. Miller, 956 So. 2d 864 (Miss. 2007).

City was immune from liability under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(c)for the decedent's death, and therefore it was properly granted summary judgment because the officer's conduct did not amount to reckless disregard for the safety of the traveling public; the officer notified his dispatcher of the condition of the highway and the dispatcher promptly notified the Mississippi Department of Transportation so that sand or salt could be applied to the ice patch. Willing v. Estate of Benz, 958 So. 2d 1240 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 958 So. 2d 1232, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 340 (Miss. 2007).

City was immune from liability under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(q) for the decedent's death, and therefore it was properly granted summary judgment because the ice was caused solely by the effect of weather, and the family did not point to any evidence that the city or the officer contributed to or were responsible for the formation of the ice patch. Willing v. Estate of Benz, 958 So. 2d 1240 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 958 So. 2d 1232, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 340 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court erred by holding that the city was immune from liability under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(d), and therefore it erred by granting the city summary judgment because the trial court failed to consider the second prong of the public policy test, which required that the choice involved social, economic, or political policy. Willing v. Estate of Benz, 958 So. 2d 1240 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 958 So. 2d 1232, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 340 (Miss. 2007).

City was entitled to immunity under the police protection exemption under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(c), and therefore the city's motion for summary judgment was properly granted in the party guest's personal injury action, because the officer's failure to remove the keys from and/or lock the doors of his patrol car did not show a reckless disregard for the safety of others, given that the party guest testified that there was a crowd of 15 or more angry teenagers who were wielding knives and throwing sticks, bricks, and other objects and who the party guest was convinced were intent on killing or seriously injuring him. Chapman v. City of Quitman, 954 So. 2d 468 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

City was entitled to immunity under the police protection exemption under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(c), and therefore the city's motion for summary judgment was properly granted in the party guest's personal injury action, because the officer's failure to remove the keys from and/or lock the doors of his patrol car did not show a reckless disregard for the safety of others, given that the party guest testified that there was a crowd of 15 or more angry teenagers who were wielding knives and throwing sticks, bricks, and other objects and who the party guest was convinced were intent on killing or seriously injuring him. Chapman v. City of Quitman, 954 So. 2d 468 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Trial court erred by granting the city summary judgment under the discretionary function exemption under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(d) because the trial court applied only the first prong of the public policy function test rather than both prongs. Chapman v. City of Quitman, 954 So. 2d 468 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Trial court improperly granted summary judgment, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 56, to a paint company with respect to a child's claims of injury resulting from ingestion of lead found in paint that the company manufactured because the child's claims were not barred by the three-year statute of limitations set forth in Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-49, as the child was a minor when the claims accrued, and therefore the claims were subject to the savings statute, Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-59; because the child's claims were improperly dismissed, he was denied his right to a jury trial as set forth in Miss. Const. Art. III, § 31, but the claims of the child's mother were properly dismissed as time-barred. Pollard v. Sherwin-Williams Co., 955 So. 2d 764 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a county constable under Miss. R. Civ. P. 56 in a personal injury suit because the constable had immunity, under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(c), for injuries to a father, which occurred when the constable's car collided with his four-wheeler, because there was significant evidence that the father was engaged in criminal activity that had a causal nexus to the accident; the father was driving on a suspended license and pled guilty to reckless driving, however summary judgment against the father's sons was improper because genuine issues of fact existed as to whether the sons were engaged in criminal activity, whether any criminal activity on the part of the sons had a causal nexus to the accident, and whether the constable acted with reckless disregard in his pursuit of appellants. Giles v. Brown, 962 So. 2d 612 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 962 So. 2d 38, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 477 (Miss. 2007).

Summary judgment was not appropriate on the employee's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress against the employer, which was not governed by the one-year statute of limitations, because there was sufficient evidence to create a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the employer was liable for the supervisor's conduct where, inter alia: (1) the evidence indicated that when the employee would assert herself and tell the supervisor to leave her alone, she was denied certain privileges or given extra work; (2) the supervisor would call the employee into his office to train her on counseling her inferiors or on how to work, during which time he would harass her; and (3) the evidence was that the slot cards were placed in the supervisor's possession and that whenever the employee needed to get one, the supervisor would use the opportunity to grab her. Jones v. B.L. Dev. Corp., 940 So. 2d 961 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment in favor of appellee company in a suit in which appellant company alleged that a mechanic for whom appellee was responsible negligently repaired an engine in one of appellant's trucks because the undisputed facts showed that appellee did not have the sufficient control over the repair company's operations to override independent contractors status. Kossuth Trucking, Inc. v. Caterpillar, Inc., 941 So. 2d 903 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

City was immune from liability under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(c), and therefore it was properly granted summary judgment in the family's wrongful death action, because the officer's conduct did not amount to reckless disregard for the safety of the traveling public; the officer notified his dispatcher of the condition of the highway and the dispatcher promptly notified the Mississippi Department of Transportation so that sand or salt could be applied to the ice patch. Willing v. Benz, — So. 2d —, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 873 (Miss. Ct. App. Nov. 21, 2006), substituted opinion at, opinion withdrawn by 958 So. 2d 1240, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 191 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

City was immune from liability under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(q), and therefore it was properly granted summary judgment in the family's wrongful death action, because the ice was caused solely by the effect of weather, and the family did not point to any evidence that the city or the officer contributed to or were responsible for the formation of the ice patch on the highway. Willing v. Benz, — So. 2d —, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 873 (Miss. Ct. App. Nov. 21, 2006), substituted opinion at, opinion withdrawn by 958 So. 2d 1240, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 191 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a wrongful death action filed by the parents of two passengers who were killed during a police pursuit of the driver of a stolen vehicle, a county and a city were properly granted summary judgment because neither were involved in the pursuit. McCoy v. City of Florence, 949 So. 2d 69 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 949 So. 2d 37, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 113 (Miss. 2007).

In a wrongful death action filed by the parents of two passengers who were killed during a police pursuit of the driver of a stolen vehicle, the trial court erred by granting the driver summary judgment because the record indicated that while he was personally served with a summons and complaint, he never filed an answer nor made an appearance, and did not file a motion for summary judgment. McCoy v. City of Florence, 949 So. 2d 69 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 949 So. 2d 37, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 113 (Miss. 2007).

In a wrongful death action filed by the parents of two passengers who were killed during a police pursuit of the driver of a stolen vehicle, a city was properly granted summary judgment because the court could not find that the officer recklessly disregarded the passengers' safety when considering the totality of the circumstances; evidence showed, inter alia, that: (1) the driver's flight from the police lasted for a matter of minutes over five miles; (2) the flight did not occur on a residential street or within a residential neighborhood; (3) there was little or no testimony regarding the characteristics of the streets on which the flight took place; (4) traffic was light; (5) the weather was sunny and clear; and (6) the driver was operating a stolen vehicle with a suspended license and the officer noticed him because of his excessive speed and reckless driving. McCoy v. City of Florence, 949 So. 2d 69 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 949 So. 2d 37, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 113 (Miss. 2007).

In a wrongful death action filed by the parents of two passengers who were killed during a police pursuit of the driver of a stolen vehicle, a city was properly granted summary judgment because the passengers were engaged in criminal activity, as there was no dispute that they knew that the car was stolen and that they encouraged the driver to flee from the police, in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-35-7(2). McCoy v. City of Florence, 949 So. 2d 69 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 949 So. 2d 37, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 113 (Miss. 2007).

Circuit court properly granted summary judgment dismissing patient's medical malpractice suit against her doctors after her twins were stillborn; patient failed to identify a medical expert to substantiate her negligence claims. The trial judge did not abuse his discretion under Miss. R. Civ. P.56(f), by denying the patient's request for an additional thirty days to obtain a medical expert's affidavit. Stallworth v. Sanford, 921 So. 2d 340 (Miss. 2006).

Where the residuary clause of the decedent's will gave an undivided one-half interest of the remainder of his estate to his wife, and secondly, an undivided one-half interest, per stirpes, to his children (by an earlier marriage), and where the wife predeceased the husband by one week, the chancery court properly rejected the stepchildren's argument that either spouse intended for all six children (the decedent's children and the step children), to divide their estate equally, no matter which parent died first; because the writing was clear and spoke for itself, parol evidence was not admissible to alter the terms of the document, and the anti-lapse statute, Miss Code Ann. § 91-5-7, was clearly applicable, such that the failed devise to the wife passed to the decedent's natural children. Marlar v. Castillo-Ruiz (In re Will of Roland), 920 So. 2d 539 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Letters did show that the father's attorney failed to serve notice of the subpoena immediately under Miss. R. Civ. P. 45, but the father's attorney's failure to follow correct procedure did not rise to the level of abuse of process. The trial court properly granted summary judgment in favor of the father and his attorney as to the abuse of process claim; moreover, the mother's argument that the father was required to hand deliver the notice to her attorney under Miss. R. Civ. P. 5(b) was without merit, as service was allowed by mail under the plain language of Miss. R. Civ. P. 5(b). Ayles v. Allen, 907 So. 2d 300 (Miss. 2005).

Clearly, more than 90 days after the first notice to creditors had elapsed when plaintiff (a surviving child), filed his claim against the estate, claiming he was entitled to all the insurance proceeds per the decedent's property settlement with a former wife. However, when the decedent died, plaintiff was a minor, and according to the terms of the decedent's will, the decedent's second and surviving spouse had been appointed testamentary guardian of plaintiff's person and estate; defendant was in a fiduciary relationship with plaintiff, and in that capacity, she not only had an obligation to initiate any and all claims which plaintiff may have had, but she had an obligation to initiate them timely, and therefore, the chancery court erred in granting defendant's Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b) motion since a constructive trust was possibly at issue, but it did not err in denying plaintiff's motion for summary judgment. Thornhill v. Thornhill, 905 So. 2d 747 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where a mother sued a local Girl Scouts council, and its troop leader, for negligence, due to injuries sustained when her child fell out of a bunk bed at scout camp, she presented no authority to substantiate her claim that the troop should not have been allowed to sleep on the beds without guard rails, or at least should have been made to sleep on the bottom bunks. Moreover, the trial court properly found that a bunk bed being used by a 13-year old without guard rails was not a dangerous instrumentality; thus, summary judgment for the troop leader and the council was proper. Buck v. Camp Wilkes, Inc., 906 So. 2d 778 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

To survive a summary judgment in a slip-and-fall case, a plaintiff must show that the defendant creates an unreasonably dangerous condition, or he must show that the defendant has actual or constructive knowledge of a dangerous condition. Elston v. Circus Circus Miss., Inc., 908 So. 2d 771 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 920 So. 2d 1008, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 519 (Miss. 2005).

Even though the procedures the casino used to maintain its lobby were adequate as to safety concerns, on the day of the accident, no one could testify as to the last time the casino's employees inspected the lobby, and no one disputed that the substance was water, the same substance that was used to wet the plants. The record showed that the plants were usually watered some time between 10 a.m. and 11 a.m. and the injured person's fall occurred between 1:45 p.m. and 2:45 p.m.; thus, on the evidence the injured person presented, a jury could have concluded that the casino was negligent, because it created a dangerous condition, and/or because it had constructive notice of the puddle of water upon which the injured person fell. Elston v. Circus Circus Miss., Inc., 908 So. 2d 771 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 920 So. 2d 1008, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 519 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court did not err in granting summary judgment in favor of the homeowners association on their counterclaim to enforce liens against the owner's lots in a subdivision for failure to pay the homeowners association assessments because a landowner who willfully purchases property subject to the control of the association and derives benefits from membership in the association implies his consent to be charged assessments and dues common to all members. The assessments were covenants that ran with the land, which governed the remedy for failure to pay the dues, and they were not extinguished by the tax sale in which the owner purchased the lots. Alexander v. Wardlow, 910 So. 2d 1141 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Miss. Code Ann. ch. II, tit. 37, and Miss. Code Ann. §§ 37-7-471 through 37-7-483, do not apply to sixteenth section lands. School districts do not hold title to sixteenth section lands, title resides in the State; where the record was insufficient as to whether the school district had title to a historical mansion on such land, which had been leased for decades to a foundation, and the record was also unclear as to whether there was adequate consideration for renewal of the lease, a remand was required for development of said issues, and summary judgment for the foundation, and against the State, was reversed. Clark v. Stephen D. Lee Found., 887 So. 2d 798 (Miss. 2004).

Both company officers provided affidavits averring that the employee's employment was terminated because he failed to notify customers of insurance offered through the company in violation of company policy. The employee offered no proof to the contrary and since said officers were in privileged positions and the record contained absolutely no evidence of bad faith, the employee's claim of malicious interference with his employment contract was unfounded and summary judgment was properly granted for the employer. Hammons v. Fleetwood Homes of Miss., Inc., 907 So. 2d 357 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In an employment case, plaintiff who alleged he was fired for reporting defendants illegal acts failed to identify an illegality. In selling the mobile homes through promotional events. defendants' failure to credit customers for an original refrigerator, after customers opted for an upgrade, did not constitute an illegal act. As a result, there was no public policy exception to the employment at will doctrine, no issue was required for determination by a jury, and summary judgment as to plaintiff's wrongful discharge claim was properly granted. Hammons v. Fleetwood Homes of Miss., Inc., 907 So. 2d 357 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

There was no indication that the decedent (an adult), was visibly intoxicated, as indicated in Miss. Code Ann. §§ 67-1-83(1), 67-3-53, and 67-3-73. The transcripts of the casino's security cameras evidenced that while she drank and gambled, she was ambulatory and conversational and there was nothing in the record to raise a question of fact as to the possibility that she was a habitual drunkard, or known to be insane or mentally defective, as indicated in Miss. Code Ann. §§ 67-1-83(1) and 67-3-53(b); accordingly, summary judgment for the casino was proper. Estate of White v. Rainbow Casino-Vicksburg P'ship, 910 So. 2d 713 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Appellate court's reasoning in affirming summary judgment for the physician stemmed not from the fact that the patient failed to file his expert's designation one week late. The appellate court affirmed because the patient failed to respond to the physician's motion with an affidavit, submitted by an expert, that established the standard of acceptable professional practice, that the physician deviated from that standard, that such deviation was the proximate cause of the patient's injuries, and that the patient suffered damages as a result; the letter submitted by the patient's expert, even if had been in proper affidavit form, was merely a broad statement of general allegations and did not announce the applicable standard of care. Potter v. Hopper, 907 So. 2d 376 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari dismissed by 910 So. 2d 574, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 455 (Miss. 2005).

Manager clearly believed that while the customer's partner pilfered sausages by placing them in her purse, that the customer acted as a decoy to distract watchful employees, and when the manager then requested that the customer and his partner accompany him to resolve the issue, the customer became belligerent, escorted his partner to his car, and drove away. Viewing the evidence in a light most favorable to the customer, the non-movant, it was clear that a fair-minded jury could not have concluded that the grocery store and its manager pursued criminal proceedings without probable cause or that the grocery store and its manager acted with malice; thus, summary judgment for the grocery store and its manager upon the customer's suit for malicious prosecution was proper. Williams v. Jitney Jungle, Inc., 910 So. 2d 39 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Second member's buy-sell offer to a minority member was proper and valid as the second member (not a party on appeal), complied with the requirements of the limited liability company (LLC), operating agreement provision which governed buy-sell offers; therefore summary judgment was improperly granted to the minority member in litigation between said minority member and a third LLC member. KBL Props., LLC v. Bellin, 900 So. 2d 1160 (Miss. 2005).

Defendant correctly argued that under Miss. R. App. P. 10(f), the transcript pages attached to plaintiffs' brief were not part of the record in the chancery court, and therefore not considered by the chancellor when ruling on the summary judgment motions, and should not have been considered by the reviewing court. Consequently, the reviewing court granted defendant's motion to strike. KBL Props., LLC v. Bellin, 900 So. 2d 1160 (Miss. 2005).

Even if the language in the contract had been convincing enough to create a private entity and the county hospital had been deemed private, the injured person's claim remained one of premises liability.

The agreement did not alter the fact that the county remained the owner of the physical property that comprised the hospital, and that includes the sidewalk outside the hospital where the injure person tripped and fell; thus, the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment in favor of the county hospital due to the injured person's claim being filed outside the one-year statute of limitations under Miss. Code Ann. Section 11-46-11(3). Allstadt v. Baptist Mem'l Hosp., 893 So. 2d 1083 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), appeal dismissed by 2005 Miss. LEXIS 767 (Miss. Oct. 20, 2005).

Where defendant waited for twenty-seven years before suing doctors who negligently operated on his leg causing a misalignment of his femur, the doctors filed motions to dismiss the suit as barred by the statute of limitations. The circuit court considered some material outside of the pleadings, transformed the doctors' motions into a motion for summary judgment, and properly granted the motions. Russell v. Williford, 907 So. 2d 362 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 910 So. 2d 574 (Miss. 2005).

In a medical malpractice case, the patient's late knowledge of the "specifics" of his injuries, based on information provided by a subsequent examining doctor, was insufficient to toll running of the two-year statute of limitation, where the record showed he had been well aware of pain, swelling, and numbness at the site of the surgery, and had failed to engage in due diligence to discover the causative relationship between injury and the operating physician's conduct. Thus, summary judgment for the physician was proper. Simpson v. Lovelace, 892 So. 2d 284 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Suspect in murder gave a videotaped statement indicating that the couple were present during the victim's murder, robbery having been the motive, and based on that information, the sheriff obtained an arrest warrant for the couple. When the aforementioned suspect recanted his allegation, and sheriff realized there was no longer probable cause to hold the couple, sovereign immunity applied in the couple's suit against the sheriff and the county for false arrest and malicious prosecution, under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(c), and summary judgment for the sheriff and county was proper. Keen v. Simpson County, 904 So. 2d 1157 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Grant of summary judgment in favor of the trustee was proper where there was no conflict of interest with the transfer of stock. There was also no evidence that the trustee received any "reward" by transferring shares to any particular person; to the contrary, it appeared that the trustee did exactly what his mother wished him to do. Herring v. Herring, 891 So. 2d 143 (Miss. 2004).

Once the lounge patron entered onto the roof terrace, he went "beyond the bounds of his invitation," and therefore lost his invitee status. He also lacked permission to enter the roof terrace and did not enjoy the status of a licensee; his status at the time of the incident was that of a trespasser, and therefore, the premises owner had no duty to keep the roof in a safe condition and the trial court correctly granted summary judgment dismissing the patron's claims. Leffler v. Sharp, 891 So. 2d 152 (Miss. 2004).

In a family's suit following a car accident, summary judgment in favor of the department of transportation, the county, and the engineer was proper as the family failed to produce sufficient evidence to establish that the last inspection by the department was negligently performed, or that the county or the engineer had negligently inspected and maintained the culvert. Jenkins v. Miss. DOT, 904 So. 2d 1207 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment in lienholders' favor setting aside the tax conveyance to the property buyer as there was no evidence that the debt owed to the lienholders had been satisfied, and the evidence showed that the city had failed to give the lienholders sufficient notice as required by Miss. Code Ann. §§ 27-43-4, -5. Curtis v. Carter, 906 So. 2d 5 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Grant of summary judgment against the insured, a school district, was proper where the insured's failure to comply with the Fair Labor Standards Act was neither a "wrongful act" or "wrongful employment act" within their legal liability policy.

Noxubee County Sch. Dist. v. United Nat'l Ins. Co., 883 So. 2d 1159 (Miss. 2004).

Court erred in awarding summary judgment to an employer, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(c), in an employee's action for negligence per se, because the employee asserted a claim of negligence per se that had outstanding questions of proximate causation; issue was inappropriate for summary judgment. Simpson v. Boyd, 880 So. 2d 1047 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court did not err in granting a plumber a partial summary judgment as the plumber had been named as an interpleader defendant, it was not required to have sought statutory remedies for the outstanding balance on its contract under Miss. Code Ann. § 85-7-181, and the evidence was not disputed regarding the amounts to which the plumber was entitled. Noble House, Inc. v. W & W Plumbing & Heating, Inc., 881 So. 2d 377 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Summary judgment in favor of business owners was affirmed; the business owners were not required to have removed snow from an area of the parking lot where an individual slipped and broke her leg as the area was not immediately adjacent to an exit or entrance to the business, and the icy conditions were ones that the individual could have expected to find in the parking lot. Lawrence v. Wright, 910 So. 2d 8 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 926 So. 2d 922, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 81 (Miss. 2006).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment in favor of county hospital where an individual did not file suit against the hospital until more than two years after tripping on its sidewalk; the hospital was still a community hospital under Miss. Code Ann. § 41-13110(c) even though it had contracted with a private management company to run the hospital. Allstadt v. Baptist Mem. Hosp., — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 847 (Miss. Ct. App. Aug. 24, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 893 So. 2d 1083, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 133 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of a bank in a negligence action brought by several investors because the bank did not have actual knowledge of a fraud being perpetrated after funds were wired from a trust account. Holifield v. BancorpSouth, Inc., 891 So. 2d 241 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court did not err in granting the insurance company's motion for summary judgment finding no coverage because the injured party was not a "resident" of her father's household and thus was not covered under his insurance policy since (1) although the injured party's father paid some of her bills, the injured party did not intend to live with her father and she maintained a separate household; (2) the injured party lived in a separate structure, approximately 100 yards away from her father, with a separate address, mailbox, utilities, and cable; (3) the injured party's house had all the necessities such as a stove, refrigerator, microwave, food, clothing, and toys; and (4) while the injured party went to her father's home daily and ate some meals and occasionally slept at his house, she nevertheless cooked meals in her house three to four days a week. Mercer v. Progressive Gulf Ins. Co., 885 So. 2d 61 (Miss. 2004).

Company, which was leasing the property that was taken by the Mississippi Transportation Commission, was not entitled to any of the condemnation award of the lessor because it had no leasehold interest as its leases had terminated. Thus, the special court properly granted the Commission's motion for partial summary judgment finding that (1) the company was only entitled to compensation for the value of the billboards on the property that was taken and (2) compensation could only be calculated using the cost analysis, which would provide the company with the new cost of its signs, less depreciation. Eller Media Co. v. Miss. Transp. Comm'n, 882 So. 2d 198 (Miss. 2004).

In an eminent domain case, the special court properly granted the Mississippi Transportation Commission's motion for summary judgment awarding the company, which was leasing the property that was taken and on which it had placed three billboard signs, $ 57,700 for each billboard sign because the parties had entered into and filed a stipulation that the cost new, less depreciation, for each billboard on the property was $ 57,700. Eller Media Co. v. Miss. Transp. Comm'n, 882 So. 2d 198 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court erred in denying a summary judgment motion filed by a casino and its employee against the malicious prosecution claim filed by certain individuals. The individuals' first claim against the casino was dismissed for want of prosecution, and the savings clause in Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-69 did not prevent the second claim, which was based on the same facts, from being barred by the statute of limitation in Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-35. Jackpot Miss. Riverboat, Inc. v. Smith, 874 So. 2d 959 (Miss. 2004).

Where teacher sued the school board over nonrenewal of an earlier contract without the required notice, the issue was whether the new contract was sufficiently different from the teacher's previous contract to constitute a nonrenewal. Fact issues as to the relative status of the two positions and whether the difference in pay was solely the result of the different number of days legitimately required remained unresolved; the ultimate consideration in determining whether there was a demotion centered not just on pay, but on responsibility, or other relevant factors, such as whether one of the positions was a lesser one, so that, because fact questions remained relating to whether the teacher had sustained a true demotion without the required statutory notice, summary judgment for the school board was improper. Bd. of Educ. v. Fisher, 874 So. 2d 1019 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In the insureds action against the Mississippi Windstorm Underwriting Association (MWUA), in order to have effectively renewed the insurance policy, the insureds were obligated to pay the premium by the specified due date set forth in the policy. When the insureds failed to do so, the policy, by its express terms, expired and upon the expiration of the policy, the contract for insurance terminated, and the policy ceased to exist; thus, summary judgment for the MWUA was proper. Luedke v. Audubon Ins. Co., 874 So. 2d 1029 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where a 16-year-old driver got in an accident that killed a person after a notary had notarized the driver's father's forged signature on the driver's license application, the trial court erred in dismissing the beneficiaries' claim against the notary, as a question of fact existed as to whether the notary's act was a proximate cause of the accident. Gulledge v. Shaw, 880 So. 2d 288 (Miss. 2004).

Record established there was no genuine issue as to any material fact that would have precluded summary judgment in favor of the contractor on the ground of promissory estoppel where, in the plumbing contractor's answer, the plumbing contractor admitted to providing a verbal quote to the contractor in the amount of $ 92,000 for plumbing work on the building, and in the plumbing contractor's deposition, the plumbing contractor testified to having reviewed the plans for the building and to being satisfied with the price; the plumbing contractor also testified that the plumbing contractor intended that the contractor would rely on the quote. Hinson v. N&W Constr. Co., 890 So. 2d 65 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Former Miss. Code Ann. § 63-1-21) did not impute the negligence of a permittee (under a learner's permit) to the licensed driver who was occupying the seat beside the permittee. Thus, in an action against the grandfather on grounds of negligent entrustment and supervision where the grandfather was allowing the grandson to drive, summary judgment for the grandfather was proper. Warren v. Glascoe, 880 So. 2d 1034 (Miss. 2004).

Where a passenger was injured, the passenger did not demonstrate that the insured driver was an underinsured motorist under the standard set forth by the Mississippi Supreme Court, which required a comparison of the tortfeasor's liability coverage and the personal coverage carried by, or available to the injured party, nor did the passenger demonstrated good reason to abandon that standard; thus, summary judgment for the insurer on the passenger's claim for underinsured motorist benefits was proper. Byrd v. Hutchinson, 876 So. 2d 1092 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Structural damage to the insured's home had directly correlated with the unpredictable shrinking and swelling movements of clay; therefore, the exclusion in the homeowners' insurance policy for damages caused by "earth movements" applied. The trial court properly granted summary judgment in favor of the insurance company in the insured's action for breach of contract. Boteler v. State Farm Cas. Ins. Co., 876 So. 2d 1067 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where the victim was shot by her estranged husband after an arrest warrant was issued, but never delivered to the sheriff's department, there was ample probable cause to arrest through Miss. Code Ann. § 99-3-7(3), based upon Miss. Code Ann. § 97-35-15. However, reckless disregard required that the person knowingly or intentionally commit a wrongful act and even viewing the facts in a light most favorable to the victim, the victim showed no evidence that the sheriff's department knew that it could and/or was required to arrest the victim's estranged husband; the sheriff's department's conduct, even if negligent, could not be said to have risen to the level of reckless disregard, and therefore, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(c) did provide immunity based upon the sheriff's department's conduct, and summary judgment was proper as to the sheriff's department. Collins v. Tallahatchie County, 876 So. 2d 284 (Miss. 2004).

In the homeowner's action for damages related to an attempted foreclosure, summary judgment was improper, and a remand was required where the homeowner would bear the burden of proving that the note had in fact been paid in full, or if the note had not been paid in full, that he was not in default at the time foreclosure proceedings were initiated. The mere fact that the deed of trust had been "assigned" to the bank by the homeseller (the assignment was given as collateral security for the homeseller's loan) when the attempted cancellation (by the homeseller) occurred, did not preclude a finding that the indebtedness had in fact been paid in full; although the cancellation was certainly evidence that the indebtedness had been paid in full, that determination had to be made by a jury. McKinley v. Lamar Bank, 918 So. 2d 689 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where the decedent's employer agreed under the subcontract with the contractor to provide workers' compensation coverage to the employees, and the employer did so, the contractor was entitled to summary judgment pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 56 in the decedent's heirs' wrongful death action; construing Miss. Code Ann. § 71-3-7, relating to a contractor's obligation to provide workers' compensation coverage, and Miss. Code Ann. § 71-3-9, the workers' compensation exclusivity provision, together, it was determined that where the employer provided compensation coverage to its employees pursuant to the contract with the contractor, the contractor qualified as a statutory employer and was immune from tort liability claims by the heirs. Thornton v. W. E. Blain & Sons, Inc., 878 So. 2d 1082 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court properly granted a father summary judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 56 in the father's action seeking to terminate his child support obligation on the ground that the children had attained the age of majority; where, absent an agreement to the contrary, the father was not required to provide child support under Miss. Code Ann. §§ 93-5-23 and 93-11-65 after the children reached age 21, the father's obligation had ceased, as the children were at least 21, and there was no written agreement providing for post-emancipation child support payments. Little v. Little, 878 So. 2d 1086 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment for plaintiff insurance company where the documentary evidence, when coupled with the insured's averments at deposition, overwhelmingly proved that the insured made material misrepresentations to the insurance company and the insurance company was entitled to rescission of the contract. Bullock v. Life Ins. Co., 872 So. 2d 658 (Miss. 2004).

Grant of summary judgment in favor of employee's employer was proper where the employer university was entitled to qualified immunity because the employee's termination was reasonable; employee also failed, under 42 U.S.C.S. §§ 1983, 1985 and 1986, to offer any evidence pointing to a conspiracy or agreement between the employer and others to cause employee to lose her job. Harris v.

Miss. Valley State Univ., 873 So. 2d 970 (Miss. 2004).

"Time and materials" contract between a power company and an industrial coating company was based on a pay schedule with the power company having final control over the work, and the power company exercised its control and paid for all work completed by the industrial coating company; because of the latter facts, and because the written contract was clear and unambiguous, the industrial coating company's argument that it was given verbal assurances that it could take the entire project to completion was without merit, and summary judgment for the power company was proper. Dixie South Indus. Coating, Inc. v. Miss. Power Co., 872 So. 2d 769 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Homeowner's claim that a public utility was negligent in reconnecting natural gas to her home, causing a fire, was properly dismissed on summary judgment because the utility lacked actual knowledge of a hazardous condition when service was reconnected, and its duty to the homeowner thus "terminated at the meter." . Hopkins v. Miss. Valley Gas Co., 866 So. 2d 514 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Plaintiff's negligent hiring and retention claim against his former employer was properly dismissed on summary judgment because he never made a formal complaint regarding alleged discriminatory comments by a co-worker until after he was terminated, and he had no evidence of incompetence on the part of another co-worker. Raiola v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc., 872 So. 2d 79 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Mississippi Employment Security Commission (MESC) found that plaintiff was terminated for misconduct and denied him unemployment benefits; as plaintiff failed to appeal the MESC's ruling, he was precluded by collateral estoppel from arguing in a civil action that the employer's termination decision was illegal, and his claims were properly dismissed on summary judgment. Raiola v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc., 872 So. 2d 79 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Former employee's defamation claims against his former co-workers were properly dismissed on summary judgment as (1) statements that the employee was a "thief" had been determined to be true in a hearing before the Mississippi Employment Security Commission (MESC); (2) the employer enjoyed a qualified privilege as to statements made against the employee that affects the latter's employment; (3) a co-worker enjoyed an absolute privilege for her statement, made during the MESC hearing. Raiola v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc., 872 So. 2d 79 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

That a co-worker made inappropriate remarks about defendant's Italian heritage; that he was terminated for reasons he did not think were adequate; and that co-workers called him a thief were insufficient to support his claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress, and it was properly dismissed on summary judgment, as he had been determined by the Mississippi Employment Security Commission to have been properly fired for receiving pay for time not worked, and none of the conduct rose to the level of "extreme and outrageous." Raiola v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc., 872 So. 2d 79 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Plaintiff's breach of contract claim was properly dismissed on summary judgment as he presented no evidence of an employment contract, and his former employer's written policy stated that it could terminate employees without cause or notice at any time. Raiola v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc., 872 So. 2d 79 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Plaintiff's tortious interference with employment contract claims against two former co-workers were properly dismissed on summary judgment as (1) one co-worker was responsible for employees for termination, and plaintiff showed no evidence of bad faith regarding his decision; (2) the other co-worker was acting within his authority when he investigated plaintiff's time reports, and any of his alleged comments were unrelated to plaintiff's termination. Raiola v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc., 872 So. 2d 79 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Plaintiff's product's liability suit against a paintball gun manufacturer was properly dismissed on summary judgment, as plaintiff (1) did not prove that the paintball gun that allegedly injured him failed to function as expected; (2) offered no feasible design alternative that would have prevented the alleged injury; (2) knew that protective eyewear was available but chose not to buy any; and (3) was an active participant in shooting paintballs at other vehicles when he allegedly was injured. Clark v. Brass Eagle, Inc., 866 So. 2d 456 (Miss. 2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the speedway owner in the patron's negligence action where the bare statements regarding the guardrail in the patron's complaint and response to the owner's motion for summary judgment were insufficient, standing alone, to insulate the owner from a summary judgment; the owner made the premises reasonably safe and even if he had a duty to warn the patron, the document the patron executed gave sufficient warnings of the possible dangers presented by the race, and the patron was charged with knowledge of those warnings. Massey v. Tingle, 867 So. 2d 235 (Miss. 2004).

Contractor's breach of contract suit against the State for terminating its contract due to the contractor's failure to complete a roof was properly dismissed on summary judgment as the contractor failed to show that completion of the roof was commercially impossible due to defective plans and specifications. Evan Johnson & Sons Constr., Inc. v. State, 877 So. 2d 360 (Miss. 2004).

As the summary judgment evidence showed a contractor had no defense to the State's termination of its contract for nonperformance, and as the contract provided for a per-day amount of liquidated damages due to delay, and the contractor did not rebut the State's evidence, the State was properly granted summary judgment as to liquidated damages owed by the contractor. Evan Johnson & Sons Constr., Inc. v. State, 877 So. 2d 360 (Miss. 2004).

Grant of summary judgment in favor of the company in a wrongful death action was proper where products liability law limited itself to imposing liability on entities engaged in the actual production or sale of goods, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-1-63(a); further, the beneficiaries abandoned their motion for leave to amend because they permitted over three and on-half months to pass without making any effort to pursue a ruling on the motion in face of knowledge that the trial court had taken the summary judgment motion filed against them under advisement, Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 4.03(1), 2.04. Harrison v. B.F. Goodrich Co., 881 So. 2d 288 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 882 So. 2d 772 (Miss. 2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted to tobacco companies on an asbestos company's claims in which the asbestos company sought to recover for settlements paid to asbestos claimants who were also smokers, because no direct injury was asserted; hence, the asbestos company could not show proximate cause under any of the legal theories of recovery asserted. Owens Corning v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 868 So. 2d 331 (Miss. 2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted to tobacco companies on an asbestos company's claim for recovery of settlements paid to asbestos claimants who were also smokers under the antitrust law, Miss. Code Ann. § 75-21-9, because the asbestos company failed to allege an injury of the type the antitrust law was intended to redress. Owens Corning v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 868 So. 2d 331 (Miss. 2004).

Mississippi Product Liability Act, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-1-63, precludes all tobacco cases against tobacco companies based on products liability; hence, summary judgment was properly granted to tobacco companies on an asbestos company's claim that smoking by asbestos claimants caused the damage to the asbestos claimants would have failed. Owens Corning v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 868 So. 2d 331 (Miss. 2004).

In a declaratory judgment action filed by an insurer, as the policy unambiguously required that the premium payment had to be in the insurer's possession by a certain date, and it was undisputed that the insurer never received the payment (though appellant claimed it was sent), the trial court properly granted the insurer summary judgment and found there was no coverage. Lynch v. Miss. Farm Bureau Cas. Ins. Co., 880 So. 2d 1065 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a declaratory judgment action filed by an insurer alleging that there was no coverage because the insurer had not received a premium payment, appellants' estoppel defense, based on the insurer's alleged failure to send a termination notice, failed, and the insurer was properly granted summary judgment; appellant could not have relied on the insurer's previous notice of termination letters because her husband, who made the payments, testified that he was never late with a premium payment. Lynch v. Miss. Farm Bureau Cas. Ins. Co., 880 So. 2d 1065 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where an individual commissioner of a utility district filed motions for injunctive and declaratory relief, seeking to enjoin the enforcement of the chancery court's order approving the city's annexation of a utility district, summary judgment for the city based on res judicata was proper as the extensive record made by a separate chancellor in a prior proceeding showed the annexation was lawful, and the trial court was entitled to take judicial notice of those prior proceedings. Peden v. City of Gautier, 870 So. 2d 1185 (Miss. 2004).

Where the injured person collided with a front-end loader that was borrowed by a neighbor from a nearby business to pull a vehicle out of the ditch, the injured person's contentions could not, as a matter of law, support the proposition that the neighbor's unilateral act of removing the equipment without any effort to contact a company representative and without any evidence that same was a customary or accepted practice acquiesced to by the company, could have arguably been considered to be permissive; thus, summary judgment for the company and its president on the injured person's negligence claim was proper. Harrington v. L & B Wood, Inc., 883 So. 2d 591 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 883 So. 2d 1180 (Miss. 2004).

Injured person's letter of notice was not sent to the county, but rather to an attorney. In addition, the letter: (1) was not sent by registered mail or certified mail, nor was it delivered in person; (2) did not contain a short and plain statement of the facts with regard to circumstance of injury; (3) did not give the extent of injuries; (4) did not give the name of all persons involved; (5) did not list the damages sought; and (6) did not give the residence of the claimant. Because there was a bare attempt at "minimal compliance," and certainly not "substantial compliance," summary judgment for the county was proper. Fairley v. George County, 871 So. 2d 713 (Miss. 2004).

Where parents' child was severely and permanently injured after wandering onto a road adjacent to their home, and the father sued the mother for negligence, seeking coverage under a household liability policy, the appellate court, noting general policy concerns, declined to extend the holding of Glaskox By and Through Denton v. Glaskox, to allow a minor child to sue a parent for negligence not involving the operation of a motor vehicle, and summary judgment for the insurer was upheld. Pack v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 878 So. 2d 177 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

As defendant manufacturer's cigarette lighter complied with an established federal safety standard for child resistance, plaintiffs' state law products liability claim was preempted by federal law, and the manufacturer was properly granted summary judgment. Frith v. BIC Corp., 863 So. 2d 960 (Miss. 2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the guaranty association where the insurer's failure to settle within the policy limits when the offer was made, combined with its failure to inform its insured of such offer, automatically operated to extend the insurer's limits to the full amount of the judgment rendered; the insurer did not have standing to bring the suit since its policy limits were extended to cover the entire judgment against the corporation, and no subrogation would be allowed. Home Ins. Co. v. Miss. Ins. Guar. Ass'n, 904 So. 2d 95 (Miss. 2004).

As a security officer who hugged and kissed appellant after arresting her for driving under the influence had not been acting within the scope of the officer's employment with a water district, appellant's claims against the district were properly dismissed on summary judgment. Cockrell v. Pearl River Valley Water Supply Dist., 865 So. 2d 357 (Miss. 2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted by a trial court, and was improperly overturned on appeal by the court of appeals, where a bank customer was seeking punitive damages for a bank employee's fraudulent withdrawal of money from the customer's account. Because the bank promptly returned the erroneously withdrawn money, with interest, and there was only one teller involved in a single instance of mishandling of customers' money, there was no basis for punitive damages and summary judgment was properly granted on that issue. Wise v. Valley Bank, 861 So. 2d 1029 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court properly granted the employer's motion for summary judgment because the employer was not liable to the injured parties via respondeat superior for the trucker's negligence in causing the car accident because the trucker was an independent contractor and not an employee since the trucker (1) bought his own timber, cut it, and hauled it all himself; (2) decided his own work hours, which days he would work, and where he would work; (3) exclusively made decisions concerning harvest, sorting, loading, and transportation of the timber; and (4) owned all of the equipment needed for his operation and had never gotten a loan for his logging business. McCary v. Wade, 861 So. 2d 358 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where a customer of a fingernail salon failed to present evidence of an applicable standard of care, the salon's breach of that standard, or causation, the salon was entitled to summary judgment with regard to the customer's claim that the salon's negligence caused the customer to develop a fingernail fungus. McIntosh v. Victoria Corp., 877 So. 2d 519 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

In a slip and fall case, the customer failed to produce any proof that the object that caused the customer's injury, a "cookie" on the floor, was the result of an affirmative act by the retailer or the employees, and the customer also failed to show that the retailer or the employees had actual or constructive knowledge of the dangerous condition; thus, summary judgment for the retailer and the subject employees was proper. Byrne v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 877 So. 2d 462 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 66 (Miss. 2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the sheriff's department and the employees in the inmate's tort claim where until the money was paid and all the bond paperwork completed, the former inmate's release was not imminent, and at the time of the incident in question, he was an inmate of the county jail; because a governmental entity was immune from all claims arising from claimants who were inmates at the time the claim arose, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(m) of the Mississippi Torts Claims Act, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-1 et seq., did not apply to sheriff's department employees. Love v. Sunflower County Sheriff's Dep't, 860 So. 2d 797 (Miss. 2003).

Where the injured party asserted a products liability action pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 11-1-63 alleging that the manufacturer's defective water heater caused the injured party's burns, the manufacturer was entitled to summary judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 56; the injured party was unable to show that the manufacturer's hot water heater had caused the injured party's burns, because the hot water heater had to comply with all mandatory and voluntary government and industry standards, and housing and urban development inspected the water heater after the incident and found nothing wrong. Moore v. Miss. Valley Gas Co., 863 So. 2d 43 (Miss. 2003).

Where the injured party filed a products liability action alleging that the manufacturer's defective water heater had caused the injured party's burns, the manufacturer was entitled to summary judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 56; it was impossible to determine whether the water heater that caused the injuries was made by the manufacturer, as the water heater had been removed and discarded, no witness was able to identify the make, model, or manufacturer of the allegedly defective hot water heater, and the only evidence of any involvement by the manufacturer was a 1981 invoice, and it was unclear at what address the listed hot water heater was installed. Moore v. Miss. Valley Gas Co., 863 So. 2d 43 (Miss. 2003).

Grant of summary judgment in favor of the gas company in the homeowner's negligence action was proper where the gas company did not breach its duty to her to use the highest degree of care when supplying natural gas to her home; the fire that erupted was caused by the homeowner's grandson's placement of gasoline near the hot water heater. Hopkins v. Miss. Valley Gas Co., — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 1116 (Miss. Ct. App. Nov. 25, 2003), substituted opinion at 866 So. 2d 514, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 1263 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 218 (Miss. Ct. App. Feb. 24, 2004).

In a suit filed by a former employer against a former employee, the employment agreement that was presented to the chancery court was not a valid enforceable contract as it had lapsed by its own terms without renewal over a year before the lawsuit was filed. As it was simple contract law that a valid and enforceable contract was required to maintain an action for breach of contract or injunctive relief thereon, the chancery court did not err by granting a motion to dismiss. HeartSouth, PLLC v. Boyd, 865 So. 2d 1095 (Miss. 2003).

Primary issue was whether the physicians were acting as employees of the University of Mississippi Medical Center (UMMC), or were independent contractors for purposes of immunity or liability, and although the physicians did wear two hats, as they were entitled to engage in separate private practice, to an extent, the appellate court found the uncontroverted evidence was that the physicians were acting as employees of UMMC at the time of the subject surgery on the complaining patient, and pursuant to Mississippi's former sovereign immunity law, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-7(2) (Supp. 1991), the physicians were immune from liability, and summary judgment for the physicians was proper. Brown v. Warren, 858 So. 2d 168 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where a decedent had pointed a loaded gun at officers, had refused to lower the gun, had backed into his house, and had initiated fire at the officers, in the widow's subsequent civil rights claim under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983, summary judgment was properly granted to an officer who was at the scene when the decedent was fatally shot by another officer, because nothing in the record indicated that the officer had ever used force against the decedent. Elkins v. McKenzie, 865 So. 2d 1065 (Miss. 2003).

Where a widow filed an action against a city, its police chief, and two police officers, arising from the shooting death of her husband in his home, the trial court erred in dismissing her amended complaint under the Mississippi Tort Claims Act (MTCA), Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-1 et seq., as she had properly specified and separated the negligence-and-tort-based state law claims from the constitutional tort claims under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 in that amended complaint; the MTCA operated as the exclusive remedy for the state law civil claims against the city, the chief, and the officers, and Miss. R. Civ. P. 8(a) required no more than that notice of a claim be given. Elkins v. McKenzie, 865 So. 2d 1065 (Miss. 2003).

Where a decedent had pointed a loaded gun at officers, had refused to lower the gun, had backed into his house, and had initiated fire at the officers, the officer who fatally shot him was entitled to qualified immunity in the widow's subsequent civil rights claim filed under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 because the officer reasonably believed that his life and the lives of other officers at the scene were in imminent danger; therefore, the trial court improperly denied the officer's motion for summary judgment in the action. Elkins v. McKenzie, 865 So. 2d 1065 (Miss. 2003).

Where a decedent had pointed a loaded gun at officers, had refused to lower the gun, had backed into his house, and had initiated fire at the officers, summary judgment was properly granted to the city that employed the officer in the widow's subsequent civil rights claim under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 because the widow failed to show: (1) a facially invalid city policy, (2) that the city demonstrated any deliberate indifference to any known or obvious consequences that might have resulted in any constitutional deprivation, or any city policy or any persistent, widespread practice or custom; (3) or that causation existed between any city policy or custom and that such was the moving force for the shooting officer's actions. Elkins v. McKenzie, 865 So. 2d 1065 (Miss. 2003).

Where a decedent had pointed a loaded gun at officers, had refused to lower the gun, had backed into his house, and had initiated fire at the officers, summary judgment was properly granted to the city's chief of police in the widow's subsequent civil rights claim under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 because the widow failed to show that the chief failed to supervise or train the officer who fatally shot the decedent, that there was a causal connection between the alleged failure to supervise or train the officer and the alleged violation of the decedent's rights, and that the failure to supervise or train constituted deliberate indifference to the decedent's constitutional rights. Elkins v. McKenzie, 865 So. 2d 1065 (Miss. 2003).

Where appellant insurer put forth nothing but bare assertions that a minor tortfeasor's residence was with her mother (who was insured by appellee insurer), while appellee produced the admissions of appellant's own claims attorney as evidence that the child resided with her father (who was insured by appellant), the trial court properly ruled that the minor was a resident of the father's household under appellant's policy, and properly granted appellee summary judgment on its claim for contribution towards a settlement with the tort victims. Grange Mut. Cas. Co. v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 853 So. 2d 1187 (Miss. 2003).

Because a teacher was not provided written notice or otherwise informed within seven days of the nonrenewal of the teacher's 1999-2000 employment contract as required by Miss. Code Ann. § 37-9-105, the contract was automatically renewed for the 2000-2001 school term; thus, no genuine issue of fact existed and the teacher was entitled to summary judgment. Bd. of Educ. for the Holmes County Schs v. Fisher, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 823 (Miss. Ct. App. Sept. 9, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 874 So. 2d 1019, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 503 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

As wrongful death claims against a sheriff and county employees based on negligence were barred by Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(m) (the jail inmate exemption of the Mississippi Tort Claims Act, Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-46-1 to 11-46-23), and intentional tort claims were barred by the one-year statute of limitations, Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-59 (Rev. 2003), dismissal of all wrongful death claims was proper. Lee v. Thompson, 859 So. 2d 981 (Miss. 2003).

Although a man, who fell under the definition of "employee" for purposes of Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-1(f) of the Mississippi Tort Claims Act (MTCA), Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-46-1 to 11-46-23, caused an accident that injured an individual and then failed to disclose to the individual that the man was a county employee, the individual failed to establish that the county withheld information regarding the employee's work status, nor did the individual show that the county provided the individual with misleading or inaccurate information, and the individual did not exercise due diligence in determining the true parties of the lawsuit or in determining the man's work status; thus, the court affirmed the trial court's grant of summary judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(c) in favor of the county and the man on the grounds that the individual failed to substantially comply with the notice requirements of the MTCA, and, therefore, the statute of limitations had expired. Ray v. Keith, 859 So. 2d 995 (Miss. 2003).

Summary judgment was improperly granted in favor of the county where the exemptions provided under Miss. Code Ann. §§ 27-31-33, 27-31-34, and 27-35-155 applied to privately held leaseholds; therefore, the holder's privately held leasehold interest was exempt from ad valorem taxation and the county could not assess any back ad valorem taxes against the holder. In re Assessment of Ad Valorem Taxes on Leasehold Interest Held by Reed Mfg., Inc., 854 So. 2d 1066 (Miss. 2003).

As appellants were parties to an estate proceeding in which the rights to royalties from photos and music of a famous deceased musician had been determined, res judicata barred them from relitigating the issue of the ownership of the photos and music, and the trial court properly granted summary judgment to appellees. Anderson v. LaVere, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 527 (Miss. Oct. 16, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at, remanded by 895 So. 2d 828, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1462 (Miss. 2004).

In a wrongful death suit, as testimony that a decedent's car was safely stopped at an intersection when a fire truck ran into him was disputed by numerous witnesses and was not supported by facts showing that the collision had occurred in the middle of the intersection, the testimony was not significantly probative and thus did not create a genuine issue of material fact. Estate of Williams v. City of Jackson, 844 So. 2d 1161 (Miss. 2003).

As a decedent was engaged in criminal activity (drunk driving) and there was a causal nexus between that activity and his death in a collision with a fire truck, the city was immune from a wrongful death suit under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(c), and the city was properly granted summary judgment. Estate of Williams v. City of Jackson, 844 So. 2d 1161 (Miss. 2003).

Where a widow whose husband died while working for a general contractor sued the contractor based on its alleged failure to properly repair damaged bolts, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the contractor as its conduct was at most gross negligence or reckless indifference, which, as a matter of law, did not defeat the exclusivity provision of the workers' compensation statutes. Bevis v. Linkous Constr. Co., 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 773, 856 So. 2d 535 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 860 So. 2d 1223 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court properly dismissed by summary judgment a claim alleging that a contractor's negligent construction of a nursing home had led to an ant infestation which in turn caused plaintiffs' decedent's death, as the contractor could not have reasonably foreseen the decedent's death from ant bites two years after it built the nursing home where the ant attack occurred. Rein v. Benchmark Constr. Co., — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 282 (Miss. June 12, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at, remanded in part by 865 So. 2d 1134, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 180 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court properly dismissed by summary judgment a claim alleging that a first landscaping company had negligently failed to control ants, and that this negligence led to plaintiff decedent's death from ant bites, because the company, in its dealings with the nursing home where the ant attack occurred, had assumed no duty to control fire ants. Rein v. Benchmark Constr. Co., — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 282 (Miss. June 12, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at, remanded in part by 865 So. 2d 1134, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 180 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court erred in dismissing on summary judgment a claim alleging that a second landscaping company had negligently failed to control fire ants on a nursing home's grounds, and that this negligence led to plaintiff decedent's death from fire ant bites; the company had contracted with the nursing home to provide fire ant control, and there were fact issues as to its negligence. Rein v. Benchmark Constr. Co., — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 282 (Miss. June 12, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at, remanded in part by 865 So. 2d 1134, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 180 (Miss. 2004).

In an action alleging tortious interference with a contract and interference with a prospective advantage, summary judgment was properly entered in favor of a principal and its trustees because they had a contractual right to challenge an agent's proposed purchase of a competing hospital; moreover, a letter of intent between the agent and the hospital was not a final contract. King's Daughters & Sons Circle No. Two v. Delta Reg'l Med. Ctr., 856 So. 2d 600 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

In a suit by an auto accident victim against a tortfeasor's employer's insurer, which became insolvent, the trial court properly granted the Mississippi Insurance Guaranty Association summary judgment, as the policy at issue excluded coverage for injuries arising from an auto accident, and the fact that the victim pled theories of negligent hiring and failure to maintain adequate safety programs did not defeat the exclusion. Meyers v. Miss. Ins. Guar. Ass'n, 883 So. 2d 10 (Miss. 2003).

Grant of summary judgment in favor of an auto supply company pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(c) in an action for breach of contract was proper where, upon the corporation's satisfaction of the bank's loan, the auto supply company had no further duty to buy back inventory from the corporation, as the corporation's business did not close during the initial financing period. JS, Inc. v. Brandon Auto Supply, Inc., 848 So. 2d 902 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where victim's expert concluded that but for the absence of a ramp, victim's injuries would not have happened, affidavit provided evidence to establish the question of negligence as a genuine issue of material fact. Wilkins v. Bloodsaw, 850 So. 2d 185 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

As defendant, the manufacturer of a liner installed in a lagoon where a worker drowned, gave a sufficient warning of the dangers of the liner in its contract with the general contractor, and the dangerous nature of the liner, in that it became slippery when wet, would have been known to the ordinary user, the trial court properly granted the manufacturer summary judgment on grounds that plaintiff failed to prove the manufacturer breached a duty to the deceased worker. Hobson v. Waggoner Eng'g, Inc., 878 So. 2d 68 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 66 (Miss. 2004).

As a wrongful death plaintiff failed to prove that defendant — the manufacturer of a liner installed in a lagoon where a worker drowned — defectively designed the liner, having presented no evidence of industry standards or customs and no expert opinion showing the availablity of an alternate design that would have prevented the alleged harm without impairing the usefulness of the product, the trial court properly granted the manufacturer summary judgment. Hobson v. Waggoner Eng'g, Inc., 878 So. 2d 68 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 66 (Miss. 2004).

Wrongful-death plaintiff failed to establish that defendant project engineer owed a duty to a deceased worker, since under the applicable contracts the general contractor, not the engineer, had responsibility for the supervision of the construction work and project safety; the engineer was properly granted summary judgment. Hobson v. Waggoner Eng'g, Inc., 878 So. 2d 68 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 66 (Miss. 2004).

Where plaintiff sued defendants for causing her to miscarry while she was five months pregnant, the trial court properly denied partial summary judgment to defendants on her wrongful death claims, as (1) under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-13, a nonviable, unborn child who was "quick" in the womb was a "person"; and (2) whether the child was "quick" was for the jury to decide. 66 Fed. Credit Union v. Tucker, 853 So. 2d 104 (Miss. 2003).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the casino where the employee failed to prove that she was improperly terminated for filing a workers' compensation claim; any assertion by the employee that she was a contract employee of the casino was belied by her own signature on forms which clearly defined her status as an at-will employee, and she did not allege that she was terminated for refusing to participate in illegal acts at the request of the casino or that she was terminated for reporting illegal acts performed by the casino. Buchanan v. Ameristar Casino Vicksburg, Inc., 852 So. 2d 25 (Miss. 2003).

Summary judgment for a driver in a wrongful death action was affirmed because even if it were shown that the driver exceeded the speed limit by 10 miles per hour, there was no evidence of causation relating that negligence to a car accident. McFarland v. Leake, 864 So. 2d 959 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 864 So. 2d 959 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 864 So. 2d 282 (Miss. 2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted to defendant car driver, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 56, in a negligence action where even if the car driver had speeded, plaintiff estate did not prove that speed was the proximate cause of the collision that killed plaintiff's decedent; the trial judge did not abuse his discretion in finding no genuine issue of material fact existed such as would defeat the car driver's motion for summary judgment. McFarland v. Leake, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 84 (Miss. Ct. App. — February 18, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 864 So. 2d 959, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 795 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Summary judgment was proper against a wrongful death claim brought against an apartment owner for the death of the estate's decedent when she was struck by a speeding car driven by a child that jumped a curb in a parking lot and hit the decedent while she sat talking to a friend in a common area outside the apartment; the court refused to extend to the case the holding in Carpenter v. Stop-n-Go Markets, Inc., 512 So. 2d 708 (Miss. 1987) that required the apartment owner to exercise reasonable care to protect against potential dangers in common areas inside an apartment building and to common areas outside the building. Heard v. Intervest Corp., 856 So. 2d 359 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, en banc, 860 So. 2d 1223 (Miss. 2003).

Patient's expert did not establish a causal connection between patient's alleged left leg nerve injury, and the alleged breaches in the nursing standard of care asserted against the hospital, and the patient failed to present any proof that the alleged injury was a kind of injury that did not ordinarily occur in the absence of negligence in a res ipsa loquitur claim. Thus, summary judgment for the hospital was proper. Powell v. Methodist Health Care-Jackson Hosps., 856 So. 2d 353 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd, 876 So. 2d 347 (Miss. 2004).

Summary judgment was appropriate against an action brought by the buyers of a home for failure to make the statutory disclosures required under Miss. Code Ann. §§ 89-1-501 to 89-1-523, fraud and related claims where the home was 30 years old, had obvious structural problems, the buyers were made aware of the existence of subterrean termite damage, and a contract addendum indicated that the home was being sold "as is". Laird v. ERA Bayshore Realty, 841 So. 2d 178 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where an employee was exonerated of embezzlement on June 21, 2000, and filed her complaint on June 20, 2001, the employee's malicious prosecution claim was filed one day before it would have expired, and therefore, the trial court was in error in granting the employer's motion for summary judgment. Coleman v. Smith, 841 So. 2d 192 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where the employee relied on Mississippi Legal Forms that described malicious arrest, it could be logically inferred that the employee's intent was to allege malicious prosecution, therefore, the trial court was in error in granting the employer's motion for summary judgment. Coleman v. Smith, 841 So. 2d 192 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

The state field officer's decision not to revoke parole after the parolee failed to timely report was an exercise of discretion, and because (1) there was no evidence of a gross, reckless, or wanton failure in the State's supervision of the parolee, and (2) no sufficient causal connection or element of foreseeability existed between the alleged violated statutory duty and the injuries sustained by the victim when raped by the parolee, the State maintained the benefit of immunity under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1) of the Mississippi Tort Claims Act, Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-46-1 to 11-46-23, and the State was properly granted summary judgment in the victim's action for damages. Connell v. State, 841 So. 2d 1127 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to an insurance adjuster the adjuster could not be held liable for a bad faith breach of contract because she was not a party to the contract between a patient and a health care provider. PDN, Inc. v. Loring, 843 So. 2d 685 (Miss. 2003).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of appellees where the Mississippi Tort Claims Act, Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-46-1 to 11-46-23, limited recovery by the driver to $50,000 per occurrence. Allred v. Yarborough, 843 So. 2d 727 (Miss. 2003).

In a wrongful death suit against a town, the town was correctly granted summary judgment since there were no facts of record to support the allegation that the town acted with reckless disregard for the decedent's safety; only 13 minutes elapsed between the decedent's report to the police that he had been shot at and his fatal shooting, and the police acted responsibly and within their discretion. Titus v. Williams, 844 So. 2d 459 (Miss. 2003).

Decedent's actions in confronting a dangerous man, whom he knew had a gun that he was not afraid to use, was an intervening cause which relieved the store where the shooting occurred and the store's landlord of any liability for the decedent's wrongful death; the store and landlord were thus properly granted summary judgment. Titus v. Williams, 844 So. 2d 459 (Miss. 2003).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the hospital and its parent corporation in the employee's breach of contract action where the corporate entities were not one and the same and the corporations' liability was not dependent upon the establishment of a hospital-corporation parent/subsidiary relationship; the employee exercised his right to terminate his employment relationship with the hospital and began employment with the corporation and by doing so, the employee relieved himself and the hospital of any obligations under the hospital agreement. Johnson v. Baptist Mem'l Hospital-Golden Triangle, Inc., 843 So. 2d 102 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Summary judgment was appropriate for adjudging the deficiency to the bank on a note and security agreement where vehicles were pledged as collateral, and the mother's and daughter's relationship with the bank was one of mortgagor-mortgagee, and, as a matter of law not a fiduciary relationship; therefore, that issue for appeal had no merit, and the allegations of fraud and misrepresentation were not supported by sufficient specific evidence to survive the motion for summary judgment in favor of the bank. Burgess v. BankPlus, 830 So. 2d 1223 (Miss. 2002).

Summary judgment was proper against landowners' claim against an officer of a corporate developer for negligence in designing and constructing a surface water drainage system for a subdivision where the only evidence before the trial court was that the development was the sole responsibility of the corporation and provided no basis for piercing the corporate veil; the only evidence supporting the landowners' alter ego claim, a complaint filed by the officer in another action in which the officer allegedly stated that he had acted outside the corporation, was not properly before the appellate court and could not be considered in determining whether a genuine issue of fact existed. Hardy v. Brock, 826 So. 2d 71 (Miss. 2002).

Although the "interim" version of Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-3 (Supp. 1993) was in effect at the time of the police officer's automobile accident with plaintiff, the immunity exception provided in subsection (3) of that section was inapplicable because the operation and maintenance of a police department was not a function of proprietary nature; thus, the city was entitled to summary judgment on the issue of sovereign immunity. Gale v. Thomas, 759 So. 2d 1150 (Miss. 1999).

Plaintiff's claim should have been dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction because he pled only those damages that would have been recoverable under the National Childhood Injury Act and in the Federal Claims Court; if plaintiff's petition in Federal Claims Court were dismissed as being time-barred, then he could be allowed to bring suit under state law. Cook v. Children's Med. Group, 756 So. 2d 734 (Miss. 1999).

Adult children were residents of their parents' households at time of automobile accident, and were thus eligible to collect uninsured motorist benefits under insurance policies issued to their parents, and therefore trial court improperly determined that insurer was entitled to summary judgment. Johnson v. Preferred Risk Auto. Ins. Co., 659 So. 2d 866 (Miss. 1995).

Openness and obviousness of a product's design is simply a factor to consider in determining whether a product is unreasonably dangerous, and is not a bar to recovery, and therefore summary judgment in such cases is not appropriate. Seymour v. Brunswick Corp., 655 So. 2d 892 (Miss. 1995).

Trial court erred in denying plaintiff leave to amend her complaint to include RICO claims arising out of the same series of events as her original complaint, and therefore court's grant of summary judgment was premature. Frank v. Dore, 635 So. 2d 1369 (Miss. 1994).

Relationship between defendant company and worker who caused accident was clearly that of independent contractor, and plaintiff's complaint, based solely on existence of a master/servant relationship, was therefore properly dismissed. Richardson v. APAC-Mississippi, Inc., 631 So. 2d 143 (Miss. 1994).

City's operation of public swimming pool was a proprietary function, and therefore city waived its sovereign immunity defense, requiring reversal of trial court's grant of summary judgment. Morgan v. City of Ruleville, 627 So. 2d 275 (Miss. 1993).

In view of notice pleading requirements of M.R.C.P. Rule 8, client's complaint against his former attorney stated at least one actionable cause upon which relief could be granted, and therefore summary judgment in favor of attorney was reversed. Owen v. Pringle, 621 So. 2d 668 (Miss. 1993).

Purchasers' acceptance of "as is" clause in real estate sales contract precluded them from maintaining action against sellers, who had transferred ownership and control of premises five months prior to accident, and therefore summary judgment was appropriate. Stonecipher v. Kornhaus, 623 So. 2d 955 (Miss. 1993).

Trial court did not err in finding, as a matter of law, that grant of staff privileges to doctor in and of itself did not constitute a contract within meaning of state constitution. State ex rel. Miss. Ethics Comm'n v. Aseme, 583 So. 2d 955 (Miss. 1991).

Status of newspaper hauler as either independent contractor or employee, when fully fleshed out and in absence of genuine issues of material fact, was an issue of law appropriate for resolution on summary judgment. Webster v. Mississippi Publishers Corp., 571 So. 2d 946 (Miss. 1990).

State insurance guaranty association was a legislative creation designed to protect public from insolvency of insurers, with definite limitations on payments of covered claims, and therefore, as a matter of law, association could not be liable for punitive damages. Bobby Kitchens, Inc. v. Mississippi Ins. Guar. Ass'n, 560 So. 2d 129 (Miss. 1989).

Trial court should not have granted summary judgment for plaintiff in an open account action, where defendant filed a general denial, a counter-affidavit in support thereof, and an affirmative defense that no account existed between the parties. Walker v. Cleveland Lumber Co., 512 So. 2d 695 (Miss. 1987).

Where a contract is clear and unambiguous, its meaning and effect may be determined by the court, which may grant summary judgment based upon plain language of the contract. Shelton v. American Ins. Co., 507 So. 2d 894 (Miss. 1987).

Trial court erred in holding that medical experts used by plaintiffs were not qualified to testify since they did not know standard of care in Mississippi, and on that basis alone sustaining motions for summary judgment. Brown v. McQuinn, 501 So. 2d 1093 (Miss. 1986).

Reviewing court generally takes a dim view of the practice of resolving contract ambiguities via summary judgment, but where contract is without material ambiguity, the matter is often appropriate for summary disposition; this is so where provisions of contract are clear, even though not perfectly clear. Willis v. Mississippi Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 481 So. 2d 256 (Miss. 1985).

Although practice of resolving contract ambiguities via summary judgment is disfavored, if terms of contract are clear, the question is one of law even though parties may disagree regarding meaning and import of those terms. Shaw v. Burchfield, 481 So. 2d 247 (Miss. 1985).

Debtor's practical access to information was limited where all proof regarding term and termination date of credit insurance policy was within exclusive possession and control of creditor and insurer, and no policy was ever delivered to debtor, and where debtor was able to offer some evidence suggesting a fact issue, summary judgment on that issue should have been denied. Brown v. Credit Ctr., Inc., 444 So. 2d 358 (Miss. 1983).

Rule 57. Declaratory judgments.

(a) Procedure. Courts of record within their respective jurisdictions may declare rights, status, and other legal relations regardless of whether further relief is or could be claimed. The court may refuse to render or enter a declaratory judgment where such judgment, if entered, would not terminate the uncertainty or controversy giving rise to the proceeding.

The procedure for obtaining a declaratory judgment shall be in accordance with these rules, and the right to trial by jury may be demanded under the circumstances and in the manner provided in Rules 38 and 39. The existence of another adequate remedy does not preclude a judgment for declaratory relief in actions where it is appropriate.

The court may order a speedy hearing of an action for declaratory judgment and may advance it on the calendar. The judgment in a declaratory relief action may be either affirmative or negative in form and effect.

(b) When available.

(1) Any person interested under a deed, will, written contract, or other writings constituting a contract, or whose rights, status, or other legal relations are affected by a statute, municipal ordinance, contract or franchise, may have determined any question of construction or validity arising under the instrument, statute, ordinance, contract, or franchise, and obtain a declaration of rights, status or other legal relations thereunder.

(2) A contract may be construed either before or after there has been a breach thereof. Where an insurer has denied or indicated that it may deny that a contract covers a party's claim against an insured, that party may seek a declaratory judgment construing the contract to cover the claim.

(3) Any person interested as or through an executor, administrator, trustee guardian or other fiduciary, creditor, devisee, legatee, heir, next of kin, or cestui que trust in the administration of a trust, or of the estate of a decedent, an infant, insolvent, or person under a legal disability, may have a declaration of rights or legal relations in respect thereto:

(A) to ascertain any class of creditors, devisees, legatees, heirs, next of kin or others; or,

(B) to direct the executors, administrators, or trustees, to do or abstain from doing any particular act in their judiciary capacity; or,

(C) to determine any question arising in the administration of the estate or trust, including questions of construction of wills and other writings.

(4) The enumeration in subdivisions (1), (2) and (3) of this rule does not limit or restrict the exercise of the general powers stated in paragraph (a) in any proceeding where declaratory relief is sought in which a judgment will terminate the controversy or remove an uncertainty. (Amended effective July 27, 2000.)

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 57 is to create a procedure by which rights and obligations may be adjudicated in cases involving an actual controversy that has not reached the stage at which either party may seek a coercive remedy, or in which the party entitled to such a remedy fails to sue for it.

Actions for declaratory judgment represent a comparatively recent development in American jurisprudence. The traditional and conventional concept of the judicial process has been that the courts may act only when a complainant is entitled to a coercive remedy, such as a judgment for damages or an injunction. Until a controversy had matured to a point at which such relief was appropriate and the person entitled thereto sought to invoke it, the courts were powerless to act.

At times, however, there may be an actual dispute about the rights and obligations of the parties, and yet the controversy may not have ripened to a point at which an affirmative remedy is needed. Or this stage may have been reached, but the party entitled to seek the remedy may fail to take the necessary steps. For example, the maker of a promissory note may have stated to the payee that the instrument would not be honored at maturity because, perhaps, his signature is claimed to have been forged, or procured by fraud, or affixed without his authority. The payee had to wait until payment was due before appealing to the courts. It might well have been important for him to ascertain in advance whether the note was a binding obligation and whether he might rely on it and list it among his assets. Nevertheless, he could receive no judicial relief until the instrument became due and was dishonored. Or it might have been necessary for a person to determine whether he was bound by some contractual provision that he deemed void. In that event, if he desired to contest the matter, he had to assume the risk and to hazard the consequences of committing a breach and then await a suit.

In such situations the declaratory judgment remedy provides a useful solution. This remedy enlarges the judicial process and makes it more flexible by putting a new implement at the disposal of the court. Use of this procedure is always discretionary with the court. The jurisdiction of the courts is not expanded and requests for declaratory judgments may be heard only in cases that otherwise are within their jurisdiction.

Any doubt or difficulty about the procedure in an action for a declaratory judgment should disappear if the action is regarded as an ordinary civil action, as Rule 57 clearly intends. The incidents of pleading, process, discovery, trial, and judgment are the same. Only when the nature of the factual situation requires is a prayer for declaratory relief appropriate. The request for a declaratory judgment is but a normal part of the ordinary civil action.

As Rule 57 expressly provides, the procedure for obtaining a declaratory judgment must be "in accordance with these rules." Thus the requirements of pleading and practice in actions for declaratory relief are exactly the same as in the other civil actions. Consequently, the action is commenced by filing a complaint with the clerk and the issuance of a summons as provided in Rules 3 and 4. A declaratory judgment may be obtained by "any interested party." The liberal rules of joinder of parties provided by Rules 14 and 17 to 25 are equally beneficial in declaratory judgment actions and the requirements of compulsory joinder of those needed for just adjudication, set out in Rule 19, are fully applicable. The broad joinder of claims, counter-claims, and cross-claims, made available by Rules 13 and 18, is available in a declaratory action. Similarly, declaratory relief may be sought by a counter-claim or cross-claim. As in any other action, the scope of relief to be granted in the action is limited to the issues made by the pleadings and the evidence, and the decree can be no broader than the issue tried. Rule 54(c) applies, however, and the court is to give whatever relief is justified by the evidence, regardless of the demand in the complaint, except in the case of default. Summary judgment is as available in these actions as in any others.

A plaintiff may ask for a declaratory judgment either as his sole relief or in addition or auxiliary to other relief, and a defendant may similarly counterclaim therefor. Thus the court is not limited only to remedial relief for acts already committed or losses already incurred; it may either substitute or add preventive and declaratory relief. It may be sought upon either legal or equitable claims and the right to jury trial is fully preserved as in civil actions generally.

The granting of a declaratory judgment rests in the sound discretion of the trial court exercised in the public interest. It is always the duty of the court to strike a proper balance between the needs of the plaintiff and the consequences of giving the desired relief. The two principal criteria guiding the policy in favor of rendering declaratory judgments are: (1) when the judgment will serve a useful purpose in clarifying and setting the legal relations in issue, and (2) when it will terminate and afford relief from the uncertainty, insecurity, and controversy giving rise to the proceeding.

One of the most important considerations that may induce a court to deny declaratory relief is that the judgment sought would not settle the disputes between the parties. A declaratory action need not be dismissed because it could not settle all possible differences between the parties, but the courts should look with disfavor on piecemeal litigation of the disputed matters.

Rule 57(b) was amended in 2000 to authorize an injured party, where an insurer has indicated that it may deny coverage of the injured party's claim, to seek a declaratory judgment establishing coverage. The traditional rule in Mississippi barred any type of direct action by an injured party against an insurer. Crum v. Mississippi Mun. Serv. Co., Inc., 1998 WL 378333 (N.D. Miss. 1998), citing Hunt v. Preferred Risk Mut. Ins. Co., 568 So. 2d 253; Westmorland v. Raper, 511 So. 2d 884 (Miss. 1987); and Clark v. City of Pascagoula, 507 So. 2d 70 (Miss. 1987). The amendment modifies the traditional rule in the interest of judicial economy by allowing a direct action for the limited purpose of a declaratory judgment.

Allowing the injured party to seek a declaration that the injured party's claim is covered by the defendant's policy may reduce litigation costs. First, it may avoid unnecessary litigation when the policy is the only asset that might satisfy the injured party's claim, because a determination of non-coverage would avoid the need of trial of the claim against the insured. In addition, if the injured party brings the claim for declaratory judgment together with the claim against the insured, the rule may allow all of the issues growing out of an incident to be resolved in a single judgment.

As emphasized elsewhere in this Comment, whether the insured may or should be joined in the declaratory judgment action, and what other claims may be asserted, are issues to be determined under the existing rules governing joinder of claims and parties. Where such joinder is appropriate or necessary, the court retains discretion under Rule 42(b) to order separate trials in whichever sequence the court finds most appropriate. Absent extraordinary circumstances, the failure to order separate trials in order to avoid putting the issue of insurance before the jury which tries liability and damages as between the insured and the injured party will be deemed an abuse of discretion.

The amended rule does not affect the long-recognized right of an insurer to bring an action for a declamatory judgment that a policy does not cover a particular claim. See, e.g., Coleman v. Mississippi Farm Bureau Ins. Co., 708 So. 2d 6 (Miss. 1998). Nor does it affect the right of the insured to bring suit to establish coverage.

Allowing the injured party to assert a claim for declaratory judgment does not alter M.R.E. 411, which limits the admissibility of evidence of insurance coverage in an action by the injured party against an insured for damages.

[Amended effective July 27, 2000.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Purpose.
Applicability.
Authority.
Jurisdiction.
Standing.
Illustrative cases.

In general.

Mississippi Municipality Liability Plan (MMLP) was not a proper party to the individuals' claim for declaratory relief related to a motor vehicle accident with a city police officer, as the MMLP had not denied coverage under a policy it issued to the city. Miss. Mun. Liab. Plan v. Jordan, 863 So. 2d 934 (Miss. 2003).

Under Miss. R. Civ. P. 57, an insurance company may be named as a party to an action for the purpose of seeking declaratory judgment on the question of coverage; indeed, this is precisely what certain defendants had done in their state lawsuit against a transport company and an insurer, and defendants' Fed. R.Civ. P. 12(b)(6) motion was therefore without merit. W. Side Transp., Inc. v. APAC Miss., Inc., 237 F. Supp. 2d 707 (S.D. Miss. 2002).

While truck owner's claim to determine insurance coverage under Miss. R. Civ. P. 57(b)(2) was futile because the insurance company did not deny coverage, and dismissal as to that claim was proper, the trial court abused its discretion in denying the truck owner's motions to compel discovery, and for leave to file a first amended complaint, to add a claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress based on the plain language of Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(a). Poindexter v. S. United Fire Ins. Co., 838 So. 2d 964 (Miss. 2003).

An action for declaratory judgment involving multiple claims may be brought against multiple parties, particularly when insurance questions need to be resolved. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Eakins, 1998 Miss. LEXIS 593 (Miss. Dec. 10, 1998), subst. op., 748 So. 2d 765 (Miss. 1999).

Declaratory judgments are alternative procedures that permit adjudications of rights when actual controversies exist, but they have not reached the stage at which suits for damages or injunctive relief would normally be brought. Bowling v. Madison County Bd. of Supvrs., 724 So. 2d 431 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998).

No advance determination, that plaintiff is likely entitled to declaratory judgment he seeks, is necessary before trial court may properly proceed under this rule; that a plaintiff is entitled to no relief whatsoever in no way vitiates jurisdictional or procedural components of a declaratory judgment action. White v. Gautier Util. Dist., 465 So. 2d 1003 (Miss. 1985).

Purpose.

Landowner joined the timber company's insurer as a defendant under Miss. R. Civ. P. 57(b) for the limited purpose of obtaining a declaratory judgment on the issue of coverage; the chancellor abused his discretion in finding the insurer jointly and severally liable for damages to the landowner because the sole determination sought from the chancellor was that of determining between the timber company and the insurer who was responsible for coverage; although the insurer had paid the judgment, once the chancellor had determined the issue of coverage, the timber company might have pursued a bad faith or subrogation claim against the insurer for damages incurred over the policy limit. Capital City Ins. Co. v. Ringgold Timber Co., 898 So. 2d 680 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 898 So. 2d 679 (Miss. 2005).

Among the cases where a proceeding for declaratory judgment is most needed are those where there exists an actual dispute with respect to which the parties have a compelling need to know where they stand before entering a substantial financial undertaking. White v. Gautier Util. Dist., 465 So. 2d 1003 (Miss. 1985).

Applicability.

Trial court did not err when it dismissed the company's insurers from the customer's cause of action where there was no question as to whether coverage existed for the damages the customer claimed occurred as a result of the missing oil cap; a direct action may only be brought against an insurance company when there was an issue of coverage. Hudson v. Palmer, 977 So. 2d 369 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 977 So. 2d 343, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 95 (Miss. 2008).

Driver improperly joined the insurer as a defendant where the driver could not rely on Miss. R. Civ. P. 57 as the basis for bringing suit against the insurer where Rule 57 only allowed the driver to seek a declaratory judgment against an insurer when coverage was in doubt, and coverage was not in doubt; therefore, there would be no common question of law or fact litigated between all parties, making joinder of the insurer and employee as defendants improper. Mercer v. Moody, 918 So. 2d 664 (Miss. 2005).

Because Miss. Code Ann. § 99-39-3(2) of the Mississippi Uniform Post-Conviction Collateral Relief Act was defendant's exclusive remedy for postconviction relief (PCR), the trial court correctly treated defendant's complaint for declaratory judgment as a petition for PCR; the motion was properly denied as untimely pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 99-39-5 (Rev. 2000). Moore v. State, 859 So. 2d 1018 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

A Rule 57 declaratory judgment proceeding was not the appropriate means to determine the effect of two court orders, entered three days apart by two different courts. Edwards v. Roberts, 771 So. 2d 378 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

A declaratory judgment as to which newspaper was qualified to publish legal notices within a specific Judicial district was inappropriate since any coercive legal remedy would be against the public body contracting for the publication and not against the company that obtained the contract, but no such public body was a party to the action. S & F Publ'g Co. v. Gulf Publ'g Co., 760 So. 2d 38 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Complaint seeking declaration that two paragraphs of settlement agreement were void and unenforceable as against public policy was appropriate for declaratory judgment, pursuant to this rule's purpose of adjudicating actual controversies when case is not yet ripe for a coercive remedy. McManus v. Howard, 569 So. 2d 1213 (Miss. 1990).

Administratrix had standing as an interested party to seek declaration as to validity of a legal services contract affecting estate, and validity of contract was susceptible to authoritative resolution, and therefore use of declaratory judgment was proper. Riley v. Moreland, 537 So. 2d 1348 (Miss. 1989).

Authority.

In light of the July 27, 2000, amendments to Miss. R. Civ. P. 57 that permitted an injured third party to maintain a direct declaratory judgment action against a liability insurer, where the insurer had indicated that it might deny coverage of the injured party's claim, a state court had full authority to litigate the coverage issues in a federal declaratory judgment case brought by an insurer; the motions to dismiss the federal case were granted because the federal district court saw no advantage to be gained by simultaneously litigating the issues in federal court. S.C. Ins. Co. v. McKee, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 45504 (N.D. Miss. June 9, 2005).

Trial court had power to declare whether residents were entitled under state's Administrative Procedures Law to offer comments before adoption of a Capacity Assurance Plan concerning siting of hazardous waste facility. Fordice v. Thomas, 649 So. 2d 835 (Miss. 1995), but see USPCI of Miss., Inc. v. State ex rel. McGowan, 688 So. 2d 783 (Miss. 1997).

Court hearing declaratory judgment action involving contract dispute is not limited to accepting plaintiff's version of contract or dismissing action; rather, court should apply controlling principles of law to facts as developed and declare rights, status or other legal relations of parties as may be proper under circumstances. UHS-Qualicare, Inc. v. Gulf Coast Community Hosp., 525 So. 2d 746 (Miss. 1987).

Jurisdiction.

Land company sought declaratory and injunctive relief against a county; the county alleged that it was entitled to damages because the land company violated ordinances. Jurisdiction was proper in the chancery court; if an ordinance applied to the land company, the issue of damages could be decided by the chancellor. Issaquena Warren Counties Land Co., LLC v. Warren County, 996 So. 2d 747 (Miss. 2008).

It was clear from language of this rule that a declaratory judgment action was contemplated as an action to be brought in the trial court, and supreme court was without subject matter jurisdiction to hear and issue declaratory judgment requested by Governor as an original civil action. In re Fordice, 691 So. 2d 429 (Miss. 1997).

Authorization of declaratory judgment procedure in this rule is jurisdictionally neutral, and a prayer for declaratory judgment is not per se cognizable only in equity as opposed to in an action at law. Tillotson v. Anders, 551 So. 2d 212 (Miss. 1989).

Standing.

The plaintiff in an action against a school district had standing to bring a declaratory judgment action against the school district's insurance company to determine whether coverage existed under the school district's insurance policy since the plaintiff's rights and status clearly were affected by the terms of the policy as, without the coverage afforded the school district by its liability policies, he had no recourse against the school district because of sovereign immunity. Titan Indem. Co. v. Williams, 743 So. 2d 1020 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

County was an "interested party" in dispute involving real estate development which violated county subdivision ordinance. Johnson v. Hinds County, 524 So. 2d 947 (Miss. 1988).

General law of standing is applicable to declaratory actions; if standing exists, trial judge should hear the case under this rule so long as one or more legal issues vital to the controversy is susceptible to authoritative resolution. Johnson v. Hinds County, 524 So. 2d 947 (Miss. 1988).

Illustrative cases.

Where the parents of a child killed in a drunk driving accident sued the store that sold alcohol to the driver minor, the trial court's declaratory judgment stating that the store's insurance policy "does or may" cover the claims was contrary to the provisions of Miss. R. Civ. P. 57; the trial judge should have stated that the policy of insurance either did or did not cover the claims. S.C. Ins. Co. v. Keymon, 974 So. 2d 226 (Miss. 2008).

Rule 58. Entry of judgment.

Every judgment shall be set forth on a separate document which bears the title of "Judgment." However, a judgment which fully adjudicates the claim as to all parties and which has been entered as provided in M.R.C.P. 79(a) shall, in the absence of prejudice to a party, have the force and finality of a judgment even if it is not properly titled. A judgment shall be effective only when entered as provided in M.R.C.P. 79(a). (Amended effective July 1, 2001; amended effective May 27, 2004 to address finality of improperly titled judgment.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective July 1, 1994, a new Rule 58 was adopted. 632-635 So.2d XXXII-XXXIII (West Miss.Cases 1994). [Adopted August 21, 1996.]

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 58 is simply to provide a precise post-trial date from which periods of time may be computed. Throughout these rules there are provisions for events which, when performed, commence the running of a time period within which a responsive event must be performed; e. g., a defendant must serve his answer within thirty days after service on him of the summons and complaint, and a plaintiff must serve his reply to a counter-claim within thirty days, Rule 12(a); answers to interrogatories to parties must be served within thirty days after service of same, Rule 33(a); and objections to a master's report must be served within ten days after notice of the report's having been filed, Rule 53(g)(1).

The times for taking post-trial action are computed from the date judgment is entered, as provided in Rule 58; hence, a motion for a new trial must be filed within ten days of entry of judgment, Rules 6(b), 59(b); a motion to alter or amend a judgment must be filed within ten days of entry of judgment, Rules 6(b), 59(e); a motion for a stay of execution must be filed within ten days of entry of judgment, Rule 62(a); and a motion for a directed verdict or for judgment, n. o. v. must be filed within ten days of entry of judgment, Rule 50(b).

Rule 58, as it now reads, requires that all final judgments must be entitled "Judgment." However, failure to properly title a judgment which fully adjudicates all claims in a case as to all parties will not be deemed to prevent that judgment form being fully effective so long as it has been entered as required in M.R.C.P. 79(a). Where a notice of appeal in a civil case is not timely filed, if the failure to timely file was caused by an inappropriate or misleading title of judgment, such failure may, under proper circumstances, constitute "excusable neglect" under M.R.A.P. 4(g). As now amended, the rule effectively overrules Thompson v. City of Vicksburg, 813 So. 2d 717 (Miss. 2002), Mullen v. Green Tree Financial Corp.-Miss, 730 So. 2d 9 (Miss. 1998), and Roberts v. Gafe Auto Co., 653 So. 2d 250 (Miss. 1994) insofar as they hold that strict compliance with the titling requirement is mandatory and prevents finality, even in the absence of prejudice.

[Comment amended effective July 1, 1997; amended effective May 27, 2004.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction.
Bench opinion.

Construction.

Pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1), certain defendants waived the defenses of insufficiency of service of process and insufficiency of process by omitting these defenses from their answer and motion to dismiss. Therefore, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(b) and 58, the order dismissing those defendants fully adjudicated the case as to all parties and it was a final, appealable judgment. Sauvage v. Meadowcrest Living Ctr., LLC, 28 So. 3d 589 (Miss. 2010).

Order granting summary judgment was not a final appealable judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 58 because, by its terms, the trial court reserved ruling on other issues raised in the petition for damages and injunctive relief; that the trial judge treated the order as a final judgment did not make it so. Wiggins v. Perry, 989 So. 2d 419 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Where intervenor argued that a dismissal was not proper pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 58 and Miss. R. Civ. P. 79, the supreme court, however, disagreed; while Rule 58 was important for establishing a date for computing post-trial motions and appeals, the supreme court did not interpret the rule to be the only means by which to effect a dismissal, especially where the parties have stipulated to dismiss a separate case, even though the stipulation was located in an order entered in a separate suit. Hayes v. Leflore County Bd. of Supervisors, 935 So. 2d 1015 (Miss. 2006).

Divorce case was remanded for the entry of a final judgment because no final judgment was rendered after amended findings were entered by a chancellor; however, the appeal was treated as procedurally proper based on the chancellor's assertion that a final judgment had been entered. Moody v. Moody, — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 666 (Miss. Ct. App. July 13, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 883 So. 2d 1204, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 970 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Under the Rule, all judgments have to bear the title "Judgment," as there is a need for parties to know the date of a final judgment so that they may proceed, under the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure for filing the various time-sensitive motions; where an order granting summary judgment was not styled "Judgment" or "Final Judgment," it was not a final appealable judgment, therefore, the party's case was still pending at the time she filed her motion for reconsideration. Thompson v. City of Vicksburg, 813 So. 2d 717 (Miss. 2002).

Appeal was reinstated where documents styled "Jury Verdict for Defendant" did not contain the word "judgment," were not delivered to plaintiff's counsel, were not in the court file, and were not entered on the docket; documents did not constitute a final judgment and were not intended to be a final judgment, and plaintiff's right to due process protected her from losing her right to appeal since she was not aware of the jury verdict forms and was not notified of their existence. Roberts v. Grafe Auto Co., 653 So. 2d 250 (Miss. 1994).

There was no entry of final judgment where there was no stamp, notation or other marking or anything else to indicate that judgment was ever delivered to clerk of court for filing, and appeal could not proceed until clerk corrected the clerical oversight. Sweet v. Luster, 492 So. 2d 983 (Miss. 1986).

Bench opinion.

Wife's appeal was dismissed as the wife was appealing from the court's bench opinion and no final judgment had ever been entered. Hinson v. Hinson, 877 So. 2d 547 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Rule 59. New trials; amendment of judgments.

(a) Grounds. A new trial may be granted to all or any of the parties and on all or part of the issues (1) in an action in which there has been a trial by jury, for any of the reasons for which new trials have heretofore been granted in actions at law in the courts of Mississippi; and (2) in an action tried without a jury, for any of the reasons for which rehearings have heretofore been granted in suits in equity in the courts of Mississippi.

On a motion for a new trial in an action without a jury, the court may open the judgment if one has been entered, take additional testimony, amend findings of fact and conclusions of law or make new findings and conclusions, and direct the entry of a new judgment.

(b) Time for motion. A motion for a new trial shall be filed not later than ten days after the entry of judgment.

(c) Time for serving affidavits. When a motion for new trial is based upon affidavits they shall be filed with the motion. The opposing party has ten days after service to file opposing affidavits, which period may be extended for up to twenty days either by the court for good cause shown or by the parties' written stipulation. The court may permit reply affidavits.

(d) On initiative of court. Not later than ten days after entry of judgment the court may on its own initiative order a new trial for any reason for which it might have granted a new trial on motion of a party. After giving the parties notice and an opportunity to be heard on the matter, the court may grant a timely motion for a new trial for a reason not stated in the motion. In either case, the court shall specify in the order the grounds therefor.

(e) Motion to alter or amend a judgment. A motion to alter or amend the judgment shall be filed not later than ten days after entry of the judgment. (Amended effective July 1, 1997.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective July 1, 1997, Rule 59(b), (c) and (e) were amended to clarify that motions for a new trial and accompanying affidavits, and motions to alter or amend a judgment, must be filed not later that ten days after entry of judgment. — So. 2d — (West Miss. Cases).

[Adopted effective July 1, 1997.]

COMMENT

Rule 59 authorizes the trial judge to set aside a jury verdict as to any or all parts of the issues tried and to grant a new trial as justice requires. This practice is not new to Mississippi, but the procedures set forth in this rule are. The grounds for granting new trials remain the same as under prior state practice; generally stated, however, the court has the power and duty to set aside a verdict and order a new trial whenever, in its sound judgment, such action is required. See generally 11 Miss. Digest, New Trial, Key numbers 13-108 (1972).

The motion must be filed within ten days after the entry of judgment. This is a departure from prior Mississippi practice, National Cas. Co. v. Calhoun, 219 Miss. 9, 67 So.2d 908 (1953) (new trial may be ordered any time prior to expiration of court term), and is authorized by MRCP 6(c). The ten-day period cannot be enlarged. MRCP 6(b)(2).

When the motion for new trial is based upon affidavits, they shall be filed and served with the motion; the opposing party then has a maximum of thirty days in which to serve counter-affidavits. MRCP 59(c).

Rule 59(d) allows the court on its own initiative to order a new trial, even though there was no motion for a new trial, for any reason for which the court might have granted a new trial on the motion of a party. Sanders v. State, 239 Miss. 874, 125 So.2d 923 (1961); National Cas. Co. v. Calhoun, supra. If the court exercises this power, it must specify in its order the grounds for the new trial.

If the court is acting entirely on its own initiative in ordering a new trial, it must make the order not later than ten days after the entry of judgment and may not make such an order after that period has expired.

A motion to alter or amend must be filed within ten days after the entry of judgment; the court is not permitted to extend this time period.

See Rule 60(c) for reconsideration of an order transferring a case to another court.

[Comment amended effective July 1, 1997; amended effective July 1, 2008.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Construction.
Applicability.
Limitations.
New trials.
Reconsideration.
Review.
Timeliness.
Illustrative cases.

In general.

Where appellant's road was used for decades by members of the community to access a creek and for property owners to access their timber, the chancery court's finding of a prescriptive easement was not against the weight of the evidence; the proper method to address appellant's concerns about the evidence was through a motion for a new trial pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 59. Graves v. Dudley Maples, L.P., 950 So. 2d 1017 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion under Miss. R. Civ. P. 59 by denying plaintiff's motion for new trial as conflicting evidence existed that could cause fair minded jurors to reach different conclusions as to whether the doctor caused the decedent's death through malpractice. Poole v. Avara, 908 So. 2d 716 (Miss. 2005).

Customers' motion to alter and amend judgment was properly denied where they had secured remand from federal court by explicitly asserting to the federal district judge that they had no intentions of relying upon federal law in state court; however, all of their assignments of error relied, in whole or in part, upon construction of federal law; therefore, their arguments were barred by the doctrine of judicial estoppel. Rankin v. Am. Gen. Fin., Inc., 912 So. 2d 725 (Miss. 2005).

Daughter offered nothing in her brief to demonstrate an abuse of discretion by the trial court in denying her motions to alter the judgment; she showed neither an intervening change in controlling law, availability of new evidence not previously available, nor the need to correct a clear error of law or to prevent manifest injustice, and while the trial judge erred in the computing the 10-day period following entry of judgment wherein a party could move to alter or amend a judgment pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(e), the denial of the motions was not an abuse of discretion. Brooks v. Roberts, 882 So. 2d 229 (Miss. 2004).

Divorce case was remanded for the entry of a final judgment because no final judgment was rendered after amended findings were entered by a chancellor; however, the appeal was treated as procedurally proper based on the chancellor's assertion that a final judgment had been entered. Moody v. Moody, — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 666 (Miss. Ct. App. July 13, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 883 So. 2d 1204, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 970 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Defendant's motions for a directed verdict, for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or for a new trial operated as challenges to the weight and sufficiency of the evidence supporting the verdict. Because the evidence in defendant's wire fraud trial was sufficient to support the jury's finding, defendant's motions were properly denied. McGee v. State, 853 So. 2d 125 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 852 So. 2d 577 (Ct. App. 2003).

The court could, on its own initiative, enter an order granting a new trial within ten days of the final judgment, but it was still required to act within ten days, give notice to the parties, give the parties an opportunity to be heard, and specify in the order the grounds therefor. Ford v. Ford, 795 So. 2d 600 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Trial court erred in considering the city's Motion for Clarification and Relief from Judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(e) as that rule required the motion be filed within a 10-day time limit after a judgment was rendered and the city's filing 12 days after judgment indicated that the motion was supposed to be under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b). City of Jackson v. Jackson Oaks Ltd. Partnership, 792 So. 2d 983 (Miss. 2001).

Although the rule imposes a ten day limit for a motion for new trials or to amend judgments, it does not apply to a discovery order which is not final. Trilogy Communications, Inc. v. Thomas Truck Lease, Inc., 733 So. 2d 313 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998).

A lesser showing is required for new trial than that necessary to grant a motion for j.n.o.v.; reason behind this rule is that a motion for j.n.o.v. challenges legal sufficiency of evidence to support the verdict, whereas motion for new trial challenges weight of the evidence. James v. Mabus, 574 So. 2d 596 (Miss. 1990).

Trial court has the power and duty to set aside a verdict and order a new trial whenever, in its sound judgment, such action is required. Motorola Communications & Elecs., Inc. v. Wilkerson, 555 So. 2d 713 (Miss. 1989).

Construction.

Time limit for serving a M.R.C.P. Rule 59 motion for reconsideration is 10 days after judgment, and that period may not be enlarged except by request made within time period provided and such request being granted by the court. Wright v. White, 693 So. 2d 898 (Miss. 1997).

Where a motion calls into question the correctness of all or any part of a judgment, even though corrections sought be fairly characterized as clarifying or technical only, and where the motion is filed within time allowed by M.R.C.P. Rule 59, the court will presume the motion has been filed under Rule 59 rather than Rule 60, regardless of how it may be styled. Bruce v. Bruce, 587 So. 2d 898 (Miss. 1991).

Regardless of how it might have been styled, motion seeking relief from dismissal of complaint was a M.R.C.P. Rule 60(b)(6) motion, for it was difficult to see how one could have a Rule 59 motion for a new trial when there had never been a trial. Cunningham v. Mitchell, 549 So. 2d 955 (Miss. 1989).

Ten day time limit set forth in M.R.C.P. Rule 59(b) is jurisdictional and mandatory, and Rule 6(b) gives trial judge no discretion to enlarge this time period. Telford v. Aloway, 530 So. 2d 179 (Miss. 1988).

Applicability.

Defendant's motion to amend was properly dismissed by the trial court not only because it was not timely filed, but also because its reliance on Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(e) was misplaced; that rule involved motions for new trial and did not apply to defendant's attempt to amend his pleadings because defendant never had a trial, and, instead, pled guilty. Faye v. State, 859 So. 2d 393 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where loose wording of final judgment contradicted ultimate holding of lower court, and judgment was not yet final, judgment could properly be amended to reflect the original memorandum. Griffin v. Tall Timbers Dev., Inc., 681 So. 2d 546 (Miss. 1996).

Defendant was not attempting to alter or amend judgment against her, but was simply trying to have court make judgment conform to what was originally pronounced at conclusion of trial, and therefore M.R.C.P. Rule 60(b) applied rather than Rule 59(e). Fultz v. Doss, 507 So. 2d 891 (Miss. 1987).

Limitations.

In a case in which a circuit court dismissed a company's amended complaint against a city as being time-barred, the company was procedurally barred from challenging the dismissal of its complaint. The company lost its right to pursue an appeal of the merits of the court's dismissal of its amended complaint when it failed to file either a timely Miss. R. Civ. P. 59 motion or a notice of appeal within 30 days of the entry of the order of dismissal, as required by Miss. R. App. P. 4(a). Finicky Pet Foods, Inc. v. City of Ocean Springs, 18 So. 3d 331 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In a divorce case, a former husband's appeal was time-barred because it was not perfected within 10 days of a final judgment entered in January 2007; the husband's post-trial motions were untimely under Miss. R. Civ. P. 52 and Miss. R. Civ. P. 59, and a chancellor did not have the authority to extend the time for such. The January 2007 judgment was final because it attended to all of the issues before the chancellor, including the support of two minor children, the equitable distribution of marital assets and liabilities, whether to award a former wife alimony, and whether to award the former wife attorney's fees. Anderson v. Anderson, 8 So. 3d 264 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In a divorce case, a former husband's motion to reconsider was time-barred because it was filed more than 10 days after the entry of a judgment. Anderson v. Anderson, 8 So. 3d 264 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Buyer's appeal was dismissed where, had the buyer's motion for a new trial pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 59 been timely filed, then under Miss. R. App. P. 4(d), his appeal would have been timely filed; however, since the buyer's Rule 59 motion was untimely, the appellate court lacked jurisdiction in the matter. Gober v. Lee, 8 So. 3d 912 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Defendant's motion for reconsideration needed to be filed within ten days of September 27, 2006, in order to be timely; however, it was filed on July 2, 2007, nearly ten months after the court's denial of his petition for post-conviction relief; even if it would have been proper to consider defendant's motion under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) instead of Miss. R. Civ. P. 59, the motion also would have been untimely because it was not filed within six months as required by Rule 60(b). Henry v. State, 999 So. 2d 867 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 999 So. 2d 852, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 24 (Miss. 2009).

Chancellor properly denied a lessee's motion to clarify a judgment declaring a farm lease void where the motion to clarify, filed approximately 18 months after the lessee's motion for reconsideration was denied, was untimely under Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(e); because the motion to clarify was untimely, the lessee's appeal was untimely under Miss. R. App. P. 4(d). Brand v. Barr, 980 So. 2d 962 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Motion for post-judgment interest in a negligence action was not governed by the 10-day time period in Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(e) because the right to post-judgment interest was a statutory right governed by Miss. Code Ann. § 75-17-7; therefore, a motion filed 58 days after judgment was timely under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(a). Miss. Dep't of Mental Health v. Hall, 936 So. 2d 917 (Miss. 2006).

Because husband's motion to re-open divorce case was under M.R.C.P. Rule 60 rather than Rule 59, it did not toll wife's time to file her notice of appeal, and since wife's notice of appeal was not timely, supreme court did not have jurisdiction to address wife's assignment of error. Michael v. Michael, 650 So. 2d 469 (Miss. 1995).

Wife's post-trial motion in divorce action was a motion under M.R.C.P. Rule 59 rather than Rule 60, and since it was filed within ten legal days after entry of judgment it operated to stay running of time for perfecting appeal, and therefore husband's previously-filed notice of appeal was premature and ineffective to perfect appeal. Bruce v. Bruce, 587 So. 2d 898 (Miss. 1991).

New trials.

Trial court did not err in denying the landowners' motion for JNOV or new trial where the jury was free to accept or reject any or all of the testimony and evidence presented by Mississippi Transportation Commission (MTC) and the landowners; the jury accepted the testimony and evidence that supported MTC and rendered a verdict in its favor. Adcock v. Miss. Transp. Comm'n, 981 So. 2d 942 (Miss. 2008).

Chancellor was instructed by the supreme court in its previous opinion to provide more detailed reasoning on the record as to each indicium of reasonableness for the annexation of three areas in the county into the city and to enter a judgment in accordance with those findings and conclusions, and the supreme court did not require the chancellor to conduct a new annexation hearing; the landowners who objected to the annexation had notice of the original hearing and had the opportunity to have counsel with them at that hearing, and thus the chancellor did not err in denying a landowners' motion for a new trial or to reopen the case and take additional testimony, and make new findings and a judgment. Hale v. City of Clinton (In re Enlargement & Extension of Mun. Boundaries), 955 So. 2d 307 (Miss. 2007).

Termination of the mother's parental rights was improper because the county's Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(3) motion was not supported by newly discovered evidence; none of the evidence was either newly discovered or of the sort that it could not have been discovered in time to have moved for a new trial under Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(b). In re V.M.S., 938 So. 2d 829 (Miss. 2006).

Appellate court affirmed the grant of the insurer's motion for a new trial pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 59 as the evidence at trial was overwhelmingly in favor of the insurer such that the jury verdict had to be the result of bias or prejudice. Blossman Gas, Inc. v. Shelter Mut. Gen. Ins. Co., 920 So. 2d 422 (Miss. 2006).

Trial court appropriately denied the Mississippi Transportation Commission's motion for a new trial because the jury verdict of $60,000 in favor of the landowners was not excessive; the jury verdict was between the values offered by the experts, and the verdict did not evidence bias, passion, or prejudice. Miss. Transp. Comm'n v. Williamson, 908 So. 2d 154 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 920 So. 2d 1008, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 477 (Miss. 2005).

New trial was not warranted in a daughter's unsuccessful negligence suit against a nursing home on behalf of her bedridden mother who had been assaulted by a male resident who was known for this type of sexual behavior. There was substantial evidence in support of the jury's verdict in favor of the home, notably, the Department of Human Services' investigation into the incident found that the home was not negligent; furthermore, although the home had made several attempts to have the male resident transferred, only a doctor had the power to restrain or transfer him and a doctor had not done so. Dupree v. Plantation Pointe, L.P., 892 So. 2d 228 (Miss. 2004).

Judge did not err in granting a trucking company's motion for a new trial in a wrongful death suit because a verdict in favor of the deceased's heirs was against the overwhelming weight of the evidence; there was no evidence of damage to the truck as there would have been if it had struck the deceased. White v. Yellow Freight Sys., 905 So. 2d 506 (Miss. 2004).

Defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied where there was no evidence other than the witness's testimony that he and his boss trimmed or cut a tree on the country club's property that implicated the club in the husband's wife's death; there was no evidence that another witness testified falsely because of the threat that he might be arrested, and since the witness testified anyway, there was no prejudice to the husband. Kindred v. Columbus Country Club, Inc., 918 So. 2d 719 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), aff'd, 918 So. 2d 1281 (Miss. 2005).

In a wrongful death action, in the wife's strict liability claim against the tobacco company, because there was evidence that there existed no safe cigarette and that the tobacco company constantly did research to provide the safest, consumer-desirable cigarette possible, that the wife was not aware that her husband had ever tried to quit smoking and, therefore, would have avoided any danger from the product, and that the wife put on evidence only to support the unreasonably dangerous aspect of the case and failed to provide evidence of any type of defect, the trial court did not err in refusing to grant a judgment notwithstanding the verdict or, in the alternative, a new trial. Nunnally v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 869 So. 2d 373 (Miss. 2004).

Chancellor did not abuse his discretion in granting the husband's motion for a new trial where the wife had a full opportunity to be heard and present evidence; the stated reason for granting a new trial was that an injustice would result from allowing the judgment to stand, and the wife offered no argument as to why this constituted an abuse of discretion. Franklin v. Franklin, 864 So. 2d 970 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial judge was correct in denying defendant's motion for a new trial because defendant's motion was filed almost two years after the entry of judgment. Wilson v. State, 853 So. 2d 822 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Although there was ample evidence for a jury to award damages to a customer for an injured knee, there was a lack of any evidence of a head injury; therefore, the lower court's failure to grant a new trial was an abuse of discretion. Sutherlands Lumber & Home Ctr., Inc. v. Whittington, 878 So. 2d 80 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Because conflicting facts were presented by the driver and the injury victim as to an automobile accident that caused the injury victim's damages, the entire case hinged on the jury's determinations, therefore, trial court did not err in denying the injury victim's motion for a new trial. Hopkins v. Schaeffer, 840 So. 2d 737 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Plaintiff in action arising from automobile accident was not entitled to new trial, where she offered no proof of bias, passion or prejudice toward her, save that jury did not find in her favor, and there was more than sufficient testimony on which to base jury's verdict that defendant was not negligent. Shields v. Easterling, 676 So. 2d 293 (Miss. 1996).

New trial may be granted when verdict is against overwhelming weight of evidence, or when jury has been confused by faulty jury instructions, or when jury has departed from its oath and its verdict is a result of bias, passion, and prejudice. Shields v. Easterling, 676 So. 2d 293 (Miss. 1996).

Plaintiff was not entitled to new trial or judgment notwithstanding the verdict in action against department store for slander, assault, and battery in connection with shop-lifting incident, where, based on evidence, reasonable and fairminded jurors could have reached the conclusion that they did. Daniels ex rel. Glass v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 634 So. 2d 88 (Miss. 1993).

When an assignment of error is based on an issue which has been decided by the trial court and duly recorded in the court reporter's transcript, such as the admission or omission of evidence, court on appeal may consider it regardless of whether it was raised in the party's motion for new trial. Kiddy v. Lipscomb, 628 So. 2d 1355 (Miss. 1993).

Trial courts have authority to set aside a jury verdict where, in exercise of their sound discretion, they regard such a verdict as being contrary to the substantial weight of the evidence. C & C Trucking Co. v. Smith, 612 So. 2d 1092 (Miss. 1992).

If court finds damage award to be excessive or inadequate because jury or trier of facts was influenced by bias, prejudice, or passion, or that damages awarded were contrary to overwhelming weight of credible evidence, motion for new trial still may be overruled upon condition of additur or remittitur. Odom v. Roberts, 606 So. 2d 114 (Miss. 1992).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in ruling on motion for new trial before it, and refusing plaintiff's ore tenus request for hearing to determine if jury was improperly influenced, where issue was not contained in the motion or demonstrable on the record. Brake v. Speed, 605 So. 2d 28 (Miss. 1992).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in granting new trial on all issues, on grounds that jury must have been confused, as it found for plaintiff but awarded no damages despite uncontroverted evidence of such, and that improperly prejudicial evidence was allowed to go to jury. Clark v. Viniard, 548 So. 2d 987 (Miss. 1989).

Motions for new trial are addressed to sound discretion of trial court, and require a lesser showing before they can be sustained than does the motion for j.n.o.v. Investors Property Mgt., Ltd. v. Watkins, Pitts, Hill & Assocs., 511 So. 2d 1379 (Miss. 1987).

Since motion for remittitur was a species of motion for new trial, proper course for circuit court to have taken, if it had merely considered jury verdict excessive, would have been to grant defendant's motion for new trial, conditioned upon right of plaintiffs to accept a remittitur. Investors Property Mgt., Ltd. v. Watkins, Pitts, Hill & Assocs., 511 So. 2d 1379 (Miss. 1987).

Although circuit court's order referred to reduction in damages as a "remittitur" and as being "in lieu of a new trial," correct reading of order was that it was a judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Investors Property Mgt., Ltd. v. Watkins, Pitts, Hill & Assocs., 511 So. 2d 1379 (Miss. 1987).

In ruling on a motion for new trial, credible evidence must be viewed in light most favorable to non-moving party, and credible evidence supporting claims or defenses of non-moving party should generally be taken as true; when evidence is so viewed, motion should be granted only when upon review of entire record the trial judge is left with a firm and definite conviction that verdict, if allowed to stand, would work a miscarriage of justice. Clark v. Columbus & G. Ry., 473 So. 2d 947 (Miss. 1985).

Grant or denial of a motion for new trial is a matter largely within sound discretion of trial judge. Clark v. Columbus & G. Ry., 473 So. 2d 947 (Miss. 1985).

Reconsideration.

Wife's motion to reconsider did not specify that it was brought pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 59, and it was filed more than 10 days after the entry of the order to quash; therefore, it should have been considered a motion for relief under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60. The chancellor did not abuse his discretion under Rule 60(b)(6). Carlisle v. Allen, 40 So. 3d 1252 (Miss. 2010).

In an eminent domain proceeding in which it was clear that the Mississippi Transportation Commission is entitled to a judgment in the amount of its excess deposit, the trial court abused its discretion in denying a trustee's and a bank's Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(e) motion to amend the judgment or, alternatively, for relief from the judgment under Miss. Civ. P. 60(b)(6). Due to the considerable delay between the time the funds were disbursed and the time of trial, which was almost 10 years, it was prejudicial and inequitable for the trial court to hold that the trustee and the bank failed to appear and defend their interests. Harrison v. Miss. Transp. Comm'n, 57 So. 3d 648 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), affirmed by, remanded by 57 So. 3d 622, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 127 (Miss. 2011).

In an eminent domain proceeding in which it was clear that the Mississippi Transportation Commission is entitled to a judgment in the amount of its excess deposit, the trial court abused its discretion in denying a trustee's and a bank's Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(e) motion to amend the judgment or, alternatively, for relief from the judgment under Miss. Civ. P. 60(b)(6); to hold them responsible for the judgment almost 10 years after the money was disbursed to the landowner and applied to the landowner's mortgage constituted manifest injustice. Harrison v. Miss. Transp. Comm'n, 57 So. 3d 648 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), affirmed by, remanded by 57 So. 3d 622, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 127 (Miss. 2011).

Chancellor did not err in refusing to reconsider findings on the issue of whether an employee's acquisition of the business lease prior to his termination where the evidence was not newly discovered and it could have been discovered in time for trial. Cooper v. Winnie Gilder & Cooper Gilder, Inc., 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 219 (Miss. Ct. App. Apr. 21, 2009), dismissed by 2010 Miss. LEXIS 264 (Miss. May 27, 2010).

In a divorce case, a chancellor acted within his discretion in granting the wife's Miss. R. Civ. P. 59 motion to reopen the issue of custody because, though not expressly stated in his order, it was clear from the record that the chancellor granted the motion based on a mistake in law, that is, that the original custody determination was made without consideration of the applicable Albright factors. Wade v. Wade, 967 So. 2d 682 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Chancellor did not err in hearing the husband's motion for reconsideration under Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(e) in an action dealing with divorce, alimony, and child custody because it was timely filed after the chancellor's rendition of her bench opinion, though before the final judgment was entered. Street v. Street, 936 So. 2d 1002 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Husband argued that it was beyond the discretion of the trial court to clarify, pursuant to a motion for reconsideration, that the lump sum alimony awarded to the wife in the divorce decree was for support and not part of the property settlement; however it was within the scope of Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(a) for the judge to clarify what his decision in the divorce decree in fact was. Seymour v. Seymour, 869 So. 2d 1035 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Client's motion for reconsideration was void as it was not timely filed; under Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(e), a motion for reconsideration was treated as a motion to amend judgment and had to be filed within 10 days from the entry of judgment sought to be amended. Curry v. Walls, 871 So. 2d 762 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

A motion for reconsideration is treated as a motion to amend judgment pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(e). Boyles v. Schlumberger Tech. Corp., 792 So. 2d 262 (Miss. 2001).

While "reconsideration" is not mentioned in the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure, a motion seeking that relief is authorized under Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(e). Brame v. Brame, 796 So. 2d 970 (Miss. 2001).

A trial court cannot itself entertain its own reconsideration under subsection (d). Edwards v. Roberts, 771 So. 2d 378 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Review.

In a personal injury action by guests against a casino, an appeal of the denial of the guests' motion to reconsider was time-barred where, following the denial of their reconsideration motion, the guests filed a recusal motion instead of filing a notice of appeal. The time for appeal commenced under Miss. R. App. P. 4(d) when the reconsideration motion was denied and the guests' failure to perfect a notice of appeal within 30 days subjected the appeal to dismissal. Doll v. BSL, Inc., 41 So. 3d 664 (Miss. 2010).

Errors relating to the admission or exclusion of evidence were preserved for appellate review in a negligence case even though they were not raised in a motion for a new trial, because the assignments of error were based on issues that had been decided by the trial court and duly recorded in a court reporter's transcript. Alexander v. Greer, 959 So. 2d 586 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the patient's motion for a new trial following the jury's verdict in favor of the doctor in the patient's medical malpractice suit, because the evidence was such that the jury could reasonably find that the patient failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the doctor had damaged the patient during a surgical procedure. Griffin v. McKenney, 877 So. 2d 425 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

Reversal for failure to grant new trial will occur only if it is clear that trial court abused its discretion; court on appeal is to view credible evidence in light most favorable to non-moving party. Chisolm v. Eakes, 573 So. 2d 764 (Miss. 1990).

Reviewing court will reverse trial judge's denial of a request for new trial only when such denial amounts to an abuse of that judge's discretion. Bobby Kitchens, Inc. v. Mississippi Ins. Guar. Ass'n, 560 So. 2d 129 (Miss. 1989).

Reversal for failure to grant a new trial is proper only when it is manifest that trial judge's denial constitutes an abuse of discretion. Thornhill v. Wilson, 504 So. 2d 1205 (Miss. 1987).

Order granting a new trial is not a final judgment and thus is ordinarily not appealable. Shelton v. Puckett, 483 So. 2d 354 (Miss. 1986).

Discretion vested in trial judge with respect to motion for new trial is quite broad, and reversal is limited to those cases where trial judge has abused his discretion. Shelton v. Puckett, 483 So. 2d 354 (Miss. 1986).

Timeliness.

Where the debtor sued the bank for negligent and fraudulent misrepresentation, breach of fiduciary duty and breach of covenants of good faith and fair dealing, the trial court entered an order on March 3, 2006, denying the bank's motion for summary judgment; the bank's petition for an interlocutory appeal was denied on March 29, 2006. On March 20, 2007, a specially appointed judge entered an order setting the case for trial on March 3, 2008, and the bank, on July 19, 2007, filed a motion asking the trial court to reconsider the order denying summary judgment; the trial court acted within its authority in deeming the motion timely filed pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 59. Holland v. Peoples Bank & Trust Co., 3 So. 3d 94 (Miss. 2008).

Illustrative cases.

Grant custody to the father was improper under Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(a)(2) because the chancellor error by denying the mother's motion to reconsider his Albright analysis. Over two years had passed since this custody hearing and the chancellor was directed to conduct a new Albright analysis to determine the child's best interest and to consider fully the present circumstances of the mother, the father, and the biological father when determining custody and visitation rights. Smullins v. Smullins, — So. 3d —, 2011 Miss. App. LEXIS 56 (Miss. Ct. App. Feb. 1, 2011), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 77 So. 3d 119, 2011 Miss. App. LEXIS 725 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Trial court's denial of a wife's motion under Miss. R. Civ. P. 59 to set aside an order granting summary judgment in favor of a logging company did not result in manifest injustice because the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the wife's request for an order of continuance pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 56(f) on the ground that her request was untimely under Rule 3(b) of the Local Rules for the Fifth Circuit Court District; almost two years passed between the filing of the wife's complaint and the filing of the company's motion for summary judgment, affording both parties ample time in which to conduct discovery in the case, and any information that the wife sought to "discover" was largely available to her immediately after the injury occurred. Moore v. M & M Logging, Inc., 51 So. 3d 216 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 50 So. 3d 1003, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 22 (Miss. 2011).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by refusing to consider a wife's affidavit, which was attached to her motion to set aside an order granting a logging company summary judgment, because the wife failed to submit an affidavit in support of her claims in her response to the company's motion for summary judgment, and the wife admitted that the sworn affidavit attached to her motion to set aside summary judgment contained alleged admissions made to her by her husband on the day of the accident; thus, that information was available and known to the wife when the company's motion for summary judgment was filed, that affidavit was later withdrawn by the wife, and since the wife's substitute affidavit was not sworn testimony, it was not admissible as evidence. Moore v. M & M Logging, Inc., 51 So. 3d 216 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 50 So. 3d 1003, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 22 (Miss. 2011).

Trial court did not err in denying a motion to alter or amend a judgment dismissing a hospital from a medical malpractice suit on the ground that there was a need for a deceased patient's family to correct a clear error of law or to prevent manifest injustice. Lucas v. Baptist Mem.

Hosp. - N. Miss., Inc., 997 So. 2d 226 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Motion for a new trial was properly denied in a medical malpractice suit against a physician and medical clinic because the physician did not meet his duty of care by requesting lab results to rule out a life-threatening infection, and his failure to follow up with the lab proximately caused the patient's persistent vegetative state and eventual death. Estate of Jones v. Phillips, 992 So. 2d 1131 (Miss. 2008).

Where a decedent suffering from Alzheimer's, dementia, and other problems signed a will naming the decedent's recently-married widow as the sole beneficiary, sufficient evidence supported a jury's verdict against the widow and it was not error to deny the widow's post-trial motion because a confidential relationship existed and a presumption of undue influence arose which the widow failed to rebut since the decedent was dependent on the widow and the attorney did not question the decedent as to the decedent's understanding that the decedent was leaving the decedent's daughters nothing. Pope v. White (In re Estate of Pope), 5 So. 3d 427 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 11 So. 3d 1250, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 132 (Miss. 2009).

In a dissolution of marriage case, the court erred in granting a stay of the final judgment of divorce and it lacked authority to reinstate its temporary order because the court lost jurisdiction ten days after the court entered its final judgment of divorce because the wife failed to file a posttrial motion under Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(e). McIntosh v. McIntosh, 977 So. 2d 1257 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In a breach of contract case, a chancellor did not err by refusing to grant a new trial under Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(a)(2) because the decision was supported by the weight of the evidence where a renter testified that he failed to maintain insurance on property, as agreed upon by the parties to a rental contract; the chancellor was entitled to accept the version of events that he found most credible in determining whether or not the renter attempted to make a timely balloon payment under the terms of the contract. Kendrix v. Huckaby, 955 So. 2d 950 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a personal injury case, the court did not err by denying plaintiff's request for a new trial because the jury's award was not so low as to shock the conscience or evince bias on the part of the jury; each theory expounded by plaintiff's expert witnesses was contradicted by the testimony of other expert witnesses, and evidence indicated that after the accident plaintiff did well in school and was able to perform light work. Walker v. Gann, 955 So. 2d 920 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Where an employee was mounting a moving locomotive when a foot slipped due to mud, causing the employee to fall and sustain serious leg injuries, the railroad was liable to the employee for damages under the Federal Employer's Liability Act, 45 U.S.C. § 51; the trial court was correct in denying the railroad's motion for a new trial, and the evidence showed the railroad was warned of the slippery conditions, but did nothing to remedy the potential hazard. Canadian Nat'l/Ill. Cent. R.R. v. Hall, 953 So. 2d 1084 (Miss. 2007).

Neighbors' argument that the chancellor abused his discretion by denying their Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(e) motion was without merit because the appellate court was unable to see how the new language in the covenants was relevant to any of the parties in the action that sought to have fences removed; likewise, even if the other neighbors who instituted the action had voted for the amendment, an equitable estoppel theory was inapplicable to the argument. Journeay v. Berry, 953 So. 2d 1145 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Plaintiff driver was entitled to a new personal injury trial because the verdict was against the overwhelming weight of the credible evidence; the evidence that defendant driver was at fault was overwhelming because plaintiff's expert testified that her excessive speeding was a proximate cause of the accident, and the investigator officer's opinion on the accident report that defendant had committed no traffic violation was entitled to little weight in comparison to the expert's opinion because there was no evidence that the officer's opinion was reliable. Fleming

v. Floyd, 969 So. 2d 881 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), reversed by 969 So. 2d 868, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 651 (Miss. 2007).

In a tort action arising from an incident in a retail store, a family's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or a motion for a new trial were properly denied as there were two versions of events; the evidence was not overwhelming in favor of the family where the store offered evidence that one member was removed due to loud and disruptive behavior and an attempt to conceal merchandise. Anderson v. McRae's, Inc., 931 So. 2d 674 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In a negligence case, an owner's motion for a new trial under Miss. R. Civ. P. 59 should have been granted because the evidence showed the owner did not exercise substantial control over a worksite, despite having control over safety and specifying a daily or hourly rate; moreover, it was undisputed that the injured party's actions were negligent for comparative negligence purposes. Coho Res., Inc. v. Chapman, 913 So. 2d 899 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court erred in awarding $ 975,000 in damages to a limited partner in an action for negligent misrepresentation, fraud, and breach of contract against his former partners; the limited partner failed to prove that his former partners had made a fraudulent statement, intending to induce him to sell his interest in the partnership, and the former partners' promise to bid on his property at a foreclosure sale could not form the basis for negligent misrepresentation, because it involved future conduct. There was no breach of contract, because the foreclosure sale did not occur within the time specified by the contract; the trial court erred by denying the former partners' motion for remittitur. Moran v. Fairley, 908 So. 2d 805 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), substituted opinion at 919 So. 2d 969, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 1044 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Trial court did not err in denying a motion to amend or alter a judgment, filed by a developer and a contractor, as the developer and the contractor had drafted their their settlement agreement to preclude a plumber, who had already prevailed on a partial summary judgment motion entitling him to interpled funds, from recovering any of the interpled funds. Noble House, Inc. v. W & W Plumbing & Heating, Inc., 881 So. 2d 377 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Driver was awarded a new trial solely on the issue of damages where the jury verdict awarding zero dollars to the driver in his personal injury action was against the overwhelming weight of the evidence; it was clear from the evidence presented at trial that the driver suffered some injury from the accident. Knight v. Brooks, 881 So. 2d 294 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 882 So. 2d 772 (Miss. 2004).

In an inmate's appeal from the denial of postconviction relief, the trial court did not err in denying the inmate's motion under Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(e), because, despite an erroneous conclusion that the motion was untimely, the motion was without merit because the inmate did not show the need to correct a clear error of law or to correct a manifest injustice. Sheffield v. State, 881 So. 2d 249 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Nursing home resident who was sexually abused by another resident should have received a new trial after a jury verdict for the nursing home. The evidence was uncontradicted that the assailant was known to be abusive and that the victim was unable to protect herself. Dupree v. Plantation Pointe, L.P., 881 So. 2d 832 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

In a medical malpractice action, the grant of a new trial by the appeals court was affirmed because the jury instruction on the standard of care misstated the law by providing for the doctors to choose between proper alternatives "in the exercise of their best judgment." Those words together amounted to a subjective jury instruction. Bickham v. Grant, 861 So. 2d 299 (Miss. 2003).

Where a medical malpractice defendant's interrogatory response negligently identified an expert as a urologist rather than an expert in infectious diseases, but adequately described the proposed substance of the testimony, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing the testimony, or in denying the patient's surviving relatives' motions for directed verdict, judgment notwithstanding the verdict, and a new trial. Buskirk v. Elliott, 856 So. 2d 255 (Miss. 2003).

The defendant was not entitled to a new trial, even though the testimony given by a witness was discovered after the trial and probably could not have been discovered with due diligence prior to the commencement of the trial, where such testimony was merely cumulative or impeaching of prior testimony presented to the jury during the trial. Williams v. State, 754 So. 2d 591 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Trial court had authority to grant a new trial on all issues, despite passage of more than ten days from entry of judgment, where plaintiff's post-trial motion was pending and undecided at time court expanded it into its own motion for a new trial on all issues. Clark v. Viniard, 548 So. 2d 987 (Miss. 1989).

Divorce defendant was not entitled to have default judgment set aside or amended, where he failed to offer any defense to merits of claim for divorce, and his only excuse for failure to answer timely was that he was without funds to employ a lawyer and did not know that he could appear and answer without one. Mayoza v. Mayoza, 526 So. 2d 547 (Miss. 1988).

Rule 60. Relief from judgment or order.

(a) Clerical mistakes. Clerical mistakes in judgments, orders, or other parts of the record and errors therein arising from oversight or omission may be corrected by the court at any time on its own initiative or on the motion of any party and after such notice, if any, as the court orders up until the time the record is transmitted by the clerk of the trial court to the appellate court and the action remains pending therein. Thereafter, such mistakes may be so corrected only with leave of the appellate court.

(b) Mistakes; inadvertence; newly discovered evidence; fraud, etc. On motion and upon such terms as are just, the court may relieve a party or his legal representative from a final judgment, order, or proceeding for the following reasons:

(1) fraud, misrepresentation, or other misconduct of an adverse party;

(2) accident or mistake;

(3) newly discovered evidence which by due diligence could not have been discovered in time to move for a new trial under Rule 59(b);

(4) the judgment is void;

(5) the judgment has been satisfied, released, or discharged, or a prior judgment upon which it is based has been reversed or otherwise vacated, or it is no longer equitable that the judgment should have prospective application;

(6) any other reason justifying relief from the judgment.

The motion shall be made within a reasonable time, and for reasons (1), (2) and (3) not more than six months after the judgment, order, or proceeding was entered or taken. A motion under this subdivision does not affect the finality of a judgment or suspend its operation. Leave to make the motion need not be obtained from the appellate court unless the record has been transmitted to the appellate court and the action remains pending therein. This rule does not limit the power of a court to entertain an independent action to relieve a party from a judgment, order, or proceeding, or to set aside a judgment for fraud upon the court. Writs of coram nobis, coram nobis, audita querela, and bills of review and bills in the nature of a bill of review, are abolished. The procedure for obtaining any relief from a judgment shall be by motion as prescribed in these rules or by an independent action and not otherwise.

(c) Reconsideration of transfer order. An order transferring a case to another court will become effective ten (10) days following the date of entry of the order. Any motion for reconsideration of the transfer order must be filed prior to the expiration of the 10-day period, for which no extensions may be granted. If a motion for reconsideration is filed, all proceedings will be stayed until such time as the motion is ruled upon; however, if the transferor court fails to rule on the motion for reconsideration within thirty (30) days of the date of filing, the motion shall be deemed denied. (Amended effective July 1, 2008, to provide for reconsideration of transfer orders entered on or after that date.)

COMMENT

Rule 60 (a) prescribes an efficient method for correcting clerical errors appearing in judgments, orders, or other parts of a trial record; errors of a more substantial nature must be corrected in accordance with MRCP 59(e) or 60(b). Thus, the Rule 60(a) procedure can be utilized only to make the judgment or other document speak the truth; it cannot be used to make it say something other than was originally pronounced. See, e. g., West Va. Oil & Gas Co. v. Breece Lumber Co., 213 F.2d 704 (5th Cir. 1964). This procedure accords with prior Mississippi practice. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-1-19 (1972); Ralph v. Prester, 28 Miss. 744 (1855) (this statute applies solely to the correction of judgments and decrees and cannot be extended so as to supply a judgment never rendered); Rawson v. Blanton, 204 Miss. 851, 35 So.2d 65 (1948) (judgment which is erroneous as to plaintiff's name involves merely a clerical error which may be corrected in the supreme court without reversal); Healy v. Just, 53 Miss. 547 (1876) (there is no time limit within which a correction to a judgment may be made); Wilson v. Town of Handsboro, 99 Miss. 252, 54 So. 845 (1911) (all courts have inherent power to correct clerical errors at any time and to make the judgment entered correspond to that rendered).

Under Rule 60 (a), evidence dehors the record may be considered in making the correction; this also accords with prior Mississippi practice. See Wilson v. Town of Handsboro, supra (In making a determination as to whether the correction should be permitted, any evidence of parol or other kind is competent which throws material light on the truth of the matter. "The object of every litigation is to obtain . . . a final determination of the rights of the parties. That determination is invariably what the judges direct, and not invariably what the clerks record. The power of the court to make the record express the judgment of the court with the utmost accuracy ought not to be restricted."). See also 6A Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 60.01-.08 (1971); 11 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 2851-2856 (1973).

Rule 60(b) specifies certain limited grounds upon which final judgments may be attacked, even after the normal procedures of motion for new trial and appeal are no longer available. The rule simplifies and amalgamates the procedural devices available in prior practice. Prior to MRCP 60(b), Mississippi recognized the following procedural devices for relief from judgments, other than by appeal:

Statute for Correction of Misrecitals, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-1-19 (1972). This statute, referred to in the preceding discussion of MRCP 60(a), supra, applied solely to corrections of judgments and decrees and could not be extended to supply a decree or judgment never rendered. See Ralph v. Prester, supra; Rawson v. Blanton, supra; V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice, § 634 (2d ed. 1950).

Writ of Error Coram Nobis. Generally, this device was for review of errors of fact, not of law, which substantially affected the validity of the judgment but which were not discovered until after rendition of the judgment. See Petition of Broom, 251 Miss. 25, 168 So.2d 44 (1964). It was instituted as an independent action.

Bill of Review for Error Apparent. This device was an original bill, and was filed and docketed as such. It cured a material error of law apparent on the face of the decree and the pleadings and proceedings on which it is based, exclusive of the evidence. However, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-5-121 (1972) placed a two-year limitation upon the period of time after the judgment was entered for filing the bill. See Brown v. Wesson, 114 Miss. 216, 74 So. 831 (1917); V. Griffith, supra § 635.

Bill of Review Based on Newly Discovered Evidence. Leave of court was required for the filing of a bill of review based on newly discovered evidence, but after leave was obtained the bill was considered as part of the action it sought to challenge. See V. Griffith, supra §§ 636, 441. The two-year limitations of Miss. Code Ann. § 11-5-121 (1972) applied.

Bill in the Nature of a Bill of Review. This bill was available as an original action for vacating judgments tainted by fraud, surprise, accident, or mistake as to facts, not to law. See Corinth State Bank v. Nixon, 144 Miss. 674 110 So. 430 (1926); City of Starkville v. Thompson, 243 So.2d 54 (Miss. 1971); V. Griffith, supra § 642. This device did not require leave of court for filing, nor was it limited to two years' availability. Cf. Bill of Review for Error Apparent and Bill of Review Based on Newly Discovered Evidence, supra.

Motions for relief under MRCP 60(b) are filed in the original action, rather than as independent actions themselves. Further, motions seeking relief from judgments tainted by fraud, misrepresentation, or other misconduct of an adverse party, MRCP 60(b)(1), accident or mistake, 60(b)(2), or newly discovered evidence, 60(b)(3), must be made within six months after the judgment or order was entered. Aside from these two features, Rule 60(b) does not depart significantly from traditional Mississippi practice with respect to relief from judgments, but it dispenses with the arcane writs and technical requirements of prior practice. Importantly, a Rule 60(b) motion does not operate as a stay or supersedeas; further, in the courts governed by these rules, Rule 60 supersedes the devices discussed above for relief from judgments and orders.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Construction.
Applicability.
Accident or mistake.
Affidavits.
Clerical mistake.
Colorable defense.
Coram nobis.
Correction of judgment.
Equitable considerations.
Fraud.
Good cause.
Illness of counsel.
Incapacity.
Limitations.
Newly discovered evidence.
Other reasons.
Procedure.
Review.
Satisfaction, release, or discharge of judgment.
Timeliness of motion.
Void judgments.
Waiver.
Illustrative cases.

In general.

County court may not prevent the farmer from proceeding with collection of a judgment he obtained in the circuit court — a judgment which was affirmed by the supreme court on appeal, and was not attacked in the circuit court that rendered the judgment; the record did not say anything of a Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) motion, and neither party raised it on appeal, such that the supreme court proceeded to address the issues raised. Deere & Co. v. First Nat'l Bank of Clarksdale, 12 So. 3d 516 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by denying the beneficiaries' Miss. R. Civ. P. 60 motion for relief from the judgment of dismissal where the trial court noted a lack of diligence by the beneficiaries in moving the case forward. Hasty v. Yoshinobu Namihira, 986 So. 2d 1036

(Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 987 So. 2d 451, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 370 (Miss. 2008).

Trial court did not err in granting the restaurant's Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) motion and dismissing the couple's personal injury suit where the trial court correctly applied a prior case and application of the prior case did not implicate the contracts clause of Miss. Const. Art. 3, § 16; with regard to the trial court's decision to include the restaurant delivery driver in the dismissal, the dismissal was proper as a matter of law although not properly done. Whitaker v. T & M Foods, Ltd., 7 So. 3d 946 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), reversed by, remanded by 2008 Miss. LEXIS 486 (Miss. Oct. 2, 2008), reversed by, remanded by 7 So. 3d 893, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 166 (Miss. 2009)supra.

Trial court denied wife's motion for relief from a divorce judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) based upon its erroneous application of law because a showing that an agreement was overreaching did not require a showing of fraud, and the settlement agreement that the wife signed without an attorney was clearly one-sided and unfair with the wife giving up custody of the children and all her marital property. Further, the court could not say that the agreement was in the best interests of the children because it gave the children no specific visitation period with their mother, formerly the primary caregiver of the children, and thus it did not meet the requirements of Miss.Code Ann. § 93-5-2. Lowrey v. Lowrey, 919 So. 2d 1112 (Miss. Ct. App. — 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 921 So. 2d 1279, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 33 (Miss. 2006), remanded by 25 So. 3d 274, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 549 (Miss. 2009).

In a postconviction action, the trial court did not err in refusing to treat defendant's motion as a Miss. R. Civ. P. 60 motion where he was merely attempting to relitigate the case. Trotter v. State, 907 So. 2d 397 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 910 So. 2d 574, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 456 (Miss. 2005).

Wife's Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(1) motion for relief from the judgment on the grounds that it was the product of fraud and misrepresentation was properly denied where the Jackson County, Mississippi, chancery court continued to have jurisdiction in what originally was the separate maintenance case, but which converted to one for alimony and other claims compatible with divorce actions, after the date of the foreign divorce; the consent of the parties gave the chancellor the authority and jurisdiction to adjudicate issues relating to division of the marital property, without requiring the parties to amend their pleadings. Chapel v. Chapel, 876 So. 2d 290 (Miss. 2004).

City's motion for relief from judgment pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) was properly denied where the issue of credit for the insurer's settlement was moot and, although the chancellor incorrectly found that the city failed to renew its previously filed motion for summary judgment, the chancellor had previously denied this motion after hearing argument on the merits. City of Jackson v. Jackson Oaks L.P., 860 So. 2d 309 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court should have considered the city's Motion for Clarification and Relief from Judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b), which required that motion be filed within a reasonable time following judgment, rather than Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(e), which had a 10-day time limit after entry of judgment since the city's motion was filed 12 days after judgment was rendered and it was reasonable to conclude that the city intended that the motion be considered as having been filed within a reasonable time rather than being time barred. City of Jackson v. Jackson Oaks Ltd. Partnership, 792 So. 2d 983 (Miss. 2001).

Since Miss. R. Civ. P. 60 motion was filed and disposed of within the time allowed for appeal from the underlying judgment and the notice of appeal spoke to the judgment and the order disposing of the motion, one notice of appeal was sufficient to bring to the Mississippi Supreme Court both the judgment and the Rule 60 order. Brame v. Brame, 796 So. 2d 970 (Miss. 2001).

There is a more liberal standard for setting aside a default than for setting aside a default judgment. King v. Sigrest, 641 So. 2d 1158 (Miss. 1994).

Decision to grant or set aside a default judgment is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court; this discretion must be exercised in accordance with rules set forth in M.R.C.P. 55(c) and 60(b). Williams v. Kilgore, 618 So. 2d 51 (Miss. 1992).

Relief from judgment under subdivision (b) of this rule will not be granted unless a three-pronged balancing test is satisfied: court must determine (1) whether movant's basis for requesting relief is legitimate, (2) whether movant has a colorable defense to the merits of the adjudged case, and (3) whether non-movant will be unduly prejudiced if relief is granted. Rich ex rel. Brown v. Nevels, 578 So. 2d 609 (Miss. 1991).

Adoption of Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure alters prior practice and gives trial courts authority, in certain specified circumstances, to correct judgments even though an appeal has been perfected. Ward v. Foster, 517 So. 2d 513 (Miss. 1987).

Construction.

Wife's motion to reconsider did not specify that it was brought pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 59, and it was filed more than 10 days after the entry of the order to quash; therefore, it should have been considered a motion for relief under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60. The chancellor did not abuse his discretion under Rule 60(b)(6). Carlisle v. Allen, 40 So. 3d 1252 (Miss. 2010).

Default is not treated as a general admission or an absolute confession. Similarly, a general denial is not sufficient to set aside a default judgment; a meritorious defense is one that is demonstrated through an affidavit or sworn form of testimony and conclusions and unsubstantiated allegations will not suffice. Leach v. Shelter Ins. Co., 909 So. 2d 1283 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Where a motion calls into question the correctness of all or any part of a judgment, even though corrections sought be fairly characterized as clarifying or technical only, and where the motion is filed within time allowed by M.R.C.P. Rule 59, court will presume the motion has been filed under Rule 59 rather than Rule 60, regardless of how it may be styled. Bruce v. Bruce, 587 So. 2d 898 (Miss. 1991).

Regardless of how it might have been styled, motion seeking relief from dismissal of complaint was a M.R.C.P. Rule 60(b)(6) motion, for it was difficult to see how one could have a Rule 59 motion for a new trial when there had never been a trial. Cunningham v. Mitchell, 549 So. 2d 955 (Miss. 1989).

Applicability.

In a personal injury action by guests, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the guests' motions for relief from judgment and to set aside order because Miss. R. Civ. P. 60 was not a substitute for appeal and the relief sought was nothing more than an escape hatch after failing to timely pursue other available procedural remedies. Doll v. BSL, Inc., 41 So. 3d 664 (Miss. 2010).

When a former husband ceased to make alimony payments to his former wife and also sued her in federal court for wiretapping based on tape recordings she had made of his conversations, the wife was not entitled to double recovery in the form of a federal jury award for her lost alimony payments and a chancery court award of her lost alimony; if the federal appellate court were to uphold the federal jury award, the chancery court would be obliged to provide relief to the husband pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b).

Client's motion for reconsideration would have been denied if it were considered a motion for relief from judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60, as none of the grounds for a Rule 60 motion were present. Curry v. Walls, 871 So. 2d 762 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Evidence proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the father was not the child's biological father and that the previous paternity and child support order was incorrect; there existed a special situation in which relief was justified under Rule 60(b)(6) because a manifest injustice would result if the father was required to continue making child support payments for a child which unquestionably was not his. M.A.S. v. Miss. Dep't of Human Servs., 842 So. 2d 527 (Miss. 2003).

The rule was not applicable to writs of garnishment in aid of collection of judgments, as the writs were governed by garnishment statutes. Bechtel Power Corp. v. MMC Materials, Inc., 830 So. 2d 672 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002), cert. denied, 830 So. 2d 1251 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

A motion under subsection (b) of this rule for a new trial was not the appropriate method for a property owner to seek compensation for damages arising from a contractor's demolition of more property than was condemned. Checkers Drive-In Restaurants, Inc. v. Mississippi Transp. Comm'n, 755 So. 2d 1238 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Although partial in nature, default resulted in a default judgment, which was more than the mere entry of default by the clerk, and therefore trial judge committed no error in addressing defendant's request for relief under M.R.C.P. Rule 60(b) instead of Rule 55(c). Pointer v. Huffman, 509 So. 2d 870 (Miss. 1987).

Defendant was not attempting to alter or amend judgment against her, but was simply trying to have court make judgment conform to what was originally pronounced at conclusion of trial, and therefore M.R.C.P. Rule 60(b) applied rather than Rule 59(e). Fultz v. Doss, 507 So. 2d 891 (Miss. 1987).

Accident or mistake.

Insurers did not show that they were justified in failing to avoid the mistake or inadvertence that led to a default for purposes of Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(2) where they provided no explanation for their failure to make a simple determination of whether or not they had been served with the injured driver's complaint, and they waited four months to file an answer and more than four-and-a-half months to file a motion to set aside the default judgment. Am. States Ins. Co. v. Rogillio, 10 So. 3d 463 (Miss. 2009).

The procedural missteps by defendant-company, which were grounds for finding against them in the first factor in the default analysis set out in Chassaniol v. Bank of Kilmichael, 626 So. 2d 127, 135 (Miss. 1993), were not sufficient by themselves to permit the upholding of the trial court's denial of the motion to set aside the default. American Cable Corp. v. Trilogy Communications, Inc., 754 So. 2d 545 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Affidavits.

To avail himself of assertion that he has a colorable defense to merits of plaintiff's claim, a defaulted defendant must set forth in affidavit form the nature and substance of his defense. H & W Transf. & Cartage Serv., Inc. v. Griffin, 511 So. 2d 895 (Miss. 1987).

Clerical mistake.

Appellant property owner's assertion that the chancellor committed manifest error by incorrectly describing the parties' new boundary line was without citation to legal authority and therefore, the appellate court was under no obligation to consider the assignment of error. However, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(a), the appellate court granted leave to the chancery court to correct, if necessary, any clerical errors that might be found in the boundary-line description contained in the judgment. Conliff v. Hudson, 60 So. 3d 203 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Denial of the husband's motion for modification of the parties' divorce decree where the chancellor's correction of the scrivener's error in the decree did not violate Miss. R. Civ. P. 60; the chancellor found that the language in the memorandum opinion was the correct finding for determination of equitable distribution of marital assets between the parties and that the final divorce decree misstated the intent of the court and contained improper wording. Townsend v. Townsend, 859 So. 2d 370 (Miss. 2003).

Under subsection (a), a court cannot on its own initiative change its mind and decide that it should have granted a motion for judgment notwithstanding verdict, instead of denying it. Edwards v. Roberts, 771 So. 2d 378 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Trial court's ex parte amendment of its previous order, from dismissal of plaintiff's claim without prejudice to dismissal with prejudice, violated due process as it constituted a change in legal substance of original judgment and not merely correction of a clerical error. Whitney Nat'l Bank v. Smith, 613 So. 2d 312 (Miss. 1993).

Notice of motion to dismiss for want of prosecution was not given to plaintiffs or even to their last attorney of record, as required by rule; due to clerk's mistake, lower court should have allowed case to be reinstated. Walker v. Parnell, 566 So. 2d 1213 (Miss. 1990).

Colorable defense.

Car dealership's former business manager's affidavit did not present a meritorious defense to the default judgment since the cancellation worksheet was inadmissible hearsay pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 802; the manager failed to qualify the cancellation worksheet as an exception to the hearsay rule pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 803(6), or authenticate the worksheet pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 902; and because the dealership failed to assert a meritorious defense, its motion to set aside default judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(6) was properly denied. Greater Canton Ford Mercury, Inc. v. Lane, 997 So. 2d 198 (Miss. 2008).

Although the attorney argued that he had a colorable defense to his default judgment, specifically, that it was impossible to determine if the fees he had charged the client were excessive without further evidence, the attorney's contradiction concerning the billing illuminated the fact that the attorney had no defense at all, and he could not defend the billing because by the very terms of the contract with the client it was unreasonable. Goeldner v. Miss. Bar, 891 So. 2d 130 (Miss. 2004).

The defendant failed to present a colorable defense to the plaintiff's claim for payment for goods ordered and delivered to the defendant where the defendant made unsubstantiated allegations that another party might have ordered and received some of the goods in question. American Cable Corp. v. Trilogy Communications., Inc., 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 566 (Miss. Ct. App. Sept. 14, 1999), subst. op., 754 So. 2d 545 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Coram nobis.

A coram nobis motion is of no effect given that such petitions were abolished in Mississippi by the adoption of this rule; further, this civil rule applies even where a petitioner seeks review of a criminal judgment since the writ commenced a new action by the petitioner. Hester v. State, 749 So. 2d 1221 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Correction of judgment.

As a trial court judge, prior to recusal, had the authority under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(a) to clarify his judgment in parties' divorce proceeding, a successor judge who was appointed after trial had the authority under Miss. R. Civ. P. 63(b) to perform the same duties. Jones v. Mayo, 53 So. 3d 832 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Husband argued that it was beyond the discretion of the trial court to clarify that the lump sum alimony awarded to the wife in the divorce decree was for support and not part of the property settlement; however it was within the scope of Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(a) for the judge to clarify what his decision in the divorce decree in fact was. Seymour v. Seymour, 869 So. 2d 1035 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where county court at conclusion of trial pronounced defendant liable for "negligence" but its judgment referred to "willful and malicious" action, and circuit court changed judgment to conform to pleadings by reciting "reckless" action, both courts were in error, requiring reversal and remand for correction of judgment to reflect original pronouncement of trial judge. Fultz v. Doss, 507 So. 2d 891 (Miss. 1987).

Equitable considerations.

In an eminent domain proceeding in which it was clear that the Mississippi Transportation Commission is entitled to a judgment in the amount of its excess deposit, the trial court abused its discretion in denying a trustee's and a bank's Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(e) motion to amend the judgment or, alternatively, for relief from the judgment under Miss. Civ. P. 60(b)(6). Due to the considerable delay between the time the funds were disbursed and the time of trial, which was almost 10 years, it was prejudicial and inequitable for the trial court to hold that the trustee and the bank failed to appear and defend their interests. Harrison v. Miss. Transp. Comm'n, 57 So. 3d 648 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), affirmed by, remanded by 57 So. 3d 622, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 127 (Miss. 2011).

Pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(6), the insurers had not demonstrated an exceptional or compelling reason to set aside a default judgment entered against it where it claimed that its failure to file an answer in response to the injured driver's complaint was a simple mistake or inadvertent clerical error, but that excuse failed to explain its carelessness and lack of diligence that caused it to default. Am. States

Ins. Co. v. Rogillio, 10 So. 3d 463 (Miss. 2009).

When a city proposing the annexation of certain real property had previously agreed with a neighboring city that this property was in the neighboring city's path of growth, the city proposing the annexation was not judicially estopped from annexing the property because the prior agreement was not in the form of a consent decree, and, even if it had been, the city proposing the annexation would, most likely, have been relieved of its prior agreement, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(5), because a prior city administration entered into the agreement, and one city administration could not bind its successor. In re Enlargement & Extension of the Municipal Boundaries v. City of Southaven, 864 So. 2d 912 (Miss. 2003).

Although defendants lacked a sufficient explanation for not avoiding mistake contained in order or seeking its correction sooner, chancellor's granting relief from order was not an abuse of discretion in view of equitable purpose of this rule. Accredited Sur. & Cas. Co. v. Bolles, 535 So. 2d 56 (Miss. 1988).

Fraud.

Mother did not show by clear and convincing evidence that a father committed a fraud upon the court for Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(1) purposes as the father did not testify at the rehearing, and the motivation for his move with the children one month after being awarded custody was unclear; the chancery court did not identify what it relied upon in its award of custody to the father, and it could not be discerned whether the circumstances of the move would have made a difference in the chancellor's decision. Parra v. Parra, 65 So. 3d 872 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

In divorce in which the parties entered a written consent for divorce on the ground of irreconcilable differences, it was signed by both parties and by their respective counsel, and neither party was granted leave of court to withdraw his or her consent to the divorce based on irreconcilable differences, the ex-wife argued unsuccessfully that the judgment of divorce was void because neither party had ever withdrawn the fault-based grounds asserted in their respective complaint and counter-complaint, as required by Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(5). Section 93-5-2(3) operated as a cancellation and withdrawal of the contests or denials referenced in § 93-5-2(5). O'Neal v. O'Neal, 17 So. 3d 572 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying a motion for relief from judgment, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b), because it was untimely; where a church member had knowledge of the alleged fraudulent concealment by her pastor before the trial court's ruling, which was more than six months prior. Mabus v. St. James Episcopal Church, 13 So. 3d 260 (Miss. 2009).

Where a mother was appointed the administratrix of her deceased minor child's estate, she petitioned for a determination of the child's heirs at law, and she stated in her petition that the child's father was unknown to her but was believed to be deceased, that no man ever claimed to be the father of the child, and that she alone supported the child, the chancery court's order vacating its prior judgment on the basis of fraud was supported by the record, which established that the father was listed as the child's biological father when the mother applied for state aid, the father had been adjudicated the child's father and ordered to pay child support, and the father visited the child at the hospital shortly before she died, attended her funeral, and was identified as the child's father in her obituary. In re Estate of Pearson, 25 So. 3d 392 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 24 So. 3d 1038, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 9 (Miss. 2010).

Where a mother was appointed the administratrix of her deceased minor child's estate, she petitioned for a determination of the child's heirs at law, and she stated in her petition that the child's father was unknown to her but was believed to be deceased, that no man ever claimed to be the father of the child, and that she alone supported the child, the court rejected the mother's claim that her failure to disclose the identity of the child's father did not constitute a fraud upon the court because an administratrix's violation of her affirmative duty to inform the chancery court of potential heirs and claimants could, as a matter of law, constitute fraud upon the chancery court. In re Estate of Pearson, 25

So. 3d 392 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 24 So. 3d 1038, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 9 (Miss. 2010).

Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(1) provided no relief to the patron, as the store supervisor was not an adverse party to the litigation, nor sufficiently high in rank so as to equate his actions with the store's actions. Cuffee v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 977 So. 2d 1187 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Chancellor's 2004 decision to vacate a 1999 judgment issuing an immigrant a delayed birth certificate was supported by the savings clause of Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) and 60(b)(6) because the immigrant's conduct was egregious; he committed a fraud upon the court when he and his two other witnesses committed perjury by claiming that he had been born in Mississippi and had used the certificate to attempt to obtain a United States passport in California. Tirouda v. State, 919 So. 2d 211 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In a divorce case, while a potion of a document regarding land owned by a trust of which the ex-wife and her brothers were beneficiaries was redacted, there was insufficient evidence of deceit; thus, the ex-husband's motion to vacate the trial court's judgment, Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(1), was properly denied. Brennan v. Ebel, 880 So. 2d 1058 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 882 So. 2d 234 (Miss. 2004).

An employer was adverse to the creditor of its debtor-employee and refused to garner the debtor's wages, stating the debtor was not an employee. Creditor obtained judgment. On appeal, the employer-appellant did not appear at the hearing and the judgment was set aside since Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(1) requires that the adverse party have committed the fraud, which was not the case with the creditor. Sabal Corp. v. Howell, 853 So. 2d 122 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where disbarred attorney forged the signature of a licensed associate on settlement documents to disguise his ruse, consent decree was set aside since fraud was the controlling factor in effectuating the settlement agreement. Telephone Man, Inc. v. Hinds County, 791 So. 2d 208 (Miss. 2001).

Rule 60(b) does not mandate that a district attorney or a conservator file a chancery court civil motion in lieu of presenting a criminal indictment to a grand jury; the authority for a Rule 60(b) motion in chancery court alleging fraud, misrepresentation or other misconduct does not mean that the higher burden of proving the civil action precludes a district attorney from using the familiar "probable cause" necessary for a conspiracy indictment and is simply a non-exclusive civil remedy available to private persons in addition to the criminal powers of the state. Farris v. State, 764 So. 2d 411 (Miss. 2000).

Trial judge committed manifest error by not ruling on plaintiff's motion to vacate judgment due to defendant's alleged fraud; since plaintiff complied with requirements of subdivision (b) of this rule, perfection of his appeal did not divest trial judge of authority to vacate judgment. Griffin v. Armana, 679 So. 2d 1049 (Miss. 1996).

Although loan papers showed that plaintiff and her husband both signed promissory note, contrary to her assertions that she alone signed note, bank was unable to prove all elements necessary to show fraud or misrepresentation, and therefore there was no error in trial court's denial of bank's motion for new trial. Iuka Guar. Bank v. Beard, 658 So. 2d 1367 (Miss. 1995).

Good cause.

Trial court did not err in denying the car dealership's motion to set aside default judgment, Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(6), as the dealership did not put forth evidence of good cause and the patron put forth sufficient evidence of prejudice that would result if the motion was granted. Greater Canton Ford Mercury, Inc. v. Lane, 997 So. 2d 198 (Miss. 2008).

In a doctor's action against a medical malpractice insurer for the insurer's decision not to renew the doctor's medical malpractice insurance, because it was the insurer's decision not to renew the insurance policy that was the alleged cause of the doctor's injuries, every substantial act, omission, or injury-causing event occurred in the county where the insurer was located and made the decision, and venue under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-11-3 was proper in that county; therefore, the chancery court improperly granted, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(6), the doctor's motion to reconsider the chancery court's original order transferring the case to the proper county, as there were no extraordinary circumstances compelling relief from the original order. Medical Assur. Co. v. Myers, 956 So. 2d 213 (Miss. 2007).

Court properly denied defendant's Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) motion for relief from a default judgment in plaintiff's action to recover damages for timber that was cut from land because defendant failed to show any excuse for cause and plaintiff's case would be prejudiced. Record was devoid of any finding other than the findings of the trial court that the excuse that defendant offered for default lacked good cause. Hood v. Mordecai, 900 So. 2d 370 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 898 So. 2d 679 (Miss. 2005).

The defendant failed to show good cause for default where it asserted that it forwarded the summons and complaint to its attorney and assumed that he was representing it on the matter. American Cable Corp. v. Trilogy Communications., Inc., 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 566 (Miss. Ct. App. Sept. 14, 1999), subst. op., 754 So. 2d 545 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Illness of counsel.

Plaintiffs were not entitled to relief from an order of dismissal entered after their counsel failed to answer discovery, respond to the defendant's notice of deposition, or appear at the hearing on the defendant's motion to dismiss, notwithstanding that their counsel experienced various medical and personal problems during the discovery phase of the case since those difficulties did not rise to the level of "exceptional circumstances" to warrant setting aside the judgment. Palmer v. Grand Casinos of Miss., Inc., 744 So. 2d 745 (Miss. 1999).

Incapacity.

Where attorney continued to practice law in spite of sanctions imposed, and responded to complaint with a notice of appeal on his original disbarment, and stated that he knew there was a bar complaint against him and that it required an answer, he was not entitled to relief from default judgment, on his original disbarment, on grounds of personal incapacity. Carter v. Mississippi Bar, 654 So. 2d 505 (Miss. 1995).

Limitations.

Even if a husband in divorce proceedings acted fraudulently in misrepresenting the value of certain stock, any motion by his ex-wife to set aside their judgment of divorce and property settlement agreement had to be filed within six months; where the ex-wife filed her motion more than four years after the judgment of divorce was entered, the presiding chancellor erred in granting relief and in failing to find the motion untimely. Although chancellors have great equitable powers, it was not within the chancellor's authority to circumvent the mandate of firmly established case law by calling the parties' contract by another name or by trying to mold a claim so that it would fit within the parameters of a different rule. Trim v. Trim, 33 So. 3d 480 (Miss. Ct. App. Apr. 21, 2009), reversed by 33 So. 3d 471, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 223 (Miss. 2010).

Defendant's motion for reconsideration needed to be filed within ten days of September 27, 2006, in order to be timely; however, it was filed on July 2, 2007, nearly ten months after the court's denial of his petition for post-conviction relief; even if it would have been proper to consider defendant's motion under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) instead of Miss. R. Civ. P. 59, the motion also would have been untimely because it was not filed within six months as required by Rule 60(b). Henry v. State, 999 So. 2d 867 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 999 So. 2d 852, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 24 (Miss. 2009).

A motion for relief from final judgment under subsections (b)(2), (3), (5), and (6) was untimely where the motion was not brought until two years and nine months after the final judgment of the trial court. Jenkins v. Jenkins, 757 So. 2d 339 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

A motion under subsection (b) was untimely where it was not brought until more than six years after the appeal was perfected. Trilogy Communications, Inc. v. Thomas Truck Lease, Inc., 733 So. 2d 313 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998).

The motion to vacate order allocating settlement amounts in a wrongful death action was brought by the successor administratrix within a reasonable time, notwithstanding a three year delay from the date of the order, since the time from which the inquiry began was the date that the successor administratrix had legal standing to challenge the order. Briney v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 714 So. 2d 962 (Miss. 1998).

Because husband's motion to re-open divorce case was under M.R.C.P. Rule 60 rather than Rule 59, it did not toll wife's time to file her notice of appeal, and since wife's notice of appeal was not timely, supreme court did not have jurisdiction to address wife's assignment of error. Michael v. Michael, 650 So. 2d 469 (Miss. 1995).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying relief from judgment on grounds of mistake, where motion was filed nine months after six-month period had expired; default judgment was rendered in violation of automatic stay in bankruptcy, however, and was therefore void, and there was no time limit on relief from a void judgment. Overbey v. Murray, 569 So. 2d 303 (Miss. 1990).

Motion for relief from judgment filed seven months and eight days after entry of judgment was "made within a reasonable time" under subdivision (b)(6) of this rule. Burkett v. Burkett, 537 So. 2d 443 (Miss. 1989).

This rule accommodates concerns over finality by setting an outer time limit, while simultaneously inviting a flexible application depending on circumstances of each individual case by use of the "reasonable time" standard; time period for filing notice of appeal serves only as a relevant interval in the timeliness inquiry, and motions for relief from judgment filed after expiration of that time are not per se untimely. Accredited Sur. & Cas. Co. v. Bolles, 535 So. 2d 56 (Miss. 1988).

Newly discovered evidence.

In a child custody modification case, there was no abuse of discretion in denying a motion for a new trial under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(3) based on newly discovered evidence. A father failed to present evidence that he was unable to obtain his child's school records sooner; therefore, he did not exercise due diligence. Sudduth v. Mowdy, 991 So. 2d 1241 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Witness's post-trial admission that he provided false testimony at trial did not constitute newly discovered evidence of sufficient gravity to warrant the granting of a new trial; the evidence was impeaching, which was fatal because in order to obtain a new trial based on newly discovered evidence, the evidence could not be merely cumulative or impeaching. Cuffee v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 977 So. 2d 1187 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Georgia relatives' claim that the chancellor erred in her determination that the decedent was a Mississippi resident at the time of her death failed where each of the reasons cited by the Georgia relatives in their motion was easily discoverable by the exercise of minimum due diligence, and could not qualify as newly discoverable evidence under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b). Ray v. Ray, 963 So. 2d 20 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Termination of the mother's parental rights was improper because the county's Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(3) motion was not supported by newly discovered evidence; none of the evidence was either newly discovered or of the sort that it could not have been discovered in time to have moved for a new trial. In re V.M.S., 938 So. 2d 829 (Miss. 2006).

Finding against the heir in her wrongful death action was proper pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 60 where her argument that data concerning the decedent's medial records qualified as new evidence was inappropriate because the heir was aware of that data prior to trial. Richardson ex rel. Wrongful Death Heirs of Richardson v. DeRouen, 920 So. 2d 1044 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Summary judgment was properly granted to the home sellers on the buyers' claims of fraud, because the buyers' claim of newly discovered evidence failed where they did not meet the exceptional circumstance requirement of Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(6), because they gave no explanation of why they were unable to locate an ex-husband of a former owner, and failed to state the steps they took to locate the prior owner, and, under Rule 60(b)(3), their presentation of new evidence was untimely. Mitchell v. Nelson, 830 So. 2d 635 (Miss. 2002).

Motion brought under subsection (b)(6) was denied where defendant failed to show (1) that his "new" evidence was discovered following the trial, (2) that due diligence was exercised on his behalf, (3) that the evidence was not merely cumulative or impeaching, and (4) that the evidence was such that a new trial would probably produce a new result. Moore v. Jacobs, 752 So. 2d 1013 (Miss. 1999).

Post-judgment relief based on a claim of newly-discovered evidence was properly denied in a divorce proceeding, notwithstanding the husband's claim that, when the case was tried in February 1997, he was unaware that his 1996 income had dropped appreciably, since his financial affairs for 1996 had been concluded for over one month prior to trial and thus, the information was certainly available to him. Russell v. Russell, 733 So. 2d 858 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Affidavit of medical expert filed in conjunction with plaintiff's motion for relief from judgment constituted newly discovered evidence which should have prompted court to set aside summary judgment under subdivision (b)(3) of this rule. January v. Barnes, 621 So. 2d 915 (Miss. 1992).

Divorce defendant was not entitled to relief from judgment on grounds of newly discovered evidence, where his allegations only dealt with evidence not in existence at time of judgment, and therefore subdivision (b)(3) of this rule was not applicable. Gray v. Gray, 562 So. 2d 79 (Miss. 1990).

Other reasons.

In an eminent domain proceeding in which it was clear that the Mississippi Transportation Commission is entitled to a judgment in the amount of its excess deposit, the trial court abused its discretion in denying a trustee's and a bank's Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(e) motion to amend the judgment or, alternatively, for relief from the judgment under Miss. Civ. P. 60(b)(6); to hold them responsible for the judgment almost 10 years after the money was disbursed to the landowner and applied to the landowner's mortgage constituted manifest injustice. Harrison v. Miss. Transp. Comm'n, 57 So. 3d 648 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), affirmed by, remanded by 57 So. 3d 622, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 127 (Miss. 2011).

Trial judge did not abuse his discretion in denying the patron's Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) motion where the store supervisor provided false testimony; however, the supervisor was the only witness who did so, and there was no evidence to suggest that the supervisor deliberately schemed to defraud the court. Cuffee v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 977 So. 2d 1187 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a child support dispute, despite participating in the second chancery court trial, the father filed a motion to set aside the court's contempt order pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 60 because the court lacked jurisdiction; because the court lacked subject matter jurisdiction there was a reason justifying relief from the judgment. Harry v. Harry, 856 So. 2d 748 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Rule 60(b)(6) is a catch-all provision that is the appropriate tool to request relief in a divorce case involving a property settlement agreement if no other grounds are available under Rule 60. Montgomery v. Montgomery, 759 So. 2d 1238 (Miss. 2000).

A wife was not entitled to relief from a divorce settlement where she alleged that she was coerced to settle by her own attorney; if there was any fault in the case, it was that of the wife's attorney, who was selected by the wife and represented her during almost 18 months of litigation, about whom she never expressed any dissatisfaction in open court. The alleged coercion did not rise to the level required by the relevant rule of civil procedure. Montgomery v. Montgomery, 759 So. 2d 1238 (Miss. 2000).

Neglect of a party's attorney does not constitute "any other reasons justifying relief." Buie v. Buie, 772 So. 2d 1079 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Where default judgment was entered before the defendant was technically in default, as he had until 5:00 PM on that day to answer, the default judgment was prematurely entered and was void ab initio. McDaniel v. Burroughs, 739 So. 2d 461 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Where the circuit clerk admitted that he directed the computer programmer to exclude from the jury lists all jurors who had been summoned to jury duty in either circuit or county courts within the preceding two years, whether they actually had served or not, the court reversed under subsection (b)(6) and ordered a new trial clerk's actions because the violated jury selection rules. Page v. Siemens Energy & Automation, Inc., 728 So. 2d 1075 (Miss. 1998).

The "any other reason" language of subsection (b)(6) refers to any other reason than those contained in the five enumerated grounds on which a court may grant a Rule 60(b) motion. Briney v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 714 So. 2d 962 (Miss. 1998).

Chancellor was correct in giving priority to caselaw concerning child support, over the procedural restrictions of subdivision (b)(6) of this rule. Williams v. Rembert, 654 So. 2d 26 (Miss. 1995).

Invalidity of parties' marriage justified chancellor's order relieving husband from judgment of separate maintenance. Weeks v. Weeks, 654 So. 2d 33 (Miss. 1995).

Procedure.

As victims of chemical exposure filed their notice of appeal almost 90 days after the entry of a trial court order, requiring enforcement of a settlement of the victims' personal injury claims against a pecan company, the appellate court lacked jurisdiction to consider the validity of that order pursuant to Miss. R. App. P. 2(a) and 4(a); the filing of a motion for relief from judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) did not alter the 30-day jurisdictional filing requirement. Melton v. Smith's Pecans, 65 So. 3d 853 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011), writ of certiorari denied by 65 So. 3d 310, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 342 (Miss. 2011).

Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) does not require an evidentiary hearing prior to ruling on a motion to set aside a default judgment. Capital One Servs. v. Rawls, 904 So. 2d 1010 (Miss. 2004).

In initial suit by homeowners against a seller, for fraud, where the homebuilder appeared for a deposition pursuant to a subpoena, the homebuilder did not make an appearance when the homebuilder was not yet named as a party. Thus, when the homebuilder was later added as defendant in the homeowners' negligence action, and failed to timely answer, entry of default judgment was proper; further, the homebuilder's alleged inability to contact the homeowners' counsel did not annul the homebuilder's obligation to timely answer under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12. Williams v. Kelly, 872 So. 2d 783 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Absent a motion or independent action having been brought, circuit court was without authority to set aside forfeiture order entered by default, and court erred in vacating order on its own initiative. State ex rel. Mississippi Bureau of Narcotics v. One Chevrolet Nova Auto. & $9,800 Cash, 573 So. 2d 787 (Miss. 1990).

Review.

Court of appeals refused to consider appellants' argument that a chancery court erred in denying their motion under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60 to set aside an order granting appellee summary judgment in appellants' action to set aside a foreclosure because appellants failed to cite to any authority in support of their argument that the chancery court erred by not setting aside a foreclosure due to newly discovered evidence. Davis v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 72 So. 3d 1163 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Although Mississippi appellate courts are generally without jurisdiction to hear direct appeals from temporary orders, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-51-3 (Supp. 1993), the denial of a Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) motion is a final judgment that is reviewable. Clark v. Clark, 43 So. 3d 496 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 49 So. 3d 106, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 467 (Miss. 2010).

As the wife received no award for the actual property-distribution payments owed to her in accordance with the property-settlement agreement, but rather was awarded consequential damages which resulted from the husband's conversion of the property-settlement payments, the record indelibly revealed the husband to be the party at fault. Therefore, the appellate court departed from its previous decision finding that the husband was entitled to Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) relief. J.K. v. R K., 30 So. 3d 290 (Miss. 2009), amended in part by 2009 Miss. LEXIS 590 (Miss. Dec. 3, 2009).

Trial judge did not abuse his discretion in denying the motorist's request to set aside the default judgment. Particularly since the evidence suggested that she did not have good cause for failing to answer as she was well educated and could have understood the complaint and the summons, she did not even go to her own insurer regarding a defense until she was already in default, and she did not present sufficient evidence that belied a colorable defense, or that the other insurer who sued her would not have suffered prejudice, with regard to its subrogation action, had the default judgment been set aside. Leach v. Shelter Ins. Co., 909 So. 2d 1283 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Where a Rule 60 motion is filed and disposed of within the time allowed for appeal from the underlying judgment and the notice of appeal speaks to the judgment and the order disposing of the motion, one notice of appeal is sufficient to bring to the appellate court court both the judgment and the Rule 60 order. Brame v. Brame, 796 So. 2d 970 (Miss. 2001).

To determine if trial court has correctly denied a motion for relief from judgment entered by default under subdivision (b) of this rule, court must consider whether there was a bona fide excuse for failure to answer timely, whether party in default had a colorable defense on the merits, and whether prejudice would result to the non-offending party if the judgment were set aside. State Highway Comm'n v. Hyman, 592 So. 2d 952 (Miss. 1991).

Satisfaction, release, or discharge of judgment.

The fact that the movant had not paid the judgment as ordered rendered its motion under subsection (b) untimely because the judgment was not satisfied, released, or discharged. Trilogy Communications, Inc. v. Thomas Truck Lease, Inc., 733 So. 2d 313 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998).

Timeliness of motion.

Court was within its authority to modify a divorce judgment almost four years later when the wife presented evidence that the husband intentionally submitted a substantially false financial disclosure statement; such intentional filing constituted a fraud, for which there was no limitation of time restricting a remedy under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b). Trim v. Trim, 33 So. 3d 471 (Miss. 2010).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying a motion for relief from judgment, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b), because it was untimely; where a church member had knowledge of the alleged fraudulent concealment by her pastor before the trial court's ruling, which was more than six months prior. Mabus v. St. James Episcopal Church, 13 So. 3d 260 (Miss. 2009).

Where the debtor sued the bank for negligent and fraudulent misrepresentation, breach of fiduciary duty and breach of covenants of good faith and fair dealing, the trial court entered an order on March 3, 2006, denying the bank's motion for summary judgment; the bank's petition for an interlocutory appeal was denied on on March 29, 2006. On March 20, 2007, a specially appointed judge entered an order setting the case for trial on March 3, 2008, and the bank, on July 19, 2007, filed a Miss. R. Civ. P. 60 motion asking the trial court to reconsider the order denying summary judgment; the trial court acted within its authority in deeming the motion timely filed pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 59. Holland v. Peoples Bank & Trust Co., 3 So. 3d 94 (Miss. 2008).

Appellate court did not have to consider whether a father's motion to reopen under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60 after the denial of his first petition for modification of child support and alimony was timely because the issue of modification was properly before the court after a father filed a second petition for modification; all the father was required to show was a material change in circumstances, and there was no time limit on modifications. Austin v. Austin, 981 So. 2d 1000 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 981 So. 2d 298, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 223 (Miss. 2008).

Circuit court did not abuse its discretion in finding that a creditor failed to file its motion for relief within a reasonable time period, as required by Miss. R. Civ. P.

60(b)(4), where it was filed two years and four months after entry of a default judgment in a case involving a failure to rectify an incorrect deed in a timely manner; the judgment was not void because the circuit court had subject matter jurisdiction, and due process was not violated. However, the awards of damages and attorney's fees were void because the evidence did not support such. Indymac Bank, F.S.B. v. Young, 966 So. 2d 1286 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Chancery court properly dismissed a wife's motion for contempt and modification of a property settlement in a divorce proceeding; because there was no evidence of any fraudulent concealment on the part of the husband regarding his 401(k) plan, the statute of limitations ran from the entry of the judgment of divorce, and hence the wife's claim was time-barred under the limitations imposed in Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b). Shaw v. Shaw, 985 So. 2d 346 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 977 So. 2d 1144, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 135 (Miss. 2008).

Chancellor did not manifestly err in granting a wife's motion to dismiss a husband's motion pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) because the husband waited nearly 10 years to move to correct an amended qualified domestic relations order with respect to the husband's retirment benefits; the husband's motion was untimely. Salemi v. Salemi, 972 So. 2d 1 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Motion for relief under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(4) was properly dismissed because an alleged descendant waited more than six years to challenge an adverse ruling in an ejectment action filed against a record title holder; there was no reason for his failure to file an appeal or his decision to wait so long to file the motion, and moreover there was no basis for arguing that the chancery court lacked subject matter jurisdiction over a property case. Netterville v. Weyerhaeuser Co., 963 So. 2d 38 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Motion for post-judgment interest in a negligence action was not governed by the 10-day time period in Miss. R. Civ. P. 59(e) because the right to post-judgment interest was a statutory right governed by Miss. Code Ann. § 75-17-7; therefore, a motion filed 58 days after judgment was timely under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(a). Miss. Dep't of Mental Health v. Hall, 936 So. 2d 917 (Miss. 2006).

Court did not err in refusing to set aside, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b), a default judgment entered against a credit card company in plaintiffs' breach of contract action because the credit card company provided little explanation regarding its failure to appear for trial. Company also provided no explanation of why there was a 21-day delay between the filing of the entry of appearance and the filing of the motion to set aside the default judgment. Capital One Servs. v. Rawls, 904 So. 2d 1010 (Miss. 2004).

When complaint seeking equitable relief was filed by the heirs of the original plaintiff over 60 years after a chancellor's decree determined that the original plaintiff and his partner each owned a one-half interest in the land, and the heirs alleged that the original decree was a mistake or accident under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(2), the heirs' complaint was time-barred. R. N. Turnbow Oil Invs. v. McIntosh, 873 So. 2d 960 (Miss. 2004).

Where a trial court voided an agreed judgment regarding a child support arrearage on a father's motion filed under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(4) the mother failed to show that the father's seven-month delay in filing his motion was unreasonable; hence, the granting of the motion was not error based on such delay in filing. Ladner v. Logan, 857 So. 2d 764 (Miss. 2003).

The trial court erred when it granted the plaintiff's second motion to reconsider her Rule 60(b) motion where such second motion was filed eight months after the expiration of the time to appeal from the denial of her first motion to reconsider; the plaintiff's proper avenue of relief was by way of appeal, rather than by way of a second motion for reconsideration. Pruett v. Malone, 767 So. 2d 983 (Miss. 2000).

It was an abuse of discretion for the chancellor to deny a motion to set aside a judgment of dismissal in a paternity proceeding as untimely, which dismissal was based on a failure to prosecute, notwithstanding that the motion was not made until 21 months after the judgment was rendered, in light of the paramount concern of protecting the best interests of the child. Mississippi Dep't of Human Servs. v. Helton, 741 So. 2d 240 (Miss. 1999).

Void judgments.

When a lender failed to comply with Miss. R. Civ. P. 4(c) by attesting that it had performed a diligent inquiry before performing service by publication on a borrower, a default judgment entered against the borrower was void; thus, the chancery court erred in refusing to set the void judgment aside under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(4). Turner v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust Co., 65 So. 3d 336 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Chancellor lacked jurisdiction over the divorce action because the husband was improperly served with a Miss. R. Civ. P. 81 summons, rather than the required Miss. R. Civ. P. 4 summons. For that reason, the chancellor's judgment of divorce was void, as were all determinations therein, including the chancellor's awards of alimony, child custody, and child support; therefore, the chancellor erred in refusing to set aside the judgment pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b). Clark v. Clark, 43 So. 3d 496 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 49 So. 3d 106, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 467 (Miss. 2010).

Student's motion to vacate the award of summary judgment to the school district under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(4) was properly denied as it was an attempt to circumvent an appeal for which she could not or would not pay; the student's assignments of error were far from extraordinary and were more appropriately dealt with on appeal. Harvey v. Stone County Sch. Dist., 982 So. 2d 463 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

While the trial court relied on the catch all provision in Miss. R. Civ. P. 60 (b)(6), it was clear that Rule 60(b)(4) would allow a void judgment to be set aside where the subsequent judgment in the trial court was void because the chancery court had priority jurisdiction and the owner's filing of his motion to set aside the judgment just over six months after it was entered was filed within a reasonable amount of time. Soriano v. Gillespie, 857 So. 2d 64 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Divorce decree that incorporated an agreement that a parent would pay no child support was not void as against public policy because the decree remained subject to modification upon a showing of a material change in circumstances. Miss. Dep't of Human Servs. v. Shelby, — So. 2d —, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 209 (Miss. Aug. 23, 2001), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 802 So. 2d 89, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 326 (Miss. 2001).

Judgment rendered by chancellor was void, where it admitted will codicil to probate without joinder of all interested parties; joinder of all interested parties is jurisdictional, and therefore judgment was required to be set aside. Garrett v. Bohannon, 621 So. 2d 935 (Miss. 1993).

Waiver.

Custody award of the mother's and father's child to the father was appropriate, in part because the mother waived her jurisdictional arguments when she failed to timely seek resolution of the issue and when she participated in the hearing without first seeking an adjudication of her jurisdictional issue. Price v. McBeath, 989 So. 2d 444 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Illustrative cases.

In action to void a tax sale, a property owner failed to comply with a settlement agreement the owner entered into with a purchaser; thus, a circuit court did not err in finding that the purchaser owned the property and in refusing to broaden or amend its ruling in considering the owner's Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) motion after the owner filed his notice of appeal. Howard v. Gunnell, 63 So. 3d 589 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Chancellor did not abuse discretion in granting guardians' motion under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(6) as to the settlement of a minor's medical negligence claims against a registered nurse, as the petition for settlement was incomplete and there was no witness testimony on the minor's injury or damages. Carpenter v. Berry, 58 So. 3d 1158 (Miss. 2011).

Under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(a), a trial court judge properly clarified a prior divorce judgment between the parties to reflect that a husband could satisfy the wife's equitable distribution award with a portion of his retirement using a qualified domestic relations order rather than paying cash; the intent of the equitable distribution award was for the parties to receive an equal share of the marital assets, such that the failure to include a qualified domestic relations order in the divorce judgment was merely an oversight. Jones v. Mayo, 53 So. 3d 832 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Victims of chemical exposure failed to rebut the presumption that their attorney had the apparent authority to settle their personal injury claims, such that a trial court's denial of their motion under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) for relief from an enforcement order of the settlement was not an abuse of discretion. Melton v. Smith's Pecans, 65 So. 3d 853 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011), writ of certiorari denied by 65 So. 3d 310, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 342 (Miss. 2011).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by refusing to consider a wife's affidavit, which was attached to her motion to set aside an order granting a logging company summary judgment, because the wife failed to submit an affidavit in support of her claims in her response to the company's motion for summary judgment, and the wife admitted that the sworn affidavit attached to her motion to set aside summary judgment contained alleged admissions made to her by her husband on the day of the accident; thus, that information was available and known to the wife when the company's motion for summary judgment was filed, that affidavit was later withdrawn by the wife, and since the wife's substitute affidavit was not sworn testimony, it was not admissible as evidence. Moore v. M & M Logging, Inc., 51 So. 3d 216 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 50 So. 3d 1003, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 22 (Miss. 2011).

In an employment termination case alleging tort claims and claims under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 in which a former teacher's aide argued on appeal that Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-49 should be tolled because in the first case, his appeal from the school board's decision to terminate his employment, the circuit court failed to rule on certain Miss. R. Civ. P. 60 motions, that could not toll the statutes of limitations for his claims. Davis v. Biloxi Pub. Sch. Dist., 43 So. 3d 1135 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari dismissed by 49 So. 3d 106, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 487 (Miss. 2010).

Circuit court did not err in denying contractors' motion to set aside a default judgment against them under Rule 60(b)(6), where they failed to present any evidence of good cause or excusable neglect for the failure to take action to protect their rights, and they failed to present a colorable defense; the facts did not support the contractors' argument that they were unaware of homeowners' suit against them, where one of the contractors received and signed for the summonses. Woodkrest Custom Homes Inc. v. Cooper, 24 So. 3d 340 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Where the chancellor offered adequate justification for his finding that the children's best interests would be served by granting the father sole physical custody with the mother having liberal rights of visitation, the court denied the mother's motion for relief from judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60. Although other judges may have ruled differently, the court could not conclude that the chancellor abused his discretion in so ruling. Porter v. Porter, 23 So. 3d 438 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court did not err by denying a debtor's request for relief under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(6) in a case attempting to set aside a foreclosure; even though a hurricane in the area made it hard to comply with court orders, the debtor had 9 months prior to the storm to take action, and final judgment was entered 10 months after the storm. Despite the fact that the chancery court cited to time as a reason for the denial of the motion, the main reason for the denial of relief was the failure to state a ground for Rule 60 relief. Welch v. Bank One Nat'l Ass'n, 6 So. 3d 435 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Where the debtor sued the bank for negligent and fraudulent misrepresentation, breach of fiduciary duty and breach of covenants of good faith and fair dealing, the trial court did not err in granting the bank's Miss. R. Civ. P. 60 motion for reconsideration of the order denying summary judgment. The order denying the bank's motion for summary judgment was not a final judgment, and the trial court acted within its authority in considering the bank's motion for reconsideration. Holland v. Peoples Bank & Trust Co., 3 So. 3d 94 (Miss. 2008).

In a case where custody was modified to award a father sole physical custody based on a mother's anticipated move to another state, the mother's request for relief under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) when the move did not occur was properly denied; a failure to conduct an analysis under Albright v. Albright, 437 So. 2d 1003, 1005 (Miss. 1983), to re-evaluate the factors after the filing of the Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) was a harmless error. However, a remand was necessary to determine the mother's visitation rights, which had been changed to reflect the move. Porter v. Porter, 23 So. 3d 470 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 12 So. 3d 531, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 302 (Miss. 2009), affirmed in part and reversed in part by, remanded in part by 23 So. 3d 438, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 593 (Miss. 2009).

County court was not in error for not granting a debtor relief from judgment — that is, not modifying a payment schedule after the court altered the language of a settlement agreement — because although it was within the county court's discretion to stay the execution of the judgment, the debtor did not ask for this relief, and the payment schedule in the original order was agreed upon and valid. Franklin v. BSL, Inc., 987 So. 2d 1050 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Chancellor did not abuse his discretion when he set aside and declared void a doctor's settlement agreement with a mother due to a recent Mississippi Supreme Court opinion that arguably made the agreement unworkable as a matter of law because the case fell under an exceptional and compelling circumstance, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(6), because (1) the evidence was sufficient to establish that the parties entered into the settlement agreement under the mistaken assumption that the doctor could have been released, and the vicarious liability claims against a clinic would have remained viable; (2) when the settlement agreement took on ramifications the parties did not originally envision because of the improper circle of indemnity it created, the chancellor set it aside; (3) a court would not reverse the chancellor for failure to cite to Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) when that rule supported his actions; and (4) while the doctor executed the settlement agreement expecting to be finally released from the litigation, equity and fairness necessarily weighed toward the disabled child. Bush v. Lane (In re Lane), 994 So. 2d 775 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), remanded by 994 So. 2d 757, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 585 (Miss. 2008).

Where a mother appealed from orders signed in a custody case that might have resulted from a settlement, a dismissal was appropriate because the notice of appeal should have been construed as a motion for relief under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60; the mother was given some leeway as she was proceeding pro se. It could not be determined whether a first order signed by a chancellor was the result of a settlement where no transcript of events was available, the father's statement of the case contended there was such an agreement, and the mother's attorney signed "approved as to form only." Klein v. McIntyre, 966 So. 2d 1252 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Miss. R. Civ. P. 60 did not preclude a chancellor from ordering the retroactive modification of alimony since a chancellor had authority to modify based on a father's second petition for such; moreover, the chancellor had the authority to order the modification retroactive to a date within the filing of the petition and the entry of the order. Austin v. Austin, 981 So. 2d 1000 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 981 So. 2d 298, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 223 (Miss. 2008).

Where the trial court denied appellant's first motion for post-conviction relief from judgments convicting him on pleas of guilty to manslaughter and armed robbery, appellant was not entitled to relief under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) based on a claim that he did not authorize counsel to file the motion; appellant showed no exceptional circumstances. Runnels v. State, 957 So. 2d 424 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Motion for relief under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(1) in a case involving the modification of child custody was denied because misrepresentations regarding the certifications of the father's wife were not intended to influence the decision, and a chancery court did not rely on them; moreover, there was no misrepresentation regarding a move to Alaska. Williamson v. Williamson, 964 So. 2d 524 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 964 So. 2d 508, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 513 (Miss. 2007).

Three-part balancing test of King v. King, 556 So.2d 716, as outlined in Rich by Brown v. Nevels, 578 So.2d 609, weighed in favor of the denial of a car purchaser's Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(6) motion for relief from judgment; inter alia, his inability to attend the hearing because he was incarcerated was not an "extraordinary circumstance" and the trial judge decided to rule solely on the pleadings and exclude matters introduced at the hearing, his complaint was frivolous, dismissal pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) and sanctions under Miss. R. Civ. P. 11 were proper, and the car dealership would have been unduly prejudiced had the Rule 60(b)(6) been granted. Guinn v. Wilkerson, 963 So. 2d 555 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 962 So. 2d 38, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 490 (Miss. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 553 U.S. 1022, 128 S. Ct. 2088, 170 L. Ed. 2d 823, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 3738, 76 U.S.L.W. 3582 (2008).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in determining that plaintiffs' letter in response to the clerk's motion to dismiss, which requested that their personal injury action against the business not be dismissed, constituted an action of record such as would preclude a dismissal under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(d); additionally, considering the clerk's failure to record or file plaintiffs' letter, correctly identify the order to dismiss, or provide notice to plaintiffs that the order to dismiss was entered, the circumstances warranted relief under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(6). Cucos, Inc. v. McDaniel, 938 So. 2d 238 (Miss. 2006).

Where defendant, whose motion for postconviction relief had been denied, failed to show that any circumstances existed which necessitated the granting of his Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) motion, the circuit court did not abuse its discretion when it denied the Rule 60(b) motion. Cook v. State, 921 So. 2d 1282 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Chancellor did not err by granting the father's motion to modify a child custody agreement, based on a change of circumstances since the mother interfered with the father's visitation rights and caused the child emotional distress. The mother was not entitled to relief from the judgment granting custody to the father. Thornhill v. Van Dan, 918 So. 2d 725 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Where decedent was killed by a tractor trailer while attempting to cross a two-lane highway, the jury found the driver of the tractor trailer and his company 30% at fault and awarded plaintiff $ 81,000. Plaintiff's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict on damages only or, in the alternative, for a new trial on damages, was properly denied; the jury was not confused in determining damages and liability. Wells v. Tru-Mark Grain, Inc., 895 So. 2d 181 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court did not err in denying a motion to amend or alter a judgment filed by a developer and a contractor as the developer and contractor had drafted their settlement agreement to preclude a plumber, who had already prevailed on a partial summary judgment motion entitling him to interpled funds, from recovering any of the interpled funds. Noble House, Inc. v. W & W Plumbing & Heating, Inc., 881 So. 2d 377 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Neither the wife nor the record explained how, and under what circumstances, the trial date in the divorce action was set. The docket index did not reflect an order setting the trial on the merits, and the wife did not contest that the husband did not receive notice of the date set for a trial on the merits. Therefore, the refusal of the chancellor to grant the husband's motion to set aside the judgment pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(6) was an abuse of discretion. Brown v. Brown, 872 So. 2d 787 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Husband alleged that the entered judgment differed from the opinion rendered from the bench, however, since the bench opinion was not a final judgment, the husband had no basis for appealing from it. Moreover, the record was supplemented with a later judgment involving the same action, and did not supercede the earlier judgment at issue, thus, any concerns on the subject were alleviated. Cook v. Whiddon, 866 So. 2d 494 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In an inmate's appeal from the denial of postconviction relief, the trial court did not err in denying the inmate's motion under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b), where the inmate claimed he was wrongfully indicted for burglary of a dwelling, because the inmate had not been wrongfully indicted for burglary and no miscarriage of justice had occurred. Sheffield v. State, 881 So. 2d 249 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where defendants alleged that newly discovered evidence that unnamed third parties were joint tortfeasors entitled them to relief under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(6), the trial court properly weighed the equities and determined that the plaintiff would be more prejudiced by further litigation than defendants by denial of a new trial; defendants failed to show "extraordinary circumstances" justifying relief. Harrison v. McMillan, 828 So. 2d 756 (Miss. 2002).

The defendant failed to demonstrate an exceptional circumstance entitling him to relief under subsection (b) from the trial court's denial of post-conviction relief, based on the failure of the trial court to grant an evidentiary hearing on his petition, where he merely relied on the same arguments in his initial petition to support his motion. Taylor v. State, — So. 2d —, 2000 Miss. App. LEXIS 192 (Miss. Ct. App. Apr. 25, 2000), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 782 So. 2d 166, 2000 Miss. App. LEXIS 592 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Chancellor erred in utilizing subdivision (b)(6) of this rule to modify alimony payments, upon determining that payments constituted non-modifiable lump sum alimony, since a judge may not utilize rules of procedure to do that which substantive law of State forbids him to do. McDonald v. McDonald, 683 So. 2d 929 (Miss. 1996).

Defendant was entitled to have default judgment set aside for failure of notice and hearing; it was clear that defendant had made an appearance, and thus defendant was entitled to notice and a hearing on plaintiff's application for default. King v. Sigrest, 641 So. 2d 1158 (Miss. 1994).

Where plaintiff failed to timely assert alleged error in trial court pertaining to her stipulation, and abstained from appealing the alleged error, trial court was without power to delete stipulation and thereby change final judgment after supreme court's mandate of affirmance. Collins v. Acree, 614 So. 2d 391 (Miss. 1993).

Trial court was correct in denying plaintiff relief from default judgment, where her claim of mental illness was rejected by court based on credible expert testimony, and she had no colorable defense to merits of counterclaim against her. Sartain v. White, 588 So. 2d 204 (Miss. 1991).

Plaintiff whose knee injury unforeseeably worsened after settlement of his case, ultimately requiring amputation above knee, was not entitled to relief from judgment on theories of "mutual mistake" or "inadequate consideration". Lose v. Illinois Cent. G.R.R., 584 So. 2d 1284 (Miss. 1991).

Trial judge correctly refused to set aside default judgment in negligence action against boarding house owner alleged to have been incompetent and therefore unable to understand process served upon her because the evidence didn't demonstrate she suffered from an incapacity. Rich ex rel. Brown v. Nevels, 578 So. 2d 609 (Miss. 1991).

That the appellee could have pled entrapment as a defense to a forfeiture action but did not, does not amount to extraordinary circumstances which justified the lower court granting relief from a default judgment. State ex rel. Mississippi Bureau of Narcotics v. One Chevrolet Nova Auto. & $9,800 Cash, 573 So. 2d 787 (Miss. 1990).

Trial court erred in refusing to set aside judgment for plaintiff and fix a new trial date, where defendant resided out-of-state and required notice to travel to Mississippi, he requested a continuance and informed plaintiff he could not be in Mississippi on day of trial, his answer asserted a colorable defense to merits of claim, and plaintiff would have suffered no appreciable prejudice had court recognized its error in setting the trial. King v. King, 556 So. 2d 716 (Miss. 1990).

Because county supervisors waited over two years before bringing motion to vacate consent decree, they were estopped from asserting that decree should be vacated for lack of specificity; moreover, because there was no showing of fraud, collusion, accident or mistake, the consent decree was presumptively valid and the trial judge erred in vacating it. Hinds County Bd. of Supervisors v. Common Cause, 551 So. 2d 107 (Miss. 1989).

Chancery court did not abuse its discretion in setting aside its prior default judgment in divorce action, and reforming judgment to take into account husband's contributions during previous nine years, because the couple continued to cohabit after the divorce and the husband supported the children thereafter. Burkett v. Burkett, 537 So. 2d 443 (Miss. 1989).

Divorce defendant was not entitled to have default judgment set aside or amended, where he failed to offer any defense to merits of claim for divorce, and his only excuse for failure to answer timely was that he was without funds to employ a lawyer and did not know that he could appear and answer without one. Mayoza v. Mayoza, 526 So. 2d 547 (Miss. 1988).

Medical malpractice action was properly dismissed due to plaintiff's procrastination, disobedience to lower court's orders, willful failure to comply with most areas of discovery, and obvious contempt for court's processes. Williams v. Puryear, 515 So. 2d 1231 (Miss. 1987).

Circuit court did not exceed its authority in refusing to set aside default judgment; although defendant made a substantial showing of a colorable defense on merits, he had filed no answer and made no appearance at or before trial, despite being fully advised of his peril, and it would be inequitable to plaintiff to deny her judgment any future force or effect. Guaranty Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Pittman, 501 So. 2d 377 (Miss. 1987).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. Vacating or opening judgment by confession on ground of fraud, illegality, or mistake. 91 A.L.R.5th 485.

Rule 61. Harmless error.

No error in either the admission or the exclusion of evidence and no error in any ruling or order or in anything done or omitted by the court or by any of the parties is ground for granting a new trial or for setting aside a verdict or for vacating, modifying, or otherwise disturbing a judgment or order, unless refusal to take such action appears to the court inconsistent with substantial justice. The court at every stage of the proceeding must disregard any error or defect in the proceeding which does not affect the substantial rights of the parties.

COMMENT

MRCP 61 is identical to Federal Rule 61 and accords with prior Mississippi practice. See, e. g., Nelms & Blum Co. v. Fink, 159 Miss. 372, 131 So. 817 (1930) (supreme court will not reverse on basis of argument of counsel unless it is palpably evident that there has been prejudice injected or misstatement of material facts); Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v. Williams, 87 Miss. 344, 39 So. 489 (1905) (errors in instructions will not be cause for reversal where interests of complaining party have not been prejudiced thereby); Freeze v. Taylor, 257 So.2d 509 (Miss. 1972) (granting of abstract instruction is not ordinarily reversible error unless it tends to confuse and mislead the jury). See also Rules of Supreme Court of Mississippi, Rule 11 (No Reversal for Harmless Error. No judgment shall be reversed on the ground of misdirection to the jury, or the improper admission or exclusion of evidence, or for error as to the matter of pleading or procedure, unless it shall affirmatively appear, from the whole record, that such judgment has resulted in a miscarriage of justice.)

For discussions of Federal Rule 61, see 11 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 2881-2888 (1973); 7 Moore's Federal Practice Civil ¶¶ 61.01-.12 (1974).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Admission of death certificate.
Hearing.
— Harmless error.

Admission of death certificate.

Defendant's capital murder conviction was appropriate because his right to confrontation was not violated by the admission of the victim's death certificate into evidence. The death certificate was admissible as a public record under Miss. R. Evid. 902(4) and, while the trial court erred in allowing the death certificate into evidence showing the purported time of injury under Miss. R. Evid. 803(9), the error was harmless because witnesses testified that they could not be positive of the time of injury or the time of death. Birkhead v. State, — So. 3d —, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 73 (Miss. Feb. 19, 2009), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 57 So. 3d 1223, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 99 (Miss. 2011).

Hearing.

Because a decision to refuse a worker a hearing was a "final action," a school board should have recorded that decision in the minutes; however, the decision was harmless since no prejudice was shown as a result. The worker failed to show how her appellate rights were hampered in a case where her employment contract was not renewed. Hodgins v. Phila. Pub. Sch. Dist., 966 So. 2d 1279 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Trial court erred when it granted the movie theater's motion for summary judgment without oral hearing, but under the circumstances, the error was harmless as the customer, who alleged the theater was vicariously liable for the acts of its employee, failed to present any evidence to rebut the theater's motion. Adams v. Cinemark USA, Inc., 831 So. 2d 1156 (Miss. 2002).

— Harmless error.

Mother was not afforded a fair trial, U.S. Const. Amend. XIV, Miss. Const. Art. 3, §§ 14, 24, where the chancellor was so combative, antagonistic, discourteous, and adversarial that no reasonable person, knowing all the facts, could conclude that the mother was afforded a fair trial; the chancellor's intemperance with the mother would leave any reasonable person with doubts about his impartiality. Schmidt v. Bermudez, 5 So. 3d 1064 (Miss. 2009).

Change of primary physical custody of the child from the father to the mother was proper because, even though the chancellor's remarks were clearly inappropriate, the error arising therefrom was harmless. The record revealed ample evidence that supported the chancellor's finding on every issue except that of visitation, which the appellate court remanded for further proceedings; thus, the appellate court was unable to find that the chancellor's improper conduct affected a substantial right of the parties. Schmidt v. Bermudez, 5 So. 3d 1100 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), reversed by, remanded by 5 So. 3d 1064, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 104 (Miss. 2009).

Rule 62. Stay of proceedings to enforce a judgment.

(a) Automatic stay; exceptions. Except as stated herein or as otherwise provided by statute or by order of the court for good cause shown, no execution shall be issued upon a judgment nor shall proceedings be taken for its enforcement until the expiration of ten days after the later of its entry or the disposition of a motion for a new trial. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, an interlocutory or final judgment in an action for an injunction or in a receivership action shall not be stayed during the period after its entry and until an appeal is taken or during the pendency of an appeal. The provisions of subdivision (c) of this rule govern the suspending, modifying, restoring, or granting of an injunction during the pendency of an appeal.

(b) Stay on motion. In its discretion and on such conditions for the security of the adverse party as are proper, the court may stay the execution of or any proceedings to enforce a judgment pending the disposition of a motion to alter or amend a judgment made pursuant to Rule 59, or of a motion for relief from a judgment or order made pursuant to Rule 60(b), or of a motion to set aside a verdict made pursuant to Rule 50(b), or of a motion for amendment to the findings or for additional finding made pursuant to Rule 52(b).

(c) Injunction pending appeal. When an interlocutory or final judgment has been rendered granting, dissolving, or denying an injunction, the court in its discretion may suspend, modify, restore, or grant an injunction during the pendency of an appeal from such judgment upon such terms as to bond or otherwise as it considers proper for the security of the rights of the adverse party. The power of the court to make such an order is not terminated by the taking of the appeal.

(d) Stay upon appeal. When an appeal is taken, the appellant, when and as authorized by statute or otherwise, may obtain a stay subject to the exceptions contained in subdivision (a) of this rule.

(e) [omitted].

(f) Stay in favor of the state of Mississippi or agency thereof. When an appeal is taken by the State of Mississippi or an officer or agency thereof or by direction of any department of the government of same and the operation or enforcement of the judgment is stayed, no bond, obligation, or other security shall be required of the appellant.

(g) Power of appellate court not limited. The provisions in this rule do not limit any power of an appellate court or of a judge or justice thereof to stay proceedings during the pendency of an appeal or to suspend, modify, restore, or grant an injunction during the pendency of an appeal or to make any order appropriate to preserve the status quo or the effectiveness of the judgment subsequently to be entered.

(h) Stay of judgment upon multiple claims or as to multiple parties. When a court has ordered a final judgment under the conditions stated in Rule 54(b), the court may stay enforcement of that judgment until the entering of a subsequent judgment or judgments and may prescribe such conditions as are necessary to secure the benefit thereof to the party in whose favor the judgment is entered. (Amended effective July 1, 1997.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective July 1, 1997, Rule 62(a) was amended to clarify that the stay of enforcement of a judgment expires ten days after the later of the entry of the judgment or the disposition of a motion for a new trial, and Rule 62(b) was amended to state that a court may stay the execution of or any proceedings to enforce a judgment pending the disposition of a motion to set aside a verdict made pursuant to Rule 50(b). — So. 2d — (West Miss. Cases).

[Adopted effective July 1, 1997.]

COMMENT

Rule 62(a) provides for automatic stays of judgments, with certain exceptions, until ten days after the later of either the entry of a judgment or the disposition of a motion for a new trial. This stay applies only to judgments as defined in Rule 54(a), and it only prevents enforcement of the judgment; it does not affect the appealability of the judgment nor prevent the time for appeal from running. See Davidson v. Hunsicker, 224 Miss. 203, 79 So.2d 839 (1955) (a judgment is not final until the motion for a new trial is overruled; the time period for perfecting an appeal commences on the day after the motion for a new trial is overruled); but cf. Miss.Code Ann. § 13-3-111 (1972) as amended by 1976 Miss.Laws, ch. 331 (clerks shall issue executions on all judgments and decrees after close of term of court at request and on the cost of the prevailing party).

The automatic stay permits the party against whom judgment has been entered to determine what course of post-judgment action he wishes to follow. If he desires to attack the judgment in the trial court by a motion for a new trial or a similar post-trial motion, he can make his motion, thereby obtaining a stay pending disposition of the motion. If he prefers to appeal, he can file a notice of appeal and seek a stay pending appeal as provided in Rule 62(c) and (d).

The automatic stay becomes ineffective ten days after the later of the entry of judgment or the disposition of a motion for a new trial. Even though further stays are available, they only can be had in accordance with the other subdivisions of Rule 62 and are not automatic but must be ordered by the court. See 11 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 2901-2903 (1972); 7 Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 62.01-.10 (1972).

By expressed provision in Rule 62(a), different treatment is given to two classes of cases. These are: (1) an interlocutory or final judgment in an action for an injunction; and (2) an interlocutory or final judgment in a receivership action. In these two classes of actions the judgment is not stayed during the period after its entry and until an appeal is taken, or during the pendency of an appeal, "unless otherwise ordered by the court." Thus the automatic stay does not apply in these two classes of cases, nor can a stay pending appeal be obtained in these cases merely by filing a supersedeas bond. But the trial court, under Rule 62(c), and the appellate court, under Rule 62(g), have ample power to make whatever order is appropriate in injunction cases, and Rule 62(a) permits the trial court to order a stay in receivership cases in which an accounting has been ordered. As is obvious from the fact that this class of cases is excepted from the automatic stay of Rule 62(a), the court should not grant a stay in such cases as a matter of course but should consider carefully the harm that a stay might cause to the party who has obtained the judgment and balance this against the harm that denial of a stay would cause to the losing party. See, e. g., Powell v. Maryland Trust Co., 125 F.2d 260 (4th Cir.), cert. denied 316 U.S. 671, 62 S.Ct. 1041, 86 L.Ed. 1746 (1942) (stay ordered in receivership action); American St. Gobain Corp. v. Armstrong Glass Co., 300 F.Supp. 419 (D.Tenn.), appeal dismissed 418 F.2d 571 (6th Cir. 1969) (stay refused). See also 11 Wright & Miller, supra § 2902; 7 Moore's Federal Practice, supra ¶ 62.03.

A post-trial motion seeking relief under Rule 60(b) does not stay the judgment. The party in whose favor the judgment runs is free to have execution on it or to bring proceedings to enforce it after the expiration of the automatic stay provided for in Rule 62(a). But if a post-trial motion is made, the court is given discretion in Rule 62(b) to stay execution or enforcement of the judgment pending disposition of the motion.

A stay under Rule 62(b) is discretionary with the court and may be "on such conditions for the security of the adverse party as are proper." A stay may be granted under Rule 62(b) on a motion to alter or amend a judgment under Rule 59(e), a motion for relief from a judgment under Rule 60, a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict under Rule 50, or a motion for amendment to the findings or for additional findings under Rule 52(b).

There is no automatic stay in actions for injunctions and in such an action a judgment, whether interlocutory or final, may be stayed only by order of court. If no stay has been obtained, an injunction remains in effect. If the court has denied an injunction and there has been no stay, defendant is free to take the action sought to be enjoined, and if the event sought to be enjoined transpires before the appeal is heard, the appeal should be dismissed as moot. See 11 Wright & Miller, supra § 2904.

An application under Rule 62(c) or (g) necessarily goes to the discretion of the court. The governing considerations are the same whether the application is to the trial court under subdivision (c) or to an appellate court under subdivision (g). Thus it is generally required that (A) the applicant make a strong showing that he is likely to succeed on the merits of the appeal; (B) the applicant establish that unless a stay is granted he will suffer irreparable injury; (C) no substantial harm will come to other interested parties; (D) a stay would do no harm to the public interest. See Wright & Miller, supra; Belcher v. Birmingham Trust Nat. Bank, 395 F.2d 685 (5th Cir. 1968); Pitcher v. Laird, 415 F.2d 743 (5th Cir. 1969); Fortune v. Molpus, 431 F.2d 799 (5th Cir. 1970); Beverly v. United States, 468 F.2d 732 (5th Cir. 1972).

If the court is satisfied that these considerations or other relevant considerations indicate that an injunction should be stayed pending appeal, a stay will be granted. Otherwise the stay will be denied. See Corpus Christi Ind. School Dist. v. Cisneros, 404 U.S. 1211, 92 S.Ct. 9, 30 L.Ed.2d 15 (1971) (stay granted); Dandridge v. Jefferson Parish School Bd., 404 U.S. 1219, 92 S.Ct. 18, 30 L.Ed.2d 23 (1971) (stay denied).

Subdivision (d) of Rule 62 tracks prior Mississippi practice with respect to stays and supersedeas, subject to the subdivision (a) exceptions discussed above.

Subdivision (e) of the Federal Rules applies to stays in favor of the United States; it is omitted from the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure.

Subdivision (f) exempts the State of Mississippi from giving security to obtain a stay of judgment. This tracks prior practice under Miss.Code Ann. § 11-51-101 (1972).

Rule 62(g) is merely a declaration that whatever power an appellate court may possess to stay proceedings during the pendency of an appeal is not infringed by any provision of Rule 62.

Rule 62(h) provides that if a court has ordered a final judgment under the conditions stated in Rule 54(b), which allows the court to give judgment as to fewer than all of the claims or parties in a case, the court may stay enforcement of that judgment until the entry of a subsequent judgment or judgments and may prescribe such conditions as are necessary to secure the benefit of the judgment to the party in whose favor it was entered. Thus the court is given a choice in the matter: It may refuse a stay and allow immediate enforcement of the partial judgment it has entered, or it may grant the stay and prevent enforcement of that judgment until judgment has been given on the whole case. If a stay is entered, the court, if it sees fit, may require the party against whom a judgment has been entered to file a bond securing payment of that judgment with interest.

[Comment amended effective July 1, 1997.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Illustrative cases.

In general.

Chancellor properly exercised his discretion in refusing to stay an injunction pending a property owner's appeal of an order requiring him to remove vehicles from his property; the chancellor granted the property owner an adequate remedy in case he prevailed on appeal. There was no reason why the chancellor should have stayed the injunction in light of findings that inoperable vehicles on the property caused a nuisance. Whitley v. City of Brandon, 15 So. 3d 483 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari dismissed in part by 20 So. 3d 680, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 577 (Miss. 2009).

As a court of equity exercising its discretionary authority, it is essential that all four factors justifying injunctive relief be considered together and relative showings be measured; duty of court is to weigh strength of showings against each other and balance them against the potential harm to interests of plaintiffs and the public. Board of Trustees v. Knox, 638 So. 2d 1278 (Miss. 1994).

Illustrative cases.

County court was not in error for not granting a debtor relief from judgment — that is, not modifying a payment schedule after the court altered the language of a settlement agreement — because although it was within the county court's discretion to stay the execution of the judgment, the debtor did not ask for this relief, and the payment schedule in the original agreed order was agreed upon and valid. Franklin v. BSL, Inc., 987 So. 2d 1050 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Contention of bail bondsmen that they were eligible for a stay of bond forfeiture during twelve months following final judgment, while they left such judgment unsatisfied, was totally without merit, and it directly contradicted terms of both statute and subdivision (a) of this rule. Sides v. State, 519 So. 2d 1222 (Miss. 1988).

Chancellor did not violate Miss. R. Civ. P. 62(a) by holding a hearing to enforce her final judgment less than 10 days after its entry, as Rule 62(a) excepted injunctions from the automatic stay. Pilgrim Rest Missionary Baptist Church v. Wallace, 835 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2003).

Automatic right of supersedeas or stay was inconsistent with purpose of statute governing commitment for treatment of alcoholism, and therefore statute, rather than rule of civil procedure, controlled question whether person committed for chemical dependency treatment was entitled to supersedeas or stay pending appeal as a matter of right. McIntire v. Moore, 512 So. 2d 687 (Miss. 1987).

Rule 63. Disability of a judge.

(a) During trial. If for any reason the judge before whom an action has been commenced is unable to proceed with the trial, another judge regularly sitting in or assigned under law to the court in which the action is pending may proceed with and finish the trial upon certifying in the record that he has familiarized himself with the record of the trial; but if such other judge is satisfied that he cannot adequately familiarize himself with the record, he may in his discretion grant a new trial.

(b) After verdict or findings. If for any reason the judge before whom an action has been tried is unable to perform the duties to be performed by the court after a verdict is returned, or after the hearing of a nonjury action, then any other judge regularly sitting in or assigned under law to the court in which the action was tried may perform those duties; but if such other judge is satisfied that he cannot perform those duties, he may in his discretion grant a new trial.

COMMENT

Rule 63 authorizes the substitution of trial judges in pending actions in the event of disability of the judge before whom the action was commenced. This authority applies equally to the several judges in multi-judge districts as well as to judges of single-judge districts.

Importantly, this rule has nothing to do with the authority by which substitute judges are detailed or assigned under law to the subject court; such is provided by statute. See, e. g., Miss. Const. § 165 and Miss. Code Ann. §§ 9-1-13, -15, 11-1-11, and -15 (1972) (governor to commission special judges and to fill judicial vacancies; parties may agree upon attorney to serve as judge; proceedings in vacation when judge disqualified). The rule merely provides that such substitute judge can perform certain judicial functions which heretofore may not have been permitted.

For a discussion of Federal Rule 63, after which MRCP 63 was patterned, See 11 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 2921 et seq. (1973), and 7 Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 63.01 et seq. (1972).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Authority of judge.
Illustrative cases.

Authority of judge.

As a trial court judge, prior to recusal, had the authority under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(a) to clarify his judgment in parties' divorce proceeding, a successor judge who was appointed after trial had the authority under Miss. R. Civ. P. 63(b) to perform the same duties. Jones v. Mayo, 53 So. 3d 832 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Where the presiding trial judge grants a new trial, not specifically and solely based on a particular legal error such that we can say that the original judge's view of the credibility of the witnesses played no part in the decision, a successor judge is in no position to review and change that order; to do so would be an abuse of the discretion granted the successor judge under the rule. Amiker v. Drugs for Less, Inc., 796 So. 2d 942 (Miss. 2000).

A successor judge did not have authority to modify an order granting sanctions for discovery abuse since he was in no better position to decide the issues in the case than the original judge. Amiker v. Drugs for Less, Inc., 796 So. 2d 942 (Miss. 2000).

Illustrative cases.

Interim chancellor erred in modifying bench ruling in child visitation proceeding, without further hearing or without transcript of previous hearing, and without agreement by parties. Love v. Barnett, 611 So. 2d 205 (Miss. 1992).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. Power of Successor or Substituted Judge, in Civil Case, to Render Decision or Enter Judgment on Testimony Heard by Predecessor. 84 A.L.R.5th 399.

CHAPTER VIII. PROVISIONAL AND FINAL REMEDIES AND SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS

Rule 64. Seizure of person or property.

At the commencement of and during the course of an action or the seizure of person or property for the purpose of securing satisfaction of the judgment ultimately to be entered in the action are available under the circumstances and in the manner provided by law. These remedies include attachment, replevin, claim and delivery, sequestration and other corresponding or equivalent remedies, however designated and regardless of whether the remedy is ancillary to an action or must be obtained by an independent action. (Amended effective September 1, 1987.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective September 1, 1987, Rule 64 was amended by deleting "garnishment" as a prejudgment remedy included in the provisions of the Rule. 508-511 So. 2d XXIX (West Miss. Cas. 1987).

COMMENT

The unpredictability of substantive elements of law applicable to seizures of persons or property as security for satisfying a judgment that ultimately may be entered, due to recent opinions of the Supreme Court of the United States, renders it impractical at this time to draft a comprehensive procedural rule governing this area; See, e. g., Sniadach v. Family Finance Corp., 395 U.S. 337 [89 S. Ct. 1820, 23 L.Ed.2d 349] (1969); Fuentes v. Shevin, 407 U.S. 67 [92 S. Ct. 1983, 32 L.Ed.2d 556] (1972); and Mitchell v. W. T. Grant Co., 416 U.S. 600 [94 S. Ct. 1895, 40 L.Ed.2d 406] (1974). It is intended that a comprehensive rule governing such procedure be drafted in the future as the substantive law stabilizes.

Accordingly, Rule 64 provides that the provisional remedies available under Mississippi law for the seizure of persons or property as security for satisfying a judgment that ultimately may be entered in a civil action continue to be available under the MRCP. Those remedies are to be resorted to in accordance with statutory law; see, e. g., Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-19-1 et seq. (ejectment); §§ 11-29-1 et seq. (sequestration); §§ 11-31-1 et seq. (attachment in chancery); § 11-33-1 et seq. (attachment at law); §§ 11-35-1 et seq. (garnishment); §§ 11-37-101 et seq. (replevin); §§ 11-38-1 et seq. (claim and delivery); and §§ 11-43-1 et seq. (habeas corpus).

For discussions of Federal Rule 64, after which MRCP 64 was patterned, see 7 Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 64.01-.10 (1972); 11 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 2931-2936 (1973).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction.
Applicability.

Construction.

This rule did not apply in garnishment action, since such an action was a separate, successor action in which bank sought to enforce its judgment against judgment debtor, and garnishment was not a "provisional" remedy available "at the commencement of and during the course of an action." First Miss. Nat'l Bank v. KLH Indus., Inc., 457 So. 2d 1333 (Miss. 1984).

Applicability.

Procedural rules by which a party seeks an attachment in chancery are those provided by attachment in chancery statutes, supplemented only by so much of the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure as may be found not inconsistent with procedures prescribed in statutes. Universal Computer Servs., Inc. v. Lyall, 464 So. 2d 69 (Miss. 1985).

Rule 65. Injunctions.

(a) Preliminary injunction.

(1) Notice. No preliminary injunction shall be issued without notice to the adverse party.

(2) Consolidation of Hearing With Trial on Merits. Before or after the commencement of the hearing on application for a preliminary injunction, the court may order the trial of the action on the merits to be advanced and consolidated with the hearing of the application. Even when this consolidation is not ordered, any evidence received upon an application for a preliminary injunction which would be admissible upon the trial on the merits becomes part of the record on the trial and need not be repeated upon a trial. This subdivision (a)(2) shall be so construed and applied as to save to the parties any rights they may have to trial by jury.

(b) Temporary restraining order; notice; hearing; duration. A temporary restraining order may be granted, without notice to the adverse party or his attorney if (1) it clearly appears from specific facts shown by affidavit or by the verified complaint that immediate and irreparable injury, loss or damage will result to the applicant before the adverse party or his attorney can be heard in opposition, and (2) the applicant's attorney certifies to the court in writing the efforts, if any, which have been made to give the notice and reasons supporting his claim that notice should not be required. Every temporary restraining order granted without notice shall be endorsed with the date and hour of issuance; shall be filed forthwith in the clerk's office and entered of record; shall define the injury and state why it is irreparable and why the order was granted without notice; and shall expire by its terms within such time after entry, not to exceed ten days, as the court fixes (except in domestic relations cases, when the ten-day limitation shall not apply), unless within the time so fixed the order for good cause shown is extended for a like period or unless the party against whom the order is directed consents that it may be extended for a longer period. The reasons for the extension shall be stated in the order.

In case a temporary restraining order is granted without notice, the motion for a preliminary injunction shall be set down for hearing at the earliest possible time and take precedence over all matters except older matters of the same character. When the motion comes on for hearing the party who obtained the temporary restraining order shall proceed with the application for a preliminary injunction and, if he does not do so, the court shall dissolve the temporary restraining order.

On two days' notice to the party who obtained the temporary restraining order without notice or on such shorter notice to that party as the court may prescribe, the adverse party may appear and move its dissolution or modification and in that event the court shall proceed to hear and determine such motion as expeditiously as the ends of justice require.

(c) Security. No restraining order or preliminary injunction shall issue except upon the giving of security by the applicant, in such sum as the court deems proper, for the payment of such costs, damages, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be incurred or suffered by any party who is found to have been wrongfully enjoined or restrained; provided, however, no such security shall be required of the State of Mississippi or of an officer or agency thereof, and provided further, in the discretion of the court, security may not be required in domestic relations actions. The provisions of Rule 65.1 apply to a surety upon a bond or undertaking under this rule.

(d) Form and scope of injunction or restraining order.

(1) Every order granting a restraining order shall describe in reasonable detail and not by reference to the complaint or other document the act or acts sought to be restrained; it is binding only upon the parties to the action, their officers, agents, servants, employees, and attorneys, and upon those persons in active concert or participation with them who receive actual notice of the order by personal service or otherwise.

(2) Every order granting an injunction shall set forth the reasons for its issuance; shall be specific in terms; shall describe in reasonable detail and not by reference to the complaint or other document the act or acts sought to be restrained; and is binding only upon the parties to the action, their officers, agents, servants, employees, and attorneys, and upon those persons in active concert or participation with them who receive actual notice of the order by personal service or otherwise.

(e) Jurisdiction unaffected. Injunctive powers heretofore vested in the circuit and chancery courts remain unchanged by this rule.

COMMENT

Rule 65 makes several procedural changes in seeking and obtaining injunctive relief in Mississippi, but the rule neither restricts nor enlarges the jurisdiction of courts to exercise, or the propriety of exercising, injunctive relief; an injunction will continue to be available in those situations where it would have been available prior to these rules.

In prior Mississippi injunctive relief practice, injunctions were divided into two functional categories — prohibitory injunctions and mandatory injunctions — and, further, into two durational subcategories — interlocutory and final. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-13-1 through 39 (1972); V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice, § 442 (2d ed. 1950). Rule 65 has no effect on or application to final, or permanent, injunctive relief; however, the rule divides what have been referred to interchangeably as "interlocutory," "temporary," or "preliminary" injunctions (See V. Griffith, supra,) into two subcategories: preliminary injunctions, Rule 65(a), and temporary restraining orders, Rule 65(b). The latter may be issued ex parte without an adversary hearing in order to prevent an immediate, irreparable injury and are of limited duration — they typically will remain in effect for a maximum 20 days. On the other hand, Rule 65(a)(1) requires that notice be given to the opposing party before a preliminary injunction may be issued. Some type of a hearing also implicitly is required by subdivision (a)(2), which provides either for the consolidation of the trial on the merits with the preliminary injunction hearing, or the inclusion in the trial record of any evidence received at the Rule 65(a) hearing. Furthermore, a preliminary injunction normally lasts until the completion of the trial on the merits, unless it is dissolved earlier by court order or the consent of the parties. Therefore, its duration varies and is controlled by the nature of the situation in which it is utilized.

Rule 65(a) deals with the procedure on an application for a preliminary injunction. Broadly defined, a preliminary injunction, under these rules, is an injunction issued to protect the plaintiff from irreparable injury and to preserve the court's power to render a meaningful decision after a trial on the merits. 11 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 2947 (1973). Thus, the court may issue a preliminary injunction even though plaintiff's right to relief still is uncertain.

The circumstances in which a preliminary injunction may be granted are not prescribed by these rules; the grant or denial of a preliminary injunction remains a matter for the trial court's discretion, exercised in conformity with traditional equity practice. See V. Griffith, supra.

Although the fundamental fairness of preventing irremediable harm to a party is an important factor on a preliminary injunction application, the most compelling reason in favor of entering a Rule 65(a) order is the need to prevent the judicial process from being rendered futile by defendant's action or refusal to act. On the other hand, judicial intervention before the merits have been finally determined frequently imposes a burden on defendant that ultimately turns out to have been unjustified. Consequently, the preliminary injunction is appropriate whenever the policy of preserving the court's power to decide the case effectively outweighs the risk of imposing an interim restraint before it has done so.

Rule 65(b) provides for injunctive relief without notice to the adverse party. This relief, known as a temporary restraining order, can be accorded without notice provided that the verified facts of the complaint clearly justify plaintiff's apprehension about the threat of irreparable injury.

Once entered, a temporary restraining order expires by its terms. During the time it is in effect, extensions for good cause are permissible; the method of attack by the restrained party is by motion to dissolve or modify. Upon application having been made for a temporary restraining order, the court must immediately set a hearing on the companion motion for a preliminary injunction. If the temporary restraining order application is denied, the plaintiff should press for the hearing on the motion for a preliminary injunction. If the temprary restraining order is granted, then the restrained defendant should press to set the hearing on the preliminary injunction motion or on his motion to dissolve.

Under Rule 65(a)(2) the court can consolidate the hearing on the preliminary injunction with the trial of the action on the merits; in the event consolidation is not ordered, the record upon the hearing of the motion for preliminary injunction becomes a part of the record at the trial on the merits.

Rule 65(c) continues to traditional practice of requiring security in injunction proceedings, and vests in the sound discretion of the court the determination of the amount of security that will be required. Cf. Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-13-3 through -7, and -13 (1972). Agencies and officers of the State of Mississippi are exempted from the requirements for posting security as a prerequisite to obtaining an injunction; this accords with prior practice. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-13-9 (1972).

Rule 65(d) is designed to protect those who are enjoined by informing them specifically of what they are required to do or refrain from doing pursuant to the injunction or restraining order; the ordinary person reading the court's order should be able to ascertain readily from the document itself exactly what conduct is proscribed or mandated. See 11 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 2955 (1972); Brumby Metals, Inc. v. Bargen, 275 F.2d 46 (7th Cir. 1960) (An injunction may be set aside on appeal when "anyone reading the inunction order cannot ascertain from the four corners of the order itself exactly what conduct was enjoined.").

Rule 65 (e) is a reaffirmation that the injunctive powers Mississippi courts have had prior to the rule remains intact, being neither abridged nor enlarged by the rule. See Miss. Code Ann. § 9-9-23 (county court may not issue writs of injunction, but may, when expressly directed in writing by chancery court or circuit court, hear application for injunctive reliefs.

For detailed discussions of Federal Rule 65, after which MRCP 65 was patterned, See 11 Wright & Miller, supra §§ 2941-2962; 7 Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 65.01-.21 (1972).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Attorneys' fees.
Consolidation with trial.
Jurisdiction.
Remedies at law.
Security.
Specificity.
Illustrative cases.

In general.

Motion for preliminary injunction is a matter committed to trial court's sound discretion; court must weigh and balance equities, and make at least four findings: (1) there exists a substantial likelihood that plaintiff will prevail on the merits; (2) the injunction is necessary to prevent irreparable injury; (3) threatened injury to plaintiff outweighs harm an injunction might do to defendant; and (4) entry of a preliminary injunction is consistent with the public interest. City of Durant v. Humphreys County Mem. Hosp./Extended Care Facility, 587 So. 2d 244 (Miss. 1991).

General rule governing form of injunction is that a decree should be complete within itself, containing no extraneous references, and leaving open no matter or description or designation out of which contention may arise as to the meaning. Georgia Pacific Corp. v. Armstrong, 451 So. 2d 201 (Miss. 1984).

Attorneys' fees.

There is no limit in subsection (c) such that attorney's fees will be allowed only when actual damage to the defending party has been caused; the fees are those "incurred or suffered by any party who is found to have been wrongfully enjoined." Cox v. Trustmark Nat'l Bank, 733 So. 2d 353 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

City was responsible for the expenses the owners incurred in fighting the city's actions to have the owners remove the fence from their own property as the injunction remained in force for six and a half years, during which time they were forced to allow their land to be used or taken by the city to benefit the neighbor; the chancellor was within his authority to award attorney's fees as damages to the owners in light of the city's actions in essentially restraining or taking the owners' property without due compensation. City of Waynesboro v. McMichael, 856 So. 2d 474 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 860 So. 2d 1223 (Miss. 2003).

Consolidation with trial.

Chancellor committed no reversible errr in failing to consider witness's preliminary injunction testimony when he made his decision granting permanent injunction; any error was harmless since nothing prevented witness from testifying at hearing for permanent injunction. Goode v. Village of Woodgreen Homeowners Ass'n, 662 So. 2d 1064 (Miss. 1995).

Jurisdiction.

Although Miss. R. Civ. P. 65 provides that the previously bestowed injunctive powers of the circuit and chancery courts remain unchanged by Rule 65, the basis for equity jurisdiction of a suit for an injunction is the inadequacy of a remedy in circuit court; the insureds did not show that a circuit court could not grant the injunctive relief sought. Union Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Crosby, 870 So. 2d 1175 (Miss. 2004).

Motion for preliminary injunction lay within the subject matter jurisdiction of circuit court. Gibson v. Manuel, 534 So. 2d 199 (Miss. 1988).

Remedies at law.

Statutory method of appeal to circuit court afforded county supervisor a plain, adequate, speedy, and complete remedy for a judicial determination of his right to office, and therefore chancery court properly denied his request for injunctive relief. Moore v. Sanders, 558 So. 2d 1383 (Miss. 1990).

Security.

This rule did not allow defendant to re-characterize an award of attorney's fees as an award of security costs for plaintiff's seeking an allegedly improper injunction which was never issued. Denson v. George, 642 So. 2d 909 (Miss. 1994).

Chancellor did not err in returning cash bond to plaintiff upon dissolution of temporary restraining order, since defendants failed to file a suggestion of damages when they moved for dissolution, as required by statute. Ray v. Snow, 525 So. 2d 394 (Miss. 1988).

Specificity.

Consent decree relating to open meeting practices to be observed by county supervisors was sufficiently specific under subdivision (d)(2) of this rule, and if there were areas of disagreement as to future conduct, supervisors' remedy was to petition chancery court for clarification or modification. Hinds County Bd. of Supervisors v. Common Cause, 551 So. 2d 107 (Miss. 1989).

When ordering achievement of ends necessarily reached only through employment of scientific or engineering techniques, courts of equity should be cautious, since an overly precise specification of means will generally be beyond judicial competence in fact or in law. Hall v. Wood, 443 So. 2d 834 (Miss. 1983).

Illustrative cases.

Permanent injunctive relief was properly denied in a real estate dispute because there was no need to restrain a seller from negotiating a sale with other buyers where a contract had already expired; therefore, the seller had every right to try and dispose of the property. Gunn v. Heggins, 964 So. 2d 586 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Father alleged that the children would suffer irreparable harm if left in the mother's custody because, inter alia: (1) the maternal grandmother testified that the adoptive father provided beer to the minor children; and (2) the maternal grandmother corroborated the allegation that the mother purposefully did not alert the father to the termination of parental rights proceedings because she wanted her new husband to adopt the children; because the father provided specific allegations of immediate harm, which were corroborated by other testimony, pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 65(b) the chancery court did not violate the mother's due process rights by failing to give her notice of the ex parte hearings granting a temporary restraining order and awarding temporary custody of the children to the father. C.M. v. R.D.H., 947 So. 2d 1023 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Chancery court, as guardian of all minor children in its district, was vested with authority to temporarily grant custody in an ex parte proceeding, pending an investigation by a guardian ad litem, the county welfare department, or the county youth court, because emergency circumstances (the child's molestation by her schizophrenic's mother's divorce attorney) existed. E. J. M. v. A. J. M., 846 So. 2d 289 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Chancery court did not err in denying city's application for preliminary injunction to enjoin construction of nursing home; there was little likelihood that plaintiffs would prevail on merits, injunction was not necessary to prevent irreparable injury, and entry of injunction would not have been consistent with the public interest. City of Durant v. Humphreys County Mem. Hosp./Extended Care Facility, 587 So. 2d 244 (Miss. 1991).

Rule 65.1. Security: proceedings against sureties.

Whenever these rules require or permit the giving of security by a party, and security is given in the form of a bond or stipulation or other undertaking with one or more sureties, each surety submits himself to the jurisdiction of the court and irrevocably appoints the clerk of the court as his agent upon whom any papers affecting the liability on the bond or undertaking may be served. His liability may be enforced on motion without the necessity of an independent action. The motion and such notice of the motion as the court prescribes may be served on the clerk of the court, who shall forthwith mail copies to the suretiess if their addresses are known.

COMMENT

Each surety, by entering into a bond, stipulation, or other undertaking required or permitted by these rules, submits himself to the jurisdiction of the court and irrevocably appoints, the clerk of the court as his agent upon whom any papers affecting liability on the bond or undertaking may be served; hence, a simple motion practice, rather than an independent action, is provided for the enforcement of the surety's liability. The motion and such notice thereof as the court prescribes may be served on the clerk of the court, who has a duty forthwith to mail copies to the surety if his address is known.

Illustrative of situations in which the giving of security might be permitted as required by the rules are the following:

(1) as a condition to the various provisions for a stay of proceedings to enforce a judgment; MRCP 62 (c), (h);

(2) as a condition to the granting of a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction; MRCP 65;

(3) for security for costs; MRCP 3(b).

See also 7 Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 65.1.01-.05 (1974); 11 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 2971-2974 (1973).

Rule 66. Receivers.

An action wherein a receiver has been appointed shall not be dismissed except by order of the court. In all other respects the action in which the appointment of a receiver is sought or which is brought by or against a receiver is governed by these rules.

COMMENT

Rule 66 is a limitation on parties' authority to dismiss civil actions without leave of court. Cf. MRCP 41. When litigation has reached the point that appointment of a receiver is necessitated and one is appointed, then the court has taken such an active involvement in the action that it must, in the interest of guaranteeing equal security for all parties, ensure that the action is not concluded until the object of the receivership is adjudicated.

With the exception of limiting parties' rights to dismiss without leave of court, Rule 66 provides that proceedings involving receivers are adjudicated in accordance with the provisions of the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure.

Procedurally, Rule 66 does not depart from prior Mississippi receivership practice. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-5-151 through -167 (1972); V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice, §§ 466-482 (2d ed. 1950).

Rule 67. Deposit in court.

In any action in which any part of the relief sought is judgment for a sum of money or the disposition of any other thing capable of delivery, a party, upon notice to every other party, and by leave of court, may deposit with the court all or any part of such sum or thing.

Where money is paid into court to abide the result of any legal proceeding, the judge may order it deposited at interest in a federally insured bank or savings and loan association authorized to receive public funds, to the credit of the court in the action or proceeding in which the money was paid. The money so deposited plus any interest shall be paid only upon the check of the clerk of the court, annexed with its certified order for the payment, and in favor of the person to whom the order directs the payment to be made.

COMMENT

Rule 67 applies in an action "in which any part of the relief sought is a judgment for a sum of money or the disposition of a sum of money or the disposition of any other things capable of delivery." A party may deposit with the court all or any part of the sum or thing, but must give notice to every other party and must obtain leave of court to make the deposit.

The purpose of the deposit is to relieve the depositor of responsibility for a fund in dispute. It is useful in cases of interpleader and of tender of an undisputed sum. However, this procedural device does not institute a civil action joining the claimants of the disputed res, as does an interpleader action. Cf. MRCP 22; See also V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice, §§ 522-526 (2d ed. 1950) (tender and payment into court).

Rule 68. Offer of judgment.

At any time more than fifteen days before the trial begins, a party defending against a claim may serve upon the adverse party an offer to allow judgment to be taken against him for the money or property or to the effect specified in his offer, with costs then accrued. If within ten days after the service of the offer the adverse party serves written notice that the offer is accepted, either party may then file the offer and notice of acceptance together with proof of service thereof and thereupon the court shall enter judgment. An offer not accepted shall be deemed withdrawn and evidence thereof is not admissible except in a proceeding to determine costs. If the judgment finally obtained by the offeree is not more favorable than the offer, the offeree must pay the cost incurred after the making of the offer. The fact that an offer is made but not accepted does not preclude a subsequent offer. When the liability of one party to another has been determined by verdict, order or judgment, but the amount or extent of the liability remains to be determined by further proceedings, the party adjudged liable may make an offer of judgment, which shall have the same effect as an offer made before trial if it is served within a reasonable time, not less than ten days, prior to the commencement of hearing to determine the amount or extent of liability.

COMMENT

Rule 68 is intended to encourage settlements, avoid protracted litigation, and protect the party who is willing to settle from the burden of costs that subsequently accrue.

Although the privilege of an offer of settlement is extended only to the party defending against a claim, it furnishes a just procedure to all parties concerned. It is fair to the claimant because it does the defending party no good to make an offer of judgment that is not what the claimant might reasonably be expected to recover; he will not free himself of the costs if the judgment recovered is more than the offer. Likewise, it is fair to the defending party because it allows him to free himself of the court costs by offering to make a settlement. Finally, it benefits the court because it encourages settlements and discourages vexatious suits. See 12 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 3001-3005 (1973); 7 Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 68.01-.06 (1974).

MRCP 68 requires an offer of judgment to be made at least fifteen days before the trial is scheduled to begin; the offer must be accepted, if at all, at least five days before trial to prevent the accrual of costs. This provision will also tend to prevent parties from making needless preparation for trial. Cf. Fed.R.Civ.P. 68 (offer must be made at least ten days before trial; must be accepted before trial day).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.

Although Miss. R. Civ. P. 68 applied because the jury's award was less than the defendant's rejected offer of settlement, costs were limited to those allowable under Miss. R. Civ. P. 54(d) and, therefore, the plaintiff could not be taxed with costs for copying, trial materials, and court reporter fees, or for expert witnesses costs in excess of Miss. Code Ann. § 25-7-47. Hubbard v. Delta Sanitation of Miss., 64 So. 3d 547 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

While looking solely at the motion to assess costs and the language of Miss. R. Civ. P. 68, the appellate court determined that the trial court did not err in denying the motion since there was no judgment obtained by the corporation in its suit against the tax collector to trigger the Rule-68 cost-shifting procedure. Fiddle, Inc. v. Shannon, 834 So. 2d 39 (Miss. 2003).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. Construction of state offer of judgment rule — Issues of time. 112 A.L.R.5th 47.

Construction of state offer of judgment rule — Issues concerning revocation and succession. 116 A.L.R.5th 433.

Construction of state offer of judgment rule-Sufficiency of offer and contract formation issues,. 118 A.L.R.5th 91.

Allowance and determination of attorney's fees under state offer of judgment rule. 119 A.L.R.5th 121.

State offer of judgment rule-Construction, operation, and effect of acceptance and resulting judgment. 120 A.L.R.5th 559.

Disallowance of award under state offer of judgment rule due to lack of good faith. 121 A.L.R.5th 325.

Rule 69. Execution.

(a) Enforcement of judgment. Process to enforce a judgment for the payment of money shall be by such procedures as are provided by statute. The procedure on execution, in proceedings supplementary to and in aid of judgment, and in proceedings on and in aid of execution, shall be as provided by statute.

(b) Examination by judgment creditor. To aid in the satisfaction of a judgment of more than one hundred dollars, the judgment creditor may examine the judgment debtor or any other person, including the books, papers, or documents of same, upon any matter not privileged relating to the debtor's property.

The judgment creditor may examine the judgment debtor or other person in open court as provided by statute or may utilize the discovery procedures stated in Rules 26 through 37 hereof.

COMMENT

Rule 69(a) provides that the traditional Mississippi legal devices continue to be available for the enforcement of judgments, and that the statutory procedures governing their use still prevail; there is no departure from prior law; See generally Miss. Code Ann. § 11-5-81 (fieri facias and garnishment to enforce chancery decrees for money); § 11-5-83 (sheriff to execute decrees); § 11-5-85 (decree to operate as conveyance); §§ 11-35-1 to 11-35-61 (general garnishment procedures); § 13-3-111 (time when execution shall be issued); § 13-3-113, et seq. (issuance, execution, and return of execution) (1972).

Rule 69(b) authorizes examinations of judgment debtors by two different processes. The creditor may proceed for an examination pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. §§ 13-1-261 et seq. (1972), the examination of judgment debtor statutes, or he may proceed pursuant to the discovery provisions of the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure.

[Amended effective September 1, 1987.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction.
Examination by judgment creditor.
Place of examination.

Construction.

By virtue of M.R.C.P. Rule 69 (a), procedural rules whereby a party seeks to secure and enforce the remedy of garnishment are those provided by Mississippi garnishment statutes, supplemented by so much of the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure as may be found not inconsistent with the procedures prescribed in such statutes. First Miss. Nat'l Bank v. KLH Indus., Inc., 457 So. 2d 1333 (Miss. 1984).

Examination by judgment creditor.

Judgment creditor may conduct examination of third parties that is limited in scope to matters, not privileged, relevant to allegations that judgment debtor has assets which properly should be discovered and used to satisfy the judgment; no inquiry is to be made, however, into third party's personal assets or affairs. Higdon v. Whitehead, 571 So. 2d 281 (Miss. 1990).

Place of examination.

Non-resident defendant could properly be required to submit to examination in Mississippi, where, by virtue of its default, defendant also waived any right it might have to argue that it may not be found in Mississippi for purposes of examination by its judgment creditor. H & W Transf. & Cartage Serv., Inc. v. Griffin, 511 So. 2d 895 (Miss. 1987).

Rule 70. Judgment for specific acts; vesting title.

(a) Specific acts. If a judgment directs a party to execute a conveyance of land or to deliver deeds or other documents or to perform any other specific act and the party fails to comply within the time specified, the court may direct the act to be done at the cost of the disobedient party by some other person appointed by the court and the act when so done has like effect as if done by the party.

(b) Divestment of title. If real or personal property is within the State of Mississippi, the court in lieu of directing a conveyance thereof may enter a judgment divesting the title of any party and vesting it in others; such judgment has the effect of a conveyance executed in due form of law.

(c) Delivery of possession. When any order or judgment is for the delivery of possession, a certified copy of the judgment or order shall be sufficient authority for the sheriff of the county in which the property is located to seize same and deliver it to the party entitled to its possession.

(d) Contempt. The court may also in proper cases adjudge the party in contempt.

COMMENT

The purpose of Rule 70 is to provide ample power to the courts for dealing effectively with parties who seek to thwart judgments by refusing to comply with orders or perform specific acts.

Rule 70 applies only after judgment is entered; Rules 64 and 65 provide for remedies prior to judgment. Rule 70 applies only if a judgment directs a party to execute a conveyance of land or to deliver deeds or other documents or to perform only other specific acts and the party has failed to comply within the time specified. See 7 Moore's Federal Practice ¶¶ 70.01-.03 (1974); 12 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 3021, 3022 (1973).

This rule is intended primarily to preclude recalcitrant parties from frustrating court orders for the performance of specific acts; however, the rule relies upon specific orders, issued by the court or by the clerk, rather than upon arcane writs, to achieve performance pursuant to, or conformity with, judgments. Thus, under Rule 70(a) the court may designate a person to perform that act which a party refuses or fails to perform. See, e. g., Carpenter v. Douglass, 104 Miss. 83, 61 So. 161 (1913) (the court has power to appoint a commissioner to execute deeds if necessary to effectuate fully the ends of justice); Miss. Code Ann. § 11-5-85 (1972) (court may appoint commissioner to execute writing).

In the event all interest in realty or personalty is divested out of one party and vested in another by a judgment, Rule 70(b) provides that the judgment itself serves as the instrument of conveyance of such title. This procedure also conforms to the traditional Mississippi practice on writs of assistance and possession. See V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice, § 651 (2d ed. 1950).

Rule 70(c) authorizes the same procedure as the traditional writ of seizure in Mississippi practice for the taking of personalty from one in possession thereof and physically placing it in the possession of the successful litigant. This practice is referred to in some jurisdictions as a writ of assistance or sequestration; whatever its label the practice is familiar to Mississippi practitioners. See V. Griffith, supra § 663, nn. 70, 71, at 663. This rule also authorizes that possession of realty be surrendered to the successful litigant out of possession, as was formerly done pursuant to the writ of assistance, or writ of possession, as it was often called. See V. Griffith, supra § 651.

Finally, Rule 70(d) recites that courts may avail themselves of the traditional powers of contempt to enforce judgments; See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 9-1-17, 9-5-87 (1972); V. Griffith, supra §§ 664 et seq.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Execution.

As victims of chemical exposure failed to execute settlement documents, despite being ordered to do so by a trial court, the court properly appointed a court clerk to execute the documents for them pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 70(a). Melton v. Smith's Pecans, 65 So. 3d 853 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011), writ of certiorari denied by 65 So. 3d 310, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 342 (Miss. 2011).

Rule 71. Process in behalf of and against persons not parties.

When an order is made in favor of a person who is not a party to the action, other than a creditor of a party to a divorce proceeding, he may enforce obedience to the order by the same process as if he were a party; and when obedience to an order may be lawfully enforced against a person who is not a party, he is liable to the same process for enforcing obedience to the order as if he were a party.

COMMENT

Rule 71 makes all orders fully enforceable in favor of and against all persons who are properly affected thereby, even though not parties to the action. For example, a court may make an order in favor of one not a party, such as when a foreclosure sale is made and the court orders the property delivered to the purchaser or his assignee; the purchaser or his assignee is then entitled to any process available to enforce the order that would otherwise be available to a party to the action. See, e. g, Woods v. O'Brien, 78 F. Supp. 221 (D.Mass.1948); United States v. Hackett, 123 F. Supp. 104 (W.D.Mo.1954); See also 7 Moore's Federal Practice, ¶¶ 71.01-.04 (1974); 12 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil §§ 3031-3033 (1973).

Rule 71 has been drafted so as to exclude specifically creditors of a party to a divorce proceeding. For example, if the court ordered the husband to pay for certain household appliances to be used by the ex-wife, the vendor of the appliances would not be entitled to take advantage of this rule.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Applicability.
Illustrative cases.

Applicability.

Chancellor erred when he, sua sponte, invoked this rule to make State a party for purpose of receiving half of the punitive damages awarded to plaintiffs in private securities litigation. FSC Sec. Corp. v. McCormack, 630 So. 2d 979 (Miss. 1994).

Illustrative cases.

This rule requires that third party be liable to same process for enforcing obedience to an order as if he were a party, and since no service of process occurred against third party individual as opposed to corporation bearing his name, trial court had no jurisdiction over individual and thus had no authority to issue a contempt citation against him personally. Mansour v. Charmax Indus., Inc., 680 So. 2d 852 (Miss. 1996).

Rule 71A. Eminent domain. [Reserved].

COMMENT

No counterpart to Federal Rule 71A, Condemnation of Property, has, as yet, been proposed for inclusion in the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure. More time than has thus far been available will be required for drafting a comprehensive rule governing eminent domain proceedings in Mississippi. Indeed, Federal Rule 71A drew more attention from the Federal Advisory Committee on Rules of Civil Practice and Procedure, and was drafted over a longer period of time, than any of the other federal rules; the rule was on the drawing boards from 1937 until 1951. See 12 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 3041 (1972).

MRCP 71A is reserved for future consideration.

CHAPTER IX. APPEALS

Rules 72 to 76. [Omitted].

COMMENT

Federal Rules 72-76 formerly covered the subject of appeals. Those rules were abrogated by the Supreme Court of the United States on July 1, 1968. Rules 72-76 of the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure are omitted in the interest of maintaining a rules numbering system that corresponds with their federal counterpart.

New procedures for taking appeals to the Mississippi Supreme Court were adopted as of January 1, 1988, officially designated Mississippi Supreme Court Rules, and may be cited as Miss.Sup.Ct.R. No. They modify or supplant the previous Supreme Court Rules and statutes pertaining thereto and should be followed in order to perfect an appeal to that Court.

[Amended effective March 1, 1989.]

CHAPTER X. COURTS AND CLERKS

Rule 77. Courts and clerks.

(a) Court always open. The courts shall be deemed always open for the purposes of filing any pleading or other proper paper, of issuing and returning process, and of making and directing all interlocutory motions, orders, and rules.

(b) Trials and hearings; orders in chambers. All trials upon the merits shall be conducted in open court, except as otherwise provided by statute. All other acts or proceedings may be done or conducted by a judge in chambers, without the attendance of the clerk or other court officials and at any place within the state either within or without the district; but no hearing shall be conducted outside the district without the consent of all parties affected thereby.

(c) Clerk's office and orders by clerk. The clerk's office with the clerk or a deputy clerk in attendance shall be open during business hours on all days except Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays. All motions and applications to the clerk for issuing process, for issuing process to enforce and execute judgments, for entering defaults, and for other proceedings which do not require allowance or order of the court are grantable of course by the clerk; but his action may be suspended or altered or rescinded by the court upon cause shown.

(d) Notice of orders or judgments. Immediately upon the entry of an order or judgment the clerk shall serve a notice of the entry in the manner provided for in Rule 5 upon each party who is not in default for failure to appear, and shall make a note in the docket of the service. Any party may in addition serve a notice of such entry in the manner provided in Rule 5 for the service of papers. Lack of notice of the entry by the clerk does not affect the time to appeal, nor relieve, nor authorize the court to relieve, a party for failure to appeal within the time allowed, except as permitted by the Mississippi Rules of Appellate Procedure. (Amended effective July 1, 1997.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective July 1, 1997, Rule 77(d) was amended to allow for service of notices of the entry of orders and judgments by parties. — So. 2d — (West Miss.Cases).

Effective February 1, 1990, Rule 77 was amended by adding subsection (d), requiring the clerk of the court to give notice of the entry of orders and judgments to the interested parties. 553-556 So. 2d XLII (West Miss.Cas. 1990).

[Amended effective July 1, 1997.]

COMMENT

Rule 77(a) provides that the courts shall be deemed always open for the purpose of filing papers and issuing and returning process and making motions and orders. This does not mean that the office of the clerk must be physically open at all hours or that the filing of papers can be effected by leaving them in a closed or vacant office. Under Rule 5(e) papers may be filed out of business hours by delivering them to the clerk or deputy clerk, or in case of exceptional necessity, the judge. See Miss.Const. § 24 (all courts shall be open).

Rule 77(b) requires that the "trial of all cases upon the merits" be conducted in "open court"; all other acts or proceedings may be done or conducted by a judge "in chambers," without the necessity of the attendance of the clerk or other court official and at any place within the state. However, no hearing, other than one heard ex parte, shall be conducted outside the geographic area served by the court without the consent of all parties affected thereby. See V. Griffith, Mississippi Chancery Practice, § 557 (2d ed. 1950).

Rule 77(c) requires that the clerk's office, with the clerk or a deputy in attendance, be open during business hours on all days except Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays Rule 77(c) also provides that the clerk may issue process and make record entries that do not require the allowance or the order of the court, such as motions and applications for issuance of process, for issuing final process to enforce and execute a judgment, and for entering defaults. See Miss. Code Ann. § 9-1-27 (1972).

Rule 77(d) requires that the clerk provide copies of all orders and judgments, immediately upon their entry, to all parties who are not in default for failure to appear. This rule is substantially the same as Rule 77(d) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

Rule 77(d) was amended in 1997 to provide that parties may serve notice of the entry of a judgment or order on all other parties. This revision was a companion to a concurrent amendment adding present subsection (h) to Rule 4 of the Mississippi Rules of Appellate Procedure, whose purpose is to permit trial courts to ease strict sanctions now imposed on appellants whose notices of appeal are filed late because of their failure to receive notice of entry of a judgment or order. See, e.g., Bank of Edwards v. Cassity Auto Sales, Inc., 599 So. 2d 579 (Miss.1992); Schmitt v. Capers, 573 So. 2d 773 (Miss.1990); Moore v. Wax, 554 So. 2d 312 (Miss.1989); Tandy Electronics, Inc. v. Fletcher, 554 So. 2d 308 (Miss.1989). Miss. R. App. P. 4(h) now provides a limited opportunity for relief in circumstances where the notice of entry of a judgment or order, required to be mailed by the clerk of the trial court pursuant to Miss.R.Civ.P. 77(d), is either not received by a party or is received so late as to impair the opportunity to file a timely notice of appeal.

Failure to receive notice may have increased in frequency with the growth in the caseload in the clerks' offices. The present strict rule imposes a duty on counsel to maintain contact with the court while a case is under submission. Such contact is more difficult to maintain as caseloads have increased, and can be a burden to the court as well as counsel.

Miss.R.Civ.P. 77(d) and Miss.R.App.P. 4(h) thus combine to place a burden on prevailing parties who desire certainty that the time for appeal is running. Such parties can take the initiative to assure that their adversaries receive effective notice. An appropriate procedure for such notice is provided in Rule 5. While these Rules lighten the responsibility of the clerks' offices, they do not diminish the workload, for the clerk's duty to give notice of entry of judgments and orders is maintained.

[Amended effective February 1, 1990; July 1, 1997.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Notice of order or judgments.
Time limitations.

Notice of order or judgments.

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in determining that plaintiffs' letter in response to the clerk's motion to dismiss, which requested that their personal injury action against the business not be dismissed, constituted an action of record such as would preclude a dismissal under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(d). Cucos, Inc. v. McDaniel, 938 So. 2d 238 (Miss. 2006).

Although subsection (d) requires the court clerk to provide notice to each party of the entry of the summary judgment, this requirement does not relieve either party of their responsibility to discover the date when the judgment was entered. Byrd v. Biloxi Regional Medical Ctr., 722 So. 2d 166 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998).

Appeal was reinstated where documents styled "Jury Verdict for Defendant" did not contain the word "judgment," were not delivered to plaintiff's counsel, were not in the court file, and were not entered on the docket; documents did not constitute a final judgment and were not intended to be a final judgment, and plaintiff's right to due process protected her from losing her right to appeal since she was not aware of the jury verdict forms and was not notified of their existence. Roberts v. Grafe Auto Co., 653 So. 2d 250 (Miss. 1994).

Time limitations.

Appellate court lacked jurisdiction to hear an appeal from an order denying a motion to reconsider summary judgment because the order was not appealed within 30 days of its entry, notwithstanding that a circuit court clerk had failed to notify the parties of the order as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 77(d). Payne v. Magnolia Healthcare, Inc., 984 So. 2d 290 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari dismissed by 2008 Miss. LEXIS 291 (Miss. June 12, 2008).

Lack of notice of the entry by the clerk did not affect the time to appeal, nor relieve, nor authorize the court to relieve, a party for failure to appeal within the time allowed. Smith v. Parkerson Lumber, Inc., 890 So. 2d 832 (Miss. 2003).

Rule 78. Motion practice.

Each court shall establish procedures for the prompt dispatch of business, at which motions requiring notice and hearing may be heard and disposed of; but the judge at any time or place and on such notice, if any, as he considers reasonable may make orders for the advancement, conduct, and hearing of actions.

To expedite its business, the court may make provision by rule or order for the submission and determination of motions without oral hearing upon brief written statements of reasons in support and opposition. (Amended effective March 1, 1989; amended effective April 17, 2003 to allow the courts, by rule to provide for determination of motions seeking final judgment without oral argument.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective March 1, 1989, Rule 78 was amended by changing its title to "Motion Practice" and by abrogating provisions for local rules. 536-538 So. 2d XXXI (West Miss. Cas. 1989).

COMMENT

Rule 78 requires each court to provide for the manner of submission and determination of motions requiring notice and a hearing.

The second paragraph of the rule permits any court to expedite its business by the adoption of local rules or orders providing for the submission and determination of "motions without oral hearing upon brief written statements of reasons in support and opposition."

Motion practice has been accomplished in numerous ways in Mississippi prior to the adoption of these rules. For an idea of the variety of practices in the courts See, e. g, Local Rule I.C. — E., Sixth Chancery Court District; Local Rule Designating Vacation Day, and Local Rule for Procedures for Vacation Day Hearings in Greenwood, Seventh Chancery Court District; Local Rule 13, Eighth Chancery Court District; Local Rule 2, Seventeenth Chancery Court District; Local Rule 5, Thirteenth Circuit Court District; Local Rule 7(a), Sixteenth Circuit Court District; Local Rule 5, Eighteenth Circuit Court District; Local Rule 8, Bolivar County Court.

Rule 78 does not alter any local rules governing motion practice; however, the rule must be considered in the light of MRCP 83, which requires that all local rules be forwarded to and published by the Supreme Court of Mississippi.

[Comment amended effective March 1, 1989.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction.
Hearings.

Construction.

In a case alleging exposure to mold and other substances, an issue relating to the failure to have a court reporter present at a hearing for summary judgment was not preserved for review since no objection was made; even if the error had been preserved, such presence was not required under Miss. R. Civ. P. 78 and Miss. Code Ann. § 9-13-25, and the appellate court had no authority to promulgate such a rule. Hosey v. Mediamolle, 963 So. 2d 1267 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Defendant was entitled to have default judgment set aside for failure of notice and hearing; it was clear that defendant had made an appearance, and thus defendant was entitled to notice and a hearing on plaintiff's application for default. King v. Sigrest, 641 So. 2d 1158 (Miss. 1994).

Hearings.

Trial court erred when it granted the movie theater's motion for summary judgment without oral hearing, but under the circumstances, the error was harmless as the customer, who alleged the theater was vicariously liable for the acts of its employee, failed to present any evidence to rebut the theater's motion. Adams v. Cinemark USA, Inc., 831 So. 2d 1156 (Miss. 2002).

Rule 79. Books and records kept by the clerk and entries therein.

(a) General docket. The clerk shall keep a book known as the "general docket" of such form and style as is required by law and shall enter therein each civil action to which these rules are made applicable. The file number of each action shall be noted on each page of the docket whereon an entry of the action is made. All papers filed with the clerk, all process issued and returns made thereon, all appearances, orders, verdicts, and judgments shall be noted in this general docket on the page assigned to the action and shall be marked with its file number. These entries shall be brief but shall show the nature of each paper filed or writ issued and the substance of each order or judgment of the court and of the returns showing execution of process. The entry of an order or judgment shall show the date the entry is made. In the event a formal order is entered, the clerk shall insert the order in the file of the case.

(b) Minute book. The clerk shall keep a correct copy of every judgment or order. This record shall be known as the "Minute Book."

(c) Indexes; calendars. Suitable indexes of the general docket shall be kept by the clerk under the direction of the court. There shall be prepared, under the direction of the court, calendars of all actions ready for trial.

(d) Other books and records. The clerk shall also keep such other books and records as may be required by statute or these rules. The documents required to be kept under this rule may be recorded by means of an exact-copy photocopy process.

(e) Removing the file in a case. The file of a case shall not be removed from the office of the clerk except by permission of the court or the clerk.

COMMENT

Rule 79(a) requires that the clerk of each court maintain a general docket, which is a chronological log of activities in civil actions. The requirements of this rule add nothing new to traditional Mississippi practice. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 9-5-201 (chancery clerk to maintain general docket for chancery court); 9-7-171 (circuit clerk to maintain general docket for circuit court); 9-9-29 (circuit clerk to maintain general docket for county court) (1972). Rule 79(a) also specifies that the docket entries reflect the date on which the entries are made in the general docket. Since several important time periods and deadlines are calculated from the date of the entry of judgments and orders, these entries must accurately reflect the actual date of the entries rather than another date, such as the date on which a judgment or order is signed by the judge. See, for example, Rule 58 mandating that a judgment is effective only when entered as provided in Rule 79(a), and Rule 59 which requires that motions to alter or amend judgments be filed within ten days after the entry of judgment.

The minute book required to be maintained by Rule 79(b) is also familiar to Mississippi practitioners, See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 9-1-33 (minutes of circuit, chancery, and county courts to be maintained by clerk of each), 9-5-135 (chancery clerk to maintain minute book for chancery court). Rule 79(b) makes no changes in minute book practices.

Rule 79(c) merely requires that clerks of court keep suitable indexes of the civil docket; again, this tracks prior practice. See, e. g., Miss. Code Ann. § 9-5-201 (1972) (general docket shall be duly indexed). Subdivision (d) directs that clerks shall maintain such other records as may be required and recognizes that exact-copy photocopying Is a most useful and acceptable tool for the record-keeping functions.

Rule 79(e) is intended to ensure that the removal of case files from the clerk's office Is an exceptional, rather than routine, practice. Under the notice pleadings provision of the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure, "every order required by its terms to be served, every pleading subsequent to the original complaint . . ., every paper relating to discovery required to be served . . ., every written motion . . ., and every written notice, appearance, demand, offer of judgment, designation of record on appeal, and similar paper shall be served on each of the parties." MRCP 5(b). Since each party in a civil action will have copies of all such papers, their office files should be as complete as the court's file, thereby obviating any need to remove the court's file. This provision modifies Miss. Code Ann. § 9-5-165 (1972) only to the extent it limits removal of court files.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Amendment of comment.
Illustrative cases.

Amendment of comment.

State Supreme Court adopted an amendment to the Comment to Miss. R. Civ. P. 79(a) governing general dockets kept by a court clerk where it found the proposed amendment would promote the fair and efficient administration of justice. In re Rules of Civ. Procedure, — So. 2d —, 2002 Miss. LEXIS 128 (Miss. Apr. 1, 2002).

Illustrative cases.

Where intervenor argued that a dismissal was not proper pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 58 and Miss. R. Civ. P. 79, the supreme court, however, disagreed; while Rule 58 was important for establishing a date for computing post-trial motions and appeals, the supreme court did not interpret the rule to be the only means by which to effect a dismissal, especially where the parties have stipulated to dismiss a separate case, even though the stipulation was located in an order entered in a separate suit. Hayes v. Leflore County Bd. of Supervisors, 935 So. 2d 1015 (Miss. 2006).

Appeal was reinstated where documents styled "Jury Verdict for Defendant" did not contain the word "judgment," were not delivered to plaintiff's counsel, were not in the court file, and were not entered on the docket; documents did not constitute a final judgment and were not intended to be a final judgment, and plaintiff's right to due process protected her from losing her right to appeal since she was not aware of the jury verdict forms and was not notified of their existence. Roberts v. Grafe Auto Co., 653 So. 2d 250 (Miss. 1994).

Rule 80. Stenographic report or transcript as evidence. [Omitted].

COMMENT

When Federal Rule 80 was adopted, subdivisions (a) and (b) permitted a court to appoint a stenographer to make a transcript of testimony in a particular case or to appoint official stenographers, and to tax their fees as costs of the action. The Court Reporter Act of 1948, 28 U.S.C.A. § 753, superseded subdivisions (a) and (b) of the federal rule. 12 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Civil § 3121 (1973). All that remains of Federal Rule 80 is subdivision (c), which states as follows:

Stenographic Report or Transcript as Evidence. Whenever the testimony of a witness at a trial or hearing which was stenographically reported is admissible in evidence at a later trial, it may be proved by the transcript thereof duly certified by the person who reported the testimony.

Mississippi has made statutory provisions for the appointment, oath, nature and term of office, bond, removal from office, and duties and responsibilities of court reporters. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 9-13-1 et seq. (1972). Additionally, Mississippi has a statutory equivalent of Federal Rule 80(c), Miss. Code Ann. § 9-13-43 (1972); therefore, no rule is necessary to make an official transcript acceptable proof of testimony.

Rule 81. Applicability of rules.

(a) Applicability in general. These rules apply to all civil proceedings but are subject to limited applicability in the following actions which are generally governed by statutory procedures.

(1) Proceedings pertaining to the writ of habeas corpus;

(2) proceedings pertaining to the disciplining of an attorney;

(3) proceedings pursuant to the Youth Court Law and the Family Court Law;

(4) proceedings pertaining to election contests;

(5) proceedings pertaining to bond validations;

(6) proceedings pertaining to the adjudication, commitment, and release of narcotics and alcohol addicts and persons in need of mental treatment;

(7) eminent domain proceedings;

(8) Title 91 of the Mississippi Code of 1972;

(9) Title 93 of the Mississippi Code of 1972;

(10) creation and maintenance of drainage and water management districts;

(11) creation of and change in boundaries of municipalities;

(12) proceedings brought under sections 9-5-103, 11-1-23, 11-1-29, 11-1-31, 11-1-33, 11-1-35, 11-1-43, 11-1-45, 11-1-47, 11-1-49, 11-5-151 through 11-5-167, and 11-17-33, Mississippi Code of 1972.

Statutory procedures specifically provided for each of the above proceedings shall remain in effect and shall control to the extent they may be in conflict with these rules; otherwise these rules apply.

(b) Summary proceedings. In ex parte matters where no notice is required proceedings shall be as summary as the pertinent statutes contemplate.

(c) Publication of summons or notice. Whenever a statute requires summons or notice by publication, service in accordance with the methods provided in Rule 4 shall be taken to satisfy the requirements of such statute.

(d) Procedure in certain actions and matters. The special rules of procedure set forth in this paragraph shall apply to the actions and matters enumerated in subparagraphs (1) and (2) hereof and shall control to the extent they may be in conflict with any other provision of these rules.

(1) The following actions and matters shall be triable 30 days after completion of service of process in any manner other than by publication or 30 days after the first publication where process is by publication, to-wit: adoption; correction of birth certificate; alteration of name; termination of parental rights; paternity; legitimation; uniform reciprocal enforcement of support; determination of heirship; partition; probate of will in solemn form; caveat against probate of will; will contest; will construction; child custody actions; child support actions; and establishment of grandparents' visitation.

(2) The following actions and matters shall be triable 7 days after completion of service of process in any manner other than by publication or 30 days after the first publication where process is by publication, to wit: removal of disabilities of minority; temporary relief in divorce, separate maintenance, child custody, or child support matters; modification or enforcement of custody, support, and alimony judgments; contempt; and estate matters and wards' business in which notice is required but the time for notice is not prescribed by statute or by subparagraph (1) above.

(3) Complaints and petitions filed in the actions and matters enumerated in subparagraphs (1) and (2) above shall not be taken as confessed.

(4) No answer shall be required in any action or matter enumerated in subparagraphs (1) and (2) above but any defendant or respondent may file an answer or other pleading or the court may require an answer if it deems it necessary to properly develop the issues. A party who fails to file an answer after being required so to do shall not be permitted to present evidence on his behalf.

(5) Upon the filing of any action or matter listed in subparagraphs (1) and (2) above, summons shall issue commanding the defendant or respondent to appear and defend at a time and place, either in term time or vacation, at which the same shall be heard. Said time and place shall be set by special order, general order or rule of the court. If such action or matter is not heard on the day set for hearing, it may by order signed on that day be continued to a later day for hearing without additional summons on the defendant or respondent. The court may by order or rule authorize its clerk to set such actions or matters for original hearing and to continue the same for hearing on a later date.

(6) Rule 5(b) notice shall be sufficient as to any temporary hearing in a pending divorce, separate maintenance, custody or support action provided the defendant has been summoned to answer the original complaint.

(e) Proceedings modified. The forms of relief formerly obtainable under writs of fieri facias, scire facias, mandamus, error coram nobis, error coram vobis, sequestration, prohibition, quo warranto, writs in the nature of quo warranto, and all other writs, shall be obtained by motions or actions seeking such relief.

(f) Terminology of statutes. In applying these rules to any proceedings to which they are applicable, the terminology of any statute which also applies shall, if inconsistent with these rules, be taken to mean the analogous device or procedure proper under these rules; thus (and these examples are intended in no way to limit the applicability of this general statement):

Bill of complaint, bill in equity, bill, or declaration shall mean a complaint as specified in these rules;

Plea in abatement shall mean motion;

Demurrer shall be understood to mean motion to strike as set out in Rule 12(f);

Plea shall mean motion or answer, whichever is appropriate under these rules;

Plea of set-off or set-off shall be understood to mean a permissible counter-claim;

Plea of recoupment or recoupment shall refer to a compulsory counter-claim;

Cross-bill shall be understood to refer to a counter-claim, or a cross-claim, whichever is appropriate under these rules;

Revivor, revive, or revived, used with reference to actions, shall refer to the substitution procedure stated in Rule 25;

Decree pro confesso shall be understood to mean entry of default as provided in Rule 55;

Decree shall mean a judgment, as defined in Rule 54;

(g) Procedure not specifically prescribed. When no procedure is specifically prescribed, the court shall proceed in any lawful manner not inconsistent with the Constitution of the State of Mississippi, these rules, or any applicable statute. (Amended effective June 24, 1992; April 13, 2000.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Effective April 13, 2000, Rule 81(d)(5) was amended to make a continuance effectual on a signed rather than an entered order. So. 2d (West Miss. Cas. 2000.)

Effective June 24, 1992, Rule 81(h) was deleted. 598-602 So. 2d XXIII-XXIV (West Miss. Cas. 1992).

Effective January 1, 1986, Rule 81(a) was amended by adding subsections (10)-(12); Rule 81(b) was amended by deleting examples and by deleting a provision that no answers are required in ex parte matters; Rule 81(d) was rewritten to provide for proceedings in a number of specified actions and to abrogate its treatment of domestic relations matters. 470-473 So. 2d XVI-XVIII (West Miss. Cas. 1986).

COMMENT

Rule 81 complements Rule 1 by specifying which civil actions are governed only partially, or not at all, by the provisions of the M.R.C.P.

Rule 81(a) lists 12 categories of civil actions which are not governed entirely by the M.R.C.P. In each of those actions there are statutory provisions detailing certain procedures to be utilized. See generally Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-43-1, et seq., (habeas corpus); 73-3-301, et seq., (disciplining of attorneys); 43-21-1, et seq., (youth court proceedings); 43-23-1, et seq., (family court proceedings); 23-5-187 (election contests); 31-13-1, et seq., (bond validation); 41-21-61, et seq., (persons in need of mental treatment); 41-30-1, et seq., (adjudication, commitment and release of alcohol and drug addicts); 11-27-1, et seq., (eminent domain); 91-1-1, et seq.,(trusts and estates); 93-1-1, et seq.,(domestic relations); 51-29-1, et seq.,and 51-31-1, et seq.,(creation and maintenance of drainage and water management districts); 21-1-1, et seq.,(creation of and change in boundaries of municipalities); and those proceedings identified in category (12) by their Code Title as follows: 9-5-103 (bonds of receivers, assignees, executors may be reduced or cancelled, if excessive or for sufficient cause); 11-1-23 (court or judge may require new security); 11-1-29 (proceedings on death of surety on bonds, etc.); 11-1-31 (death of parties on bonds having force of judgment); 11-1-33 (death of parties on bonds having force of judgment — citation in anticipation of judgment); 11-1-35 (death of parties on bonds having force of judgment when citation issued and returnable); 11-1-43 through 11-1-49 (seizure of perishable commodities by legal process); 11-5-151 through 11-5-167 (receivers in chancery); and 11-17-33 (receivers appointed for nonresident or unknown owners of mineral interests).

However, in any instance in the twelve listed categories in which the controlling statutes are silent as to a procedure, such as security for costs, form of summons and methods of service of process and notices, service and filing of pleadings, computation of time, pleadings and motions, discovery, subpoenas, judgments and the like, the M.R.C.P. govern.

Rule 81(b) recognizes that M.R.C.P. are limited in applicability to ex parte matters and that such may be disposed of as summarily as any pertinent statutes permit. Rule 81(b) is intended to preserve, inter alia, the summary manner in which many matters testamentary, of administration, in minors'/wards' business, and in cases of idiocy, lunacy, and persons of unsound mind are handled. See Miss. Code Ann. § 11-5-49 (1972); Duling v. Duling's Estate, 211 Miss. 465, 52 So.2d 39 (1951).

Rule 81(c) pertains to actions or matters where a statute requires that summons or notice be made by publication. In those instances, publication as provided by Rule 4 shall satisfy the requirements of such statute(s).

Rule 81(d) recognizes that there are certain actions and matters whose nature requires special rules of procedure. Basically these are matters of which the State has an interest in the outcome or which because of their nature should not subject a defendant/respondent to a default judgment for failure to answer. Furthermore, they are matters that should not be taken as confessed even in the absence of the appearance of the defendant/respondent. Most of the matters enumerated are peculiar to chancery court. Rule 81(d) divides the actions therein detailed into two categories. This division is based upon the recognition that some matters, because of either their simplicity or need for speedy resolution, should be triable after a short notice to the defendant/respondent; while others, because of their complexity, should afford the defendant/respondent more time for trial preparation.

Rule 81(d)(1) enumerates those actions which are triable 30 days after completion of service of process in any manner other than by publication, or, 30 days after the first publication where process is by publication.

Rule 81(d)(2) enumerates those actions which are triable 7 days after completion of service of process in any manner other than by publication, or, 30 days after the first publication where process is by publication.

Rule 81(d)(3) provides that the pleading initiating the action should be commenced by complaint or petition only and shall not be taken as confessed. Initiating Rule 81(d) actions by "motion" is not intended.

Rule 81(d)(4) expressly provides that no answer is required but allows a defendant/respondent to file an answer or other pleading if he so desires. The rule does recognize that on occasion an answer may be necessary to properly present issues or to narrow them; therefore, the Court may require an answer to be filed. The rule also provides that a party who fails to provide an answer when required shall not be permitted to present evidence on his behalf.

Rule 81(d)(5) recognizes that since no answer is required of a defendant/respondent, then the summons issued shall inform him of the time and place where he is to appear and defend. If the matter is not heard on the date originally set for the hearing, the court may sign an order on that day continuing the matter to a later date. (The rule originally required that the continuance order be entered on the date originally set for the hearing. This requirement proved burdensome in those instances in which the court was sitting in a county different from the one in which the clerk's office was located. Under the present rule, the court may sign the continuance order on the date of the original hearing, thus giving all present parties notice of the continuance, then transmit the order to the clerk for entry.) The rule also provides that the Court may adopt a rule or issue an order authorizing its Clerk to set actions or matters for original hearings and to continue the same for hearing on a later date. (Local rules should be filed with the Supreme Court as required by Rule 83).

Rule 81(d)(6) provides that as to any temporary hearing in a pending action for divorce, separate maintenance, child custody or support, notice in the manner prescribed by Rule 5(b) shall be sufficient, provided the defendant/respondent has already been summoned to answer.

Rule 81(e) provides that the forms of relief formerly obtainable under the listed writs continue to be available under the M.R.C.P., but that such actions are not to be considered as special forms of action. Rather, the relief obtainable heretofore pursuant to those special forms of action are still available as a civil action, or as a motion, in which the object of the former writ is now the prayer for relief.

Rule 81(f) modernizes legal terminology and is intended to ensure that conflicts need not arise over the technical labels applicable to the proceedings detailed in these rules. This method was selected to eliminate the necessity for rewriting numerous statutes which, while not changed or modified in sub stance, contain a term or terms inconsistent with those in the M.R.C.P.

[Amended effective January 10, 1986; effective June 24, 1992; April 13, 2000.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Attachments in chancery.
Attorney discipline.
Child custody proceedings.
Divorce actions.
Due process.
Election contests.
Garnishment proceedings.
Hearings.
Incapacitated individuals.
Initiation of actions.
Notice.
Paternity proceedings.
Probated claims.
Summons.
Support proceedings.
Illustrative cases.

In general.

In a child custody case, because service was served on the mother's counsel of record when in personam service of process on the mother was attempted but not completed by a process server, the requirements of Miss. R. Civ. P. 81 were fully satisfied. Allen v. Williams, 914 So. 2d 254 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Where mother's attorney appeared on her behalf to defendant father's motion, and attorney did not raise the issues of jurisdiction or improper service, the mother waived any challenge to the insufficiency of service of process. Isom v. Jernigan, 840 So. 2d 104 (Miss. 2003).

Rule 81 notice to revive a dormant action provides protections akin to those for beginning litigation. Sanghi v. Sanghi, 759 So. 2d 1250 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

The initiation of actions under subsection (d) should be by filing complaints or petitions and counterclaims or crossclaims, not motions. Magee v. Magee, 754 So. 2d 1275 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Attachments in chancery.

Procedural rules by which a party seeks an attachment in chancery are those provided by attachment in chancery statutes, supplemented only by so much of the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure as may be found not inconsistent with procedures prescribed in statutes. Universal Computer Servs., Inc. v. Lyall, 464 So. 2d 69 (Miss. 1985).

Attorney discipline.

Mississippi State Bar rules of discipline contain no provisions concerning default judgments, and therefore Rules of Civil Procedure concerning default judgments apply to disciplinary proceedings. Harrison v. Mississippi Bar, 637 So. 2d 204 (Miss. 1994).

Bar disciplinary matters are governed first and foremost by Rules of Discipline for Mississippi State Bar, subject only to Constitutions of State of Mississippi and of United States; to the extent they are not inconsistent with Rules of Discipline, Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure are to govern bar disciplinary matters, and where there is conflict between a provision of Rules of Discipline and a provision of Civil Rules, Rules of Discipline shall control. Mississippi State Bar v. Attorney L., 511 So. 2d 119 (Miss. 1987).

There are no specific procedures concerning entry of default judgment in attorney disciplinary actions by the State Bar Committee, and therefore M.R.C.P. Rule 55 applies. Vining v. Mississippi State Bar Ass'n, 508 So. 2d 1047 (Miss. 1987).

Child custody proceedings.

Father waived any issue as to defective service of the grandparents' claim; he was already before the chancery court concerning a number of other matters when the child's maternal grandparents had filed their motion and the chancery court was considering the matters of custody, visitation, and the father's parental rights. Therefore, the chancery court had already exercised jurisdiction over father; additionally, while the notice served on behalf of the grandparents might not have strictly complied with Miss. R. Civ. P. 81, the father was put on notice and he appeared at the hearing and presented evidence on his behalf. M.H. v. D.A., 17 So. 3d 610 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Custody award of the mother's and father's child to the father was appropriate, in part pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 81(d)(2) because any defect regarding notice of the March 26, 2007, hearing was waived when the mother failed to raise it before the chancellor. Price v. McBeath, 989 So. 2d 444 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Custody award of the mother's and father's child to the father was appropriate, in part because the mother waived her jurisdictional arguments when she failed to timely seek resolution of the issue and when she participated in the hearing without first seeking an adjudication of her jurisdictional issue. Price v. McBeath, 989 So. 2d 444 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Miss. R. Civ. P. 81 was complied with where the father defended himself before the court and, according to the transcript, was given the opportunity to address the court as well as cross-examine the mother. Ellzey v. White, 922 So. 2d 40 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Father in child custody proceeding received insufficient notice under subdivision (d) of this rule, where summons did not indicate time and place the complaint would be heard, and it required him to mail or hand deliver a written response to the complaint. Caples v. Caples, 686 So. 2d 1071 (Miss. 1996).

Divorce actions.

Chancellor lacked jurisdiction over the divorce action because the husband was improperly served with a Miss. R. Civ. P. 81 summons, rather than the required Miss. R. Civ. P. 4 summons. For that reason, the chancellor's judgment of divorce was void, as were all determinations therein, including the chancellor's awards of alimony, child custody, and child support; therefore, the chancellor erred in refusing to set aside the judgment pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b). Clark v. Clark, 43 So. 3d 496 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 49 So. 3d 106, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 467 (Miss. 2010).

Finding of contempt was reversed because the wife was never given an opportunity to present evidence on her behalf before a finding of contempt was made. There was no Miss. R. Civ. P. 81 notice of a contempt hearing because there was no contempt hearing at all and the was given no opportunity to present evidence of her hospitalization as the basis for her failure to vacate the house. Hanshaw v. Hanshaw, 55 So. 3d 170 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), reversed by, remanded by 55 So. 3d 143, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 42 (Miss. 2011).

Although contempt proceedings in divorce cases often are filed in the same cause number and proceed with the underlying divorce case, they are held to be separate actions, requiring new and special summons under Miss. R. Civ. P. 81. Shavers v. Shavers, 982 So. 2d 397 (Miss. 2008).

As the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure apply only to the extent that the divorce statutes do not, strict reliance on the Mississippi Rules of Appellate Procedure and Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure is misplaced. Mississippi divorce statutes do not place a time limit on modification. Austin v. Austin, 981 So. 2d 1000 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 981 So. 2d 298, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 223 (Miss. 2008).

Miss. R. Civ. P. 81 summons was not necessary for the December 14, 2004, hearing on whether the ex-husband was in contempt for failing to comply with the agreed temporary order for alimony and child support, and even assuming arguendo that Miss. R. Civ. P. 81 was applicable to a hearing to enforce a temporary order in ongoing litigation, the husband's attorney's appearance at the December 1, 2004, hearing waived any error; similarly, a Miss. R. Civ. P. 81 summons was not necessary to apprise the husband of the February 1, 2005, trial. Carroll v. Carroll, 976 So. 2d 880 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 977 So. 2d 343, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 107 (Miss. 2008).

Appellate court in no way suggests, intimates or holds that the date of a divorce trial must be set on the trial docket at least 20 days prior to trial. In many instances, if not most, complaints for divorce may be set for trial outside of the normal docket setting of the civil trial docket because a divorce case may not be set down on the issue docket unless at the request of one of the parties. Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-7. The appellate court simply holds that once a party appears in a temporary phase of the divorce proceeding, the party is entitled to notice of the subsequent hearing on the underlying divorce proceeding unless the party is so notified during the temporary proceeding. Brown v. Brown, 872 So. 2d 787 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Husband argued that the wife's failure to comply with the requirements of Miss. R. Civ. P. 81 warranted reversal of the contempt order and the judgment of divorce; the appellate court determined that service by mail, without an accompanying summons issued in accordance with the dictates of Miss. R. Civ. P. 81(d)(5), did not provide the requisite service of process which would enable a trial court to act, such that the motion for contempt and the notice of the second hearing for the judgment of divorce were separate matters listed under Rule 81(d) and both required a proper Rule 81 summons. Floyd v. Floyd, 870 So. 2d 677 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

There was no merit in a former husband's claim that the rescheduling of a hearing date on the former wife's petition for modification of alimony was improper, given that the husband received a copy of the order changing the date, and was provided with reasonable notice and an opportunity to be heard. In re Profilet, — So. 2d —, 2001 Miss. App. LEXIS 270 (Miss. Ct. App. July 17, 2001), affirmed in part by, vacated by, remanded in part by 826 So. 2d 91, 2002 Miss. LEXIS 281 (Miss. 2002).

The hearing date in a proceeding to modify the alimony provisions of a divorce decree was properly set where (1) the husband waived formal service of process and accepted the summons through his counsel, (2) the summons listed the date of the hearing as May 20, (3) the chancery court subsequently entered an order that changed the date to May 19, and (4) the husband admitted to having received a copy of the order. Profilet v. Profilet (In re Marriage of Profilet), — So. 2d —, 2001 Miss. App. LEXIS 48 (Miss. Ct. App. Feb. 6, 2001).

Procedural provisions of statute governing divorce actions limit applicability of Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure, which govern only where the divorce statute stands silent. Rawson v. Buta, 609 So. 2d 426 (Miss. 1992).

Due process.

In criminal contempt proceeding, husband waived his claims of defective service and violation of due process where the chancery court had personal jurisdiction over him because chancery courts have ongoing personal jurisdiction over parties to a divorce proceeding and husband's attorney was served with a motion for contempt two weeks prior to the hearing, the receipt of which was not disputed, and husband was given a meaningful opportunity to explain his actions which were the subject of the motion for contempt and did, in fact, aggressively defend himself at the hearing. Dennis v. Dennis, 824 So. 2d 604 (Miss. 2002).

Husband was denied due process by adjudication of child custody and support matters in his absence, where summons with which he was served was a M.R.C.P. Rule 4 alias summons, which did not set a time, date and place for hearing on complaint; proper procedure would have been to serve husband with motion for modification and a Rule 81 summons, setting a time and date for hearing. Powell v. Powell, 644 So. 2d 269 (Miss. 1994).

Election contests.

Miss. Code Ann. § 23-15-927 is silent regarding the amendment of pleadings. Therefore, Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(a) controls and amendments are allowed at any time before a responsive pleading is served; in the case at bar, no responsive pleading from the County Democratic Executive Committee was on record, and even if there was a response by the Committee served upon the candidate (who opposed the holding of a new primary election), in the record, Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(a) allowed the amendment of pleadings after a responsive pleading was served "by leave of the court." Jefferson Davis County v. Davies, 912 So. 2d 837 (Miss. 2005).

Nothing in statutes governing election contests conflicted with rules of civil procedure respecting amendments, and trial court did not err when it allowed petition for judicial review to be amended. Pearson v. Parsons, 541 So. 2d 447 (Miss. 1989).

Proceedings in an election contest before a political party's executive committee are not civil proceedings in a court of record, and hence Rules of Civil Procedure have no application; with respect to proceedings before special tribunal, Rules of Civil Procedure control only to extent that governing statute is silent. Shannon v. Henson, 499 So. 2d 758 (Miss. 1986).

Garnishment proceedings.

By virtue of M.R.C.P. Rule 69 (a), procedural rules whereby a party seeks to secure and enforce the remedy of garnishment are those provided by Mississippi garnishment statutes, supplemented by so much of the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure as may be found not inconsistent with the procedures prescribed in such statutes. First Miss. Nat'l Bank v. KLH Indus., Inc., 457 So. 2d 1333 (Miss. 1984).

Hearings.

The rule allows a general rule of the court to establish the time and place of hearings, including a rule that authorizes the court clerk to set matters for hearing; this permits a clerk to set the date and time for hearings without the need for a chancellor's signature on an order, but does not authorize the chancellors of a district to bypass the summons requirement by using court administrator notice, even if there were a local rule adopted providing for that. Sanghi v. Sanghi, 759 So. 2d 1250 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Incapacitated individuals.

Automatic right of supersedeas or stay was inconsistent with purpose of statute governing commitment for treatment of alcoholism, and therefore statute, rather than rule of civil procedure, controlled question whether person committed for chemical dependency treatment was entitled to supersedeas or stay pending appeal as a matter of right. McIntire v. Moore, 512 So. 2d 687 (Miss. 1987).

Initiation of actions.

The initiation of actions under subsection (d) should be by filing "complaints" or "petitions," and "counterclaims" or "cross-claims" (whichever might be appropriate), not "motions" and "cross-petitions." Cornelius v. Overstreet, 757 So. 2d 332 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Notice.

Father was subject to the chancery court's continuing jurisdiction and received notice of the trial date; the document which gave the father notice of the hearing was a Miss. R. Civ. P. 81 summons and it listed the time and date for the father to appear, which he did, and he was present when the case was transferred to the other chancellor, such that the father had every opportunity to check with the chancery clerk's office and the mother's attorney regarding the case's status. Vincent v. Griffin, 852 So. 2d 620 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Plaintiff waived any objection he might have had to not being given timely notice of the hearing when he did not raise any objections during the proceedings or request a continuance when the chancellor announced that he would consider the motion for contempt and rule upon it. Yancey v. Yancey, 752 So. 2d 1006 (Miss. 1999).

Paternity proceedings.

Six person juror requirement in M.R.C.P. Rule 48(b) applied to paternity proceeding transferred from chancery court to county court following defendant's demand for jury trial, since nothing in statute governing such proceedings suggested the number of jurors that may be required. Clark v. Whiten, 508 So. 2d 1105 (Miss. 1987).

Probated claims.

Where executrix filed a complaint to admit the decedent's will to probate in solemn form, a Miss. R. Civ. P. 81 matter, but decedent's brother was served notice pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 4, the trial court erred in admitting the will in solemn form, but had jurisdiction over the common form probate proceedings, and as decedent's brother did not contest the will within the two-year limitations period, the probate in common form was final and binding. In re Estate of Kelly v. Cuevas, 951 So. 2d 564 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), affirmed in part and reversed in part by 951 So. 2d 543, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 2007).

Summary judgment practice under M.R.C.P. Rule 56 is inapplicable in contests of probated claims, because it is inconsistent with statutory procedure requiring claimant to enter court to introduce evidence in support of claim and permitting personal representative to rebut claim. Saddler v. Saddler, 556 So. 2d 344 (Miss. 1990).

Summons.

Although counsel for both parties appeared before the chancellor when sanctions were imposed against a spouse for delay in leaving the marital home that was being sold, Miss. R. Civ. P. 81 required that a summons be personally served on the spouse before the contempt proceeding. A new contempt hearing after proper notice was ordered. Hanshaw v. Hanshaw, 55 So. 3d 143 (Miss. 2011).

Because the order setting the last hearing date was not entered on the date of continuance of a prior hearing, the chancellor should have required service of an additional Miss. R. Civ. P. 81 summons on the father before holding the hearing and assessing him with attorney fees. Vincent v. Griffin, 872 So. 2d 676 (Miss. 2004).

When proceeding under matters enumerated in the Rule, a proper summons had to be served; a Miss. R. Civ. P. 4 summons did not satisfy the requirements of Rule 81. Reichert v. Reichert, 807 So. 2d 1282 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Summons under the Rule was mandatory and absent a summons, the judgment was void, Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(4) allowed relief from a void judgment. Reichert v. Reichert, 807 So. 2d 1282 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Chancellor did not have jurisdiction, in contempt proceeding resulting from husband's failure to pay temporary support obligations during a divorce proceeding, to incarcerate the husband because there was no evidence that a summons was served on the husband regarding the contempt hearing. Serton v. Serton, 819 So. 2d 15 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Support proceedings.

Failure to achieve proper service in the divorce action did not render the action for temporary relief void. A separate Miss. R. Civ. P. 81 summons was properly issued in the wife's action for temporary support, thus giving the chancellor jurisdiction to award temporary relief; therefore, because the chancellor had jurisdiction over the matters adjudicated at the temporary support hearing, the temporary order stood. Clark v. Clark, 43 So. 3d 496 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 49 So. 3d 106, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 467 (Miss. 2010).

Where a mother filed a complaint for custody and support, the Mississippi court lacked personal jurisdiction over the father sufficient to enter a child support award because the father had no contact with Mississippi and agreeing to an order setting the case for trial did not act as a general appearance or otherwise waive the defense of lack of personal jurisdiction. Richardson v. Stogner, 958 So. 2d 235 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Lone action of agreeing to an order setting the case for trial does not act as a general appearance or otherwise waive the defense that the court lacks personal jurisdiction. Richardson v. Stogner, 958 So. 2d 235 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Order finding a father in contempt for his nonpayment of child support was upheld where he had received a valid summons for the initial hearing; because the father appeared at the hearing at which he was found in contempt, any defects in the issuance of the notice by the court administrator were waived. Bailey v. Fischer, 946 So. 2d 404 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 947 So. 2d 960, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 54 (Miss. 2007).

Where defendant denied being served with process, there was no return of service in the record, and no entry in the docket book indicating that there ever was a return, a judgment finding him in contempt and ordering him to pay educational expenses was void. Morrison v. Miss. Dep't of Human Servs., 863 So. 2d 948 (Miss. 2004).

In a contempt proceeding on the husband's failure to pay child support, the affirmative defense of the statute of limitations was not waived because, although the husband filed an answer, no such pleading was required under Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b) and 81(d)(2), (4); thus, the husband had the right to raise the defense at any stage and the statute of limitations would bar any claims filed seven years after the youngest child reached the age of 21 pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-59. Miss. Dep't of Human Servs. v. Guidry, 830 So. 2d 628 (Miss. 2002).

Rule 81(d)(3) requires that a petition or complaint be filed to modify or enforce child support and alimony judgments or to seek contempt; the mislabeling of the initiating pleading is a matter of form and would not by itself create a lack of authority for the court to act. Sanghi v. Sanghi, 759 So. 2d 1250 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Illustrative cases.

Fair reading of the annexation statutes, Miss. R. Civ. P. 15(a), Miss. R. Civ. P. 81(a)(11), and applicable case law leaves no doubt that, in most instances, annexation pleadings are amendable pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 15. So that the court's interpretation is clear, it clarifies today that in annexations proceedings, when errors appear in the legal description of the territory proposed to be annexed and/or in the legal description of the entire boundary as changed after enlargement/annexation, such errors may be amended pursuant to the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure and case law. Lamar County v. City of Hattiesburg (In re Extension of the Boundaries of Hattiesburg), 840 So. 2d 69 (Miss. 2003).

Chancellor erred in granting default judgment, since defendant was not required to file an answer and subdivision (d)(5) of this rule required issuance of summons commanding defendant to appear and defend, which precluded a default judgment. Biloxi Regional Medical Ctr., Inc. v. Estate of Ross, 546 So. 2d 667 (Miss. 1989).

CHAPTER XI. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Rule 82. Jurisdiction and venue.

(a) Jurisdiction unaffected. These rules shall not be construed to extend or limit the jurisdiction of the courts of Mississippi.

(b) Venue of actions. Except as provided by this rule, venue of all actions shall be as provided by statute.

(c) Venue where claim or parties joined. Where several claims or parties have been properly joined, the suit may be brought in any county in which any one of the claims could properly have been brought. Whenever an action has been commenced in a proper county, additional claims and parties may be joined, pursuant to Rules 13, 14, 22 and 24, as ancillary thereto, without regard to whether that county would be a proper venue for an independent action on such claims or against such parties.

(d) Improper venue. When an action is filed laying venue in the wrong county, the action shall not be dismissed, but the court, on timely motion, shall transfer the action to the court in which it might properly have been filed and the case shall proceed as though originally filed therein. The expenses of the transfer shall be borne by the plaintiff. The plaintiff shall have the right to select the court to which the action shall be transferred in the event the action might properly have been filed in more than one court.

(e) Forum non-conveniens. With respect to actions filed in an appropriate venue where venue is not otherwise designated or limited by statute, the court may, for the convenience of the parties and witnesses or in the interest of justice, transfer any action or any claim in any civil action to any court in which the action might have been properly filed and the case shall proceed as though originally filed therein. (Amended effective February 20, 2004, to add Section 82(e) allowing transfer for forum non-conveniens for cases filed after the effective date.)

COMMENT

Rule 82(a) reaffirms that nothing in the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure shall be construed as extending or limiting the jurisdiction of any state court.

Subdivisions (b) and (d) pertain to venue. Generally, venue is controlled by statute in Mississippi, See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-11-1 through 11-11-59 (1972), and the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure follow the statutes.

The rule adopts the recommendation of the dissenting opinions in Gillard v. Great Southern Mortgage & Loan Corp., 354 So. 2d 794 (Miss. 1978), and requires that the cost of transferring an action to a court wherein venue is proper shall be borne by the plaintiff. See Gillard,, at 798-801 (Sugg and Broom, JJ., dissenting opinions). Additionally, Rule 82(d) secures to the plaintiff the right to select the court to which the action shall be transferred in the event it is originally brought in the wrong court and there are two or more other courts in which it could properly be filed.

Until the adoption of Rule 82(e), Mississippi had not recognized the doctrine of forum non-conveniens as applicable to the selection of forums within the state. Clark v. Luvel Dairy Products, Inc.,731 So. 2d 1098 (Miss. 1998). Rule 82(e) now recognizes intrastate forum non-conveniens as to actions filed after its adoption on February 19, 2004. The rules recognizes that venue is essentially a legislative matter. However, where there are multiple venues which are all allowable under the statutes, and there are circumstances under which the inconvenience or disadvantage to one or more parties is substantial and a transfer to another county will not work a substantial hardship on the plaintiff, the court will now transfer the case or claim to the more convenient county. The doctrine is one of reason and common sense to be applied to avoid significant geographical disadvantage.

It has been said that modern advancements in technology and transportation have rendered the notion of intrastate forum non-conveniens obsolete. This is an overstatement. Although there is no doubt that many of the logistical difficulties of the past are now of lesser significance, the costs of travel, housing, the proximity of parties, witnesses, and non-trial staff and records remain factors for consideration in determining whether the burdens imposed by the plaintiff's choice of venue justify transfer.

[Comment amended February 20, 2004.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Construction.
Improper venue.
Purpose.

In general.

Transferring venue over plaintiffs' wrongful death action from the Lauderdale circuit court to the Covington county circuit court was an abuse of discretion because, at the time the suit was filed, neither the common law nor the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure allowed an intrastate change of venue based on the doctrine of forum non conveniens; rather, Miss. R. Civ. P. 82(e), which allowed intrastate transfer of cases for forum non-conveniens, was not retroactive and applied only to cases filed after February 20, 2004. Goodwin v. Culpepper Enters., 963 So. 2d 1166 (Miss. 2007).

Both Miss. R. Civ. P. 82(e) and Miss. Code Ann. § 11-11-3(4)(a) required the transfer of a case brought by a resident of Claiborne County, Mississippi, against a doctor, who resided in Warren County, Mississippi, and two nonresident defendants to county of proper venue —i.e., Warren County—where the reason for the transfer was the inability to seat an impartial jury. Warren County was the only county of appropriate venue because it was the only county in Mississippi in which a defendant (the doctor) resided. Namihira v. Bailey, 891 So. 2d 831 (Miss. 2005).

Pharmaceutical companies argued that the plaintiffs took the prescription drug at different times, under different labels and warnings and had different pre-existing conditions. Because of those differences, the companies sought to have plaintiffs' joinder in Jefferson County severed, alleging that the inquiries into alleged defective design, failure to warn, breach of warranty and misrepresentation would be wholly distinct in each plaintiff's case; the Mississippi Supreme Court concluded a jury could well be overwhelmed by the 30 separate fact patterns that were offered to prove medical malpractice, affirmed the trial court's decision to sever plaintiffs' claims, and affirmed the trial court's decision, allowing for transfer of the claims of those plaintiffs without jurisdiction in Jefferson County to the court or courts of plaintiffs' counsel's choosing. Culbert v. Johnson & Johnson, 883 So. 2d 550 (Miss. 2004).

In a suit where an administratrix sued a railroad for her husband's death, alleging injuries and death due to exposure to asbestos, although the decedent resided and worked for the railroad in Tennessee, a suit with others against it in Mississippi was proper because the administratrix was properly joined under Miss. R. Civ. P. 20, and thus, under Miss. R. Civ. P. 82(c), venue was proper for all plaintiffs where it was proper for one. Ill. Cent. R.R. v. Travis, 808 So. 2d 928 (Miss. 2002).

Where there are multiple defendants and they live in different counties, venue is proper in the county where one of the defendants resides, and if one of the defendants is a nonresident of the State, the plaintiff may bring suit against the nonresident in the county of plaintiff's residence; jurisdiction and venue of that nonresident defendant makes the county of plaintiff's residence the proper venue against all resident defendants, even though they may live in different counties. Senatobia Community Hosp. v. Orr, 607 So. 2d 1224 (Miss. 1992).

Construction.

Inmate's challenge to the inmate's earned-time calculation by the Mississippi Department of Corrections was a post-administrative review procedure subject to transfer pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 82(d) rather than a motion for post-conviction relief. Putnam v. Epps, 63 So. 3d 547 (Miss. 2011).

In a wrongful death action, a trial court did not err in transferring a hospital and other medical defendants to the county where the hospital was located because under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-11-3(3), the only proper venue for a suit against medical providers was the county in which the alleged act or omission occurred; there was no conflict between Miss. Code Ann. § 11-11-3(3) and the more liberal venue provision of Miss. R. Civ. P. 82(c) because Miss. R. Civ. P. 82(b) state: "Except as provided by this rule, venue of all actions shall be as provided by statute." Adams v. Baptist Mem'l Hospital-Desoto, Inc., 965 So. 2d 652 (Miss. 2007).

Miss. R. Civ. P. 82(c) does not support a plaintiff establishing venue in his own county of residence when a resident defendant is a party to the suit. Capital City Ins. Co. v. G.B. 'Boots' Smith Corp., 889 So. 2d 505 (Miss. 2004).

Bill of discovery was not abolished or rendered obsolete by enactment of the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure. State Oil & Gas Bd. v. McGowan, 542 So. 2d 244 (Miss. 1989).

Improper venue.

Change of venue should have been granted because the mandatory language of the general venue statute of former Miss. Code Ann. § 11-11-3 controlled over the permissive language of former Miss. Code Ann. § 11-11-11 so that plaintiffs were not entitled to establish venue in their county of residence when a resident defendant was a party to the negligence suit; Miss. R. Civ. P. 82(c) did not establish venue in plaintiffs' county of residence, and venue was determined from the date of original filing so that the dismissal of the resident defendant did not cure or correct improper venue. Crenshaw v. Roman, 942 So. 2d 806 (Miss. 2006).

Where plaintiffs, numerous former and present employees, sued defendant, a railroad company, for occupational lung disease (all but one plaintiff residing outside of Tunica County, Mississippi, where the suit was filed, and some plaintiffs residing in Tennessee), primarily due to alleged exposure to asbestos, the railroad company successfully argued that joinder was improper because their employment consisted of work in different crafts at different work sites during different periods of time, and there was no transaction or occurrence or "distinct litigable event" common to all plaintiffs. Moreover, all claims against out-of-state defendants based on causes of action that accrued out of state were dismissed based on forum non conveniens, and all other plaintiffs' claims had to be severed from those of the Tunica County resident, including claims of plaintiffs who alleged exposure in Tunica County; all cases that could not be brought individually in Tunica County were to be transferred to a venue in which each plaintiff could have originally brought his or her claim, as required by Miss. R. Civ. P. 82(d). Ill. Cent. R.R. Co. v. Gregory, 912 So. 2d 829 (Miss. 2005).

Defendant hospital was a Mississippi corporation with its principal place of business in De Soto County and the patient was treated at the hospital in De Soto County when he received the alleged negligent care and treatment from the hospital and doctor; therefore, venue was proper in De Soto County and the circuit court abused its discretion in denying a change of venue from Quitman County to De Soto County. Baptist Mem. Hospital-Desoto, Inc. v. Bailey, 919 So. 2d 1 (Miss. 2005).

Four out-of-state owners had to be dismissed because if they were not dismissed, the insurer and agents would be forced to travel to California, Georgia and Alabama for discovery, and the cost of the travel would increase the already high cost of litigation; Mississippi had no local interest in trying the out-of-state owners' claims, and the doctrine of forum non conveniens demanded that the out-of-state claims be heard in another forum. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Murriel, 904 So. 2d 112 (Miss. 2004).

Because the city, a defendant, was wholly situated in Lauderdale County, venue was only proper in Lauderdale County and not in Hinds County; therefore, there was no question that the suit should have been transferred pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 82(d), and there was no discernible basis for the refusal by the trial court to transfer the case. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Moss, 873 So. 2d 76 (Miss. 2004).

Chancery court erred in dismissing the nurse's appeal, filed in the wrong county, that should have been filed in the chancery court of the county of his residence; the chancery court should have transferred the action to the nurse's resident county and the case could proceed as though originally filed in the resident county. Taylor v. Miss. Bd. of Nursing, 863 So. 2d 1015 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where plaintiff sued the Mississippi Attorney General to obtain discovery from him for use in an administrative proceeding, as the suit was against him in his official capacity, and under Miss. Const. art. 4, § 101, the seat of state government was in Hinds County, venue was proper there, not in Rankin County, where he lived. Moore v. Bell Chevrolet-Pontiac-Buick-GMC, LLC, 864 So. 2d 939 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court abused its discretion in denying a motion by a hospital and three physicians to transfer venue in a medical malpractice action because a decedent's heirs had failed to assert a reasonable claim of liability against certain defendants that had been dismissed from the action and because the hospital was a community hospital under the Mississippi Tort Claims Act and was entitled to venue in the county in which its governing body's principal offices were located. Wayne Gen. Hosp. v. Hayes, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 598 (Miss. Nov. 6, 2003), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. LEXIS 298 (Miss. Mar. 25, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 868 So. 2d 997, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 289 (Miss. 2004).

Although an appeal from a workers' compensation award must be filed to the circuit court of the county in which the injury occurred, this requirement is a matter of venue rather than jurisdiction and the appropriate remedy when an appeal is filed with the wrong circuit court is a transfer of venue, rather than a dismissal. Underwood v. McRae's, 811 So. 2d 400 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Chancery court should have transferred divorce action to county which husband still considered his residence, where he still owned a home, and where he voted and had a homestead exemption, rather then retaining jurisdiction and venue in county where husband temporarily resided and was found for service of process. Dunn v. Dunn, 577 So. 2d 378 (Miss. 1991).

When a defendant is sued in both a paternity and support proceeding, putative father has right to have case heard in county in which he resides, if he is a resident of Mississippi; defendant must timely assert this right via a M.R.C.P. Rule 12(b)(3) motion, and his failure to do so amounts to waiver. Belk v. State Dep't of Pub. Welfare, 473 So. 2d 447 (Miss. 1985).

Purpose.

Subdivision (a) of this rule makes clear that nothing in rules of civil procedure alters jurisdiction of any court, nor is power of any court to grant substantive relief changed from what it was before enactment of the rules. State Oil & Gas Bd. v. McGowan, 542 So. 2d 244 (Miss. 1989).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Law Reviews — Litigation in Mississippi Today: A Symposium: Life in Lawsuit Central: An Overview of the Unique Aspects of Mississippi's Civil Justice System, 71 Miss. L.J. 359, Winter, 2002.

Now Open for Business: The Transformation of Mississippi's Legal Climate, 24 Miss. C. L. Rev. 393, Spring, 2005.

State Court Class Actions in Mississippi: Why Adopt Them Now?, 24 Miss. C. L. Rev. 437, Spring, 2005.

Rule 83. Local court rules.

(a) When permissible. The conference of circuit, chancery and county court judges may hereafter make uniform rules and amendments thereto concerning practice in their respective courts not inconsistent with these rules. Likewise, any court by action of a majority of the judges thereof may hereafter make local rules and amendments thereto concerning practice in their respective courts not inconsistent with these rules. In the event there is no majority, the senior judge shall have an additional vote.

(b) Procedure for approval. All such local rules and uniform rules adopted before being effective must be filed in the Supreme Court of Mississippi for approval. Such motions shall also include a copy of the motion and of the proposed rules in an electronically formatted medium (such as USB Flash Drive or CD-ROM). Upon receipt of such proposed rules and prior to any approval of the same, the Supreme Court may submit them to the Supreme Court Advisory Committee on Rules for advice as to whether any such rules are consistent or in conflict with these rules or any other rules adopted by the Supreme Court.

(c) Publication. All local and uniform rules hereinafter approved by the Supreme Court shall be submitted for publication in the Southern Reporter (Mississippi cases). (Amended effective March 1, 1989; November 29, 1989; February 1, 1990; March 13, 1991; December 16, 1991; amended March 10, 1994, effective retroactively from and after January 1, 1993; amended October 13, 1995, effective from and after April 14, 1994; amended effective July 1, 2010.)

ADVISORY COMMITTEE HISTORICAL NOTE

Rule 83 was amended March 10, 1994, effective retroactively from and after January 1, 1993, by deleting the word "hereinafter" in Rule 83(b) following the words, "uniform rules"; by deleting Rule 83(c) in its entirety; and by renumbering 83(d) as 83(c). 632-635 So.2d XXIII-XXIV (West Miss.Cases 1994).

[Adopted August 21, 1996.]

COMMENT

Rule 83 guarantees the right of trial judges to prescribe local rules of court, not inconsistent with the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure, as may be necessary to implement the MRCP; see, e. g., MRCP 16 (pre-trial procedures); 40 (trial calendaring); and 78 (motion day). All local rules must be filed with the Supreme Court of Mississippi. No uniform rules or local rules of any circuit, chancery or county court shall be effective unless approved by the Supreme Court.

[Amended March 10, 1994, effective retroactively from and after January 1, 1993; amended October 13, 1995, effective from and after April 14, 1994.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Procedure for approval.

Summary judgment for defendant in medical malpractice case was reversed, where parties' affidavits raised triable questions of fact which, but for imposition of improperly promulgated local rule governing summary judgment, would have resulted in jury trial. Koerner v. Crittenden, 635 So. 2d 833 (Miss. 1994).

Rule 84. Forms.

The forms contained in the Appendix of Forms are sufficient under the rules and are intended to indicate the simplicity and brevity of statement which the rules contemplate.

Rule 85. Title.

These rules shall be known as the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure and may be cited as M.R.C.P.; e. g., M.R.C.P. 85.

APPENDIX A. FORMS

[See Rule 84]

INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

1. The following forms are intended for illustration only. They are limited in number. No attempt is made to furnish a manual of forms.

2. Except where otherwise indicated, each pleading, motion, and other paper should have a caption similar to that of the summons, with the designation of the particular paper substituted for the word "Summons." In the caption of the summons and in the caption of the complaint all parties must be named but in other pleadings and papers it is sufficient to state the name of the first party on each side, with an appropriate indication of other parties. See M.R.C.P. 4(b), 7(b)(2), and 10(a).

3. Each pleading, motion, and other paper is to be signed by at least one attorney of record in his individual name (M.R.C.P. 11). The attorney's name is to be followed by his address as indicated in Form 2. In forms following Form 2 the signature and address are not indicated.

4. If a party is not represented by an attorney, the signature and address of the party are required in place of those of the attorney (M.R.C.P. 11).

Form 1A. Summons.

(Process Server)

IN THE _____ COURT OF _____ COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI

A.B., Plaintiff(s)

v. Civil Action, File No. _____

CD., Defendant(s)

SUMMONS

THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI

TO: (Insert the name and address of the person to be served)

NOTICE TO DEFENDANT(S)

THE COMPLAINT WHICH IS ATTACHED TO THIS SUMMONS IS IMPORTANT AND

YOU MUST TAKE IMMEDIATE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR RIGHTS.

You are required to mail or hand deliver a copy of a written response to the Complaint to _____, the attorney for the Plaintiff(s), whose post office address is _____ and whose street address is _____. Your response must be mailed or delivered within (30) days from the date of delivery of this summons and complaint or a judgment by default will be entered against you for the money or other things demanded in the complaint.

You must also file the original of your response with the Clerk of this Court within a reasonable time afterward.

Issued under my hand and the seal of said Court, this _____ day of, _____.

_____

Clerk of County, Mississippi

_____

_____

(Seal)

[This form shall appear on the reverse side of Form 1A. Summons (Process Server)]

PROOF OF SERVICE—SUMMONS
(Process Server)

[Use separate proof of service for each person served]

_____

Name of Person or Entity Served

I, the undersigned process server, served the summons and complaint upon the person or entity named above in the manner set forth below (process server must check proper space and provide all additional information that is requested and pertinent to the mode of service used):

_____ FIRST CLASS MAIL AND ACKNOWLEDGEMENT SERVICE. By mailing (by first class mail, postage prepaid), on the date stated in the attached Notice, copies to the person served, together with copies of the form of notice and acknowledgement and return envelope, postage prepaid, addressed to the sender (Attach completed acknowledgement of receipt pursuant to M.R.C.P. Form 1B).

_____ PERSONAL SERVICE. I personally delivered copies to _____ on the _____ day of, _____, where I found said person(s) in _____ County of the State of _____.

_____ RESIDENCE SERVICE. After exercising reasonable diligence I was unable to deliver copies to said person within _____ county, (state). I served the summons and complaint on the _____ day of _____, _____, at the usual place of abode of said person by leaving a true copy of the summons and complaint with _____ who is the _____ (here insert wife, husband, son, daughter or other person as the case may be), a member of the family of the person served above the age of sixteen years and willing to receive the summons and complaint, and thereafter on the _____ day of _____, _____, I mailed (by first class mail, postage prepaid) copies to the person served at his or her usual place of abode where the copies were left.

_____ CERTIFIED MAIL SERVICE. By mailing to an address outside Mississippi (by first class mail, postage prepaid, requiring a return receipt) copies to the person served. (Attach signed return receipt or the return envelope marked "Refused.")

At the time of service I was at least 18 years of age and not a party to this action.

Fee for service: $_____

Process server must list below: [Please print or type]

Name_____

Social Security No._____

Address_____

Telephone No._____

State of_____

County of _____

Personally appeared before me the undersigned authority in and for the state and county aforesaid, the within named _____ who being first by me duly sworn states on oath that the matters and facts set forth in the foregoing "Proof of Service-Summons" are true and correct as therein stated.

_____

Process Server (Signature)

Sworn to and subscribed before me this the _____ day of _____.

_____

Notary Public

(Seal) My Commission Expires:_____

(Adopted effective March 1, 1985; amended effective May 2, 1985; amended March 17, 1995.)

Form 1AA. Summons.

(Sheriff)

IN THE _____ COURT OF _____ COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI

A.B., Plaintiff(s)

v. Civil Action, File No._____

C.D., Defendant(s)

SUMMONS

THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI

TO: (Insert the name and address of the person to be served)

NOTICE TO DEFENDANT(S)

THE COMPLAINT WHICH IS ATTACHED TO THIS SUMMONS IS IMPORTANT AND YOU MUST TAKE IMMEDIATE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR RIGHTS.

You are required to mail or hand-deliver a copy of a written response to the Complaint to _____, the attorney for the Plaintiff(s), whose post office address is _____, and whose street address is _____. Your response must be mailed or delivered within (30) days from the date of delivery of this summons and complaint or a judgment by default will be entered against you for the money or other things demanded in the complaint.

You must also file the original of your response with the Clerk of this Court within a reasonable time afterward.

Issued under my hand and the seal of said Court, this _____ day of_____, _____.

_____

Clerk of _____ County,
Mississippi

_____

_____

(Seal)

_____ [This form shall appear on the reverse side of Form 1AA: Summons (Sheriff)]

RECEIVED THIS _____ DAY OF _____, _____.

BY_____

SHERIFF

SHERIFF'S RETURN

State of Mississippi _____

County of _____

( ) I personally delivered copies of the summons and complaint on the _____ day of _____, _____, to: _____.

( ) After exercising reasonable diligence I was unable to deliver copies of the summons and complaint to _____ within _____ County, Mississippi. I served the summons and complaint on the _____ day of _____, _____, at the usual place of abode of said _____, by leaving a true copy of the summons and complaint with _____, who is the (here insert wife, husband, son, daughter or other person so as the case may be), a member of the family of the person served above the age of sixteen years and willing to receive the summons and complaint, and thereafter on the _____ day of _____, _____, I mailed (by first class mail, postage prepaid) copies to the person served at his or her usual place of abode where the copies were left.

( ) I was unable to serve the summons and complaint.

This the _____ day of _____, _____.

_____

Sheriff of _____ County,
Mississippi

By: _____, Deputy Sheriff

[Note: All summons issued to the sheriff must be returned within thirty days from the day the summons was received by the sheriff pursuant to the requirements of Mississippi Rule of Civil Procedure 4(c)(2)].
(Adopted effective March 1, 1985; amended effective February 1, 1990.)

Form 1B. Notice and acknowledgement for service by mail.

IN THE COURT OF _____ COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI

A.B., Plaintiff(s)

(include appropriate designation of other plaintiffs)

v. Civil Action, File No._____

C.D., Defendant(s)

(include appropriate designation of other defendants)

NOTICE

TO: (Insert the name and address of the person to be served)

The enclosed summons and complaint are served pursuant to Rule 4(c)(3) of the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure.

You must sign and date the acknowledgement at the bottom of this page. If you are served on behalf of a corporation, unincorporated association (including a partnership), or other entity, you must indicate under your signature your relationship to that entity. If you are served on behalf of another person and you are authorized to receive process, you must indicate under your signature your authority.

If you do not complete and return the form to the sender within 20 days of the date of mailing shown below, you (or the party on whose behalf you are being served) may be required to pay any expenses incurred in serving a summons and complaint.

If you do complete and return this form, you (or the party on whose behalf you are being served) must respond to the complaint within 30 days of the date of your signature. If you fail to do so, judgment by default will be taken against you for the relief demanded in the complaint.

I declare that this Notice and Acknowledgement of Receipt of Summons and Complaint was mailed on _____ (Insert date)

_____

Signature

THIS ACKNOWLEDGEMENT OF RECEIPT OF SUMMONS AND

COMPLAINT MUST BE COMPLETED

I acknowledge that I have received a copy of the summons and of the complaint in the above-captioned matter in the State of _____.

_____

Signature

(Relationship to Entity/Authority to Receive Service of Process)

_____

Date of Signature

State of_____
County of_____

Personally appeared before me, the undersigned authority in and for the State and County aforesaid, the above named _____, who solemnly and truly declared and affirmed before me that the matters and facts set forth in the foregoing Acknowledgement of Receipt of Summons and Complaint are true and correct as therein stated.

Affirmed and subscribed before me this _____ day of _____, _____.

_____

Notary Public
My Commission Expires _____

(Seal)
(Adopted effective March 1, 1985; amended effective May 2, 1985; amended March 17, 1995.)

Form 1C. Summons by publication.

IN THE COURT OF _____ COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI

A.B., Plaintiff(s)

(It is sufficient here to state the name of the first plaintiff with an appropriate designation of other plaintiffs.)

v. Civil Action, File No._____

CD., Defendant(s)

(It is sufficient here to state the name of the first defendant with an appropriate designation of other defendants.)

SUMMONS

THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI

TO: (Insert name of the person(s) to be served)

You have been made a Defendant in the suit filed in this Court by (Insert name of all Plaintiffs), Plaintiff(s), seeking (Insert a brief description of the relief being sought). Defendants other than you in this action are (Insert names of all defendants other than the person or persons who are the subject of this summons).

You are required to mail or hand deliver a written response to the Complaint filed against you in this action to _____, Attorney for Plaintiff(s), whose post office address is _____ and whose street address is _____.

YOUR RESPONSE MUST BE MAILED OR DELIVERED NOT LATER THAN THIRTY DAYS AFTER THE _____ DAY OF _____, _____, WHICH IS THE DATE OF THE FIRST PUBLICATION OF THIS SUMMONS. IF YOUR RESPONSE IS NOT SO MAILED OR DELIVERED, A JUDGMENT BY DEFAULT WILL BE ENTERED AGAINST YOU FOR THE MONEY OR OTHER RELIEF DEMANDED IN THE COMPLAINT.

You must also file the original of your Response with the Clerk of this Court within a reasonable time afterward.

Issued under my hand and the seal of said Court, this _____ day of _____, _____.

_____

Clerk of _____ County,

Mississippi

_____

_____

(Seal)

(Adopted effective March 1, 1985; amended effective May 2, 1985.)

Form 1D. Rule 81 Summons.

(Sheriff or Process Server)

IN THE COURT OF _____ COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI

A. B., Plaintiff(s)

v. Civil Action, File No._____

C. D., Defendant(s)

SUMMONS

THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI

TO: (Insert the name)

NOTICE TO DEFENDANT(S)

THE COMPLAINT OR PETITION WHICH IS ATTACHED TO THIS SUMMONS IS IMPORTANT AND YOU MUST TAKE IMMEDIATE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR RIGHTS.

You are summoned to appear and defend against said complaint orpetition at _____ O'clock _____.M. on the _____ day of _____, in the courtroom of the _____ County Courthouse at _____, Mississippi, and in case of your failure to appear and defend a judgment will be entered against you for the money or other things demanded in the complaint or petition.

You are not required to file an answer or other pleading but you may do so if you desire.

Issued under my hand and the seal of said Court, this _____ day of _____, _____.

_____

(Seal) Clerk of _____ County,
Mississippi

(Note: All summons issued to the sheriff must be returned prior to the time the defendant is summoned to appear.)

(Adopted effective January 10, 1986.)

Form 1DD. Rule 81 Summons.

(Summons by Publication)

IN THE COURT OF _____ COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI

A.B., Plaintiff(s)

(It is sufficient here to state the name of the first plaintiff with an appropriate designation of other plaintiffs.)

v. Civil Action, File No. _____

C.D., Defendant(s)

(It is sufficient here to state the name of the first defendant with an appropriate designation of other defendants.)

SUMMONS

THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI

TO: (Insert name of the person(s) to be served.)

You have been made a Defendant in the suit filed in this Court by _____, (Insert name of all Plaintiffs) Plaintiff(s) seeking _____ (Insert a brief description of the relief being sought). Defendants other than you in this action are _____ (Insert names of all defendants other than the person or persons who are the subject of this summons).

You are summoned to appear and defend against the complaint or petition filed against you in this action at o'clock _____. M. on the _____ day of _____, _____, in the courtroom of the County Courthouse at _____, Mississippi, and in case of your failure to appear and defend, a judgment will be entered against you for the money or other things demanded in the complaint or petition.

You are not required to file an answer or other pleading but you may do so if you desire.

Issued under my hand and the seal of said Court, this _____ day of _____, _____.

_____

(Seal) Clerk of County,

Mississippi

Form 1E. Waiver of process.

IN THE COURT OF _____ COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI

A.B. Plaintiff

v. Civil Action, File No. _____

C.D. Defendant

WAIVER OF PROCESS

The undersigned _____ (name) _____, whose post office address is _____ and whose street address is _____, does hereby waive the service of summons and _____ (designate any pleading on which service is being waived) upon myself in this cause.

In executing this document I certify that I am not an unmarried minor and am not mentally incompetent.

(In addition the person executing the waiver may add any or all of the following to the document:)

[Furthermore, by the filing of this document, I enter my appearance in this cause]

[just as if I had been served more than 30 days prior to this date]

[and agree that this action may be heard and disposed of without further notice to me]

[and join in this action and in the prayer for relief]

This the _____ day of _____, 20_____.

_____

Name

STATE OF _____)

COUNTY OF _____)

Personally appeared before me, the undersigned authority for the jurisdiction aforesaid, the within named _____ who acknowledged that he signed and delivered the above and foregoing instrument on the day and year therein mentioned.

Given under my hand this the _____ day of _____, 20 _____.

_____

Notary Public

My Commission Expires: _____

[In lieu of the above acknowledgment the following oath may be used:]

STATE OF _____

COUNTY OF _____

Personally appeared before me the undersigned authority in and for the jurisdiction aforesaid the within named _____ who, being first by me duly sworn, states on oath that the matters and facts set forth in the foregoing instrument are true and correct as therein stated.

_____

Name

Sworn to and subscribed before me this the _____ day of _____, 20 _____.

_____

Notary Public

My Commission Expires: _____

(Adopted effective February 1, 1990; amended effective July 1, 2009 to delete convicted felony exception.)

Form 2. Complaint on a promissory note.

1. Defendant on or about _____, _____, executed and delivered to Plaintiff a promissory note [in the following words and figures: (here set out the note verbatim)]; [a copy of which is hereto annexed as Exhibit A]; [whereby defendant promised to pay to plaintiff or order on _____, _____, the sum of _____ dollars with interest thereon at the rate of _____ percent per annum] [and agreed to pay a reasonable attorney's fee for collection].
2. Defendant owes to plaintiff [the amount of said note] [$_____ that is due on said note] and interest.

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against defendant for the sum of _____ dollars, interest, attorney's fee, and costs.

_____

Attorney for Plaintiff

_____

_____

Address

Form 3. Complaint on covenant or agreement.

1. On or about the day of _____, _____, plaintiff and defendant entered into agreement by which defendant promised [here set out agreement in general terms].
2. Defendant breached the agreement by [here set out breaches in general terms].

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars, interest and costs.

Form 4. Complaint for specific performance.

1. This is an action for specific performance of a contract to convey real property in _____ County, Mississippi.
2. On _____, _____, plaintiff and defendant entered into a written contract, a copy being attached and marked Exhibit A.
3. Plaintiff timely tendered the purchase price to defendant and requested a conveyance of the real property described in the contract but defendant refused to accept the tender or to make the conveyance.
4. Plaintiff offers to pay the purchase price.

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment that defendant be required to perform specifically the contract and for damages.

Form 5. Complaint on an open account.

1. Defendant owes plaintiff _____ dollars due by open account.

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars, interest and costs.

Form 6. Complaint on account stated.

1. Defendant owes plaintiff _____ dollars on an account stated between the plaintiff and defendant on the _____ day of _____, _____.

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars, interest and costs.

Form 7. Complaint for goods sold and delivered.

1. Defendant owes plaintiff _____ dollars for goods sold and delivered by plaintiff to defendant between the _____ day of _____ and the _____ day of _____, _____.

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars, interest and costs.

Form 8. Complaint for work and labor done.

1. Defendant owes plaintiff _____ dollars for work and labor done for the defendant by the plaintiff on the _____ day of _____, at defendant's request.

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars, interest and costs.

Form 9. Complaint for money lent.

1. Defendant owes plaintiff _____ dollars for money lent by plaintiff to defendant on or about the _____ day of _____, _____.

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars, interest and costs.

Form 10. Complaint for money paid by mistake.

1. Defendant owes plaintiff _____ dollars for money paid by plaintiff to defendant by mistake on or about the _____ day of _____. _____, under the following circumstances:

[here briefly state the circumstances].
Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars, interest and costs.

Form 11. Complaint for money had and received.

1. Defendant owes plaintiff _____ dollars for money had and received from one on or about the _____ day of _____, _____, to be paid by defendant to plaintiff.

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars, interest and costs.

Form 12. Complaint for money paid by plaintiff for defendant.

1. Defendant owes plaintiff _____ dollars because of money paid by the plaintiff for the defendant on or about the _____ day of _____, _____, at defendant's request.

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars, interest and costs.

Form 13. Complaint on a policy of life insurance.

1. On or about the _____ day of _____, _____, defendant issued a policy whereby the defendant insured the life of _____ who died on the _____ day of _____, _____, of which the defendant has had notice.

2. As a result, the amount of the policy is now due and the plaintiff is the beneficiary of the proceeds of the policy.

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars, interest and costs.

Form 14. Complaint on a policy of fire insurance.

1. On or about the _____ day of _____. _____, defendant insured plaintiffs dwelling house (or other property, as the case may be) against loss or injury by fire and other perils in a policy of insurance, for the term of _____ years.

2. The house (or other property) was wholly destroyed (or was damaged) by fire on the _____ day of _____, _____, of which the defendant has had notice.

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars, interest and costs.

Form 15. Complaint for negligence or wantonness.

1. On or about the _____ day of _____, _____, upon a public highway [state the name of the street] in [City]; _____ County, Mississippi, the defendant negligently [or wantonly] caused or allowed a motor vehicle to collide with a motor vehicle occupied by the plaintiff.

2. As a proximate consequence of the defendant's said negligence [or wantonness], the plaintiff was caused to suffer the following injuries and damages: [enumerate injuries and damages].

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars and costs.

Form 16. Complaint for assault and battery.

1. On or about the _____ day of _____, _____, the defendant committed an assault and battery on the plaintiff.

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars and costs.

Form 17. Complaint for false imprisonment.

1. On or about the _____ day of _____, _____, the defendant unlawfully arrested and imprisoned the plaintiff (or caused the plaintiff to be arrested and imprisoned as the case may be) on a charge of larceny (or as the case may be) for _____ days.

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars and costs.

Form 18. Complaint for malicious prosecution.

1. On or about the _____ day of _____, _____, defendant, maliciously, and without probable cause therefor, caused the plaintiff to be arrested under a warrant issued by _____, a justice court judge, on a charge of (as the case may be).

2. Before the commencement of this action, this charge was judicially investigated, the prosecution ended, and the plaintiff discharged.

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars and costs.

Form 19. Complaint for fraud.

1. On or about the _____ day of _____, _____, defendant and plaintiff were negotiating concerning the purchase by plaintiff from defendant of the following described property:

[describe property].

2. At that time defendant represented to plaintiff that [here set out representations with particularity].

3. The representations made by defendant were false [and defendant knew that they were false] [and defendant, without knowledge of the true facts, recklessly misrepresented them] [and were made with the intention that plaintiff should rely upon them].

4. Plaintiff believed the representations and in reliance upon them purchased the property.

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars and costs.

Form 20. Complaint on a warranty.

1. On or about the _____ day of _____, _____, defendant sold a (as the case may be) to the plaintiff on which the defendant gave warranty as shown by Exhibit A which is attached hereto [or insert the substance of the warranty].

2. In fact [here state the breach in general terms].

Form 21. Complaint for conversion.

1. On or about the _____ day of _____, _____, defendant converted to his own use [here describe in general terms the property allegedly converted] of the _____ Company of the value of _____ dollars, the property of plaintiff.

Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars, interest and costs.

Editor's Note — Form 21 contains a paragraph designated 1. but no other designated paragraphs. The form appears as adopted effective January 1, 1982.

Form 22. Motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12 (b).

The defendant moves that the Court proceed as follows:

1. To dismiss the complaint for lack of subject matter jurisdiction in that it is [an action seeking the reformation of a written instrument (or as the case may be)] and plaintiff has a full and adequate remedy [at law] [in equity].

2. To dismiss the complaint for lack of jurisdiction over the person in that [the defendant is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of _____ and was not and is not subject to service of process within the State of Mississippi (or as the case may be)].

3. To dismiss the action on the ground of improper venue in that defendant is a domestic corporation domiciled in _____ County, which is not the county in which [this action is brought] [the cause of action occurred or accrued].

4. To dismiss the complaint because of insufficiency of process in that the summons served on the defendant [was not signed by the clerk] [does not contain the names and addresses of the parties] [is directed to a person other than the defendant named in the complaint [did not have attached a copy of the complaint] (or as the case may be).

5. To dismiss the action because of insufficiency of service of process in that the summons served on defendant [was sent by ordinary mail rather than by certified mail] [was served by a process server who is not sheriff of the county in which it was served nor a person eighteen years or older] [was served on a member of defendant's family who is less than sixteen years of age] [was served on _____, who is neither an officer nor the registered agent of the defendant corporation] (or as the case may be).

6. To dismiss the complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

7. To dismiss the complaint for failure to join _____, a [person] [corporation] necessary for just adjudication because [he] [it] is this defendant's [co-tenant, lessee, royalty holder, assignee (or as the case may be)] whose rights are involved in this action.

NOTICE OF MOTION

TO:

_____

Attorney for Plaintiff

_____

_____

Address

Please take notice that the undersigned will bring the above motion on for hearing before this court at the _____ County Courthouse in the City of _____, Mississippi, on the _____ day of _____, _____, at _____ o'clock a. m./p. m. that day or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard.

_____

Attorney for Defendant

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that I have this date served a copy of this Motion to Dismiss and Notice of same on J.K, Counsel of Record for the Plaintiff, A.B., by placing a copy of same in the United States mail, postage prepaid, addressed to his regular business mailing address.

This the _____ day of _____, _____.

_____

Attorney for Defendant

_____

_____

Address

Form 23. Answer presenting defenses under Rule 12 (b).

First Defense

[Improper Venue]

The action is brought in the wrong county because the defendant is a domestic corporation domiciled in _____ County, which is not the county in which this action is brought or in which the cause of action occurred or accrued.

Second Defense

[Admission and Denial]

Defendant admits the allegations contained in paragraphs 1 and 4 of the complaint; alleges that he is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in paragraph 2 of the complaint; and denies each and every other allegation contained in the complaint.

Third Defense

[Statute of Limitations]

The right of action set forth in the complaint did not accrue within _____ years next before the commencement of this action.

Counter-claim

Here set forth any claim as a counter-claim in the manner in which a claim is pleaded in a complaint.

Cross-Claim against Defendant M. N.

Here set forth the claim constituting a cross-claim against defendant M. N. in the manner in which a claim is pleaded in a complaint.

Form 24. Motion to bring in third-party defendant.

Defendant moves for leave, as third-party plaintiff, to cause to be served upon E. F. a summons and third-party complaint, copies of which are attached as Exhibit A.

Form 25. Third-party complaint.

1. Plaintiff, A. B., has filed against defendant, C. D., a complaint, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit A.

2. If the defendant, C. D., is liable to the plaintiff on the occasion complained of in the complaint, it is liable because [here state the grounds upon which C. D., is entitled to recover from E. F., all or part of what A. B. may recover from C. D. The statement should be framed as in an original complaint.]

Wherefore, C. D. demands judgment against third-party defendant E. F. for all sums that may be adjudged against defendant C. D. in favor of plaintiff, A. B.

Form 26. Motion to intervene as a defendant under Rule 24.

[Based upon the Complaint, Form 15]

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF _____ COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI

A.B., Plaintiff

v. Civil Action, File No._____

C.D., Defendant

E.F., Applicant for Intervention

MOTION TO INTERVENE AS A DEFENDANT

E. F. moves to intervene as a defendant in this action to assert the defenses set forth in his proposed answer, a copy of which is attached hereto, on the ground that he is the owner of the automobile alleged in the Complaint to have collided with the vehicle occupied by the plaintiff and as such as a defense to plaintiffs claim presenting both questions of law and of fact which are common to the main action.

_____

Attorney for E. F.
Applicant for Intervention

_____

_____

Address

NOTICE OF MOTION

[Contents the same as in Form 22]

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF _____ COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI

A.B., Plaintiff

v. Civil Action, File No._____

C.D., Defendant

E.F., Intervener

INTERVENER'S ANSWER

First Defense

Intervener denies the allegations stated in paragraphs 1 and 2 of the Complaint in so far as they assert negligence on the part of the defendant.

Second Defense

Intervener asserts that at the time of the collision stated in the Complaint the plaintiff was operating his vehicle under the influence of alcohol and in a wantonly negligent manner.

Third Defense

Intervener asserts that at the time of the collision stated in the Complaint defendant was operating intervener's vehicle without intervener's authority, permission, or license.

Form 27. Motion to drop defendant or for severance of claims.

Defendant, _____, moves the court for an order dropping him as a party defendant herein or in the alternative for an order severing the claim asserted against him by plaintiff herein from the claim asserted against defendant, _____, on the grounds that:

1. The alleged claim asserted against defendant, _____, does not arise from the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences, as the claim asserted against defendant, _____; nor do the two alleged claims involve questions of law or fact common to both defendants.

2. The moving defendant will be put to undue expense and embarrassment if he is required to proceed with his defense without a severance of the issues.

3. The trial of action will be embarrassing and the jury confused by a joint trial of the claims asserted against the two defendants herein, all to the prejudice of the moving defendant.

Form 28. Motion by defendant for severance of claims of several plaintiffs.

Defendant moves the court for an order severing the claims asserted by the respective plaintiffs herein against the defendant, on the grounds that:

1. The alleged claim or claims of each plaintiff differ in material and essential elements and respects from the alleged claim or claims of each of the other plaintiffs.

2. The alleged claims of the plaintiffs do not arise out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences, and do not involve questions of law or fact common to all the plaintiffs.

3. The joining in one action and one complaint of the alleged claims of the plaintiffs is prejudicial to the defendant and injures his substantial rights and will embarrass and delay the trial.

Form 29. Motion by plaintiff to add defendant.

Plaintiff moves the court for an order making _____ a party defendant herein and directing the issuance and service of process on him, and for grounds therefor shows:

1. This is an action for [state briefly the nature of the claim for relief].

2. [State facts showing that the proposed additional defendant is an indispensable, necessary or proper party defendant].

3. The said _____ is a citizen and resident of _____, is subject to the jurisdiction of this court as to both service of process and venue and can be made a party defendant herein without depriving the court of jurisdiction.

Form 30. Motion by defendant to bring in additional defendant.

Defendant moves the court for an order making _____ a party defendant herein; directing that process be issued and served upon defendant

_____; and requiring plaintiff to serve and file an amended complaint, and for grounds therefor shows:

1. This is an action for [state briefly the nature of the claim for relief].

2. [State facts showing that a person needed for just adjudication has not been joined as a defendant].

3. The said _____ is a citizen and a resident of _____, is subject to the jurisdiction of this court as to both service of process and venue, and can be made a party defendant herein without depriving the court of jurisdiction.

Form 31. Motion by defendant to add additional plaintiff.

Defendant moves the court for an order directing that _____ be made a party plaintiff herein, or in the alternative, if _____ refuses to join as a plaintiff, he be made a defendant as provided by Rule 19(a), and for grounds therefor shows:

1. This is an action for [state briefly the nature of the claim for relief].

2. [State facts showing that a person needed for just adjudication has not been joined as a plaintiff].

3. The said _____ is a citizen and resident of _____; he is subject to the jurisdiction of this court as to service of process and venue; and he can be made a party plaintiff (or, as the case may be, a party defendant) herein without depriving the court of jurisdiction.

Form 32. Answer to complaint set forth in Form 11 with counter-claim for interpleader.

Defense

Defendant admits the allegations stated in paragraph 1 of the complaint and denies the allegations stated in paragraph 2 to the extent set forth in the counter-claim herein.

Counter-claim for Interpleader

1. Defendant received the sum of _____ dollars as a deposit from E. F.

2. Plaintiff has demanded the payment of such deposit to him by virtue of an assignment of same which he claims to have received from E. F.

3. E. F. has notified the defendant that he claims such deposit, that the purported assignment is not valid, and that he holds the defendant responsible for the deposit.

Wherefore defendant demands:

(1) That the court order E. F. to be made a party defendant to respond to the complaint and to this counter-claim.

(2) That the court order the plaintiff or E. F. to interplead their respective claims.

(3) That the court adjudge whether the plaintiff or E. F. is entitled to the sum of money.

(4) That the court discharge defendant from all liability in the action except to the person it shall adjudge entitled to the sum of money.

(5) That the court award to the defendant its costs and attorney's fees.

Form 33. Plaintiff's motion for substitution — Deceased party defendant.

Plaintiff shows to the court that _____, the above-named defendant, died intestate (or testate) on or about the _____ day of _____, _____; that letters of administration upon the estate of the said were issued on the _____ day of _____, _____, to _____ as administrator by the _____ Court of the State of Mississippi (or, that _____ was duly appointed executor of the last will of _____ by the _____ Court of the State of Mississippi and qualified as such executor on the _____ day of _____, _____): and this is an action for [state briefly nature of action] and the claim of plaintiff was not extinguished by the death of defendant.

Wherefore plaintiff moves the court for an order substituting _____, administrator (or, as the case may be, executor) of the estate of _____, deceased, as party defendant herein.

Form 34. Pre-trial order.

1. Counsel.

Appearing for the plaintiff: _____

Appearing for the defendant: _____

2. Nature of the case. [Count 1 of] the complaint alleges a cause of action based upon [negligence, breach of warranty, breach of oral contract, etc.].

3. Positions of the parties.

a. Plaintiff contends: [concise statement of factual and legal contentions].

b. Defendant contends: [concise statement of factual and legal contentions].

4. Stipulations and admissions.

5. Discovery. Discovery proceedings have been completed except as follows: [specify additional discovery proceedings required].

6. Additional Orders: [as required by the particular case].

Ordered that the above allowances and agreements are binding on all parties in the above-styled cause unless this order be hereafter modified by the Court for good cause and to prevent manifest injustice.

Done this _____ day of _____, _____.

_____
Judge

Form 35. Motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or in the alternative, for new trial.

Defendant [Plaintiff] moves the Court to set aside the verdict and judgment entered in the above-styled action on _____, _____, and to enter judgment in favor of the Defendant [Plaintiff] in accordance with the motion for directed verdict, or, in the alternative, Defendant [Plaintiff] moves the court to set aside the verdict and grant Defendant [Plaintiff] a new trial on the following grounds, to-wit:

1.

2. [Herein state grounds]

3.

Form 36. Application to clerk for entry of default and supporting affidavit.

The clerk is requested to enter default against the defendant in the above entitled action for failure to plead, answer or otherwise defend as set out in the affidavit hereto annexed.

_____
Attorney for Plaintiff

State of Mississippi_____

County of_____

_____, being duly sworn, deposed and says:

1. That he is attorney of record of the plaintiff, and has personal knowledge of the facts set forth in this affidavit.
2. That the defendant was duly served with a copy of the summons, together with a copy of plaintiffs complaint, on the _____ day of _____, _____.

3. That more than 30 days have elapsed since the date on which the said defendant was served with summons and a copy of the complaint.

4. That the defendant has failed to answer or otherwise defend as to plaintiffs complaint, or serve a copy of any answer or other defense which he might have upon the undersigned attorney of record for the plaintiff.

5. That this affidavit is executed by affiant herein in accordance with Rule 55(a) of the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure, for the purpose of enabling the plaintiff to obtain an entry of default against the defendant, for his failure to answer or otherwise defend as to the plaintiffs complaint.

_____

Attorney for Plaintiff

Sworn to and subscribed before me this the _____ day of _____, _____.

_____

Notary Public

Form 37. Docket of entry of default.

Default entered against defendant _____ this _____ day of _____, _____.

Form 38. Default judgment entered by court.

This action came on for hearing on the motion of the plaintiff for a default judgment pursuant to Rule 55(b)(2) of the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure, and the defendant having been duly served with the summons and complaint and not being an infant or an unrepresented incompetent person and having failed to plead or otherwise defend, and his default having been duly entered and the defendant having taken no proceedings since such default was entered,

It is Ordered and Adjudged that [here set forth relief granted to plaintiff].

This _____ day of _____, _____.

_____

Judge

APPENDIX B. STATUTES AFFECTED

[DELETED IN ITS ENTIRETY.]
[Effective June 24, 1992.]

APPENDIX C. TIME TABLE FOR PROCEEDINGS UNDER THE MISSISSIPPI RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE

[DELETED IN ITS ENTIRETY.]
[Effective June 24, 1992.]

Index to Rules of Civil Procedure

A

ACCOUNTS AND ACCOUNTING.
Complaint on account stated.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 6.
Complaint on an open account.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 5.

ADMISSIONS.
Failure to admit.
Expenses on, CivProc Rule 37.
Request for admission, CivProc Rule 36.

ADOPTION.
Special procedure in certain actions and matters, CivProc Rule 81.

AFFIDAVITS.
New trial.
Motion.
Supporting and opposing affidavits, CivProc Rule 59.
Summary judgment.
Motion.
Supporting and opposing affidavits, CivProc Rule 56.

ANSWERS.
Attorneys' fees.
Interrogatories to parties.
Failure of party to serve answers to interrogatories, CivProc Rule 37.
Forms.
Answer presenting defenses, CivProc Rule Form 23.
Answer to complaint for money had and received with counter-claim for interpleader, CivProc Rule Form 32.

APPEALS.
Counterclaims in appealed actions, CivProc Rule 13.
Depositions.
Pending appeal, CivProc Rule 27.
Directed verdict.
Denial of motion, CivProc Rule 50.

APPEALS —Cont'd
Exceptions unnecessary, CivProc Rule 46.
Injunctions.
Stay of proceedings to enforce a judgment.
Injunction pending appeal, CivProc Rule 62.
Judgment notwithstanding the verdict.
Denial of motion, CivProc Rule 50.
Stay of proceedings to enforce a judgment, CivProc Rule 62.

APPLICABILITY OF RULES, CivProc Rule 81.

ASSAULT AND BATTERY.
Complaint for assault and battery.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 16.

ATTACHMENT.
Seizure of person or property for purpose of securing satisfaction of judgment.
Remedies available, CivProc Rule 64.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW.
Certificate of attorney.
Signature on pleading or motion, CivProc Rule 11.
Signatures.
Pleadings and motions, CivProc Rule 11.

ATTORNEYS' FEES.
Admissions.
Failure to admit.
Expenses on, CivProc Rule 37.
Depositions.
Failure of party to attend at own deposition, CivProc Rule 37.
Oral examination.
Failure to attend or serve subpoena, CivProc Rule 30.
Interrogatories to parties.
Failure of party to serve answers to interrogatories, CivProc Rule 37.

B

BIRTH CERTIFICATES.
Correction of birth certificate.
Special procedure in certain civil actions and matters, CivProc Rule 81.

BLOOD GROUP.
Physical examination of person, CivProc Rule 35.

BONDS, SURETY.
Injunctions.
Security required, CivProc Rule 65.
Jurisdiction.
Surety submits self to jurisdiction of court, CivProc Rule 65.1.
Masters.
Special commissioner appointed to conduct sale of property, CivProc Rule 53.
Proceedings against sureties, CivProc Rule 65.1.
Special commissioner appointed to conduct sale of property, CivProc Rule 53.

C

CERTIFICATE OF ATTORNEY.
Signature on pleading or motion, CivProc Rule 11.

CHANCERY COURTS.
Injunctions.
Powers not changed by rules of civil procedure, CivProc Rule 65.
Verdicts.
Number of jurors required, CivProc Rule 48.

CHANGE OF VENUE.
Forum non conveniens, CivProc Rule 82.
Improper venue, CivProc Rule 82.

CHILD CUSTODY.
Special procedure in certain actions and matters, CivProc Rule 81.

CHILDREN AND MINORS.
Parties, CivProc Rule 17.
Removal of disabilities of minority.
Special procedure in certain actions and matters, CivProc Rule 81.

CHILD SUPPORT.
Special procedure in certain actions and matters, CivProc Rule 81.

CHILD VISITATION.
Grandparents' visitation rights, CivProc Rule 81.

CIRCUIT COURTS.
Injunctions.
Powers not changed by rules of civil procedure, CivProc Rule 65.
Verdicts.
Number of jurors required, CivProc Rule 48.

CITATION OF RULES, CivProc Rule 85.

CLERKS OF COURT.
Dismissal of action on clerk's motion, CivProc Rule 41.
Minute book, CivProc Rule 79.
Office of clerk.
When open, CivProc Rule 77.
Orders by clerk, CivProc Rule 77.
Records.
Books and records kept by clerk, CivProc Rule 79.

CODE OF MISSISSIPPI.
Pleadings.
Pleading a special statute, CivProc Rule 9.
Terminology of statutes, CivProc Rule 81.

COMPLAINTS.
Account stated, CivProc Rule Form 6.
Allowed pleadings, CivProc Rule 7.
Assault and battery, CivProc Rule Form 16.
Commencement of action, CivProc Rule 3.
Conversion, CivProc Rule Form 21.
Covenant or agreement, CivProc Rule Form 3.
False imprisonment, CivProc Rule Form 17.
Filing of complaint, CivProc Rule 3.
Fire insurance policy, CivProc Rule Form 14.
Fraud, CivProc Rule Form 19.
Goods sold and delivered, CivProc Rule Form 7.
Life insurance policy, CivProc Rule Form 13.
Malicious prosecution, CivProc Rule Form 18.
Money had and received, CivProc Rule Form 11.
Money lent, CivProc Rule Form 9.

COMPLAINTS —Cont'd
Money paid by mistake, CivProc Rule Form 10.
Money paid by plaintiff for defendant, CivProc Rule Form 12.
Negligence or wantonness, CivProc Rule Form 15.
Open account, CivProc Rule Form 5.
Promissory note, CivProc Rule Form 2.
Specific performance, CivProc Rule Form 4.
Warranty, CivProc Rule Form 20.
Work and labor done, CivProc Rule Form 8.

COMPUTATION OF TIME TO DO ACT, CivProc Rule 6.

CONFLICTS OF INTEREST.
Depositions.
Persons before whom depositions may be taken.
Disqualification for interest, CivProc Rule 28.

CONTEMPT.
Powers of court, CivProc Rule 70.
Subpoenas.
Failure to obey subpoena, CivProc Rule 45.

CONVERSION.
Complaint for conversion.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 21.

CORPORATIONS.
Depositions.
Oral examination, CivProc Rule 30.

COSTS.
Accounting for costs, CivProc Rule 3.
Depositions.
Oral examination.
Expenses not treated as court costs, CivProc Rule 30.
Dismissal of actions.
Previously dismissed action, CivProc Rule 41.
Judgments and decrees.
Allowance of costs, CivProc Rule 54.
Security for costs.
Motion for, CivProc Rule 3.
Summary judgment.
Denial of motion.
Costs to prevailing party, CivProc Rule 56.

COUNTERCLAIMS.
Appeal actions, CivProc Rule 13.

COUNTERCLAIMS —Cont'd
Compulsory counterclaims, CivProc Rule 13.
Default judgments, CivProc Rule 55.
Dismissal, CivProc Rule 41.
Exceeding court's jurisdiction, CivProc Rule 13.
Exceeding opposing claim, CivProc Rule 13.
Forms.
Answer to complaint for money had and received with counter-claim for interpleader, CivProc Rule Form 32.
Joinder of additional parties, CivProc Rule 13.
Omitted counterclaim, CivProc Rule 13.
Permissive counterclaims, CivProc Rule 13.
Pleadings.
Maturing or acquiring after pleading, CivProc Rule 13.
Separate trials and judgments, CivProc Rules 13, 42.
State of Mississippi.
Counterclaim against, CivProc Rule 13.
Third-party practice.
When plaintiff may bring in third party, CivProc Rule 14.

COUNTY COURTS.
Verdicts.
Number of jurors required, CivProc Rule 48.

COURTS.
Findings of fact by court, CivProc Rule 52.
Hours of operation, CivProc Rule 77.

COVENANTS.
Complaint on covenant or agreement.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 3.

CROSS-CLAIMS, CivProc Rule 13.
Dismissal, CivProc Rule 41.
Exceeding court's jurisdiction, CivProc Rule 13.
Joinder of additional parties, CivProc Rule 13.
Separate trials and judgments, CivProc Rules 13, 42.

D

DAMAGES.
Pleadings.
Special damages, CivProc Rule 9.

DEATH.
Parties.
Substitution of parties, CivProc Rule 25.

DECEDENTS' ESTATES.
Special procedure in certain actions and matters, CivProc Rule 81.

DECLARATORY JUDGMENTS.
Procedure, CivProc Rule 57.
When available, CivProc Rule 57.

DEFAULT JUDGMENTS, CivProc Rule 55.
Counterclaims, CivProc Rule 55.
Cross-claims, CivProc Rule 55.
Forms.
Application to clerk for entry of default and supporting affidavit, CivProc Rule Form 36.
Default judgment entered by court, CivProc Rule Form 38.
Docket of entry of default, CivProc Rule Form 37.

DEFENSES.
Affirmative defenses.
Pleadings, CivProc Rule 8.
Answer.
When served, CivProc Rule 12.
Failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.
How defense may be made, CivProc Rule 12.
Improper venue.
Waiver or preservation of certain defenses, CivProc Rule 12.
Insufficiency of process or of service of process.
Waiver or preservation of certain defenses, CivProc Rule 12.
Lack of jurisdiction over the person.
Waiver or preservation of certain defenses, CivProc Rule 12.
Motions.
Consolidation of defenses in motion, CivProc Rule 12.
Pleadings, CivProc Rule 8.
Failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.
How defense may be made, CivProc Rule 12.

DEFENSES —Cont'd
Pleadings —Cont'd
How pleadings presented, CivProc Rule 12.
Waiver or preservation of certain defenses not included in responsive pleading, CivProc Rule 12.
Preliminary hearings on, CivProc Rule 12.
Waiver or preservation of certain defenses, CivProc Rule 12.

DEMURRERS.
Abolished, CivProc Rule 7.

DEPOSITIONS.
Appeals.
Pending appeal, CivProc Rule 27.
Attorneys' fees.
Failure of party to attend at own deposition, CivProc Rule 37.
Oral examination.
Failure to attend or serve subpoena, CivProc Rule 30.
Before action, CivProc Rule 27.
Conflicts of interest.
Persons before whom depositions may be taken.
Disqualification for interest, CivProc Rule 28.
Corporations.
Oral examination.
Deposition of organization, CivProc Rule 30.
Costs.
Oral examination.
Expenses not treated as court costs, CivProc Rule 30.
Errors and irregularities.
Effect, CivProc Rule 32.
Exhibits.
Oral examination, CivProc Rule 30.
Failure of party to attend at own deposition, CivProc Rule 37.
Foreign countries.
Persons before whom depositions may be taken, CivProc Rule 28.
Format, CivProc Rule 7.
Motions.
Evidence on motions, CivProc Rule 43.
Oral examination.
Motion to terminate or limit examination, CivProc Rule 30.
Notice.
Deposition before action, CivProc Rule 27.

DEPOSITIONS —Cont'd
Notice —Cont'd
Errors or irregularities as to notice.
Effect, CivProc Rule 32.
Oral examination, CivProc Rule 30.
Written questions, CivProc Rule 31.
Objections to admissibility, CivProc Rule 32.
Oral examination, CivProc Rule 30.
Partnerships.
Oral examination.
Deposition of organization, CivProc Rule 30.
Pending appeal, CivProc Rule 27.
Perpetuation of testimony.
Deposition before action, CivProc Rule 27.
Persons before whom depositions may be taken, CivProc Rule 28.
Service of process.
Deposition before action.
Notice, CivProc Rule 27.
Written questions, CivProc Rule 31.
Size of paper, CivProc Rule 7.
Stipulations regarding discovery procedure, CivProc Rule 29.
Subpoenas.
Generally, CivProc Rule 45.
Oral examination, CivProc Rule 30.
Use of depositions, CivProc Rule 32.
Deposition before action, CivProc Rule 27.
Written questions, CivProc Rule 31.

DEPOSITS IN COURT, CivProc Rule 67.

DIRECTED VERDICT.
Motion for, CivProc Rule 50.

DISCOVERY.
Admissions.
Failure to admit.
Expenses on, CivProc Rule 37.
Request for admission, CivProc Rule 36.
Business records.
Interrogatories to parties.
Option to produce business records, CivProc Rule 33.
Discovery conference, CivProc Rule 26.
Electronic data, CivProc Rule 26.
Entry upon land for inspection and other purposes, CivProc Rule 34.
Failure of party to respond to request for inspection, CivProc Rule 37.

DISCOVERY —Cont'd
Foreign litigation.
Subpoenas, CivProc Rule 45.
Generally, CivProc Rule 26.
Insurance agreements, CivProc Rule 26.
Interrogatories to parties, CivProc Rule 33.
Failure of party to serve answers to interrogatories, CivProc Rule 37.
Methods of discovery, CivProc Rule 26.
Motions.
Order compelling discovery, CivProc Rule 37.
Order compelling discovery.
Failure to comply, CivProc Rule 37.
Motion for, CivProc Rule 37.
Production of documents and things, CivProc Rule 34.
Depositions upon oral examination.
Notice may be accompanied by request for production, CivProc Rule 30.
Failure of party to respond to request, CivProc Rule 37.
Protective orders, CivProc Rule 26.
Sanctions for failure to make or cooperate in discovery, CivProc Rule 37.
Scope of discovery, CivProc Rule 26.
Stipulations regarding discovery procedure, CivProc Rule 29.
Subpoenas, CivProc Rule 45.
Supplementation of responses, CivProc Rule 26.
Trial preparation, CivProc Rule 26.

DISMISSAL OF ACTIONS.
Clerk's motion, CivProc Rule 41.
Costs.
Previously dismissed action, CivProc Rule 41.
Counterclaims, CivProc Rule 41.
Cross-claims, CivProc Rule 41.
Involuntary dismissal, CivProc Rule 41.
Motion to dismiss.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 22.
Notice.
Dismissal on clerk's motion, CivProc Rule 41.
Receivers.
Action wherein receiver has been appointed, CivProc Rule 66.
Third-party claims, CivProc Rule 41.

DISMISSAL OF ACTIONS —Cont'd
Voluntary dismissal, CivProc Rule 41.

DIVORCE.
Temporary relief in divorce matters.
Special procedure in certain actions and matters, CivProc Rule 81.

DOCKETS.
General docket, CivProc Rule 79.

E

ELECTRONIC COURT SYSTEM SERVICE, CivProc Rule 5.

ELECTRONIC FILING WITH COURT, CivProc Rule 5.

ENLARGEMENT OF PERIOD OF TIME TO DO ACT, CivProc Rule 6.

ENTRY UPON LAND FOR INSPECTION AND OTHER PURPOSES, CivProc Rule 34.

ERROR CORAM NOBIS, WRIT OF.
Motion for relief formerly obtainable under writ of, CivProc Rule 81.

ERROR CORAM VOBIS, WRIT OF.
Motion for relief formerly obtainable under writ of, CivProc Rule 81.

EVIDENCE.
Newly discovered evidence.
Relief from judgment or order, CivProc Rule 60.
Official records.
Proof of documents, CivProc Rule 44.
Pleadings.
Amendment to conform to the evidence, CivProc Rule 15.

EXAMINATION OF PERSONS MENTAL OR PHYSICAL CONDITION, CivProc Rule 35.

EXCEPTIONS FOR INSUFFICIENCY OF A PLEADING.
Abolished, CivProc Rule 7.

EXCEPTIONS TO RULINGS OF COURT.
Unnecessary, CivProc Rule 46.

EXECUTION OF JUDGMENTS.
Examination by judgment creditor, CivProc Rule 69.
Generally, CivProc Rule 69.

EXECUTION OF JUDGMENTS —Cont'd
Interpleader.
Generally, CivProc Rule 22.
Stay of proceedings to enforce a judgment, CivProc Rule 62.

EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS.
Declaratory judgments.
When declaratory judgments available, CivProc Rule 57.
Probate of wills.
Rule of court, CivProc Rule 81.
Real party in interest, CivProc Rule 17.

EXHIBITS.
Depositions.
Oral examination, CivProc Rule 30.
Pleadings, CivProc Rule 10.

EXPERT WITNESSES.
Discovery, CivProc Rule 26.

EXTENSION OF PERIOD OF TIME TO DO ACT, CivProc Rule 6.

F

FALSE IMPRISONMENT.
Complaint for false imprisonment.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 17.

FICTITIOUS PARTIES.
Pleading special matters, CivProc Rule 9.

FIERI FACIAS.
Motion for relief formerly obtainable under writ of, CivProc Rule 81.

FIRE INSURANCE.
Complaint on a policy of fire insurance.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 14.

FOREIGN COUNTRIES.
Depositions.
Persons before whom depositions may be taken, CivProc Rule 28.

FOREIGN LITIGATION.
Discovery.
Subpoena, issuance, CivProc Rule 45.

FORMA PAUPERIS.
Generally, CivProc Rule 3.

FORMS.
Actions.
One form of action, CivProc Rule 2.

FORMS —Cont'd
Answers.
Answer to complaint for money had and received with counter-claim for interpleader, CivProc Rule Form 32.
Defenses to allegations, CivProc Rule Form 23.
Civil summons, CivProc Rule Form 1AA.
Summons by publication, CivProc Rule Form 1DD.
Complaints.
See COMPLAINTS.
Counterclaims.
Answer to complaint for money had and received with counter-claim for interpleader, CivProc Rule Form 32.
Default judgments.
Application to clerk for entry of default and supporting affidavit, CivProc Rule Form 36.
Default judgment entered by court, CivProc Rule Form 38.
Docket of entry of default, CivProc Rule Form 37.
Defenses and objections.
Answer presenting defenses, CivProc Rule Form 23.
Motion to dismiss pursuant to rule, CivProc Rule Form 22.
Intervention.
Motion to intervene as defendant, CivProc Rule Form 26.
Judgment notwithstanding the verdict.
Motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or in the alternative, for new trial, CivProc Rule Form 35.
Motions.
See MOTIONS.
Pre-trial order, CivProc Rule Form 34.
Substitution of parties.
Plaintiffs motion for substitution-deceased party defendant, CivProc Rule Form 33.
Summons.
Notice and acknowledgment for service by mail, CivProc Rule Form 1B.
Rule 81 summons, CivProc Rule Forms 1A, 1AA, 1D, 1DD.
See SUMMONS AND PROCESS.
Summons by publication, CivProc Rule Form 1C.

FORMS —Cont'd
Summons —Cont'd
Waiver of process, CivProc Rule Form 1E.
Use of sample forms, CivProc Rule 84.

FORUM NON CONVENIENS, CivProc Rule 82.

FRAUD AND DECEIT.
Complaint for fraud.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 19.
Pleading special matters, CivProc Rule 9.
Relief from judgment or order.
Reasons, CivProc Rule 60.

FRIVOLOUS ACTIONS.
Signing of pleadings and motions.
Effect, CivProc Rule 11.

G

GRANDPARENTS' VISITATION RIGHTS, CivProc Rule 81.

GUARDIAN AD LITEM.
Parties, CivProc Rule 17.

GUARDIAN AND WARD.
Real party in interest, CivProc Rule 17.

H

HARMLESS ERRORS, CivProc Rule 61.

I

INDIGENT PERSONS.
Forma pauperis actions.
Generally, CivProc Rule 3.

INJUNCTIONS.
Appeals.
Stay of proceedings to enforce a judgment.
Injunction pending appeal, CivProc Rule 62.
Bonds, surety.
Security required, CivProc Rule 65.
Chancery courts.
Powers not changed by rules of civil procedure, CivProc Rule 65.
Circuit courts.
Powers not changed by rules of civil procedure, CivProc Rule 65.

INJUNCTIONS —Cont'd
Discovery, protective orders, CivProc Rule 26.
Preliminary injunction, CivProc Rule 65.
State of Mississippi.
Security not to be required of state, CivProc Rule 65.
Stay of proceedings to enforce a judgment.
Injunction pending appeal, CivProc Rule 62.
Temporary restraining orders, CivProc Rule 65.

INSURANCE AGREEMENTS.
Discovery, CivProc Rule 26.

INSURER'S DENIAL OF COVERAGE.
Declaratory judgment construing contract coverage, CivProc Rule 57.

INTERPLEADER, CivProc Rule 22.

INTERPRETERS.
Witnesses, CivProc Rule 43.

INTERROGATORIES TO PARTIES, CivProc Rule 33.
Failure of party to serve answers to interrogatories, CivProc Rule 37.
Verdicts.
General verdict accompanied by answers to interrogatories, CivProc Rule 49.

INTERVENTION, CivProc Rule 24.
Motion to intervene as defendant.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 26.

J

JNOV.
Motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, CivProc Rule 50, CivProc Rule Form 35.

JOINDER OF CLAIMS, CivProc Rule 18.
Venue where claim joined, CivProc Rule 82.

JOINDER OF PARTIES.
Counterclaims, CivProc Rule 13.
Cross-claims, CivProc Rule 13.
Misjoinder, CivProc Rule 21.

JOINDER OF PARTIES —Cont'd
Motion by defendant to add additional plaintiff, CivProc Rule Form 31.
Motion by defendant to bring in additional defendant, CivProc Rule Form 30.
Motion by plaintiff to add defendant, CivProc Rule Form 29.
Nonjoinder, CivProc Rule 21.
Pleading reasons for, CivProc Rule 19.
Permissive joinder, CivProc Rule 20.
Persons needed for just adjudication, CivProc Rule 19.
Venue where parties joined, CivProc Rule 82.

JUDGES.
Chambers.
Acts or proceedings in chambers, CivProc Rule 77.
Disability of judge, CivProc Rule 63.
Findings of fact by court, CivProc Rule 52.
Recusal.
Motion, CivProc Rule 16A.

JUDGMENT NOTWITHSTANDING THE VERDICT.
Motion for JNOV, CivProc Rule 50, CivProc Rule Form 35.

JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS.
Motion for, CivProc Rule 12.

JUDGMENTS AND DECREES.
Alteration or amendment of judgment.
Motion, CivProc Rule 59.
Clerical mistakes.
Correction, CivProc Rule 60.
Costs.
Allowance of costs, CivProc Rule 54.
Counterclaims.
Separate trials and judgments, CivProc Rule 13.
Cross-claims.
Separate trials and judgments, CivProc Rule 13.
Definition of "judgment,"CivProc Rule 54.
Delivery of possession.
Order or judgment for, CivProc Rule 70.
Demand for judgment, CivProc Rule 54.
Divestment of title, CivProc Rule 70.
Entry of judgment, CivProc Rule 58.

JUDGMENTS AND DECREES —Cont'd
Judgment notwithstanding the verdict.
Motions, CivProc Rule 50, CivProc Rule Form 35.
Minute book, CivProc Rule 79.
Multiple claims.
Judgment upon, CivProc Rule 54.
Stay of judgment upon, CivProc Rule 62.
Multiple parties.
Judgment involving, CivProc Rule 54.
Stay of judgment as to, CivProc Rule 62.
Notice of judgments, CivProc Rule 77.
Not properly titled.
Force and effect, CivProc Rule 58.
Offer of judgment, CivProc Rule 68.
Pleading a judgment, CivProc Rule 9.
Relief from judgment or order, CivProc Rule 60.
Harmless error, CivProc Rule 61.
Satisfaction of judgment.
Seizure of person or property for purpose of securing satisfaction.
Remedies available, CivProc Rule 64.
Seizure of person or property.
Remedies for securing satisfaction of judgment, CivProc Rule 64.
Specific act.
Judgment for, CivProc Rule 70.
Summary judgments.
Generally, CivProc Rule 56.
Title.
Divestment of title, CivProc Rule 70.
Title "judgment.."
Document to bear, CivProc Rule 58.

JURISDICTION.
Bonds, surety.
Surety submits self to jurisdiction of court, CivProc Rule 65.1.
Lack of jurisdiction.
Waiver or preservation of defense, CivProc Rule 12.
Rule of civil procedure not to affect jurisdiction, CivProc Rule 82.
Injunctions, CivProc Rule 65.

JURY.
Alternate jurors, CivProc Rule 47.
Challenges to jurors, CivProc Rule 47.
Chancery courts.
Number of jurors, CivProc Rule 48.

JURY —Cont'd
Circuit courts.
Number of jurors, CivProc Rule 48.
County courts.
Number of jurors, CivProc Rule 48.
Examination of jurors, CivProc Rule 47.
Instructions to jury, CivProc Rule 51.
Objections to grant or denial, CivProc Rule 51.
When submitted, CivProc Rule 51.
Peremptory challenges, CivProc Rule 47.
Pleadings.
Not to be carried into jury room, CivProc Rule 8.
Trial by jury.
Right of trial by jury, CivProc Rule 38.
Waiver of jury trial, CivProc Rule 38.
Voir dire, CivProc Rule 47.
Waiver of jury trial, CivProc Rule 38.

L

LIFE INSURANCE.
Complaint on a policy of life insurance.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 13.

LOCAL COURT RULES.
Authority to make, CivProc Rule 83.
Motion and copy of proposed rules.
Electronic format medium, CivProc Rule 83.
Publication, CivProc Rule 83.
Supreme court approval, CivProc Rule 83.

M

MAIL.
Dismissal of action on clerk's motion.
Notice, CivProc Rule 41.
Service of process.
Additional time after service by mail, CivProc Rule 6.
Pleadings and other papers, CivProc Rule 5.
Summons and complaint, CivProc Rule 4.
Notice and acknowledgment for service by mail, CivProc Rule Form 1B.

MALICIOUS PROSECUTION.
Complaint for malicious prosecution.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 18.

MANDAMUS.
Motion for relief formerly obtainable under writ of, CivProc Rule 81.

MASTERS.
Appointment, CivProc Rule 53.
Bonds, surety.
Special commissioner appointed to conduct sale of property, CivProc Rule 53.
Powers, CivProc Rule 53.
Proceedings before, CivProc Rule 53.
Qualifications, CivProc Rule 53.
Reports, CivProc Rule 53.

MENTAL EXAMINATIONS, CivProc Rule 35.

MISTAKE OR ERROR.
Harmless error, CivProc Rule 61.
Pleadings.
Pleading special matters, CivProc Rule 9.
Relief from judgment or order, CivProc Rule 60.

MOTIONS.
Alteration or amendment of judgment, CivProc Rule 59.
Defenses.
Consolidation of defenses in motion, CivProc Rule 12.
Depositions.
Evidence on motions, CivProc Rule 43.
Oral examination.
Motion to terminate or limit examination, CivProc Rule 30.
Directed verdict, CivProc Rule 50.
Discovery.
Order compelling discovery, CivProc Rule 37.
Evidence on motions.
How heard, CivProc Rule 43.
Extension of time to do act, CivProc Rule 6.
Forms.
Motion by defendant for severance of claims of several plaintiffs, CivProc Rule Form 28.
Motion by defendant to add additional defendant, CivProc Rule Form 30.
Motion by defendant to add additional plaintiff, CivProc Rule Form 31.

MOTIONS —Cont'd
Forms —Cont'd
Motion by plaintiff to add defendant, CivProc Rule Form 29.
Motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or in the alternative, for new trial, CivProc Rule Form 35.
Motion to bring in third-party defendant, CivProc Rule Form 24.
Motion to dismiss complaint, CivProc Rule Form 22.
Motion to drop defendant or for severance of claims, CivProc Rule Form 27.
Motion to intervene as defendant, CivProc Rule Form 26.
Substitution of parties.
Plaintiffs motion for substitution-deceased party defendant, CivProc Rule Form 33.
Generally, CivProc Rule 7.
Intervention.
Motion to intervene as defendant.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 26.
Service of motion to intervene, CivProc Rule 24.
Joinder of parties.
Motion by defendant to add additional plaintiff, CivProc Rule Form 31.
Motion by defendant to bring in additional defendant, CivProc Rule Form 30.
Motion by plaintiff to add defendant, CivProc Rule Form 29.
Judgment notwithstanding the verdict, CivProc Rule 50.
Form of motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or in the alternative, for new trial, CivProc Rule Form 35.
Judgment on the pleadings, CivProc Rule 12.
Legal disability.
Disclosure of legal disability, CivProc Rule 8.
Local court rules.
Copy of motion and proposed rules.
Electronic format, CivProc Rule 83.
More definite statement, CivProc Rule 12.
New trial, CivProc Rule 59.
Recusal of judges, CivProc Rule 16A.
Relief from judgment or order, CivProc Rule 60.

MOTIONS —Cont'd
Signatures, CivProc Rule 11.
Size of paper, CivProc Rule 7.
Stay of proceedings to enforce a judgment, CivProc Rule 62.
Striking of pleadings, CivProc Rule 12.
Submission and determination of motions, CivProc Rule 78.
Summary judgment, CivProc Rule 56.
Time for, CivProc Rule 6.
Transfer of case to another court.
Reconsideration of order, CivProc Rule 60.

N

NAMES.
Change of name.
Special procedure in certain actions and matters, CivProc Rule 81.
Pleadings.
Names of parties, CivProc Rule 10.

NEGLIGENCE.
Complaint for negligence or wantonness.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 15.

NEW TRIALS.
Affidavits.
Motion for new trial.
Supporting and opposing affidavits, CivProc Rule 59.
Grounds, CivProc Rule 59.
Harmless error.
Errors not grounds for granting new trial, CivProc Rule 61.
Initiative of court, CivProc Rule 59.
Motions, CivProc Rule 59.

NOTICE.
Assignment of cases for trial, CivProc Rule 40.
Depositions.
Deposition before action, CivProc Rule 27.
Errors or irregularities as to notice.
Effect, CivProc Rule 32.
Oral examination, CivProc Rule 30.
Written questions, CivProc Rule 31.
Dismissal of actions.
Dismissal on clerk's motion, CivProc Rule 41.
Injunctions.
Preliminary injunction.
Notice required, CivProc Rule 65.

NOTICE —Cont'd
Injunctions —Cont'd
Temporary restraining order.
Grant without notice, CivProc Rule 65.
Judgments, CivProc Rule 77.
Orders of court, CivProc Rule 77.

O

OATHS.
Witnesses.
Affirmation in lieu of oath, CivProc Rule 43.

OFFER OF JUDGMENT, CivProc Rule 68.

OPEN ACCOUNT.
Complaint on account stated.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 6.
Complaint on an open account.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 5.

ORDERS.
Minute book, CivProc Rule 79.
Notice, CivProc Rule 77.
Persons not parties.
Process in behalf of and against, CivProc Rule 71.

ORDINANCES.
Pleading an ordinance, CivProc Rule 9.

P

PARTIES.
Death.
Substitution of parties, CivProc Rule 25.
Executors and administrators.
Real party in interest, CivProc Rule 17.
Guardian ad litem, CivProc Rule 17.
Guardian and ward.
Real party in interest, CivProc Rule 17.
Interpleader, CivProc Rule 22.
Intervention, CivProc Rule 24.
Legal disabilities.
Persons under, CivProc Rule 17.
Substitution of parties, CivProc Rule 25.
Minors, CivProc Rule 17.
Multiple parties.
Judgment involving, CivProc Rule 54.

PARTIES —Cont'd
Multiple parties —Cont'd
Stay of judgment, CivProc Rule 62.
Public officers and employees, CivProc Rule 17.
Substitution of parties.
Death or separation from office, CivProc Rule 25.
Real party in interest, CivProc Rule 17.
Subrogation cases, CivProc Rule 17.
Substitution of parties, CivProc Rule 25.
Plaintiffs motion for substitution-deceased party defendant.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 33.
Trusts and trustees.
Real party in interest, CivProc Rule 17.

PARTITION.
Special procedure in certain actions and matters, CivProc Rule 81.

PARTNERSHIPS.
Depositions.
Oral examination.
Deposition of organization, CivProc Rule 30.

PEREMPTORY CHALLENGES, CivProc Rule 47.

PERSONAL PROPERTY.
Interpleader, CivProc Rule 22.
Trial of right of property, CivProc Rule 2.

PETITIONS.
Depositions.
Perpetuation of testimony.
Deposition before action, CivProc Rule 27.

PHYSICAL EXAMINATIONS, CivProc Rule 35.

PLEADINGS.
Adoption by reference, CivProc Rule 10.
Amendments, CivProc Rule 15.
Capacity in which one sues or is sued.
Pleading special matters, CivProc Rule 9.
Captions, CivProc Rule 10.
Claims for relief, CivProc Rule 8.
Complaints.
See COMPLAINTS.

PLEADINGS —Cont'd
Conciseness and directness, CivProc Rule 8.
Condition of the mind.
Pleading special matters, CivProc Rule 9.
Conditions precedent.
Pleading special matters, CivProc Rule 9.
Construction of pleadings so as to do substantial justice, CivProc Rule 8.
Copies to be attached, CivProc Rule 10.
Counterclaims.
Maturing or acquiring after pleading, CivProc Rule 13.
Court always open for purpose of filing pleadings, CivProc Rule 77.
Damages.
Special damages.
Pleading, CivProc Rule 9.
Defenses, CivProc Rule 8.
Failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.
How defense may be made, CivProc Rule 12.
How pleadings presented, CivProc Rule 12.
Waiver or preservation of certain defenses not included in responsive pleading, CivProc Rule 12.
Exceptions for insufficiency of a pleading.
Abolished, CivProc Rule 7.
Exhibits, CivProc Rule 10.
Fictitious parties.
Pleading special matters, CivProc Rule 9.
Filing of pleadings and other papers with court, CivProc Rule 5.
Format, CivProc Rule 10.
Fraud.
Pleading special matters, CivProc Rule 9.
Generally, CivProc Rule 7.
Judgment on the pleadings.
Motion for, CivProc Rule 12.
Judgments.
Pleading a judgment, CivProc Rule 9.
Jury.
Not to be carried into jury room, CivProc Rule 8.
Legal disability.
Disclosure of legal disability, CivProc Rule 8.

PLEADINGS —Cont'd
Mistake or error.
Pleading special matters, CivProc Rule 9.
More definite statement.
Motion for, CivProc Rule 12.
Motions.
See MOTIONS.
Names of parties, CivProc Rule 10.
Official document or act.
Pleading special matters, CivProc Rule 9.
Ordinances.
Pleading an ordinance, CivProc Rule 9.
Paragraphs, CivProc Rule 10.
Relation back of amendments, CivProc Rule 15.
Service of pleadings and other papers, CivProc Rule 5.
Signatures, CivProc Rule 11.
Size of paper, CivProc Rule 7.
Special matters, CivProc Rule 9.
Statutes.
Pleading a special statute, CivProc Rule 9.
Striking of pleadings.
Motion for more definite statement.
Order of court not obeyed, CivProc Rule 12.
Motion to strike, CivProc Rule 12.
Supplemental pleadings, CivProc Rule 15.
Unknown parties in interest.
Pleading special matters, CivProc Rule 9.

PLEAS.
Abolished, CivProc Rule 7.

PRETRIAL PROCEEDINGS.
Form of pre-trial order, CivProc Rule Form 34.
Jury instructions.
When submitted, CivProc Rule 51.
Procedure, CivProc Rule 16.

PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS.
Subpoenas.
Protection of persons subject to subpoenas, CivProc Rule 45.

PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS AND THINGS, CivProc Rule 34.
Depositions upon oral examination.
Notice may be accompanied by request for production, CivProc Rule 30.

PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS AND THINGS —Cont'd
Failure of party to respond to request, CivProc Rule 37.

PROHIBITION, WRIT OF.
Motion for relief formerly obtainable under writ, CivProc Rule 81.

PROMISSORY NOTES.
Complaint on a promissory note.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 2.

PROTECTIVE ORDERS.
Discovery, CivProc Rule 26.

PUBLICATION.
Local and uniform rules, CivProc Rule 83.
Service of process.
Summons, CivProc Rule 4.

PUBLIC OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES.
Death.
Parties to actions.
Substitution of parties, CivProc Rule 25.
Parties, CivProc Rule 17.
Substitution of parties.
Death or separation from office, CivProc Rule 25.

Q

QUO WARRANTO.
Motion for relief formerly obtainable under writ of, CivProc Rule 81.

R

RECEIVERS.
Dismissal of action in which receiver has been appointed, CivProc Rule 66.
Rule of civil procedure.
Applicability to action in which receiver appointed, CivProc Rule 66.

RECORDS.
Clerks of court.
Books and records kept by clerk, CivProc Rule 79.
Interrogatories to parties.
Option to produce business records, CivProc Rule 33.

RECORDS —Cont'd
Official records.
Proof of documents, CivProc Rule 44.

RECUSAL OF JUDGES.
Motion, CivProc Rule 16A.

REPLEVIN.
Seizure of person or property for purpose of securing satisfaction of judgment.
Remedies available, CivProc Rule 64.

REPORTS.
Masters, CivProc Rule 53.
Physical or mental examination of person.
Examiner's report, CivProc Rule 35.

RIGHT OF ENTRY.
Entry upon land for inspection and other purposes, CivProc Rule 34.

S

SATISFACTION OF JUDGMENT.
Corporate property and franchise sold.
Seizure of person or property for purpose of securing satisfaction.
Remedies available, CivProc Rule 64.

SCIRE FACIAS.
Motion for relief formerly obtainable under writ of, CivProc Rule 81.

SCOPE OF RULES, CivProc Rule 1.

SEARCHES AND SEIZURES.
Judgments.
Remedies for securing satisfaction of judgment, CivProc Rule 64.

SEQUESTRATION, WRIT OF.
Motion for relief formerly obtainable under writ of, CivProc Rule 81.
Seizure of person or property for purpose of securing satisfaction of judgment.
Remedies available, CivProc Rule 64.

SERVICE OF PROCESS.
Answer, CivProc Rule 12.
Depositions.
Deposition before action.
Notice, CivProc Rule 27.
Written questions, CivProc Rule 31.

SERVICE OF PROCESS —Cont'd
Electronic court system service, CivProc Rule 5.
Insufficiency of service.
Waiver or preservation of defense, CivProc Rule 12.
Mail.
Additional time after service by mail, CivProc Rule 6.
Pleadings and other papers, CivProc Rule 5.
Summons and complaint, CivProc Rule 4.
Notice and acknowledgment for service by mail, CivProc Rule Form 1B.
Pleadings and other papers, CivProc Rule 5.
Publication.
Summons, CivProc Rule 4.
Subpoenas, CivProc Rule 45.
Summons, CivProc Rule 4.
Waiver of service, CivProc Rule 4.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 1E.

SHERIFFS.
Subpoenas.
Service of subpoenas, CivProc Rule 45.
Summons and process.
Sheriff's return on civil summons.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 1AA.

SIGNATURES.
Attorneys at law.
Pleadings and motions, CivProc Rule 11.
Motions, CivProc Rule 11.
Pleadings, CivProc Rule 11.

SPECIFIC ACT, JUDGMENT FOR, CivProc Rule 70.

SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.
Complaint for specific performance.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 4.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI.
Counterclaim against state, CivProc Rule 13.
Injunctions.
Security not to be required of state, CivProc Rule 65.
Intervention by the state, CivProc Rule 24.
Stay of proceedings to enforce a judgment.
Stay in favor of state or agency, CivProc Rule 62.

STATUTORY TERMINOLOGY, CivProc Rule 81.

STAYS.
Appeals.
Stay of proceedings to enforce a judgment, CivProc Rule 62.
Proceedings to enforce a judgment, CivProc Rule 62.

STIPULATIONS.
Discovery procedure, CivProc Rule 29.

SUBPOENAS.
Contempt.
Failure to obey subpoena, CivProc Rule 45.
Depositions.
Generally, CivProc Rule 45.
Oral examination, CivProc Rule 30.
Disobedience.
Sanctions, CivProc Rule 45.
Foreign litigation.
Discovery to be taken in, CivProc Rule 45.
Issuance, CivProc Rule 45.
Privileged information.
Protection of persons subject to subpoenas, CivProc Rule 45.
Service of subpoenas, CivProc Rule 45.
Sheriffs.
Service of subpoenas, CivProc Rule 45.

SUBROGATION.
Parties in subrogation cases, CivProc Rule 17.

SUMMARY JUDGMENTS.
Generally, CivProc Rule 56.

SUMMONS AND PROCESS.
Contents, CivProc Rule 4.
Forms, CivProc Rule Forms 1A, 1AA.
Notice and acknowledgment for service by mail, CivProc Rule Form 1B.
Rule 81 summons, CivProc Rule Forms 1D, 1DD.
Summons by publication, CivProc Rule Form 1C.
Waiver of process, CivProc Rule Form 1E.
Issuance, CivProc Rule 4.
Service of summons, CivProc Rule 4.

T

TERMINATION OF PARENTAL RIGHTS.
Special procedure in certain actions and matters, CivProc Rule 81.

THIRD-PARTY CLAIMS, CivProc Rule 14.
Dismissal of third-party claim, CivProc Rule 41.
Interpleader, CivProc Rule 22.
Motion to bring in third-party defendant, CivProc Rule Form 24.
Separate trial of third-party claim, CivProc Rule 42.
Third-party complaint, CivProc Rule Form 25.
Trial of right of property, CivProc Rule 22.

TIME.
Computation of time, CivProc Rule 6.
Enlargement of time, CivProc Rule 6.

TITLE.
Divestment of title.
Judgment, CivProc Rule 70.

TITLE OF RULES, CivProc Rule 85.

TRANSFER OF CASE TO ANOTHER COURT.
Effective date of order, CivProc Rule 60.
Motion to reconsider transfer order, CivProc Rule 60.

TRIAL.
Agreement by parties as to time and place, CivProc Rule 40.
Assignment of cases for trial, CivProc Rule 40.
Consolidation, CivProc Rule 42.
Counterclaims.
Separate trial, CivProc Rule 42.
Cross-claims.
Separate trial, CivProc Rule 42.
Disability of judge during trial, CivProc Rule 63.
Interpleader, CivProc Rule 22.
Joinder of parties.
Permissive joinder.
Separate trials, CivProc Rule 20.

TRIAL —Cont'd
Open court.
Trial upon the merits to be conducted in, CivProc Rule 77.
Separate trials for joint defendants, CivProc Rule 42.
Third-party claims.
Interpleader, CivProc Rule 22.
Separate trial, CivProc Rule 42.

TRIAL OF RIGHT OF PROPERTY, CivProc Rule 22.

TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.
Real party in interest, CivProc Rule 17.

V

VENUE.
Forum non conveniens, CivProc Rule 82.
Improper venue, CivProc Rule 82.
Waiver or preservation of defense, CivProc Rule 12.
Joinder of claim or parties, CivProc Rule 82.

VERDICTS.
Chancery courts.
Number of jurors required, CivProc Rule 48.
Circuit courts.
Number of jurors required, CivProc Rule 48.
County courts.
Number of jurors required, CivProc Rule 48.
Directed verdict.
Motion for, CivProc Rule 50.
Disability of judge after verdict, CivProc Rule 63.
General verdicts, CivProc Rule 49.

VERDICTS —Cont'd
Harmless error.
Errors not grounds for setting aside verdict, CivProc Rule 61.
Interrogatories.
General verdict accompanied by answers to interrogatories, CivProc Rule 49.
Judgment notwithstanding the verdict.
Motions, CivProc Rule 50.
Form of motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or in the alternative, for new trial, CivProc Rule Form 35.
Number of jurors required, CivProc Rule 48.
Special verdict, CivProc Rule 49.

VOIR DIRE.
Examination of jurors, CivProc Rule 47.

W

WARRANTIES.
Complaint on a warranty.
Form, CivProc Rule Form 20.

WILLS.
Contest of will.
Special procedure in certain actions and matters, CivProc Rule 81.
Probate of wills.
Special procedure in probate in solemn form, CivProc Rule 81.

WITNESSES.
Interpreters, CivProc Rule 43.
Oath or affirmation.
Affirmation in lieu of oath, CivProc Rule 43.
Testimony.
Taking of testimony, CivProc Rule 43.

MISSISSIPPI RULES OF EVIDENCE

Adopted Effective January 1, 1986

ARTICLE I. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Rule
101. Scope.
102. Purpose and construction.
103. Rulings on evidence.
104. Preliminary questions.
105. Limited admissibility.
106. Remainder of or related writings or recorded statements.

ARTICLE II. JUDICIAL NOTICE

201. Judicial notice of adjudicative facts.

ARTICLE III. PRESUMPTIONS IN CIVIL ACTIONS AND PROCEEDINGS

301. Presumptions in general in civil actions and proceedings.

ARTICLE IV. RELEVANCY AND ITS LIMITS

401. Definition of "relevant evidence."
402. Relevant evidence generally admissible; irrelevant evidence inadmissible.
403. Exclusion of relevant evidence on grounds of prejudice, confusion, or waste of time.
404. Character evidence not admissible to prove conduct; exceptions; other crimes.
405. Methods of proving character.
406. Habit; routine practice.
407. Subsequent remedial measures.
408. Compromise and offers to compromise.
409. Payment of medical and similar expenses.
410. Inadmissibility of pleas, plea discussions, and related statements.
411. Liability insurance.
412. Sex offense cases; relevance of victim's past behavior.

ARTICLE V. PRIVILEGES

501. Privileges recognized only as provided.
502. Lawyer-client privilege.
503. Physician and psychotherapist-patient privilege.
504. Husband-wife privilege.
505. Priest-penitent privilege.

ARTICLE VI. WITNESSES

601. General rule of competency.
602. Lack of personal knowledge.
603. Oath or affirmation.
604. Interpreters.
605. Competency of judge as witness.
606. Competency of juror as witness.
607. Who may impeach.
608. Evidence of character and conduct of witness.
609. Impeachment by evidence of conviction of crime.
610. Religious beliefs or opinions.
611. Mode and order of interrogation and presentation.

Rule
612. Refreshing the memory of a witness.
613. Prior statements of witnesses.
614. Calling and interrogation of witnesses by court.
615. Exclusion of witnesses.
616. Bias of witness.
617. Use of closed circuit television to show child's testimony.

ARTICLE VII. OPINIONS AND EXPERT TESTIMONY

701. Opinion testimony by lay witnesses.
702. Testimony by experts.
703. Bases of opinion testimony by experts.
704. Opinion on ultimate issue.
705. Disclosure of facts or data underlying expert opinion.
706. Court appointed experts.

ARTICLE VIII. HEARSAY

801. Definitions.
802. Hearsay rule.
803. Hearsay exceptions; availability of declarant immaterial.
804. Hearsay exceptions; declarant unavailable.
805. Hearsay within hearsay.
806. Attacking and supporting credibility of declarant.

ARTICLE IX. AUTHENTICATION AND IDENTIFICATION

901. Requirement of authentication or identification.
902. Self-authentication.
903. Subscribing witness' testimony unnecessary.

ARTICLE X. CONTENTS OF WRITINGS, RECORDINGS, AND PHOTOGRAPHS

1001. Definitions.
1002. Requirement of original.
1003. Admissibility of duplicates.
1004. Admissibility of other evidence of contents.
1005. Public records.
1006. Summaries.
1007. Testimony or written admission of party.
1008. Functions of court and jury.

ARTICLE XI. MISCELLANEOUS RULES

1101. Applicability of rules.
1102. Title.
1103. Repeal of inconsistent evidentiary rules.

ORDER ADOPTING THE MISSISSIPPI RULES OF EVIDENCE

Cross References — Evidence, generally, see Mississippi Code of 1972, §§ 13-1-1 et seq.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Practice References. Weinstein's Evidence Manual (Matthew Bender).

Carlson, Bright, and Imwinkelried, Objections at Trial, Third Edition (Michie).

ARTICLE I. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Rule 101. Scope.

These rules govern proceedings in the courts of the State of Mississippi to the extent and with the exceptions stated in rule 1101.

COMMENT

This rule requires that The Mississippi Rules of Evidence be applicable both in civil and criminal cases. Rule 1101 delineates more specifically what judicial proceedings are exempted from the rules' coverage.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Illustrative cases.

Defendant's embezzlement conviction was proper where the trial court did not err in overruling his motion to suppress the statement he made at the police station pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 408 because, even if the trial judge had not admitted the testimony regarding his statement at the station, there was substantial evidence with which to convict defendant. Crimm v. State, 888 So. 2d 1178 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Rule 102. Purpose and construction.

These rules shall be construed to secure fairness in administration, elimination of unjustifiable expense and delay, and promotion of growth and development of the law of evidence to the end that the truth may be ascertained and proceedings justly determined.

COMMENT

Rule 102 is a statement of the public policy to be served by a uniform set of rules. It is identical to Rule 102 of the Federal Rules of Evidence as well as numerous state codes.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Relation to Miss. R. Evid. 404.

Prosecution did not violate the pre-trial ruling barring mention of defendant's prior arrests in authenticating the fingerprint card used to identify defendant's prints because unless the authenticity of the fingerprint card was stipulated to, there had to be information that there was a database and the composition of that database; the actions of the circuit court in allowing the evidence were consistent with Miss. R. Evid. 102. Williams v. State, 919 So. 2d 250 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Rule 103. Rulings on evidence.

(a) Effect of erroneous ruling. Error may not be predicated upon a ruling which admits or excludes evidence unless a substantial right of the party is affected, and

(1) Objection. In case the ruling is one admitting evidence, a timely objection or motion to strike appears of record, stating the specific ground of objection, if the specific ground was not apparent from the context; or

(2) Offer of proof. In case the ruling is one excluding evidence, the substance of the evidence was made known to the court by offer or was apparent from the context within which questions were asked.

Continuing objections to evidence of the same or a similar nature or subject to the same or similar objections may in the discretion of the trial judge be allowed.

(b) Record of offer and ruling. The court may add any other or further statement which shows the character of the evidence, the form in which it was offered, the objection made, and the ruling thereon. It may direct the making of an offer in question and answer form.

(c) Hearing of jury. In jury cases, proceedings shall be conducted, to the extent practicable, so as to prevent inadmissible evidence from being suggested to the jury by any means, such as making statements or offers of proof or asking questions in the hearing of the jury.

(d) Plain error. Nothing in this rule precludes taking notice of plain errors affecting substantial rights although they were not brought to the attention of the court.

COMMENT

Rule 103 concerns the making of an evidentiary record for purposes of appeal.

(a) — Subsection (a) reflects existing Mississippi practice. (1) The objection must state the specific ground of objection unless the specific ground is apparent from the context. This adopts and carries forward the approach taken in Murphy v. State, 453 So.2d 1290, 1293-1294 (Miss. 1984). (2) By the same token, when a party objects to the exclusion of evidence, he must make an offer of proof to the court, noting on the record for the benefit of the appellate court what evidence the trial judge excluded. See Brown v. State, 338 So.2d 1008 (Miss. 1976); King v. State, 374 So.2d 808 (Miss.1979). Federal Rule of Evidence 103, which is identical, has been interpreted to have no effect on the harmless error principle.

Subsection (a) also retains the existing practice of recognizing continuing objections, where allowed by the trial judge, as a viable means of preserving a point for appeal. See Hughes v. State, 470 So.2d 1046, 1048 n. 1 (Miss. 1985).

Harris v. Buxton T.V., Inc., 460 So.2d 828 (Miss. 1984) held that no offer of proof was necessary where a party was improperly prohibited from cross-examining a witness. Rule 103 (a)(2) does not affect this holding.

(b) — Rule 103 (b) is consistent with pre-rule Mississippi case law which provided that a trial judge was entitled to explain his rulings. Ratliff v. State, 313 So.2d 386 (Miss. 1975); Ladnier v. State, 273 So.2d 169 (Miss. 1973).

The court may also permit the aggrieved party to preserve the record by dictating into the record a statement of the evidence offered but excluded. This accords with the rule announced in such cases as Murray v. Payne, 437 So.2d 47, 55 (Miss. 1983).

(c) — Subsection (c) is an attempt to protect the jury from exposure to inadmissible evidence. It conforms to Mississippi practice. See Cutchens v. State, 310 So.2d 273 (Miss. 1975).

(d) — Subsection (d), regarding plain error, is a restatement of that doctrine as it existed in pre-rule practice. It reflects a policy to administer the law fairly and justly. A party is protected by the plain error rule when (1) he has failed to perfect his appeal and (2) when a substantial right is affected. Miss.Sup.Ct.R. 6(b) and 11 permit a plain error rule: "The Court may, at its own option, notice a plain error not assigned or distinctly specified." See also Boyd v. State, 204 So.2d 165 (Miss. 1967). If a party persuades the court of the substantial injustice that would occur if the rule were not invoked, the court may invoke the rule. See Edwards v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 512 F.2d 276 (5th Cir. 1975). The plain error rule may be applied in either criminal cases or civil cases. See House v. State, 445 So.2d 815 (Miss. 1984).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Harmless error.
Objections.
Offer of proof.
Prejudice.
Review.
Substantial right.

In general.

In a breach of contract case arising from the failure to pay for services rendered by a rehabilitation company, a nursing home's appeal regarding the proof of lost profits was without merit because evidence of such was reasonably certain; a witness calculated future profits by using invoices from three months in the contract period. Cain v. Cain, 967 So. 2d 654 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

As plaintiffs' attorney failed to object at trial to the defense presenting a new theory as to the cause of death, the objection was not preserved for review. Moreover, as the alternative theory of death had been mentioned in the autopsy report, plaintiffs were on notice of the alternative theory. Poole v. Avara, 908 So. 2d 716 (Miss. 2005).

Under Miss. R. Evid. 103(a), defendant was procedurally barred from raising an issue on appeal because he did not contest a social worker's expert testimony at trial. However, defendant's claim was without merit because the social worker was properly allowed to testify in the child-fondling case regarding the social worker's forensic interview because she qualified as an expert under Miss. R. Evid. 702, and she did not opine as to the victim's truthfulness in the interview; rather she opined that the child's behavior and story were consistent with those of child sex abuse victims. Elkins v. State, 918 So. 2d 828 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 921 So. 2d 1279, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 26 (Miss. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 547 U.S. 1194, 126 S. Ct. 2865, 165 L. Ed. 2d 898, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 4564, 74 U.S.L.W. 3685 (2006).

Trial court committed plain error under Miss. R. Evid. 103(d) where it sentenced defendant, in part, to 10 years of post-release supervision, as under Miss. Code Ann. § 47-7-34, five years of post-release supervision was the maximum. Stigall v. State, 869 So. 2d 410 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court acted within its discretion in a medical malpractice case in excluding a nurse's testimony as to a statement made by a doctor based on the court's prior ruling, which excluded expert testimony by the doctor, and on the plaintiff's declination to opening the door to expert testimony by the doctor. Griffin v. McKenney, 877 So. 2d 425 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

Police officer was permitted to read a written statement taken by him during the investigation allegedly made by a third party discussing his knowledge of defendant's marijuana sales; failure to timely object to that alleged hearsay evidence acted as a bar preventing defendant from raising the issue on appeal pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 103. Grayson v. State, 850 So. 2d 196 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial court did not err in refusing to admit a witness' unsworn affidavit to impeach his trial testimony under Miss. R. Evid. 613(b) because there was no contradiction between the affidavit and the witness's trial testimony regarding the manner in which he ejected defendant and the victim from a nightclub; however, the trial court erred in allowing an officer to read the statement into evidence. Everett v. State, 835 So. 2d 118 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

By failing to object to the evidence at trial, defendant failed to preserve his claim that the trial court erred by improperly allowing hearsay testimony of the contents of audio and videotape recordings made by the police of a transaction in which defendant sold cocaine to a police informant. Bounds v. State, 852 So. 2d 51 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002), cert. denied, 842 So. 2d 578 (Miss. 2003).

Although defendant failed to object to jury voir dire and to closing argument at trial, appellate court could review for plain error, that is, error affecting substantial rights. Cotton v. State, 790 So. 2d 235 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Not all improper questions constitute reversible error, especially where the question was not answered; it is only when the comment or question is so blatantly and clearly prejudicial, and where trial court's instruction would not ordinarily remove it from mind of jury, that reviewing court will reverse. Criddle v. State, 633 So. 2d 1047 (Miss. 1994).

Harmless error.

Although defendant's attorney's representations should not have been used for impeachment purposes, their admission was harmless error and did not warrant reversal pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 103(a). Lynch v. State, 24 So. 3d 1043 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Even if the admission of a 911 call placed by defendant's divorce attorney after defendant told the attorney that he was going to kill the victim by was erroneous, the error was harmless under Miss. R. Evid. 103(a) because defendant received a fundamentally fair trial and any error in the admission of the recording was harmless in light of the overwhelming evidence of defendant's guilt. Shorter v. State, 33 So. 3d 512 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Statements contained in the abuse record were made for the purpose of medical diagnosis and treatment, and the report was relied upon by a hospital in treating defendant's child; further, because the vast majority of the abuse record was cumulative of other evidence presented at trial, any error that resulted from admission of the abuse record was harmless. Anthony v. State, 23 So. 3d 611 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In a murder trial, the court's admission of a forensic pathologist's expert testimony on blood spatter evidence was harmless. Even if such testimony had been excluded, the jury heard defendant admit to stabbing the victim multiple times and there was sufficient evidence from which the jury could conclude that defendant did not act in self-defense in killing the victim. Flaggs v. State, 999 So. 2d 393 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari dismissed, dismissed without prejudice by, writ of certiorari denied by 2009 Miss. LEXIS 37 (Miss. Jan. 22, 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 999 So. 2d 852, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 53 (Miss. 2009).

In an aggravated assault case, an orthopedic surgeon should have been qualified as an expert witness under Miss. R. Evid. 702 and not been allowed to give a lay opinion under Miss. R. Evid. 701 because he was acting in his professional capacity when he testified that a broken bone was caused by high-energy force. However, the error was harmless because it did not deny a substantial right or render the trial fundamentally unfair; photographs of the injuries suffered by defendant's girlfriend were shown, and the girlfriend testified that defendant forced her out of the car, threw her down, kicked her, and stomped on her back. O'Neal v. State, 977 So. 2d 1252 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In a criminal trial for murder, the court did not err by excluding an out of court statement indicating that the defendant was being beaten at the time of the murder. Defendant was not harmed, because the statement was cumulative of other evidence. Amos v. State, 911 So. 2d 644 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Finding against the driver in her action for injuries resulting from a collision with a train at a railroad crossing was appropriate where the trial court rightfully excluded evidence from an officer about a conversation that he had on the day after the accident with an individual in the city's traffic division because the issue of whether the railroad had negligently failed to comply with its obligations to maintain the crossing would have been unaffected by the challenged evidence.

Bowman v. CSX Transp., Inc., 931 So. 2d 644 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Defendant's murder conviction was proper where, although the trial court erred in allowing a doctor's opinion on the ultimate issue of whether the fourth gunshot wound to the victim was deliberate, the error was harmless under Miss. R. Evid. 103(d) and the facts of the case, especially considering the lack of a contemporaneous objection. Davis v. State, 891 So. 2d 256 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court's allowing admission of transcript of videotape into evidence after both the State and the defense had rested and the jury was in deliberations was harmless error, as defendant had not objected that the transcript was inaccurate when it was initially shown to the jury, and it was not shown that defendant's rights were infringed; thus, defendant's motion for new trial was properly denied. Johnson v. State, 872 So. 2d 733 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Error in permitting the State to propound a certain question and requiring defendant to answer was, beyond question, harmless; defendant did not allege any particular basis for concluding that this pointless inquiry by the prosecutor resulted in any prejudice or harm to the defense or in any way undermined the basic integrity of the trial process. Plair v. State, 867 So. 2d 289 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a malpractice suit in which a patient claimed she was burned by a heating unit used during surgery, the trial court erred in not allowing the patient's expert to testify as to the standard of care for using the heating pad, but the error was harmless as the expert testified that the unit's instruction manual required defendant doctor to prescribe the use and to dictate the temperature setting, and defendant failed to follow these procedures, the patient was able to get her theory of the case as to the cause of her injuries before the jury. Winters v. Wright, 869 So. 2d 357 (Miss. 2003).

Doctor's testimony, in a medical malpractice suit where he was the defendant but not designated as an expert witness, was permissible where it was explanatory of the doctor's treatment of the patient and of his records and nursing records about the patient's care; however, some of the doctor's testimony as to the symptoms that the patient would have developed had the doctor negligently perforated the patient's bowel in a surgical procedure was clearly impermissible expert testimony. Therefore, the trial court erred in permitting the expert testimony; however, the error did not warrant reversal as the doctor's expert testimony was largely cumulative to that of his expert witnesses and the doctor presented no new information. Griffin v. McKenney, 877 So. 2d 425 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

In a rape and simple assault case, admission of photographs of doors showing what were purported to be new locks already testified to by the victim did not impact a "substantial right" of defendant. Williams v. State, 868 So. 2d 346 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Simply showing an error in a ruling on the admissibility of evidence does not require reversal unless some prejudice to the defense arising from the erroneous ruling can be shown. Ellis v. State, 799 So. 2d 159 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Where no substantial rights of either party were affected by evidence admitted, its introduction was, at worst, harmless error. Brown ex rel Webb v. Blackwood, 697 So. 2d 763 (Miss. 1997).

Any error from failure of prosecution to produce recorded statement of witness until evening before trial was harmless, where defendant failed to show prejudice from the late discovery. Jones v. State, 669 So. 2d 1383 (Miss. 1995).

There was no error in exclusion of parts of doctor's deposition, where other expert testimony had been offered regarding standard of care for a gastroenterologist/internist and doctor's testimony would have been cumulative. West v. Sanders Clinic for Women, 661 So. 2d 714 (Miss. 1995).

In manslaughter prosecution where defendant claimed self-defense, exclusion of witness's testimony that he had seen victim in fights before was not reversible error, where evidence of victim's violent character had already been admitted through other witnesses. Newsom v. State, 629 So. 2d 611 (Miss. 1993).

Admission into evidence of lack of inspection sticker and driver's license was error, but was harmless as it affected no substantial right of defendant; evidence was clear that accident was not the result of lack of driver's license or inspection sticker, but of defendant's driving while intoxicated. Hewlett v. State, 607 So. 2d 1097 (Miss. 1992).

Although title to camp house property on which stolen logging equipment was found was vested in defendant's sister, any error from suggestion of prosecution witnesses that camp house property belonged to defendant was one of form and, in view of other testimony, was harmless. Williams v. State, 595 So. 2d 1299 (Miss. 1992).

Any error from admission of testimony about plaintiff's altered prescriptions was harmless, where prescriptions were for a diet drug which had nothing to do with plaintiff's alleged injuries, and there was extensive medical evidence in record as to plaintiff's injuries or lack thereof. Ball v. Sloan, 569 So. 2d 1177 (Miss. 1990).

Error from disallowing cross-examination of prosecution witness as to whether defendant had had an affair with his wife was not harmless; this infringed on defendant's right of cross-examination and substantially affected his rights, since evidence of prosecution was largely circumstantial except for this witness, whom prosecution relied on heavily. Sayles v. State, 552 So. 2d 1383 (Miss. 1989).

Objections.

Defendant's conviction for DUI maiming was proper because he consented to a blood sample, he never objected to the introduction of the blood-analysis evidence during the course of the testimony by a witness with the Mississippi Crime Laboratory, defendant did not object to the admission of testimony by a doctor regarding the amount of other substances found in the blood sample and the impairing effects of the other substances under Miss. R. Evid. 103(a)(1), defendant's objection made at trial did not state with requisite specificity the basis for the objection to the admission of the testimony, and a deputy was permitted to testify as to what he personally observed concerning defendant's written consent to the blood test. Irby v. State, — So. 3d —, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 423 (Miss. Aug. 12, 2010), opinion withdrawn by 2010 Miss. LEXIS 650 (Miss. Dec. 9, 2010), substituted opinion at 49 So. 3d 94, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 638 (Miss. 2010).

Defendant failed to make any contemporaneous objects to prior bad act testimony at trial and thus he was procedurally barred from raising the issue on appeal; in any event, the court found no error because defendant opened the door to the evidence. Hodges v. State, 14 So. 3d 786 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

When defendant introduced his record of prior convictions on his own initiative during direct examination, he effectively denied the trial court the opportunity to perform the appropriate balancing test under Miss. R. Evid. 609(a)(1)(B) and 403 so that it could determine whether the prior convictions constituted admissible evidence, plus when the State cross-examined defendant about his prior convictions, defense counsel failed to object; the trial judge did not abuse his discretion by allowing the State to question defendant about his prior convictions. Butler v. State, 16 So. 3d 751 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Defendant's failure to contemporaneously object to the admission of bad act evidence at trial, as required by Miss. R. Evid. 103, effectively waived the issue on appeal, and in light of governing case law, the court did not find that the State's attempted introduction of the evidence substantially affected defendant's right to a fair trial when defendant failed to object. Butler v. State, 16 So. 3d 751 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In defendant's murder trial for killing a man whom his ex-wife was dating, where defendant objected to his ex-wife's testimony that defendant threatened to kill her and any man with whom he caught her on the basis that such evidence was irrelevant, defendant was restricted to that argument on appeal, and he was precluded from arguing that it was error to admit the testimony into evidence to demonstrate his motive or intent to kill the victim because the victim was already dead when defendant made the statement at issue. Parker v. State, 20 So. 3d 702

(Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 20 So. 3d 680, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 544 (Miss. 2009).

Issue of whether a trial judge erred in admitting a deposition on the ground that its proponent made no showing that the declarant was unavailable to testify at trial as a witness was procedurally barred because the deposition was introduced at trial without objection. Washington v. Kelsey, 990 So. 2d 242 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Failure to make a contemporaneous objection at trial constitutes a waiver of any error subsequently assigned. Mariner Health Care, Inc. v. Estate of Edwards, 964 So. 2d 1138 (Miss. 2007).

The testimony of a pediatrician, regarding his notes made from conversations with other treating physicians, could not be considered plain error where defense counsel failed to timely object on the basis that the testimony was hearsay. Additionally, the medical records included in the pediatrician's testimony would have otherwise been admissible under Miss. R. Evid. 803(6), as they would have been presumed reliable since they were kept in the ordinary course of business. McClain v. State, 929 So. 2d 946 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 929 So. 2d 923, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 294 (Miss. 2006).

Finding in favor of the husband and wife in their action against the city for personal injuries and loss of consortium was appropriate because the city never objected to an expert's opinion that there was a dangerous condition; error could not be predicated upon a ruling admitting evidence unless there was a timely objection under Miss. R. Evid. 103(a)(1). City of Natchez v. Jackson, 941 So. 2d 865 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Husband's argument that the chancellor's comments at the outset of the trial indicated that he prejudged the issue of custody prior to hearing evidence on the issue from either party was improper, in part, where he failed to object to the comment when it was made, Miss. R. Evid. 103(a)(1). Horn v. Horn, 909 So. 2d 1151 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Defendant's conviction for burglary of a dwelling was proper where he argued that evidence of his drug use was inadmissible under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) or more prejudicial than probative under Miss. R. Evid. 403, but never objected to the admission of the evidence as required by Miss. R. Evid. 103. Therefore, the issue was not preserved for appellate review. Busick v. State, 906 So. 2d 846 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 2005 Miss. LEXIS 396 (Miss. June 23, 2005).

Husband's argument that the chancellor's comments at the outset of the trial indicated that he prejudged the issue of custody prior to hearing evidence on the issue from either party was improper, in part, where he failed to object to the comment when it was made, Miss. R. Evid. 103(a)(1). Horn v. Horn, 909 So. 2d 1151 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In defendant's trial on a charge of sexual battery and the State's attempt to elicit prior bad acts on direct examination, with regard to defendant's testimony, the record shows that while defense counsel objected to "the form of the question," counsel did not specifically state an objection on the record, nor base an objection on any rule violation or defendant's motion in limine. Thus, defendant failed to properly preserve the alleged error for appellate review. Dupuis v. State, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 1268 (Miss. Ct. App. June 24, 2003).

Defendant was procedurally barred from raising certain issues on appeal because no objections to certain testimony or questions were made under Miss. R. Evid. 103(a). Porter v. State, 869 So. 2d 414 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Defendant's conviction for aggravated assault was proper where his objection to admission of other wrong or criminal acts being admitted was untimely; even if the trial judge had wrongly admitted such testimony, defendant's objection was untimely under Miss. R. Evid. 103(a)(1) because a full six pages in the transcript fell between the testimony and the objection. Ball v. State, 845 So. 2d 736 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Defendant failed to properly preserve the alleged error of violation of a motion in limine for appellate review where defendant did not specifically state his objection on the record, nor did he base his objection on any rule violation or motion in limine. Dupuis v. State, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 590 (Miss. Ct. App. June 24, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 872 So. 2d 724, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 705 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where defendant failed to object to the State's questioning regarding defendant's use of a stolen vehicle during a burglary under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b), the issue was not preserved for appellate review. Cheeks v. State, 843 So. 2d 87 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Although at trial, a defendant's objection to character evidence was based on Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) and on appeal his objection was based on Miss. R. Evid. 404(a), the language of Miss. R. Evid. 103(a)(1) allowed the objection either way, because the specific ground was apparent from the context. Kolberg v. State, 829 So. 2d 29 (Miss. 2002), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 981, 123 S. Ct. 1787, 155 L. Ed. 2d 672 (2003).

Defendant was procedurally barred from raising claim of error concerning jury instruction for the first time on appeal. Ballenger v. State, 667 So. 2d 1242 (Miss. 1995), cert. denied, 518 U.S. 1025, 116 S. Ct. 2565, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1082 (1996), reh'g denied, 518 U.S. 1048, 117 S. Ct. 26, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1119 (1996).

Although defendant objected to jury instruction at trial, she did not object to it on the grounds asserted on appeal, and the issue was therefore procedurally barred. Ballenger v. State, 667 So. 2d 1242 (Miss. 1995), cert. denied, 518 U.S. 1025, 116 S. Ct. 2565, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1082 (1996), reh'g denied, 518 U.S. 1048, 117 S. Ct. 26, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1119 (1996).

Any error from introduction of witness's testimony was waived by defendant's failure to object to her testimony not only when she was called but when prosecutor first broached subject of her being called. Eakes v. State, 665 So. 2d 852 (Miss. 1995).

Objections must be made at the time evidence is offered in order to object to evidence via appeal. Department of Human Servs. v. Moore, 632 So. 2d 929 (Miss. 1994).

Detective's testimony, which defendant claimed was prejudicial, was not subject to appellate review because defendant failed to make timely objections to it. Stogner v. State, 627 So. 2d 815 (Miss. 1993).

Offer of proof.

Denial of defendant's motion for judgment of acquittal notwithstanding the verdict and, in the alternative, motion for a new trial, after he had been convicted of sexual battery was appropriate because the defense failed to make a sufficient proffer after the trial court excluded a doctor's testimony. Further, even finding that the doctor's testimony would have been relevant, the record was insufficient for the supreme court to determine whether it could have survived under the Miss. R. Evid. 403 balancing test for admissibility. Abernathy v. State, 30 So. 3d 320 (Miss. 2010).

Landowner did not designate any experts during the discovery phase of the matter and did not indicate his desire to call an expert witness prior to trial, as he was required to do under Miss. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(4)(A)(i). Had the landowner wished to preserve that issue for appeal, he was required to make a proffer of the witness's proposed testimony pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 103(a)(2), and because the landowner neglected to make a proffer of the proposed expert testimony, the issue was not properly preserved for the appellate court's review. Pittman v. Dykes Timber Co., 18 So. 3d 923 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Trial court did not err in excluding evidence of how many other people drove the car with which defendant rear-ended a sheriff's car and in which cocaine was found. Defendant made no offer as to how he would have answered the question of how many other people drove the car and he therefore failed to make the necessary offer of proof under Miss. R. Evid. 103(a)(2). Magee v. State, 912 So. 2d 1044 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In defendant's drug case, the court did not err in sustaining the state's objection to relevancy concerning cross-examination of an officer because, although the trial court attempted to prompt defense counsel into a proffer, not only was no offer of proof forthcoming, but the line of questioning was voluntarily abandoned.

Cook v. State, 953 So. 2d 271 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a capital murder case, pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 103(a), the trial court could not be found in error for excluding evidence as hearsay because defense counsel failed to make an offer of proof. Lynch v. State, 877 So. 2d 1254 (Miss. 2004), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 125 S. Ct. 1299, 161 L. Ed. 2d 122 (2005).

Although defendant argued that the trial court had committed reversible error by not allowing a witness to testify at trial; no offer of proof was procured by defendant's attorney in order to preserve the issue for appeal. Granger v. State, 853 So. 2d 830 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Since defendant did not make an offer of proof to provide substance to the theory of his defense, the appellate court could not properly evaluate his claims, and the appellate court had to affirm the judgment. Edwards v. State, 823 So. 2d 1223 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Trial court erred in excluding proffered evidence which may have established that witness had knowledge and an opinion as to drug informant's truth and veracity, since under the rules, defendant had the right to make his offer of proof. Cooper v. State, 628 So. 2d 1371 (Miss. 1993).

Although defendant failed to specifically place substance of evidence offered but excluded into the record, through either question and answer or proffered statement, the testimony defendant wanted to offer was apparent from the context. Heidel v. State, 587 So. 2d 835 (Miss. 1991).

Prejudice.

In a capital murder trial, the trial court committed reversible error in excluding a state witness's statement from evidence without conducting a box hearing and thereby failing to consider the admission of the statement in accordance with Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04(I); the trial court's failure to adhere to Rule 9.04(I) prejudiced defendant since the witness's statement was the only direct evidence linking defendant to the crime, and her credibility was the crucial issue in the case. Ross v. State, 954 So. 2d 968 (Miss. 2007).

Even if the prosecution did not disclose proposed expert testimony regarding the fact that victims of a homicide died from blunt force trauma to the head and defendant apparently tried to conceal the crime with a cleaning solution, defendant failed to show that any prejudice resulted therefrom because the evidence was merely cumulative of other evidence properly admitted into evidence. Le v. State, 913 So. 2d 913 (Miss. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 546 U.S. 1004, 126 S. Ct. 622, 163 L. Ed. 2d 508, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 8254, 74 U.S.L.W. 3288 (2005).

Even though the state did not provide affidavits from prior charges filed by the girlfriend against defendant to defendant as required by Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04(A)(3), defendant was not prejudiced by their admission into evidence because he was fully aware that the prior domestic violence charges would be presented at trial and could have easily discovered the contents of the affidavits. Taylor v. State, 954 So. 2d 944 (Miss. 2007).

Defendant's conviction for the sale of cocaine was inappropriate because the state failed to present evidence that identified the people on the tape in question; moreover, the erroneous admission of the taped conversations substantially prejudiced defendant, necessitating reversal and remand for a new trial, Miss. R. Evid. 103(a). Brown v. State, 969 So. 2d 891 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), reversed by 969 So. 2d 855, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 680 (Miss. 2007).

Although the evidence in a medical malpractice case tended to show that a doctor was drinking during his treatment of the patient, and the evidence was relevant to the patient's claim, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the evidence from admission on the ground that it was too prejudicial. Griffin v. McKenney, 877 So. 2d 425 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court did not improperly limit defendant's testimony when it sustained an objection by the State to defense counsel's invitation to defendant to proceed with particulars about why defendant believed, through talking with others, that a prison correctional officer was violent; while in a self-defense case, pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 404(a)(2), the reputation of the victim, in this case the officer, was relevant when there was a claim that the victim was the initial aggressor, the defense was not truly based on such a claim, and defendant did not submit a proffer that gave greater details as to exactly what defendant understood about the officer's violent behavior, and pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 103(a), the court failed to find that a substantial right of defendant's was affected by the trial court's ruling. Sheffield v. State, 844 So. 2d 519 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Admission of full-color, close-up photographs of murder victim's decomposed, maggot-infested skull substantially adversely affected defendant's right to a fair trial, especially where proof in case was primarily, if not completely, based on circumstantial evidence. McNeal v. State, 551 So. 2d 151 (Miss. 1989).

Review.

In a case in which defendant was convicted of violating Miss. Code Ann. § 63-11-30(1)(c), the circuit court incorrectly applied the Porter decision. The Porter decision stood for the proposition that in a driving under the influence (DUI) per-se case, defendant could not offer evidence regarding whether or not he was under the influence which would impair his ability to drive a vehicle; the Porter decision did not hold that in a DUI-per-se case, evidence regarding the consumption of alcohol could not be introduced to prove whether or not defendant was at a certain blood alcohol concentration when he or she was driving a motor vehicle. Evans v. State, 25 So. 3d 1054 (Miss. 2010).

Although defendant argued that the trial court allowed impermissible hearsay testimony, the appellate court found that error could not be predicated upon a ruling that admitted or excluded evidence unless a substantial right was affected by the ruling, Miss. R. Evid. 103(a), and defendant failed to identify what rights, if any, were affected by the trial court's decision. Furthermore, defendant repeatedly argued that the negative result of the fingerprint analysis was exculpatory, and clearly, reversible error could not be found in the wrongful admission of exculpatory evidence. Pilgrim v. State, 19 So. 3d 148 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Defendant failed to object to the admission of two of the photographs and the other photographs that he claimed were improperly admitted were admitted upon the advance agreement of the prosecution and defense counsel. Therefore, under Miss. R. Evid. 103(a)(1), defendant's arguments regarding the photographs were procedurally barred. Staten v. State, 989 So. 2d 938 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 993 So. 2d 832, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 400 (Miss. 2008).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in admitting defendant's statement that he drove in the middle of the road because it was part of the story of the crime and it was so interrelated with the manslaughter charge against defendant, which arose from the victim's death from an automobile accident with defendant, that it constituted a closely related series of occurrences; however, even though it was error for the prosecution to elicit testimony from the officer that defendant had committed a crime by driving in the middle of the road, the trial court cured the error by advising the jury to disregard the testimony. Bell v. State, 963 So. 2d 1124 (Miss. 2007).

Motion for post-conviction relief was properly dismissed based on an allegation of ineffective assistance of counsel because defendant was correctly informed of the 10-year maximum penalty for uttering forgery; however, the case was remanded for resentencing because plain error was committed when a trial court improperly imposed a 15-year sentence. Jefferson v. State, 958 So. 2d 1276 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Although defendant alleged that he was not allowed to demonstrate bias or prejudice, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in determining that the mother's motive of money was a collateral matter that would not help the jury decide whether the statutory rape or fondling occurred; thus, pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 103(a), the trial court did not err in excluding that evidence. Poynor v. State, 962 So. 2d 68 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 962 So. 2d 38, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 416 (Miss. 2007).

In a criminal prosecution for conspiracy to commit armed robbery, the trial court did not commit reversible error by allowing the store manager to give his lay opinion testimony as to the view of the safe from where he was standing. The manager was familiar with the store's layout so his testimony was based on personal knowledge. Herring v. State, 938 So. 2d 1251 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 939 So. 2d 805, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 752 (Miss. 2006).

In a statutory rape and child fondling case, defendant asserted that the trial court erred in not allowing him to demonstrate the bias or prejudice of the victims' mother, which alleged that her motive for accusing defendant of abusing the victims was to get money out of him; however, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in determining that the mother's motive was a collateral matter that would not help the jury decide whether the statutory rape or fondling occurred and in excluding that evidence under Miss. R. Evid. 103(a). Poynor v. State, — So. 2d —, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 857 (Miss. Ct. App. Nov. 21, 2006), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 962 So. 2d 68, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 292 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Where defendant was charged with aggravated assault, an eyewitness to the shooting was permitted to testify that the declarant told her that defendant had a gun, and immediately after the declarant made the statement, she jumped out of the car and ran for shelter; the hearsay statement was both an excited utterance and a present sense impression, and the trial court did not abuse its discretion by admitting the statement. Wheeler v. State, 943 So. 2d 106 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Where defendant was tried for the stabbing murder of his wife, the trial court admitted photographs of the victim's body and a videotape of the bloody crime scene; in the absence of a specific objection under Miss. R. Evid. 103(a)(1), no error concerning the admission of the evidence was preserved for review. Lang v. State, 931 So. 2d 689 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Defendant's conviction for murder was proper where the trial court did not err in allowing into evidence photographs of the location in which the victim's body was found. Defendant had asserted that the trial court erred in its ruling, but made no claim that the introduction was adverse to his case; thus, the court was not required to address the issue pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 103(a). Wright v. State, 915 So. 2d 527 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Circuit judge did not commit prejudicial error under Miss. R. Evid. 103(a) by allowing three circuit judges to testify and offer opinions about the competency of public defenders after instructing the county to "stay away from" expert testimony on ultimate questions of fact under Miss. R. Evid. 704 in the county's action against the state alleging that state statutes requiring counties to provide legal services for indigent criminal defendants were unconstitutional. The circuit judge relied on the judges' testimony to help her determine whether the public defenders' caseload was excessive, whether indigent defendants were entering into ill-advised plea agreements, and whether the public defenders take their obligations as such seriously, and further, the circuit judge did not treat their testimony as expert testimony. Quitman County v. State, 910 So. 2d 1032 (Miss. 2005).

Circuit judge did not commit prejudicial error under Miss. R. Evid. 103(a) in disallowing "ultimate issue" opinion testimony by an expert under Miss. R. Evid. 704 in a county's action against the state alleging that state statutes requiring counties to provide legal services for indigent criminal defendants were unconstitutional because the expert had already addressed his specific concerns about the indigent defense system in his extensive testimony, and allowing one final, sweeping opinion during re-direct examination was redundant and unnecessary under Miss. R. Evid. 401. Quitman County v. State, 910 So. 2d 1032 (Miss. 2005).

In a criminal trial for sexual battery, where defendant failed to object to the admission of hearsay statements that the child victim made to witnesses for the State, the error was not preserved for review. Perry v. State, 904 So. 2d 1122 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In defendant's trial for unlawfully taking possession of a motor vehicle, the trial court was acting within its discretion in finding: (1) that the knife on defendant's person had evidentiary value in helping the jury understand how defendant might have been able to start the vehicle, and (2) that its probative value was not outweighed by prejudice from the jury learning that defendant was armed with a knife. Parks v. State, 859 So. 2d 1084 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Appellate court reversed the trial court's rulings on the appellant's evidentiary issues because the appellate court was convinced that the trial court abused its discretion, and then, that the rulings resulted in prejudice or harm to the appellants, or adversely affected their substantial right. Palmer v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 905 So. 2d 564 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, remanded, 904 So. 2d 1077 (Miss. 2005).

Relevancy and admissibility of evidence are largely within discretion of trial court and reversal may be had only where that discretion has been abused; unless trial judge's discretion is so abused as to be prejudicial to a party, supreme court will not reverse the ruling. Beech v. Leaf River Forest Prods., Inc., 691 So. 2d 446 (Miss. 1997).

Appellate court reversed the trial court's rulings on the appellant's evidentiary issues because the appellate court was convinced that the trial court abused its discretion, and then, that the rulings resulted in prejudice or harm to the appellants, or adversely affected their substantial right. Palmer v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 905 So. 2d 564 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, remanded, 904 So. 2d 1077 (Miss. 2005).

Substantial right.

Defendant's conviction for armed robbery and the denial of his motion for a new trial were both proper because the appellate court failed to see how the judge's decision to change his mind and sustain the State's objection on a ground not specified by the State had any effect on defendant's trial. Further, the exclusion of the victim's testimony concerning the officer's belief as to the victim's intoxication did not affect any substantial right of defendant, Miss. R. Evid. 103(a)(2). McClendon v. State, 17 So. 3d 184 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In defendant's trial for statutory rape, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing the victim's hearsay testimony under the "tender years" exception of Miss. R. Evid 803(25). The trial court weighed its concerns with the victim's credibility against the other circumstances and found substantial indicia of reliability in her hearsay statements, and the reviewing court could not state with a definite and firm conviction that the trial court reached the wrong result pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 103(a). Grimes v. State, 1 So. 3d 951 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Defendant never invoked the right to remain silent but repeatedly asked what defendant was doing at the police station; the police asked defendant about where defendant got the credit cards and defendant never indicated in any way that defendant was invoking th right to remain silent, and thus no substantial right was affected, the plain error rule did not protect defendant, and any error was waived. Smith v. State, 984 So. 2d 295 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Trial court did not err in admitting the victim's hearsay statement under the dying declaration exception, Miss. R. Evid. 804(b)(2), because the admission of the statement did not affect a substantial right as provided in Miss. R. Evid. 103(a). Defendant admitted to stabbing the victim, and the only question for the jury was whether the stabbing was done in self-defense. Johnson v. State, 908 So. 2d 758 (Miss. 2005).

Defendant's convictions for aggravated assault and conspiracy to murder the victim were proper under Miss. R. Evid. 103(a) because the admission of a witness's previous statement did not affect a substantial right of defendant to a fair trial as the record showed that the statement was not the only evidence of defendant's gang involvement. Robinson v. State, 940 So. 2d 235 (Miss. 2006).

Rule 104. Preliminary questions.

(a) Questions of admissibility generally. Preliminary questions concerning the qualification of a person to be a witness, the existence of a privilege, or the admissibility of evidence shall be determined by the court, subject to the provisions of subdivision (b). In making its determination it is not bound by the rules of evidence except those with respect to privileges.

(b) Relevancy conditioned on fact. When the relevancy of evidence depends upon the fulfillment of a condition of fact, the court shall admit it upon, or subject to, the introduction of evidence sufficient to support a finding of the fulfillment of the condition. If offeror fails to meet the condition, the objector may request the jury be instructed to disregard the evidence; however, such request shall not be a prerequisite to motion for mistrial. For purposes of punitive damages, proof of net worth shall not be offered until the close of evidence and the court has determined that issue will be submitted to the jury.

(c) Hearing of jury. Hearings on the admissibility of confessions shall in all cases be conducted out of the hearing of the jury. Hearings on other preliminary matters shall be so conducted when the interests of justice require or, when an accused is a witness, if he so requests.

(d) Testimony by accused. The accused does not, by testifying upon a preliminary matter, subject himself to cross-examination as to other issues in the case.

(e) Weight and credibility. This rule does not limit the right of a party to introduce before the jury evidence relevant to weight or credibility.

COMMENT

(a) — Subsection (a) recognizes that a significant amount of a trial judge's responsibility is to make preliminary rulings. For instance, the judge, in cases where there is a question of the witness's competency, must first make a determination that the witness is competent before the witness is allowed to testify concerning the issue at bar. Other preliminary questions might concern privileges, the exclusionary rule, the voluntariness of confessions, and qualifications of experts. In House v. State, 445 So.2d 815 (Miss. 1984), the Supreme Court set forth extremely explicit guidelines for the trial court to use in determining whether a witness who has been hypnotized may testify in a criminal prosecution about matters explored while under hypnosis.

Often times preliminary matters will involve a determination of facts. In such instances, the judge is the trier of facts. See FRE 104, Advisory Committee Notes. When the judge hears evidence on these preliminary questions, he is not bound under Rule 104 to apply the rules of evidence. The one exception to this, which is explicitly stated, is the evidentiary law relating to privileges.

(b) — Subsection (b) refers to conditional relevancy. If before we determine X, we must determine that condition Y exists, then the court must admit evidence of the condition precedent. The evidence is admitted only after the judge makes an initial determination that a sufficient predicate has been laid. If later the judge believes that the condition was never fully established, he may withdraw the preliminary evidence from the jury's consideration. It is within the judge's discretion as to how the proof should be presented. See FRE 104, Advisory Committee Notes.

(c) — Subsection (c) is designed to prevent the jury from hearing what may be prejudicial evidence which may be later ruled inadmissible. Rather than exposing the jury to this evidence, the rule requires that the admissibility hearing be held outside the jury's presence. This procedure must always be followed in cases where the preliminary matter under discussion is the voluntariness of a criminal defendant's confession. This is in accord with long-standing Mississippi practice. See, e.g., Hall v. State, 427 So.2d 957 (Miss. 1983); McElroy v. State, 204 So.2d 463 (Miss. 1967); see also Jackson v. Denno, 378 U.S. 368, 84 S. Ct. 1774, 12 L.Ed.2d 908 (1964). The admissibility of possibly illegally obtained evidence may be another matter to be considered outside the jury's presence. To protect the criminal defendant, the rule provides he may have a hearing outside the jury's presence at his request. In other cases, the judge's discretion governs. For instance, in determining the competency of a child to testify, the judge would most likely not dismiss the jury. To dismiss the jury in such a case would be needlessly time-consuming.

(d) — Subsection (d) allows the defendant to challenge preliminary questions without exposing himself to a full cross-examination. Thus, if the defendant in a hearing to consider a motion to suppress evidence or in a hearing to consider the voluntariness of a confession testifies, the prosecutor on cross-examination may not inquire into other issues. This subsection is necessary to provide a limitation on the wide-open cross-examination provision of Rule 611(b). Subsection (d) does not address the issue of whether a defendant's testimony at a hearing on a preliminary matter may be used by the prosecutor at trial. But see Harris v. New York, 401 U.S. 222, 91 S. Ct. 643, 28 L.Ed.2d 1 (1971).

(e) — Subsection (e) is self-explanatory. For a similar provision see FRE 104 (e).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Hearing not required.
Photographs.
Relevancy conditioned on fact.
Review.

Hearing not required.

As the Mississippi Supreme Court has recognized the medical diagnosis of child abuse, there was no need for a pretrial hearing regarding whether child abuse was a generally medically accepted diagnosis. Kolberg v. State, 829 So. 2d 29 (Miss. 2002), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 981, 123 S. Ct. 1787, 155 L. Ed. 2d 672 (2003).

Photographs.

In a prosecution of defendant for vehicular homicide, defendant failed to preserve his argument that the trial court erred in admitting photographs of beer cans inside his truck; defendant's objection to the beer can photographs was conditioned on the State's being unable to connect the beer cans to the accident; when the State offered testimony from a convenience store worker that, before the accident, defendant purchased a case of beer of the same brand as the cans appearing in the picture, defendant offered no further objection to the admission of the pictures. Dunaway v. State, 919 So. 2d 67 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari dismissed en banc by 920 So. 2d 1008, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 652 (Miss. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 921 So. 2d 1279, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 35 (Miss. 2006).

Relevancy conditioned on fact.

Wife's propensity for violence with a butcher knife was admissible as a character trait, and it was admissible at the time defendant offered it, where defendant satisfied mandate of subdivision (b) of this rule that he offer "evidence sufficient to support a finding of the fulfillment of the condition." Heidel v. State, 587 So. 2d 835 (Miss. 1991).

Review.

Trial court did not permit a nurse practitioner who treated the victim of an assault to testify as an expert witness beyond her expertise because the nurse practitioner was qualified to testify that the victim's injuries were obviously serious; the admission of her testimony was within the trial court's discretion under Miss. R. Evid. 104(a). Briggs v. State, 16 So. 3d 696 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 17 So. 3d 99, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 412 (Miss. 2009).

Relevancy and admissibility of evidence are largely within discretion of trial court and reversal may be had only where that discretion has been abused; unless trial judge's discretion is so abused as to be prejudicial to a party, supreme court will not reverse his ruling. Beech v. Leaf River Forest Prods., Inc., 691 So. 2d 446 (Miss. 1997).

Finding against the driver in her action for injuries resulting from a collision with a train at a railroad crossing was appropriate where a witness's misstatement did not seriously impact deliberations on whether the notch or hole by the tracks was negligently allowed to exist and made the railroad at fault also; that inappropriate lay opinion did not affect a substantial right and was not reversible error under Miss. R. Evid. 104. Bowman v. CSX Transp., Inc., 931 So. 2d 644 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

State clearly produced the two officers who were present when defendant was questioned and the confession was signed, as caselaw mandated; thus, the trial judge did not find credible defendant's claim that defendant was forced to give a statement that defendant had committed murder of the child while in the commission of felonious abuse and/or battery of the child, because the officers beat defendant. Seeling v. State, 844 So. 2d 439 (Miss. 2003).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. Admissibility of evidence relating to accused's attempt to commit suicide. 73 A.L.R.5th 615.

Law Reviews — Recent Trends in Mississippi Judicial Rule Making: Court Power, Judicial Recusals, and Expert Testimony, 23 Miss. C. L. Rev. 1, Fall, 2003.

Rule 105. Limited admissibility.

When evidence which is admissible as to one party or for one purpose but not admissible as to another party or for another purpose is admitted, the court, upon request, shall restrict the evidence to its proper scope and instruct the jury accordingly.

COMMENT

This rule is a reflection of the existing practice of admitting evidence regarding one party or one purpose and excluding it as regarding another party or another purpose. A good example of the application of this rule occurs in a criminal case in which a confession of one defendant implicates a co-defendant. In such a case, if the entire confession were admitted into evidence, no amount of limiting instructions could cure the prejudice against the nonconfessing co-defendant. Bruton v. United States, 389 U.S. 818, 88 S. Ct. 126, 19 L.Ed.2d 70 (1968). A limiting instruction would be useless in such an instance. In other cases, however, where there is less at risk, a limiting instruction might very well be sufficient.

The rule requires that the party affected make a request to limit the evidence. If no request is made, and consequently the evidence is admitted, existing practice suggests that no error has been committed. See Freed v. Killman, 6 So.2d 909, 192 Miss. 643 (1942).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Limiting instructions.
Illustrative cases.

Limiting instructions.

Defendant's conviction for murder under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-19(1)(b) was proper, in part because defendant's trial counsel did not request a limiting instruction regarding impeached testimony and in the absence of such a request, the trial court could not be held in error. Franklin v. State, 72 So. 3d 1129 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011), writ of certiorari denied by 71 So. 3d 1207, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 508 (Miss. 2011).

Defendant's conviction for aggravated assault was appropriate because he failed to request a limiting instruction at the trial court level. Therefore, his issue on appeal that the trial court erred in failing to instruct the jury that it was permitted to use the gang evidence only to make determinations of credibility of those witnesses was procedurally barred. Dao v. State, 984 So. 2d 352 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 984 So. 2d 277, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 281 (Miss. 2008).

Although the limiting instruction given during defendants' trial was inadequate in that it did not instruct the jury only to consider the statement against the defendant who made it, no prejudice or manifest injustice resulted as to any of the defendants; each defendant gave sufficient evidence of his individual participation in the robbery of a gun store in his separate statements to support a capital murder charge. Anderson v. State, 5 So. 3d 1088 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 11 So. 3d 1250, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 171 (Miss. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 11 So. 3d 1250, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 184 (Miss. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 11 So. 3d 1250, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 177 (Miss. 2009).

Because the burden to request a limiting instruction falls upon defense counsel in the admittance of Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) evidence, the burden falls upon defense counsel to request a limiting instruction in the context of the admittance of prior convictions through impeachment under Miss. R. Evid. 609. Moss v. State, 977 So. 2d 1201 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 977 So. 2d 1144, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 151 (Miss. 2008).

Denial of defendant's motion for a new trial after he had been convicted of aggravated assault and rape was appropriate because defendant did not request a limiting instruction and was barred from bringing the issue on appeal; the trial judge was not obligated to provide a limiting instruction sua sponte regarding the admission of defendant's prior convictions. Moss v. State, 977 So. 2d 1201 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 977 So. 2d 1144, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 151 (Miss. 2008).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's conviction for felony shoplifting under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-23-93 based on two prior misdemeanor shoplifting offenses because the trial court was not required to give a sua sponte instruction to buffer the alleged damage done by the presentation of the prior misdemeanor convictions, and Miss. R. Evid. 105 placed the burden on trial counsel to request a limiting instruction regarding Miss. R. Evid. 404(b)evidence. Biggs v. State, 942 So. 2d 185 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 942 So. 2d 164, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 715 (Miss. 2006).

Defendant's convictions for two counts of the sale of methadone and one count of the sale of morphine were appropriate because the trial court did not err in failing to give a limiting jury instruction since Miss. R. Evid. 105 required that the limiting jury instruction being presented to the trial court by counsel. Palmer v. State, 939 So. 2d 792 (Miss. 2006).

In a trial for statutory rape, evidence that defendant had asked the victim to don a white tee shirt, and nothing else, on other occasions was inadmissible to prove defendant guilty of the charge; however, the trial court properly ruled that the evidence was more probative than prejudicial, and moreover, the trial court gave the jury a limiting instruction. Miley v. State, 935 So. 2d 998 (Miss. 2006).

Miss. R. Evid. 105 clearly places the burden of requesting a Miss. R. Evid.

404(b) limiting jury instruction upon counsel. Tate v. State, 912 So. 2d 919 (Miss. 2005).

Jury instructions that reference prior arrests and convictions may be counterproductive to defendant; while serving to limit the jury's consideration of the prior wrongs, such instructions also remind and emphasize to the jury that defendant committed prior bad acts. Whether to request such an instruction is a matter of trial strategy in the exclusive province of defendant, in consultation with his or her attorney; thus, without a request by defense counsel, the trial court properly did not sua sponte give a limiting jury instruction in defendant's case. Tate v. State, 912 So. 2d 919 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court need not issue a sua sponte limiting instruction when other bad acts evidence is admitted under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) and 403; Miss. R. Evid. 105 clearly places the burden of requesting a limiting instruction under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) on the party objecting to the evidence. Brown v. State, 890 So. 2d 901 (Miss. 2004), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 125 S. Ct. 1842, 161 L. Ed. 2d 735 (2005).

Trial court was not required to give the jury a limiting instruction, sua sponte, with regard to Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) evidence of prior bad acts; under recent case law, it was the obligation of defense counsel to make that request. Moore v. State, 921 So. 2d 381 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 926 So. 2d 922, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 166 (Miss. 2006).

The requirements of this rule were met where no limiting instruction was requested by defendant, but one-defense proposed instruction was given that instructed the jury to consider separately the evidence for a conviction for each co-defendant. Buggs v. State, 754 So. 2d 569 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Where defendant's prior conviction was not offered for general impeachment purposes but was introduced to impeach specific false statements made by defendant, and where defendant failed to request a limiting instruction, there was no reversible error in trial court's failure to offer a limiting instruction sua sponte. Johnson v. State, 666 So. 2d 499 (Miss. 1995).

Illustrative cases.

In a case in which defendant was convicted of violating Miss. Code Ann, § 47-5-193, he unsuccessfully argued on appeal that the trial judge failed to instruct the jury to disregard evidence of other crimes, wrongs, or acts where there was no foundation for their admissibility and no showing that the probative value outweighed the prejudicial effect. Defense counsel failed to request a limiting instruction, and the trial judge was not required to issue the limiting instruction sua sponte after defense counsel objected; Rule 105 clearly placed the burden of requesting a Miss. R. Evid. Rule 404(b) limiting instruction upon counsel. Lindsey v. State, 29 So. 3d 121 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

In a depraved-heart murder case, as the prior bad acts evidence was introduced by defendant himself through his direct examination, any objection he may have had concerning its entry into evidence was waived. Further, defendant did not object to the admissibility of this conviction until the State cross-examined him and there was nothing unduly prejudicial in the way the prosecutor cross-examined defendant. Harris v. State, 861 So. 2d 1003 (Miss. 2003).

When the defendant objects to the admission of character evidence, the trial court must balance the probative value of this evidence against the danger of unfair prejudice, pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 105, 403, 609(a), and the court finds that the rule envisions an objection contemporaneous with the admission of the testimony; as the prior bad acts evidence was introduced by one defendant, any objection thereto by that defendant was waived, and because none of defendants objected to the closing argument that referred to the prior bad acts evidence, which was not unduly prejudicial in the first place, the court found that error was not preserved on appeal and the issue had no merit. Harris v. State, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 80 (Miss. Feb. 20, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 861 So. 2d 1003, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 872 (Miss. 2003).

In an action against a general contractor and a subcontractor arising from the death of an iron worker while constructing a casino on a barge on a navigable waterway, OSHA standards were properly introduced to aid the trier of fact in determining whether the actions complained of were reasonable and consistent with industry standards where the jury was properly instructed as to the limited nature for which the OSHA standards were admissible. Accu-Fab & Constr., Inc. v. Ladner by & Through Ladner, 970 So. 2d 1276 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000), aff'd, 778 So. 2d 766 (2001).

Evidence of prior sales of drugs, offered to show intent to distribute, is properly admissible if trial court finds its probative value outweighs its prejudicial effect, and if evidence is accompanied by a proper limiting instruction. Smith v. State, 656 So. 2d 95 (Miss. 1995), criticized in Lambert v. State, 1998 Miss. App. LEXIS 673 (Ct. App. Aug. 18, 1998).

Rule 106. Remainder of or related writings or recorded statements.

When a writing or recorded statement or part thereof is introduced by a party, an adverse party may require him at that time to introduce any other part or any other writing or recorded statement which ought in fairness to be considered contemporaneously with it.

COMMENT

This rule is a codification of the common law doctrine of completeness. The rule is already codified with regard to depositions in M.R.C.P. 32(a)(4). However, Rule 106 is somewhat narrower than Mississippi common law. The rule only applies the doctrine of completeness to written or recorded statements of a specific document. Under Mississippi case law the rule of completeness is extended to other writings and even to oral statements. See Davis v. State, 230 Miss. 183, 92 So.2d 359 (1957); Sanders v. State, 237 Miss. 772, 115 So.2d 145 (1969). Such a rule attempts to prevent misleading the jury by taking evidence out of context.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Illustrative cases.

In general.

The rule does not necessarily require that all the remainder of a document must be offered into evidence, but only that part which "ought in fairness to be considered." Washington v. State, 726 So. 2d 209 (Ct. App. 1998).

Illustrative cases.

Court did not err by refusing to admit defendant's recorded statement taken at the police department into evidence because defendant sought to introduce a self-serving statement into evidence without being subject to cross-examination. Defendant had no right to introduce such a statement into evidence in lieu of taking the stand to testify to the matter herself. Teston v. State, 44 So. 3d 977 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari dismissed by 44 So. 3d 969, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 520 (Miss. 2010).

Defendant's convictions for armed robbery and arson were proper where merely presenting a document which, testimony revealed, was inaccurate and written at the behest of defendant, was insufficient to establish that the judge had an interest in the outcome; defendant did not explain what benefit, other than to disqualify the judge, the testimony would have been to his case or how he was prejudiced by its absence. Payton v. State, 897 So. 2d 921 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court's ruling allowing a car manufacturer in a wrongful death case to introduce only the portion of the owner's manual tending to show that the warnings given were adequate, while excluding the portion of the manual that indicated otherwise was error under Miss. R. Evid. 106 because the jury was misled about what information was contained in the owner's manual. Palmer v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 905 So. 2d 564 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, remanded, 904 So. 2d 1077 (Miss. 2005).

In a murder trial, defendant's written statement was properly excluded and defendant was properly prohibited from cross-examining law officials concerning the contents of the statement, because defendant would not be subject to cross-examination. Adams v. State, 851 So. 2d 366 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002), cert. denied, 849 So. 2d 899 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to admit the entire police report regarding an accident in which the plaintiff's daughter and granddaughter were killed as the report had only been used to cross-examine the plaintiff's expert and no portion of the report had been offered into evidence by the defendants. Rials v. Duckworth, 822 So. 2d 283 (Miss. 2002).

Trial judge's limitation on use of transcript of defendant's statement during testimony of officer was an infringement of defendant's right of cross-examination, where statement was relevant to show full story of what happened and to show that defendant's contemporaneous statement as to what occurred was consistent with his testimony at trial. Banks v. State, 631 So. 2d 748 (Miss. 1994).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. Construction and Application of Uniform Rule of Evidence 106, Applying Doctrine of Completeness to Writings and Recorded Statements. 27 A.L.R.6th 183.

ARTICLE II. JUDICIAL NOTICE

Rule 201. Judicial notice of adjudicative facts.

(a) Scope of rule. This rule governs only judicial notice of adjudicative facts.

(b) Kinds of facts. A judicially noticed fact must be one not subject to reasonable dispute in that it is either (1) generally known within the territorial jurisdiction of the trial court or (2) capable of accurate and ready determination by resort to sources whose accuracy cannot reasonably be questioned.

(c) When discretionary. A court may take judicial notice, whether requested or not.

(d) When mandatory. A court shall take judicial notice if requested by a party and supplied with the necessary information.

(e) Opportunity to be heard. A party is entitled upon timely request to an opportunity to be heard as to the propriety of taking judicial notice and the tenor of the matter noticed. In the absence of prior notification, the request may be made after judicial notice has been taken.

(f) Time of taking notice. Judicial notice may be taken at any stage of the proceeding.

(g) Instructing jury. In a civil action or proceeding the court shall instruct the jury to accept as conclusive any fact judicially noticed. In a criminal case, the court shall instruct the jury that it may, but is not required to, accept as conclusive any fact judicially noticed.

COMMENT

(a) — The entire codification of the law of judicial notice is in Rule 201. Professor Kenneth Davis, in his now famous article, "An Approach to Problems of Evidence in the Administrative Process," 65 Harv.L.Rev. 364 (1942), divided judicial notice into two parts, adjudicative and legislative. Adjudicative facts are easily understood; they are specific to the litigation. Legislative facts, on the other hand, are more amorphous. To determine legislative facts one must look at the public policy or policies involved in judge-made law. Despite the existence of two types of judicial notice, Rule 201 only governs judicial notice of adjudicative facts. A court's application of judicial notice of legislative facts is more an inherent part of the judicial process rather than an evidentiary matter.

(b) — Subsection (b) provides that only certain kinds of facts may be susceptible to judicial notice. The first kind of fact that can be judicially noticed is one that is commonly known in the jurisdiction in which the court sits. The judge himself need not know the fact. Indeed, it is altogether irrelevant whether he does. The test is whether the fact is common knowledge in the area. The use of judicial notice for matters of common knowledge has long been practiced in Mississippi. On what street the local department store is located is the kind of commonly known fact of which a court may take judicial notice. The second kind of fact susceptible to judicial notice is one readily ascertainable. This would include such items as maps, census data, mortality tables, dates and time, and history. See Ellis & Williams, Miss. Evid. § 12-2 and the cases cited therein. See also Nicketta v. National Tea Co., 338 Ill.App. 159, 87 N.E.2d 30 (1949), and Walls v. Mississippi State Bar, 437 So.2d 30, 33 (Miss. 1983).

Subsection (b) does not allow judicial notice to be used when the fact is a dubious one or one in controversy.

(c), (d) — Subsections (c) and (d) govern the use of the judicial discretion. The judge has discretion to take judicial notice of adjudicative facts, regardless of whether a party has requested him to do so. The basis for the exercise of such discretion is to expedite matters. On occasion a judge may be required to take judicial notice. If a party makes a request and supplies the judge with the necessary information, he must take judicial notice.

(e) — Subsection (e) provides for a procedure not formerly required in Mississippi. By providing an opportunity for a hearing on the matter of judicial notice, the rule is a safeguard for fairness. If a party requests an opportunity to be heard, under the rule he must be granted that opportunity. Because frequently there is no advance notice that judicial notice will be taken, a party has a right to be heard even after judicial notice has been taken.

(g) — Subsection (g) contains an important deviation from pre-rule Mississippi practice. The common law rule in Mississippi had been that evidence admitted pursuant to judicial notice was not conclusive. Subsection (g), insofar as it concerns criminal cases, is not inconsistent with that rule. However, in civil cases under subsection (g) the jury must accept such evidence as conclusive. The jury in criminal cases may choose to accept the evidence or reject it. This avoids any possible allegation that the defendant's right to a jury trial under the Sixth Amendment was violated.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction.
Kinds of facts.
Illustrative cases.

Construction.

This rule did not require trial court to take judicial notice of asserted fact that the term "going with" meant sexual intercourse. Thornton v. Shows, 537 So. 2d 1363 (Miss. 1989).

Kinds of facts.

Judicial notice may be taken that a certain street is in a specific county, at least if the street has a sufficiently unusual name. Thomas v. State, 784 So. 2d 247 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Illustrative cases.

In a case in which a school district (District) appealed a decision by a chancery court finding that the school board's decision not to uphold a superintendent's recommendation to renew appellee employee's contract was not supported by any substantial evidence and was arbitrary and capricious, the District argued that the chancellor failed to follow the proper standard of review under Miss. Code Ann. § 37-9-113. The chancellor abused his discretion by taking judicial notice that school districts around the state had employees who retired and were rehired after 45 days on a half-time basis at half-time salary; while the chancellor might know that to be true and accurate, that fact was not generally known in the territorial jurisdiction of the trial court or capable of accurate determination by a source whose accuracy could not be questioned. Smith County Sch. Dist. v. Campbell, 18 So. 3d 335 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In personal injury action, pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 201, the trial judge was permitted to take judicial notice of the information found in the life expectancy tables even if they had not been admitted into evidence. Martin v. Weatherford, 31 So. 3d 1252 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 31 So. 3d 1217, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 173 (Miss. 2010).

During a trustee removal proceeding, the chancellor did not err in taking judicial notice that the trustee had an adverse position to the beneficiary's position; Miss. R. Evid. 201(e) expressly provided the trustee with a mechanism to challenge the chancellor's decision to take judicial notice of the adverse position, but the trustee failed to do so. McWilliams v. McWilliams, 994 So. 2d 841 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In this rezoning appeal, the court took judicial notice that the county in question was devastated by the effects of a hurricane, but the effects thereof were not alleged to have been the basis for any change in the condition of the property at issue. Childs v. Hancock County Bd. of Supervisors, 1 So. 3d 862 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), reversed by 1 So. 3d 855, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 8 (Miss. 2009).

In making his findings in ruling on an inmate's postconviction relief (PCR) motion, the trial judge, pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 99-39-11, properly took judicial notice of his own docket and the prior proceedings had and conducted in both the criminal proceedings forming the basis for the attack via the civil PCR motion, as well as all proceedings had and conducted in the civil matter related to the PCR motion. Gulley v. State, 870 So. 2d 652 (Miss. 2004).

In a family dispute pertaining to the manner in which a securities account should be divided by the wife and children of a decedent, it was error for the chancellor to take judicial notice of the manner in which securities may be held based on his own personal experience with securities. Estate of Baker v. Baker, 760 So. 2d 759 (Miss. 2000).

Minutes of particular Board of Supervisors meeting were properly included in trial record, where facts were easily ascertainable through certified public records, and trial judge took judicial notice of contents of all minutes from Board of Supervisors, including minutes from the particular date in question. Ditto v. Hinds County, 665 So. 2d 878 (Miss. 1995).

Supreme court hearing appeal in election contest could take judicial notice of adjudicative fact that a special election was subsequently held and the incumbent was declared the victor. Rogers v. Holder, 636 So. 2d 645 (Miss. 1994).

ARTICLE III. PRESUMPTIONS IN CIVIL ACTIONS AND PROCEEDINGS

Rule 301. Presumptions in general in civil actions and proceedings.

In all civil actions and proceedings not otherwise provided for by act of the Legislature or by these rules, a presumption imposes on the party against whom it is directed the burden of going forward with evidence to rebut or meet the presumption, but does not shift to such party the burden of proof in the sense of the risk of non-persuasion, which remains throughout the trial upon the party on whom it was originally cast.

COMMENT

Rule 301 is only concerned with presumptions in civil proceedings. Once the party with the burden of proof has raised a presumption, a motion to dismiss by the opposing party will not be ordered. If the opposing party enters no evidence to rebut the presumption, then the court should instruct the jury that it may accept the presumption. The presumption does not disappear until credible or substantial evidence has been produced by the opposing party.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Law Reviews — The Little Rule That Never Was: Mississippi Rule of Evidence 301: Presumptions in Civil Actions and Proceedings, 70 Miss. L.J. 457 (2000).

ARTICLE IV. RELEVANCY AND ITS LIMITS

Rule 401. Definition of "relevant evidence."

"Relevant Evidence" means evidence having any tendency to make the existence of any fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action more probable or less probable than it would be without the evidence.

COMMENT

Rule 401 makes no distinction between relevancy and materiality. The concept of materiality is merged into the concept of relevancy and retains no independent viability. Evidence is relevant if it is likely to affect the probability of a fact of consequence in the case. Mississippi State Highway Commission v. Dixie Contractors, Inc., 375 So.2d 1202, appeal after remand 402 So.2d 811 (1979). If the evidence has any probative value at all, the rule favors its admission. Such has been the experience under Federal Rule of Evidence 401 which is identical to this rule. Young v. Illinois Cent. Gulf R. Co., 618 F.2d 332 (5th Cir. 1980). Evidence to prove a collateral fact is relevant if the collateral fact has a tendency to prove or disprove an issue in the case. American Potash & Chemical Corp. v. Nevins, 163 So.2d 224, 249 Miss. 450 (1964).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Admissions.
Adultery.
Audiotapes.
Bias.
Blood-stained clothing.
Blood test results.
Collateral-source payments.
Confidential informant.
Controlled substances.
Criminal history.
DNA evidence.
Doctor's testimony.
Manufacturer's manual.
Marital status.
Money.
Other crimes, acts, or wrongs.
Photographs.

Polygraph results.
Redundancy.
Routine practices.
Separate victims.
Sexually explicit material.
Videotapes.
Weapons.
Writings.
Illustrative cases.

In general.

Trial judge did not abuse his discretion in excluding certain testimony from defendant's expert witness as it was irrelevant, but he allowed the expert to testify regarding his other conclusions. Grant v. State, 8 So. 3d 213 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 12 So. 3d 531, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 207 (Miss. 2009).

Trial judge is capable of sorting through exhibits based upon their relevancy. State v. Bass, 4 So. 3d 353 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari dismissed by 2009 Miss. LEXIS 113 (Miss. Mar. 12, 2009).

Male suspect's testimony about shoplifting plan related to acts and conduct that occurred during the course and in furtherance of a conspiracy at a time when the defendant, based upon the evidence and reasonable inferences drawn from the evidence, could be deemed to be a co-conspirator, and was thus not hearsay under Miss. R. Evid. 801(a)(1) or (2) and was both relevant and admissible under Miss. R. Evid. 401, 402, and 403. Wilson v. State, 967 So. 2d 32 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court erred in refusing to allow defense counsel to cross-examine to question about a fingerprint analysis on a bag of cocaine because defendant's theory of the defense was that he only attempted to possess cocaine, but he never actually possessed the cocaine; nevertheless, the error was harmless. Randolph v. State, 973 So. 2d 254 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Admission of defendant's shirt and gun were relevant to the issue of identity and were not too remote in space nor time; the shirt and gun were similar to the description given by the victims and defendant admittedly wore the shirt and possessed the gun during the time in question. Jackson v. State, 969 So. 2d 124 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In defendant's murder trial, the presence of fingerprints on the beer bottle and the "mag light" defendant used to attack the victim with, were irrelevant as to whether he acted in self-defense. Before trial, several witnesses had proffered testimony as to how the attack occurred, and there was no question that defendant struck the victim before shooting him moments later; thus, the circuit court judge did not abuse his discretion in denying defendant's motion for discovery and a continuance in that respect. Conway v. State, 915 So. 2d 521 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 927 So. 2d 750, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 217 (Miss. 2006).

Excluded testimony of a witness was in regards to a witness's location as of the time of trial, and the witness's whereabouts as of January 11, 2006, did not make it less probable that defendant and another burglarized the victims' storage shed on June 15, 2005; the excluded testimony was therefore irrelevant. Moore v. State, 958 So. 2d 824 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari dismissed en banc by 966 So. 2d 172, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 552 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court did not err in excluding evidence of defendant's accomplice's acquittal because, had defendant's accomplice been convicted, that information could not have been introduced by the State at defendant's trial; therefore, the reverse proposition also applied. Garner v. State, 856 So. 2d 729 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Evidence that is remote in time or is otherwise far-removed from an issue at trial is not relevant, and may be excluded by trial court in the exercise of discretion. Tillis v. State, 661 So. 2d 1139 (Miss. 1995).

Demonstrations using anatomically correct dolls in child sex offense cases are generally relevant to corroborate that child knows body parts he or she is describing, and to assure that jury understands exactly to what child is referring. Murriel v. State, 515 So. 2d 952 (Miss. 1987).

Admissions.

In a prosecution for the sale of crack cocaine, statements by the defendant that he smoked crack, but did not sell it, and that he was merely "helping them guys out" were relevant. Ragin v. State, 724 So. 2d 901 (Miss. 1998).

Adultery.

In an action for alienation of affections, the defendant was improperly precluded from introducing evidence of the plaintiff's prior adultery, notwithstanding that it had occurred more than 10 years earlier and that the plaintiff and his wife had thereafter reconciled, since such evidence was still relevant on the issue of causation. Bland v. Hill, 735 So. 2d 414 (Miss. 1999).

Audiotapes.

Admission of audiotapes of sexually explicit telephone conversations between defendant and a 13-year-old victim was relevant to show defendant's disposition towards the child in a statutory rape case, and the recordings were authenticated when defendant admitted having made the statements in order to raise the child's self-confidence. Walker v. State, 878 So. 2d 913 (Miss. 2004).

Whether another individual committed statutory rape against the victim did not make it more or less probable as to whether defendant committed statutory rape against the victim; thus, the trial court did not abuse its discretion when it excluded audio cassette tapes of such evidence on the basis of relevance. Terrell v. State, 952 So. 2d 998 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Defendant's conviction for the sale of cocaine was proper where the audiotape recording of the transaction was properly admitted into evidence pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 401 because the tape was properly identified and authenticated; there was ample testimony by the officers and informants that they all had had previous contacts with defendant and were thus in a position to recognize his voice. Wilburn v. State, 856 So. 2d 686 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

In a prosecution for a transfer of cocaine, an audiotape of the transaction was relevant, notwithstanding that it did not capture a conversation about drugs, as it demonstrated that the defendant was present at the time and place of the transaction. Feazell v. State, 800 So. 2d 1175 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Audiotapes of two drug transactions were properly admitted into evidence where (1) defense counsel conceded on a motion that the tapes were relevant evidence, (2) three witnesses having first hand knowledge of the transactions were presented by the state and all testified that they had listened to the tapes prior to trial and that the tapes were accurate depictions of the drug transaction, and (3) the fact that portions of the recording were inaudible did not render it inadmissible. Lawrence v. State, 780 So. 2d 652 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

The court applied the relevancy test of this rule and the holding of Stromas v. State, 618 So. 2d 116 (Miss. 1993), to find that the tape recordings at issue passed the relevancy test. Ratliff v. State, 752 So. 2d 416 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Tape recordings of a drug transaction were relevant under the rule, notwithstanding that the tape was partially inaudible, where, when accompanied by a transcript outlining the taped conversation, it was clear that the recording at least provided the name of the defendant which was probative that he was involved in the drug transaction. Ragin v. State, 724 So. 2d 901 (Miss. 1998).

A tape recording of a sale of a controlled substance is relevant evidence at the trial of the person charged with making that sale. Martin v. State, 724 So. 2d 420 (Ct. App. 1998).

Bias.

Whatever bias might be shown by the indications of interest by the victim in receiving some compensation from defendant, the appellate court found that it was within the trial judge's discretion to refuse to permit the matter to be explored before the jury. Armstead v. State, 805 So. 2d 592 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Blood-stained clothing.

Defendant's murder conviction was proper where the victim's blood-stained clothing was admissible pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 401 because the clothing corroborated the testimony of the investigators and the photographs of the scene. Dendy v. State, 931 So. 2d 608 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 933 So.

2d 303, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 346 (Miss. 2006).

Blood test results.

The fact that a blood test was not conducted within two hours of an accident and/or that the exact time of the accident and the exact time of the test were not recorded as required by § 63-11-8 does not require that the results of the blood test be excluded from evidence; the question of admissibility depends, instead, on whether the information is relevant. Acklin v. State, 722 So. 2d 1264 (Ct. App. 1998).

The results of a blood test were properly admitted into evidence, even though the blood test was not conducted within two hours of the accident and the exact time of the accident and the exact time of the test were not recorded as required by § 63-11-8, since there was no evidence that the defendant had ingested additional alcohol after the accident or that there was a general scientific concern that blood alcohol measured more than two hours after an occurrence is unreliable in demonstrating some degree of alcohol impairment at the time of the earlier event. Acklin v. State, 722 So. 2d 1264 (Ct. App. 1998).

Blood test results in paternity action were relevant to whether sexual intercourse took place during period of possible conception. Department of Human Servs. v. Moore, 632 So. 2d 929 (Miss. 1994).

Collateral-source payments.

A trial court did not err in excluding collateral-source evidence and in refusing to allow a partnership to use evidence to impeach an injured party when the injured party's testimony about medical bills and nonmedical evidence was not unduly prejudicial. Robinson Prop. Group, L.P. v. Mitchell, 7 So. 3d 240 (Miss. 2009).

To the extent that Mississippi courts have held that evidence of collateral-source payments may not be introduced for the purpose of impeaching false or misleading testimony, those decisions are expressly overruled. Permitting evidence of collateral-source payments for the narrow purpose of impeaching false or misleading testimony is consistent with the Mississippi Rules of Evidence. Robinson Prop. Group, L.P. v. Mitchell, 7 So. 3d 240 (Miss. 2009).

Confidential informant.

Defendant's conviction for murdering her husband was proper where an informant's identity was not relevant to any issues regarding whether defendant had committed the crime charged. Thus, the trial court was correct in refusing to disclose the identity of the informant. Stephens v. State, 911 So. 2d 424 (Miss. 2005).

Controlled substances.

Finding in favor of a trucking company and truck driver in a wrongful-death action brought by the decedent's widow was proper because the trial court did not err in allowing the decedent's sister and mother testify about the substance found in the decedent's pocket, which was identified as crystal meth. In part, their testimony corroborated the friend's testimony to the extent that the drugs were divided at a house and placed into plastic bags and the testimony also helped refute the testimony of another friend that he did not see any drugs and no one had used drugs in his home on the day of the accident. Utz v. Running & Rolling Trucking, Inc., 32 So. 3d 450 (Miss. 2010).

Finding in favor of a trucking company and truck driver in a wrongful-death action brought by the decedent's widow was proper because the trial court did not err in not excluding the testimony of the decedent's friend concerning the decedent's alleged making, using, or selling methamphetamine before the accident since the testimony was relevant and concerned the type of activity that the decedent was involved in prior to the accident and what impact that activity might have had on the decedent's alertness at the time of the accident. Utz v. Running & Rolling Trucking, Inc., 32 So. 3d 450 (Miss. 2010).

In defendant's trial for possession of cocaine, evidence that someone else drove the car in which the cocaine was found and was known to use drugs was not, without more, sufficient to show that defendant did not know about the presence of the cocaine. In the absence of other proof, the evidence was not relevant, and therefore, not admissible. Magee v. State, 912 So. 2d 1044 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Criminal history.

In a vehicular homicide case, the court properly admitted evidence of defendant's arrest for driving with a suspended driver's license because that evidence relevant, not only in regard to why a field sobriety test was not performed, but also to explain the sequence of events leading up to defendant's blood test. Additionally, the trial judge did instruct the jurors that they could not consider evidence of defendant's arrest as an inference of guilt. Teston v. State, 44 So. 3d 977 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari dismissed by 44 So. 3d 969, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 520 (Miss. 2010).

Certified indictment charging defendant with aggravated assault was relevant to prove aggravating circumstance that defendant had been under a sentence of imprisonment at the time he committed murder. Blue v. State, 674 So. 2d 1184 (Miss. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1030, 117 S. Ct. 588, 136 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1996).

Past criminal history, or drug use, of witness and her husband were not relevant, since witness and her husband were not on trial. Johnston v. State, 618 So. 2d 90 (Miss. 1993).

Trial court erred in preventing defendant, on relevance grounds, from questioning assailant and other witnesses about assailant's prior drug arrest, and specifically that assailant blamed his arrest on defendant, since these facts substantiated defendant's fear and the need for defendant to arm himself. Owens v. State, 609 So. 2d 410 (Miss. 1992).

DNA evidence.

Expert was admitted as an expert in the field of molecular biology, forensic DNA analysis and DNA hair analysis, and she was allowed to testify as to the results of her DNA analysis without a specific objection from the defense, and the specific arguments made by defendant on appeal were not presented to the trial court; further, Miss. Code Ann. § 93-9-27, regarding the presumption of paternity genetic tests, did not provide the standard for admission of DNA evidence here, and the trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing in the statistical results of the DNA tests. Rankin v. State, 963 So. 2d 1255 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Where defendant's husband was attacked in the middle of the night and defendant was charged with assault, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in excluding DNA evidence that did not rule out the presence of a third party on the night of her husband's attack. Favre v. State, 877 So. 2d 554 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Doctor's testimony.

In an aggravated assault case under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-7(2), admission of a doctor's testimony was proper as the extent of the victim's injury was relevant to prove that the bodily harm was caused by means likely to produce serious bodily injury. Ford v. State, 975 So. 2d 859 (Miss. 2008).

Manufacturer's manual.

Trial court's ruling to exclude material depicting a small child in a rearward facing passenger seat from a wrongful death lawsuit following the death of a 10-year-old child when a car air bag deployed on the ground that the material was not similar enough to the subject case was an abuse of the trial court's discretion. Palmer v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 905 So. 2d 564 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, remanded, 904 So. 2d 1077 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by allowing decedent's beneficiaries in products liability action to refer to the blanked pages in the tire manufacturer's manual where the manual was introduced to show the quality requirements for a tire as set forth by the tire manufacturer so that those requirements could be compared to the tire that had a separated tread. Cooper Tire & Rubber Co. v. Tuckier, 826 So. 2d 679 (Miss. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 820, 123 S. Ct. 97, 154 L. Ed. 2d 27 (2002).

Marital status.

References to mother's marital status and illegitimate children had no probative value in paternity action, since they had no tendency to make proposition that defendant was the child's father any more or less probable than without the evidence. Department of Human Servs. v. Moore, 632 So. 2d 929 (Miss. 1994).

Money.

Judge at trial for possession of illegal drugs with intent to distribute did not err in excluding evidence of judgment in civil forfeiture proceeding declaring money found in defendant's car to be nonforfeitable, since its admission into evidence would add no probative value on issue of defendant's guilt or innocence of possession with intent to distribute, and there was danger of confusing the issues or misleading the jury. Sample v. State, 643 So. 2d 524 (Miss. 1994).

Sum of $2,700 in cash found at scene of arrest made it more likely that defendants were involved in drug-dealing, and evidence was therefore relevant; the evidence was not prejudicial, as defendants were not convicted of intent to transfer but only of possession. Haddox v. State, 636 So. 2d 1229 (Miss. 1994).

Evidence of bank bag and its contents was relevant in that it had a great impact upon credibility of murder defendant's story that he had been robbed, and probative value of evidence substantially outweighed any legally cognizable prejudice. Jackson v. State, 551 So. 2d 132 (Miss. 1989).

Other crimes, acts, or wrongs.

Defendant's conviction for robbery by use of a deadly weapon was appropriate because the sparse reference by the State to defendant's possible gang membership was not part of the State's case-in-chief; the evidence had some probative weight; its probative value substantially outweighed the danger of unfair prejudice; and limited statements about gang membership went to show possible motive, opportunity, intent, or preparation. Pritchett v. State, 32 So. 3d 545 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Defendant's manslaughter conviction was proper because, assuming for the sake of discussion that a witness's testimony was not irrelevant, it would have been confusing and misleading to the jury; the jury would have been led to believe that because the victim was verbally aggressive with the witness approximately four years earlier, he was more likely to have been the initial aggressor for the current series of events. Accordingly, the nonexistent probative value of the witness's testimony would have been outweighed by the massive prejudicial effect that would have stemmed from misleading the jury. Booker v. State, 64 So. 3d 988 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), affirmed by 64 So. 3d 965, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 316 (Miss. 2011).

Defendant's manslaughter conviction was proper because a witness's testimony that the victim had cursed the witness's father and that the victim had a bad temper and was overbearing was correctly deemed not admissible. The hearsay testimony was not only too remote in time to be admissible, it was also irrelevant, and its probative value was outweighed by its prejudicial effect. Booker v. State, 64 So. 3d 988 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), affirmed by 64 So. 3d 965, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 316 (Miss. 2011).

Defendant's murder convictions were proper because testimony regarding his prior threats against one of the victim, his former girlfriend, and his previous arrest for domestic violence were properly admitted into evidence. The evidence was relevant for the impeachment of a prior statement made by defendant, as well as relevant evidence of defendant's motive, intent, knowledge, and preparation. Madden v. State, 42 So. 3d 566 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari dismissed by 49 So. 3d 106, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 460 (Miss. 2010).

While a witness's use of a victim's bank card possessed a tendency to establish a motive or intent for his involvement in the crime, for purposes of Miss. R. Evid. 401, the exact number of withdrawals and/or the exact amount actually withdrawn by the witness was not a fact of consequence to the determination of the case, and even if determined relevant, the evidence would have been properly excluded under Miss. R. Evid. 403, and this evidence was properly excluded under Miss. R. Evid. 402. Williams v. State, 994 So. 2d 808 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 998 So. 2d 1010, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 665 (Miss. 2008).

While prior convictions which have been found relevant under Miss. R. Evid.

401, and which satisfy Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) may be potentially admissible to prove disposition, they may be allowed into evidence only after passing a Miss. R. Evid. 403 balancing test, which must be conducted on the record. Tate v. State, 912 So. 2d 919 (Miss. 2005).

Finding against the driver in her action for injuries resulting from a collision with a train at a railroad crossing was appropriate where the exclusion of testimony about three wrecks at the same railroad crossing was proper because events 10 years earlier were irrelevant in the dispute; further, the city and railroad corporation did not open the door to irrelevant evidence. Bowman v. CSX Transp., Inc., 931 So. 2d 644 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In defendant's capital murder case, defendant's right to a fair trial was not violated by the trial court's admission of testimony about the sexual assault of the victim, which defendant was not charged with, that occurred in the moments preceding her murder, where sexual molestation was integrally so related to her murder that one could not coherently present the facts of her demise without reference to it, and the testimony described part of the res gestae of the crime charged and helped shed light on defendant's motive. McGowen v. State, 859 So. 2d 320 (Miss. 2003).

Photographs.

Trial judge's decision that a photograph's content was not too remote in time to be relevant was not an abuse of discretion because it was within the trial judge's discretion to determine that the photograph of handcuffs in defendant's car was relevant, even though it was taken more than two months after the alleged attempted kidnapping; the presence of the handcuffs in defendant's car was offered to show that on his trips to "look for women," defendant was not looking for consensual relationships, and the presence of handcuffs made it more probable that defendant grabbed the victim with the intent to kidnap her. Tucker v. State, 64 So. 3d 594 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Defendant's convictions for capital murder during the commission of a robbery were proper because the admission of autopsy photographs was not erroneous. A few of the photographs were introduced to show the initial state of the victims' bodies as received by the doctor, and the remainder depicted different parts of the victims' bodies to illustrate the various injuries they suffered; the photographs were not repetitive since each depicted different injuries. Gillett v. State, 56 So. 3d 469 (Miss. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 132 S. Ct. 844, 181 L. Ed. 2d 552, 2011 U.S. LEXIS 8944, 80 U.S.L.W. 3355 (U.S. 2011).

Trial court did not err in admitting photographs of the murder victims into evidence because (1) the photographs had probative value; (2) they aided in describing the circumstances of the killing, in describing the location of the body and cause of death, or in supplementing or clarifying the testimony of a witness; and (3) their probative value was not substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. Chamberlin v. State, 989 So. 2d 320 (Miss. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 555 U.S. 1106, 129 S. Ct. 908, 173 L. Ed. 2d 122, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 495, 77 U.S.L.W. 3397 (2009).

In an aggravated assault case under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-7(2), the trial court did not abuse its discretion by finding that the probative value of the photographs of the victim's injury outweighed any danger of unfair prejudice as they were relevant to prove that defendant used means likely to produce death or serious bodily harm, and they were small and blurry and not particularly gruesome. Ford v. State, 975 So. 2d 859 (Miss. 2008).

In a case where defendant was charged with capital murder after he slammed his car into a patrol car that was blocking his path during a chase, a trial court did not err by allowing the introduction of pictures of the deceased officer since they were relevant and clarified the circumstances and manner of death for the jury. White v. State, 964 So. 2d 1181 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a capital murder case, a court properly admitted photographs of defendant's tattooed body where part of the defense was that he killed the victim in self-defense; however, had defendant been engaged in self-defense, it would likely have resulted in injuries greater than the bruise he suffered on his hand, and therefore, the photographs were relevant. Further, they were not prejudicial because they did not depict gruesome images that would inflame the mind of the jury. Spicer v. State, 921 So. 2d 292 (Miss. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 549 U.S. 993, 127 S. Ct. 493, 166 L. Ed. 2d 364, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 8022, 75 U.S.L.W. 3233 (2006).

Crime scene photograph was relevant within the meaning of Miss. R. Evid. 401, Miss. R. Evid. 402, and Miss. R. Evid. 403, as it was not prejudicial to defendant in any way. Bradley v. State, 948 So. 2d 506 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Admission of photographs of the victim in a murder case was not an abuse of discretion because they were not overly gruesome and they were relevant to show that defendant killed the victim, as they depicted the circumstances of the shooting, the location of the body, and the cause of death, and they supplemented and clarified testimony regarding the location of the wounds, the trajectory of the bullets, the number of the bullets, and the cause and manner of death. Cotton v. State, 933 So. 2d 1048 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Defendant's manslaughter conviction was proper pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 401 where the trial judge did not abuse his discretion in admitting the challenged photographs because the photos served a valid evidentiary purpose in establishing whether defendant acted in self-defense. Thus, their admission did not deny defendant a fair trial under the Sixth and Fourteenth Amendments. Moore v. State, 932 So. 2d 833 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari dismissed by 921 So. 2d 1279, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 780 (Miss. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 933 So. 2d 303, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 520 (Miss. 2006).

In defendant's trial for the sale of cocaine and marijuana to an undercover officer, the trial court did not abuse its discretion under Miss. R. Evid. 401 and 403 in excluding photographs that showed defendant with long braided hair because the photographs were untimely in relation to the drug sale. Defendant's mother testified that defendant could have changed his hairstyle between the months when the photographs were taken and the drug transaction. Johnson v. State, 908 So. 2d 100 (Miss. 2005).

In a criminal trial for sexual battery, the court did not err in admitting photographs of the victim and her injuries; the photographs supported the victim's claim that the sexual encounter was nonconsensual and was the result of force on the part of defendant and his accomplice. Norris v. State, 893 So. 2d 1071 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 893 So. 2d 1061 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court did not err by admitting the photographs of the deceased; the crime scene photograph aided in describing the circumstances surrounding the crime and the location of the victims, and the autopsy photographs helped the jury understand the location of the wounds. Lewis v. State, 905 So. 2d 729 (Miss. Ct. App. Nov. 16, 2004).

Photograph of bank bags found behind an office after the robbery were admissible evidence because they were relevant as they helped tell the story of the robbery and it was likely that someone involved in the robbery had run past the office and dropped the bags, even if the witness could not identify either defendant. Collins v. State, 817 So. 2d 644 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

In a prosecution for murder, there was no error in the introduction into evidence of photographs of the murder victim where (1) there was nothing in the record to indicate that the admission of the photographs was simply a ploy on the part of the prosecutor to arouse the passion and prejudice of the jury, (2) the photographs established that the victim was dead as a result of a criminal act, and the extent, position, and nature of the wounds the victim sustained, and (3) the photographs assisted the jury in visualizing the crime scene and corroborated the testimony of the investigators of the crime scene. Humphrey v. State, 759 So. 2d 368 (Miss. 2000).

The display of photographs which quite graphically showed the gruesome means by which a murder victim's life was ended did not constitute reversible error where the defense advanced the theory of self-defense and presented a witness who seemed to be testifying that the purpose of the blows inflicted on the victim was merely to incapacitate him while the defendant and his cousin made good their escape from the range of the victim's pistol. Dean v. State, 746 So. 2d 891 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998).

Photographs of the two murder victims were relevant where the lower court heard witness testimony concerning the injuries of the victims, specifically relating to the placement of the gunshot wounds, and the photographs in question were corroborative of such testimony. Jordan v. State, 728 So. 2d 1088 (Miss. 1998), cert. denied, 527 U.S. 1026, 119 S. Ct. 2375, 144 L. Ed. 2d 778 (1999).

Color photographs of murder victim taken during pathologist's postmortem examination had probative value to show location, angulation, and trajectory of gunshot wounds, and probative value was not outweighed by any prejudicial effect. Hart v. State, 637 So. 2d 1329 (Miss. 1994).

Polygraph results.

In a capital murder case, when it was revealed that an inmate testifying against defendant had previously given false information to the police, it was reversible error for the trial court to allow the inmate's testimony that he had volunteered to take a polygraph examination as to his current testimony. Manning v. State, 903 So. 2d 29 (Miss. 2004).

In defendant's murder trial, a witness's polygraph results were not admissible into evidence. Adams v. State, 851 So. 2d 366 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002), cert. denied, 849 So. 2d 899 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Redundancy.

Circuit judge did not commit prejudicial error under Miss. R. Evid. 103(a) in disallowing "ultimate issue" opinion testimony by an expert under Miss. R. Evid. 704 in a county's action against the state alleging that state statutes requiring counties to provide legal services for indigent criminal defendants were unconstitutional because the expert had already addressed his specific concerns about the indigent defense system in his extensive testimony, and allowing one final, sweeping opinion during re-direct examination was redundant and unnecessary under Miss. R. Evid. 401. Quitman County v. State, 910 So. 2d 1032 (Miss. 2005).

Routine practices.

Course of conduct evidence introduced by plaintiff was relevant and was not substantially more prejudicial than probative; as defendants were sued for punitive damages based on an allegedly bad faith failure to pay, evidence which tended to prove defendants had a routine practice of bad faith dealings with other companies became important and relevant. Hans Constr. Co. v. Drummond, 653 So. 2d 253 (Miss. 1995).

Separate victims.

In a capital murder case where defendant was indicted separately for each of four murders, the trial court committed reversible error and denied defendant a fair trial because it admitted irrelevant evidence regarding the other three victims; throughout the trial, the prosecution referred continually to all four individuals who had been killed, through the testimony of its witnesses and the evidence it introduced. Flowers v. State, 842 So. 2d 531 (Miss. 2003).

Sexually explicit material.

Admission of sexually explicit pictures which were not seen during sexual battery constituted reversible error. Wade v. State, 583 So. 2d 965 (Miss. 1991).

Videotapes.

Denial of appellant's, an inmate's, motion for postconviction relief was proper because his appellate counsel was not ineffective in choosing not to file a motion for rehearing. The presence of fingerprints on the items in question was irrelevant given the eyewitness testimony expected and thus, it was clear that while the admission of the videotape might have influenced the trial court's decision to deny the inmate's motion to examine and test the physical evidence, it was not the only reason cited in its denial. Conway v. State, 48 So. 3d 588 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 49 So. 3d 1139, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 627 (Miss. 2010).

In a negligence case, a trial court abused its discretion by failing to admit a videotape of an injured party into evidence, which showed her riding roller coasters at an amusement park, because the evidence was relevant under Miss. R. Evid. 401; a reasonable juror could have concluded that it casted doubt on the severity of her injuries and her medical expenses, even though she claimed to not be seeking damages after the date of a second epidural injection. Further, the evidence was not subject to exclusion under Miss. R. Evid. 403 because its probative value was not substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. James v. Carawan, 995 So. 2d 69 (Miss. 2008).

In a possession of marijuana case, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in sustaining the state's objection to defendants' cross-examination of the chief narcotics officer regarding whether he had been instructed not to videotape interviews, as the issue of videotaping the interviews was irrelevant under Miss. R. Evid. 401 and Miss. R. Evid. 402 to guilt or innocence where there was no dispute regarding the substance of either defendants' interviews or written statements. Juarez v. State, 965 So. 2d 1061 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court improperly admitted two-day-in-the-life videos. The first video included prejudicial photos of the decedent's wedding and the decedent's stepson, who was not a party; the second video showed the decedent's mother sobbing, and it was redundant. Eckman v. Moore, 876 So. 2d 975 (Miss. 2004).

In a wrongful death case, a court did not abuse its discretion in admitting photographs of the decedent and two "day in the life" videos where the photographs were relevant to show plaintiff's loss, and to prove plaintiff's case. The footage showed the type of person the decedent was prior to his injuries, the type of care decedent subsequently required and his drastically diminished capacity to interact with his wife, child and family, among other things. Eckman v. Moore, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 552 (Miss. Oct. 23, 2003), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. LEXIS 310 (Miss. Mar. 25, 2004), substituted opinion at 876 So. 2d 975, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 287 (Miss. 2004).

Videotape taken at booking of defendant charged with assaulting police officers was properly admitted for impeachment purposes; tape was not collateral or too remote in time, probative value of tape substantially outweighed its prejudicial value, and tape was relevant to credibility of defendant's brother, whose recollection of events wavered significantly. Johnson v. State, 655 So. 2d 37 (Miss. 1995).

Weapons.

To convict a defendant of trafficking in stolen firearms, the State did not need to enter the actual firearms into evidence as (1) there was no best evidence rule with regard to physical evidence that was not writings, recordings, or photographs; (2) requiring the State to offer actual firearms into evidence would impose a high burden on prosecutors and the courts in cases where there were large quantities of physical evidence; and (3) the State satisfied the relevancy and authentication requirements permitting the photographs of the firearms to be introduced into evidence. Riley v. State, 1 So. 3d 877 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 999 So. 2d 1280, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 2009).

In a capital murder case, the trial court did not abuse its discretion pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 401 and Miss. R. Evid. 403 in admitting .22 caliber pistol into evidence, and while the pistol was not directly connected to defendant through any forensic evidence, other evidence in the case demonstrated that it was of the same caliber as the one that killed the victim and that defendant had access to the weapon; further, the forensic scientist called by the state did not state that the pistol introduced into evidence could have been the weapon used in the victim's murder, but he was careful to note only that the weapon had the same caliber, and that both the weapon in evidence and the murder weapon lacked distinguishing characteristics that would allow a positive identification, and therefore the state's witness did not impermissibly speculate whether the pistol had been used in the crime. Ross v. State, 954 So. 2d 968 (Miss. 2007).

In an aggravated assault case, a trial court did not err by failing to exclude a victim's identification of a gun under Miss. R. Evid. 401 and Miss. R. Evid. 402 because whether the victim was able to identify it was a question for the jury; the victim testified that she saw this particular gun earlier in the night and when she was shot with it. Parks v. State, 950 So. 2d 184 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Writings.

Admission of defendant's letters to a child abuse victim's mother a year prior to an incident were admissible evidence under Miss. R. Evid. 401 as they contained defendant's views on disciplining children. Baker v. State, 70 So. 3d 235 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 69 So. 3d 767, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 445 (Miss. 2011).

Defendants' conspiracy convictions were proper where the trial court did not err in admitting a letter to the first defendant, pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 401 and 402, because the critical fact at issue was whether the first defendant was engaged in a conspiracy, and that letter was evidence that tended to make that fact more probable or less probable than without the evidence. Farris v. State, 906 So. 2d 113 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a rape and simple assault case, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in admitting letters that defendant had apparently written to the victim, because, although their introduction may have had little probative value as to the pivotal issues of the case, it seemed likewise true that there was no real prejudice to the defense in permitting the jury to discover defendant's apparently strong, perhaps even excessively strong, emotional ties to his estranged wife. Williams v. State, 868 So. 2d 346 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Court at trial for possession of drugs erred in admitting handwritten note into evidence; State failed to establish who wrote the note and when it was written, and without adequate authentication and identification the note was irrelevant and should have been excluded. Frierson v. State, 606 So. 2d 604 (Miss. 1992).

Illustrative cases.

Grant of summary judgment in favor of a window manufacturer and seller in the homeowners' action against them concerning leaking windows was appropriate because the circuit court did not abuse its discretion in excluding the homeowners' expert from providing expert testimony since he utilized no methodology, much less a scientifically recognized one. Therefore, even assuming that the circuit court abused its discretion on the qualification issue, which it did not, the application of relevance and reliability principles also called for the exclusion of the testimony. McKee v. Bowers Window & Door Co., 64 So. 3d 926 (Miss. 2011).

Defendant's convictions for murder and kidnapping were proper because he failed to show any connection between the fact that the victims had used cocaine, or had been shot in a place where cocaine might have been used, and defendant's alleged misidentification as the perpetrator of the crimes. Lipsey v. State, 50 So. 3d 341 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 50 So. 3d 1003, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 13 (Miss. 2011).

Defendant's convictions for felonious child abuse were appropriate because the exclusion of exhibits was warranted since they were not relevant. The documentation of the victim's sexual conduct and her behavior at school was not probative of whether defendant or someone else had abused her. Clark v. State, 40 So. 3d 531 (Miss. 2010).

Defendant's convictions for felonious child abuse were appropriate because the exclusion of exhibits was warranted since they were not relevant. The documentation of the victim's sexual conduct and her behavior at school was not probative of whether defendant or someone else had abused her. Clark v. State, 40 So. 3d 531 (Miss. 2010).

Circuit court did not abuse its discretion in prohibiting cross-examination regarding a victim's statement to the police about defendant's other possible sexual encounters with other teenage girls because it was within the circuit court's discretion to find that the victim had insufficient personal knowledge about the other encounters and that her statement was too speculative to be deemed relevant for impeachment as a prior inconsistent statement under Miss. R. Evid. 613(b); furthermore, what the victim could have been told by another teenage girl was inadmissible hearsay under Miss. R. Evid. 801 and 802. Timmons v. State, 44 So. 3d 1021 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 49 So. 3d 106, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 517 (Miss. 2010).

Finding in favor of a trucking company and truck driver in a wrongful-death action brought by the decedent's widow was proper because the trial court did not err in excluding the truck driver's driving record. The record was not relevant to the issue of the wrongful-death case and was too remote in time to have had any relevance to the case; further, the number and severity of the violations did not demonstrate a routine or practice sufficient to support the widow's arguments. Utz v. Running & Rolling Trucking, Inc., 32 So. 3d 450 (Miss. 2010).

Finding in favor of a trucking company and truck driver in a wrongful-death action brought by the decedent's widow was proper because the trial court did not err by excluding evidence of the trucking company's carrier rating; the carrier rating was not relevant to the litigation that arose from the decedent's death because the widow's main contention was that the tractor-trailer did not have any reflective tape on the back panel. The carrier rating at issue was for violations occurring after the date of the decedent's wreck, and none of the violations involved a violation for non-use of reflective tape. Utz v. Running & Rolling Trucking, Inc., 32 So. 3d 450 (Miss. 2010).

Finding in favor of a trucking company and truck driver in a wrongful-death action brought by the decedent's widow was proper because issue of visibility, or lack thereof, of the trailer was presented to the jury for consideration. The testimony on visibility was not expressed in terms of the decedent's actual ability to see the truck on the night of the accident; however, without the decedent's testimony, which unfortunately was not possible in the case, any testimony concerning that issue was properly excluded. Utz v. Running & Rolling Trucking, Inc., 32 So. 3d 450 (Miss. 2010).

Circuit court did not abuse its discretion in prohibiting cross-examination regarding a victim's statement to the police about defendant's other possible sexual encounters with other teenage girls because it was within the circuit court's discretion to find that the victim had insufficient personal knowledge about the other encounters and that her statement was too speculative to be deemed relevant for impeachment as a prior inconsistent statement under Miss. R. Evid. 613(b); furthermore, what the victim could have been told by another teenage girl was inadmissible hearsay under Miss. R. Evid. 801 and 802. Timmons v. State, 44 So. 3d 1021 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 49 So. 3d 106, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 517 (Miss. 2010).

Defendant's murder conviction was appropriate because, although not conclusive evidence that defendant was the perpetrator, taillight analysis showed that defendant's taillight's composition was consistent with the evidence of the broken taillight found at the victim's home and was thus relevant. Ross v. State, 22 So. 3d 400 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In defendant's trial on charges of sexual batttery and child fondling, the trial court did not err in permitting the State to introduce prior statements of the victim's mother in cross-examining her. Because the victim's mother testified that her daughter was lying about the abuse and because, by the time of trial, the mother had abandoned her child and resumed her residence with defendant, the mother's prior statements—including the affidavit that she signed under oath charging defendant with the child molestation of her daughter and her statement that defendant promised her that he would not touch her daughter again—were relevant and admissible. Tate v. State, 20 So. 3d 623 (Miss. 2009).

Defense counsel's attempt to introduce new relevant evidence probative of a material fact of consequence—identity—through the exhibition of the defendant's physical characteristics of his nose to the jury during closing arguments, pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 401, was improper because defendant failed to request to reopen the record for further evidence. Mendenhall v. State, 18 So. 3d 915 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In a case in which defendant was convicted on two counts of capital murder, in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-19(2)(e), the trial court did not err when it excluded evidence that he attempted to commit suicide after he shot the two murder victims because evidence of his attempted suicide was not relevant. Defendant argued that his attempted suicide was relevant to his state of mind and bolstered his argument that he acted in the heat of passion; while his attempted suicide could arguably be viewed as evidence that he regretted his actions, under the circumstances, it did not tend to make it more probable that he acted in the heat of passion when he killed the two victims. Williams v. State, 29 So. 3d 53 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 29 So. 3d 774, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 116 (Miss. 2010).

In a personal injury products liability lawsuit, the tire maker argued that the decedent's estate was allowed to introduce two pieces of evidence regarding the tire maker's testing of light truck tires that it claimed were irrelevant and prejudicial. However, the trial judge took care to allow only those portions of the single-page summary document about which he had heard testimony and the deposition dealt with a fact of consequence and tended to make the proof of the tread-throw problem more probably, thus satisfying the definition of relevant evidence. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. v. Kirby, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 221 (Miss. Ct. App. Apr. 21, 2009), appeal dismissed by, writ of certiorari dismissed by 36 So. 3d 455, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 327 (Miss. 2010).

In defendant's murder trial for killing a man whom his ex-wife was dating, the trial court did not err in permitting defendant's ex-wife to testify that defendant threatened to kill her and any man with whom he caught her. According to the ex-wife's testimony, on the same day that someone killed the victim, defendant told his ex-wife, who had been dating the victim, that he would kill any man she dated; this testimony tended to reveal defendant's state of mind and his motive, and because this testimony tended to make it more probable that defendant killed the victim, the testimony was relevant and admissible. Parker v. State, 20 So. 3d 702 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 20 So. 3d 680, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 544 (Miss. 2009).

Trial judge did not err in not allowing defendant to question arresting police officers regarding their termination from the police department; the testimony was not relevant because defendant's assertions were general in nature, and defense counsel never established with certainty why the two officers were terminated and what effect that had on defendant's case. Betts v. State, 10 So. 3d 519 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in sustaining State's relevancy objection because there was no relevancy connection between a jail assault of defendant and the aggravated assault of a defendant's victim. Because they were separate incidents, disconnected both temporally and by location, the evidence was irrelevant under Miss. R. Evid. 401 and thus, inadmissible under Miss. R. Evid. 402. Miller v. State, 996 So. 2d 752 (Miss. 2008).

In a case in which defendant was convicted of violating Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-7(2)(b), the trial judge did not err by not admitting evidence of the victim's continued intimacy with defendant after the assault. Defendant had argued that such evidence might be relevant in assessing her veracity, but the trial judge would not allow the testimony into evidence finding that any subsequent fraternization between defendant and the victim was irrelevant; the trial judge stated that the crime was committed not only against the victim but also against the laws of the State of Mississippi, and defendant cited no relevant authority for the appellate court to determine otherwise. Carter v. State, 995 So. 2d 847 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In a dispute over insurance coverage, the trial court did not abuse its discretion by redacting a prior carpet cleaning receipt and disallowing evidence of flood insurance because the jury would have had to infer that the similarity in cleaning services in 2003 and 2004 was an indication that the damage in both years resulted from the same cause. Additionally, the jury would have had to infer from the fact that the insured made a successful flood insurance claim with a different company in 2004 that the damage in 2004 resulted entirely from a flood and not in part from sewer or drain backup. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Martin, 998 So. 2d 956 (Miss. 2008).

Defendant's conviction for capital murder was appropriate because the trial court did not err in not qualifying defendant's proffered firearms expert. Although it was clear that the expert had vast experience with military and police training, there simply was not enough information available about the particular shotgun used by defendant to provide the necessary relevancy and reliability for the expert's testimony. Nelson v. State, 995 So. 2d 799 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 999 So. 2d 374, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 660 (Miss. 2008).

While the trial court erred in excluding testimony without conducting the three-part test of Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04(I), the court found no miscarriage of justice, as the testimony of drug use was irrelevant due to the remoteness in time between the witness's observation and the arrest. Davis v. State, 995 So. 2d 767 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 999 So. 2d 374, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 678 (Miss. 2008).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing Mississippi Transportation Commission's (MTC) appraiser to testify, Miss. R. Evid. 401, as it was relevant and based upon established appraisal methods. Adcock v. Miss. Transp. Comm'n, 981 So. 2d 942 (Miss. 2008).

As to the issue of the existence of a confidential relationship between a testator and a beneficiary, the evidence at the heirs' trial against the decedent's beneficiary pertained to events that occurred post-execution, and character evidence was irrelevant to a determination of whether a confidential relationship existed between the two. Thus, the trial court did not err in excluding the evidence. In re Will of Boyles, 990 So. 2d 230 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 994 So. 2d 186, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 462 (Miss. 2008).

There was no error in the admission of 50 exhibits at one time to speed up the post-conviction process, even though the state did not have a chance to argue the exhibit's relevancy or rebut hearsay statements contained in the exhibits; moreover, the state was unable to specifically point to any prejudicial exhibit. State v. Bass, 4 So. 3d 353 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari dismissed by 2009 Miss. LEXIS 113 (Miss. Mar. 12, 2009).

Trial court did not violate defendant's Sixth Amendment right to confrontation by excluding testimony that his victims were smoking marijuana at the time he assaulted them by limiting his ability to cross-examine one victim regarding the intoxication; the evidence was properly excluded under Miss. R. Evid. 401 and 402 because defendant presented no evidence that smoking marijuana increased a person's propensity for violence generally or that smoking marijuana increased the victim's propensity for violence. Since defendant did not meet the threshold for establishing the probative value of the evidence, the testimony on whether the victim had been smoking marijuana the morning of the assault was irrelevant. Rouster v. State, 981 So. 2d 314 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a statutory rape case, evidence that defendant's ex-wife stole his tax returns was properly excluded because it was irrelevant to the charge; the evidence did not support defendant's theory that semen was planted to help his ex-wife's divorce action since there was no connection between the alleged theft and the person who he contended planted the semen in the victim's vagina. Ladd v. State, 969 So. 2d 141 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Certificate of title and a bill of sale that were produced to the State during discovery were admissible into evidence because they were relevant under Miss. R. Evid. 401, as a reasonable juror could conclude that, because defendant produced the fraudulent documents during discovery, he knew the vehicle was stolen. In addition, to authentic the documents, the State had only to show that the documents were what the State claimed them to be, and defendant offered no objection to their authenticity. Hayden v. State, 972 So. 2d 525 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court did not err in disallowing testimony of defendant's bad childhood and relationship with her mother, as her defense of entrapment was whether she was predisposed to commit the crime and was induced by law enforcement to do so; defendant testified to everything that she claimed her mother would have testified, and the jury was able to hear the effect of the mother's illness on defendant, plus other testimony concerning an alleged grudge by one agent would have been irrelevant and confusing and misleading to the jury, plus that agent turned over the information to another agent, who made the decision to proceed with the buy. Pittman v. State, 987 So. 2d 1010 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari dismissed en banc by 2008 Miss. LEXIS 368 (Miss. July 31, 2008).

Denial of defendant's motion for a new trial after he had been convicted of aggravated assault and rape was appropriate because each of the prerequisites of Miss. R. Evid. 801(d)(1)(B) were satisfied so as to remove the witnesses' statements from the category of impermissible hearsay; because evidence of a prior consistent statement was not hearsay if the statement fit the definition of Miss. R. Evid. 801(d)(1)(B), such a statement was ordinarily relevant evidence and thus, the statement became admissible under Miss. R. Evid. 402 and the trial judge properly allowed the state to elicit witness statements in order to rebut defendant's defense of consensual sex. Moss v. State, 977 So. 2d 1201 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 977 So. 2d 1144, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 151 (Miss. 2008).

In a wrongful death action, several assistants testified that they either provided or saw the effects of substandard care on a decedent; such testimony was probative under Miss. R. Evid. 401. Mariner Health Care, Inc. v. Estate of Edwards, 964 So. 2d 1138 (Miss. 2007).

Finding against the life insurance company in the beneficiary's action after her claim was denied was proper in part because the training of agents who solicited answers from prospective insureds that might result in material misrepresentations was pertinent to the resolution of the issues of the case; thus, the trial judge did not abuse his discretion by allowing the testimony. United Am. Ins. Co. v. Merrill, 978 So. 2d 613 (Miss. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 552 U.S. 1185, 128 S. Ct. 1257, 170 L. Ed. 2d 68, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 1280, 76 U.S.L.W. 3439 (2008).

In defendant's murder case, the court did not err by not allowing defendant to introduce evidence of a witness's status as an informant because no impeaching material was concealed; moreover, the witness's status as a confidential informant to the Hinds County Sheriff's Department was irrelevant to the case because the department had no involvement with the case. Brown v. State, 965 So. 2d 1023 (Miss. 2007).

Information regarding the decedent's condition prior to the alleged negligence by the nursing home would certainly be relevant to determine whether or not the decedent had indeed suffered new and distinct injuries at the hand of either of the owners; thus, it was proper for defense counsel to question the similarities of these damages to determine whether or not they were actually caused by a third party. Beverly Enters. v. Reed, 961 So. 2d 40 (Miss. 2007).

Evidence that a child victim had allegedly caused injuries to his own rectum by sticking objects there was properly excluded in a sexual battery case because it was irrelevant under Miss. R. Evid. 401 and highly prejudicial under Miss. R. Evid. 403, and it was also a collateral issue that was too remote in time to rebut the charges based on the fact that it was a year before the charges in an indictment; case law under Miss. R. Evid. 412 was helpful in making this determination, despite the fact that the victim's actions did not constitute clear sexual activity. Mason v. State, 971 So. 2d 618 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 973 So. 2d 244, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 701 (Miss. 2007).

In a capital murder trial, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in excluding a defense expert's testimony regarding his inability to destroy a wallet by burning it; the expert's testimony regarding statements made to him by the witness were inadmissible since the introduction of any such statements would have been mere commentary on the veracity of a witness, which was not appropriate expert testimony under Miss. R. Evid. 702, and while the expert was proffered to be an expert on police investigatory techniques, his proffer failed to establish the reliability of his testimony under Daubert and McLemore. Ross v. State, 954 So. 2d 968 (Miss. 2007).

In a capital murder trial, the trial court did not err in admitting glass shards consistent with a motor vehicle's tail light found at a murder victim's residence and a pile of ashes that a state witness testified were the remains of the victim's wallet; although the tail light fragments may have been of slight probative value, defendant had ample opportunity to highlight that the state's own expert could not mechanically fit the fragments into the tail light frame. Ross v. State, 954 So. 2d 968 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in admitting a second knife into evidence during defendant's aggravated assault trial because the second knife was relevant; after defendant had stabbed the victim with a butcher knife, he tried to stab him with a different knife. The police had also found defendant with the second knife in his hands. Clark v. State, 928 So. 2d 192 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 929 So. 2d 923, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 241 (Miss. 2006).

In a murder case, the court properly admitted evidence of an ongoing family feud between defendant's family and the victim's family because whether or not defendant was directly involved in each individual altercation, the evidence was relevant and was not so prejudicial as to constitute reversible error because the testimony had the tendency of making the action more or less probable; defendant obviously knew of the ongoing feud and had participated in several altercations with members of the victim's family. Morris v. State, 963 So. 2d 1170 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 964 So. 2d 508, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 502 (Miss. 2007).

In a murder case, evidence of a victim's drinking was properly excluded as irrelevant where there was already evidence regarding an abusive relationship, the victim's penchant for drinking was already mentioned, and there was no evidence connecting the drinking to the crime. Clemons v. State, 952 So. 2d 314 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a business burglary case, defendant's motion in limine to preclude introduction of evidence regarding cartons of cigarettes found in defendant's vehicle was properly denied because the cartons were clearly relevant to defendant's burglary of the store, because the primary items taken were the dozens of cartons of cigarettes, and the evidence was highly probative of defendant's burglary of the store. Cridiso v. State, 956 So. 2d 281 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 957 So. 2d 1004, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 285 (Miss. 2007).

Defendant's conviction for fondling was appropriate because the fact that the victim's father was in prison for child molestation was not relevant evidence under Miss. R. Evid. 401 since the evidence regarding the victim's father did not affect the credibility of the victim and she had not seen her father in over four years; thus, the father was not responsible for committing the crime, contrary to defendant's suggestion. Higdon v. State, 938 So. 2d 340 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Finding in favor of the husband and wife in their action against the city for personal injuries and loss of consortium under the Mississippi Tort Claims Act, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-1 et seq., was proper pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 401 and Miss. R. Evid. 402 because an expert's testimony tended to make the fact that the city negligently repaired and maintained the grate and sidewalk more probable than that without his proffered evidence. City of Natchez v. Jackson, 941 So. 2d 865 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

It was not an abuse of discretion for the trial court to suppress evidence of a statement made by the victim's father that the victim "must have been buying drugs" and a package of rolling papers found in the victim's truck after the shooting because there was no indication that the victim's father had any personal knowledge that the victim visited the convenience store to purchase drugs, and the trial court expressed concern that the question of whether the victim was a marijuana user could confuse the jury and lead it to condemn the victim. Bailey v. State, 952 So. 2d 225 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 2007 Miss. LEXIS 166 (Miss. Mar. 1, 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 951 So. 2d 563, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 167 (Miss. 2007).

In a former client's assault claim against his former attorney, arguably, evidence of the client's domestic violence was prejudicial, however, in light of it's impeachment value, the appellate court could not say that the circuit court abused its discretion in admitting the evidence. Walker v. Benz, 914 So. 2d 1262 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Admission of the evidence of the anchorperson's subsequent job performance was appropriate in her breach of contract claim pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 401 and 403 because that evidence was relevant to disprove the corporation's contention that the anchorperson was fired for cause. Morris Newspaper Corp. v. Allen, — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 1189 (Miss. Ct. App. Oct. 12, 2004).

Exclusion of the mortgage company representative's deposition from evidence at trial was proper in the couple's fraud and misrepresentation claims because the testimony did not make any fact or consequence to the fraud claim more or less probable. Johnson v. Bay City South Mortg. Co., 928 So. 2d 888 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 929 So. 2d 923, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 272 (Miss. 2006).

Defendant's convictions for kidnapping and sexual battery were proper where the handcuffs were properly admitted during trial pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 401 and 403 because they tended to lend credence to the testimony of the victim and of an investigator that defendant masqueraded as a police officer in order to carry out the crimes in question. Winding v. State, 908 So. 2d 163 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Where defendant was convicted of aggravated assault with a weapon, a violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-7, the trial court did not err in admitting a second knife into evidence because a witness testified that after defendant stabbed the victim with a butcher knife, he tried to stab him with a different knife, and the police found defendant with the second knife in his hands when he was arrested, and it was not a butcher knife, thereby corroborating the witness's testimony. Clark v. State, — So. 2d —, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 371 (Miss. Ct. App. June 7, 2005), substituted opinion at, opinion withdrawn by 928 So. 2d 192, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 135 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Trial court did not err in excluding evidence of defendant's fear of the victim that defendant claimed was relevant to his self-defense claim because defendant was able to testify about his fears; furthermore, the prosecution offered evidence regarding defendant's alleged fears; the trial court merely excluded the repetition of such testimony on re-direct. Clark v. State, — So. 2d —, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 371 (Miss. Ct. App. June 7, 2005), substituted opinion at, opinion withdrawn by 928 So. 2d 192, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 135 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Other than defendant's testimony, the record did not show that any evidence was provided that indicated possession of the cocaine at issue by anyone other than defendant. The State presented an eyewitness, an officer, who testified that he had seen defendant in possession of the cocaine; therefore, under Miss. R. Evid. 401, the trial court did not err in denying the admission of another defendant's sentencing order into evidence. Harris v. State, 921 So. 2d 366 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 926 So. 2d 922, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 155 (Miss. 2006).

Defendant murdered the victim, a relative, outside his home some four years after the subject drive-by shooting. Furthermore, neither defendant nor his wife knew the identity of the individuals involved in the drive-by, but both merely associated the incident with the victim; although that information may shed light on why defendant owned the gun, it had little relevance as to why defendant approached the victim, who was not associated with the drive-by shooting, and the trial judge did not abuse his discretion in excluding it. Smith v. State, 911 So. 2d 541 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 920 So. 2d 1008, 2005 Miss. Lexis 634 (Miss. 2005).

State credibly presented the evidence regarding race to show defendant's intent to commit the crime of embezzlement and the testimony was critical to establishing the witness's credibility, and for showing how defendant induced that witness into conducting business outside the car dealership where he worked. There were no loathsome, inflammatory racial slurs and in reviewing the complete testimony in context, the probative value of the evidence outweighed any potential prejudice, and did not exhibit a tendency to move the jury to decide the case on an improper basis; the testimony was properly admitted as relevant as it showed the existence of a plan, helped to present the complete picture of defendant's conduct to the jury, and did not unduly prejudice defendant. Bell v. State, 910 So. 2d 640 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Finding in favor of the patient in his medical malpractice action was improper pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 401 where portions of the patient's mother-in-law's testimony should have been admitted as it was clearly relevant because she raised issues regarding the legitimacy of the patient's claims and had probative value. Blake v. Clein, 903 So. 2d 710 (Miss. 2005).

In an aggravated assault case, the victim and defendant's son's past drug use was not relevant and the trial court did not abuse its discretion in limiting cross-examination of the victim and the son regarding their past drug use. Additionally, the fact that the victim and the son might have done drugs some time in the distant past could not in any event have justified defendant's shooting at the victim and the son. Thornton v. State, 905 So. 2d 745 (Miss. Ct. App. — 2004).

In defendants' trial for possession of precursor chemicals with the intent to manufacture methamphetamines, the trial court's admission of numerous tupperware containers did not deprive defendants of any due process rights and, accordingly, did not prejudice their defense in any measure. That the containers were not found to have contained denatured alcohol and ethyl ether at the time of seizure was irrelevant because, as the trial court explained, the containers were not for proving the presence of the chemicals but, instead, "went to the intent issue." Pittman v. State, 904 So. 2d 1185 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a breach of contract case, evidence that a television station employee performed well before and after her termination was relevant to show continuity in the high quality of her job performance, and it was not unduly prejudicial because its weight and credibility could be thoroughly attacked on cross-examination. Morris Newspaper Corp. v. Allen, — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 981 (Miss. Ct. App. Oct. 12, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 932 So. 2d 810, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 765 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In a breach of contract case, evidence of the employee's manager's sexual and romantic conduct was relevant where a fact question existed as to the manager's level of involvement in the termination decision, the evidence of his sexual and romantic conduct was relevant to show his possible wrongful motive for firing the employee. The evidence was probative because it tended to show the manager's motive for the wrongful termination, and the main thrust of the employee's case was that she was fired for reasons other than those stated by the employer. Morris Newspaper Corp. v. Allen, — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 981 (Miss. Ct. App. Oct. 12, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 932 So. 2d 810, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 765 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In a criminal trial for sexual battery, the court did not err in allowing a police officer to testify regarding his interview with the victim following the assault. The State had a legitimate interest in telling a rational and coherent story of what happened. Norris v. State, 893 So. 2d 1071 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 893 So. 2d 1061 (Miss. 2005).

Denial of the inmate's petition for post-conviction relief was proper where inmate was not denied any constitutional or fundamental rights when testimony of the victim's children was admitted since their testimony corroborated portions of the victim's husband's testimony, Miss. R. Evid. 403, 401; the inmate also offered no proof that defense counsel had been ineffective. Puckett v. State, 879 So. 2d 920 (Miss. 2004), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 125 S. Ct. 1638, 161 L. Ed. 2d 483 (2005).

In a case where defendant was convicted of murdering his wife and her son, the trial court did not err in prohibiting defendant from examining the chief investigator concerning his possible motive for securing a conviction because whether the investigator was running for sheriff was irrelevant; simply because a notion was within "the realm of possibility" did not, in any way, mandate a finding of relevancy. Wortham v. State, 883 So. 2d 599 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where defendant was convicted of burglary of a dwelling (no threats or force toward persons were shown), his allegation of error concerned the introduction of a small kitchen knife that police found on him when he was arrested. However, as to relevancy and admissibility, the record did not indicate any abuse of discretion by the trial judge in admitting the evidence. Clayton v. State, 893 So. 2d 246 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 893 So. 2d 1061 (Miss. 2005).

Where a father did not show that a trial court abused its discretion in allowing a three-year-old child to testify of sexual abuse by the father and any error in permitting the child to testify was cured by the doctor's and social worker's testimonies, the adjudication of abuse was affirmed. In the Interest of E. A. J., 858 So. 2d 205 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Driver successfully argued that the testimony of the injured person's proposed additional witnesses, all family members, would have been cumulative, that it was unbelievable that the injured person did not know the family members did not have discoverable knowledge until 17 days before trial, and that the injured person was allowed to testify to the injured person's alleged injuries and introduce medical evidence; reversal was not appropriate, as Miss. R. Evid. 401 and 403 were properly used by the trial court to determine that the proposed testimony was not relevant, and was cumulative. Busick v. St. John, 856 So. 2d 304 (Miss. 2003).

Evidence in a medical malpractice case that a doctor was admitted for inpatient alcohol treatment and of subsequent incidents involving his attempted treatment of patients while under the influence of alcohol was certainly relevant, as the evidence tended to show that the doctor was drinking during his treatment of the plaintiff, and, along with the other evidence, this created a jury question. Therefore, the trial court's contrary finding was error. Griffin v. McKenney, 877 So. 2d 425 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

Where a paternal grandmother sought temporary custody of her minor grandchild through an ex parte proceeding based on claims that the child had been sexually abused, the trial court properly admitted evidence of the schizophrenic mother's mental state, as it bore on the best interests of the child, and the allegations in the request for custody were of child abuse. E. J. M. v. A. J. M., 846 So. 2d 289 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

In a negligence suit against the Mississippi Department of Transportation (MDOT), the trial court properly allowed a witness who lived near the scene of the plaintiff's accident to testify as to other accidents on the highway, since he had personal knowledge of them, having either witnessed them or heard about them, and the testimony was admissible to show the existence of a defective or dangerous condition and MDOT's knowledge thereof. Miss. DOT v. Cargile, 847 So. 2d 258 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court's admission in an auto accident case of National Accident Sampling System (NASS) reports concerning accident data was within the trial court's discretion as any tendency of the NASS data to show that air bags were generally safe was relevant and permissible. Palmer v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 905 So. 2d 564 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, remanded, 904 So. 2d 1077 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court was within its discretion in finding that the prior auto accidents offered by the plaintiffs were not substantially similar to the subject auto accident. Palmer v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 905 So. 2d 564 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, remanded, 904 So. 2d 1077 (Miss. 2005).

In a strict products liability action, the evidence supported the manufacturer's theory, and established a causal connection, that the accidental firing of the rifle was a result of a full-cocked discharge, and not an accidental bump on the head-rest as alleged; for the injured person was in the cab of a compact pick-up with a loaded deer rifle, admitted to having been illegally spotlighting deer, and the rifle's safety was disengaged. Such evidence, including that the injured person smelled of alcohol, was very relevant under Miss. R. Evid. 401, and its probative value was not outweighed by unfair prejudice. Abrams v. Marlin Firearms Co., 838 So. 2d 975 (Miss. 2003).

In a murder case, the trial court did not err in limiting defendant's cross-examination of a prosecution witness; the trial court did not altogether preclude defendant from asking the prosecution witness certain questions, but it asked defendant to establish a proper predicate for the questions. Morris v. State, 843 So. 2d 676 (Miss. 2003).

In a capital murder prosecution, evidence of the child victim's vaginal abrasions and unexplained bruising after defendant moved into her home was properly admitted to rebut his theory that the death was accidental. Kolberg v. State, 829 So. 2d 29 (Miss. 2002), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 981, 123 S. Ct. 1787, 155 L. Ed. 2d 672 (2003).

Testimony and documents that show either embarrassment or humiliation for alleged malicious prosecution claims and recovery of damages are highly relevant and probative. Alpha Gulf Coast, Inc. v. Jackson, 801 So. 2d 709 (Miss. 2001).

Evidence of price that the property owner paid to purchase tract of land containing pine trees five months before fire destroyed some of them was relevant as the jury could consider it in deciding the value of the land and comparing the actual damages with the reasonableness of the damages sought. Redhead v. Entergy Miss., Inc., 828 So. 2d 801 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

In a murder prosecution in which the state alleged that the defendant and his brother raped and murdered the victim, the trial court did not err when it allowed the introduction of evidence that sperm found in the victim's vagina was identified as that of the defendant's brother since such evidence supported the state's theory of the case. Baldwin v. State, 784 So. 2d 148 (Miss. 2001).

In an action for, inter alia, assault and battery arising from an incident in which the defendant detained the plaintiffs after they attempted to cross his property, it was not error for the court to permit the introduction of evidence that the defendant, who was a municipal judge, told the plaintiffs that a "nigger judge" would not be able to help them; the statement was relevant and its probative value was not substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. Whitten v. Cox, 799 So. 2d 1 (Miss. 2000).

Witness' testimony that defendant did not abuse other children he kept was not relevant as to what occurred between defendant and the victim, defendant's stepdaughter. Crawford v. State, 754 So. 2d 1211 (Miss. 2000).

In a prosecution for embezzlement, the court erred when it refused to allow the defendant to present evidence that a third person committed the crime; the defendant was entitled to present her theory of the case and have the jury determine whether someone else could have taken the money, and any fears of confusion the trial judge may have harbored could have been resolved by giving limiting instructions to the jury. Terry v. State, 718 So. 2d 1115 (Miss. 1998).

In a prosecution for a murder which occurred during an attempted armed robbery, the trial court properly allowed the introduction of evidence that the victim was known to have been planning to buy a shrimp boat and to have had a large amount of cash available since such evidence was relevant to demonstrate a motive for armed robbery. Kha Tao Pham v. State, 716 So. 2d 1100 (Miss. 1998).

Evidence that murder defendant subsequently purchased and used cocaine with proceeds of stolen guns did not make it any more likely that he committed murder, and thus this evidence was irrelevant should not have been admitted. Snelson v. State, 704 So. 2d 452 (Miss. 1997).

Trial court did not err in allowing defense counsel to refresh medical malpractice plaintiff's memory with references to plaintiff's social security disability records; prime issue before jury was credibility of witnesses, and therefore it was certainly relevant to question plaintiff regarding her mental status. Herrington v. Spell, 692 So. 2d 93 (Miss. 1997).

Trial court erroneously permitted witness to testify that he was offered money to kill victim for purpose of preventing victim from testifying against defendant's eventual co-conspirator; existence of conspiracy between defendant and his co-conspirator had not yet been established, and neither witness nor co-conspirator were on trial, and thus this blatantly irrelevant evidence served to unduly prejudice defendant and confuse issues put before the jury. Stewart v. State, 662 So. 2d 552 (Miss. 1995).

Admission of officer's testimony that reason he was first suspicious of defendant's car was that a car fitting that description had recently been stolen, and that shooting had taken place at residence where defendant's car was first observed, constituted reversible error; his testimony was unduly prejudicial, and there was no reason for him to explain his presence on public roads in a position to observe defendant's car, and his subsequent investigation after learning that the car had an improper tag. Sample v. State, 643 So. 2d 524 (Miss. 1994).

Whether or not children generally tell the truth about sexual abuse was not relevant to whether victim in case at bar told the truth about what happened to her, as this evidence did not make it more or less probable that victim was telling the truth. Jones v. State, 606 So. 2d 1051 (Miss. 1992).

Fact that former insureds thought agency was going out of business, and that they blamed agency for their policy cancellations, was relevant to agency's defamation claim against insurance carrier who sent cancellation notice to insureds. Eselin-Bullock & Assocs. Ins. Agency, Inc. v. National Gen. Ins. Co., 604 So. 2d 236 (Miss. 1992).

Testimony of examining physician was relevant and admissible in that it tended to make more probable the proposition that ten-year-old girl in question had had sexual intercourse with an adult male on more than one occasion. Allman v. State, 571 So. 2d 244 (Miss. 1990).

Circuit court correctly allowed police officer to describe defendant's reenactment of murder for the jury's benefit, since reenactment was an admission and the proper predicate had been laid. Jackson v. State, 551 So. 2d 132 (Miss. 1989).

Evidence that decedent may have been "disfellowshipped" by Jehovah's Witness church was properly excluded as irrelevant, because it did not have any tendency to make existence of a material fact more probable or less probable than it would have been without the evidence. Parker v. Jones County Community Hosp., 549 So. 2d 443 (Miss. 1989).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. Construction and application of silent witness theory. 116 A.L.R.5th 373.

Admissibility and Effect of Evidence or Comment on Party's Military Service or Lack Thereof. 24 A.L.R. 6th 747.

Rule 402. Relevant evidence generally admissible; irrelevant evidence inadmissible.

All relevant evidence is admissible, except as otherwise provided by the Constitution of the United States, the Constitution of the State of Mississippi, or by these rules. Evidence which is not relevant is not admissible.

COMMENT

This rule introduces no new practice to existing Mississippi law. Relevant evidence may be rendered inadmissible for constitutional reasons or for reasons specified in Articles V and VI of these rules.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Evidence inadmissible.
— Accomplice acquittal.
— Controlled substances.
— Criminal history.
— Discrimination.
— Money.
— Photographs.
— Res gestae.
— State of mind.
— Tax preparations.
— Videotapes.
Illustrative cases.

Evidence inadmissible.

Trial judge's decision that a photograph's content was not too remote in time to be relevant was not an abuse of discretion because it was within the trial judge's discretion to determine that the photograph of handcuffs in defendant's car was relevant, even though it was taken more than two months after the alleged attempted kidnapping; the presence of the handcuffs in defendant's car was offered to show that on his trips to "look for women," defendant was not looking for consensual relationships, and the presence of handcuffs made it more probable that defendant grabbed the victim with the intent to kidnap her. Tucker v. State, 64 So. 3d 594 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Defendant's manslaughter conviction was proper because, assuming for the sake of discussion that a witness's testimony was not irrelevant, it would have been confusing and misleading to the jury; the jury would have been led to believe that because the victim was verbally aggressive with the witness approximately four years earlier, he was more likely to have been the initial aggressor for the current series of events. Accordingly, the nonexistent probative value of the witness's testimony would have been outweighed by the massive prejudicial effect that would have stemmed from misleading the jury. Booker v. State, 64 So. 3d 988 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), affirmed by 64 So. 3d 965, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 316 (Miss. 2011).

Finding in favor of a trucking company and truck driver in a wrongful-death action brought by the decedent's widow was proper because the trial court did not err in not excluding the testimony of the decedent's friend concerning the decedent's alleged making, using, or selling methamphetamine before the accident since the testimony was relevant and concerned the type of activity that the decedent was involved in prior to the accident and what impact that activity might have had on the decedent's alertness at the time of the accident. Utz v. Running & Rolling Trucking, Inc., 32 So. 3d 450 (Miss. 2010).

Finding in favor of a trucking company and truck driver in a wrongful-death action brought by the decedent's widow was proper because the trial court did not err in allowing the decedent's sister and mother testify about the substance found in the decedent's pocket, which was identified as methamphetamine. In part, their testimony corroborated a friend's testimony to the extent that the drugs were divided at a house and placed into plastic bags and the testimony also helped refute the testimony of another friend that he did not see any drugs and no one had used drugs in his home on the day of the accident. Utz v. Running & Rolling Trucking, Inc., 32 So. 3d 450 (Miss. 2010).

To the extent that Mississippi courts have held that evidence of collateral-source payments may not be introduced for the purpose of impeaching false or misleading testimony, those decisions are expressly overruled. Permitting evidence of collateral-source payments for the narrow purpose of impeaching false or misleading testimony is consistent with the Mississippi Rules of Evidence. Robinson Prop. Group, L.P. v. Mitchell, 7 So. 3d 240 (Miss. 2009).

In a vehicular homicide case, the court properly admitted evidence of defendant's arrest for driving with a suspended driver's license because that evidence relevant, not only in regard to why a field sobriety test was not performed, but also to explain the sequence of events leading up to defendant's blood test. Additionally, the trial judge did instruct the jurors that they could not consider evidence of defendant's arrest as an inference of guilt. Teston v. State, 44 So. 3d 977 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari dismissed by 44 So. 3d 969, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 520 (Miss. 2010).

Male suspect's testimony about shoplifting plan related to acts and conduct that occurred during the course and in furtherance of a conspiracy at a time when the defendant, based upon the evidence and reasonable inferences drawn from the evidence, could be deemed to be a co-conspirator, and was thus not hearsay under Miss. R. Evid. 801(a)(1) or (2) and was both relevant and admissible under Miss. R. Evid. 401, 402, and 403. Wilson v. State, 967 So. 2d 32 (Miss. 2007).

Denial of defendant's motion for a new trial after he had been convicted of aggravated assault and rape was appropriate because each of the prerequisites of Miss. R. Evid. 801(d)(1)(B) were satisfied so as to remove the witnesses' statements from the category of impermissible hearsay; because evidence of a prior consistent statement was not hearsay if the statement fit the definition of Miss. R. Evid. 801(d)(1)(B), such a statement was ordinarily relevant evidence and thus, the statement became admissible under Miss. R. Evid. 402 and the trial judge properly allowed the state to elicit witness statements in order to rebut defendant's defense of consensual sex. Moss v. State, 977 So. 2d 1201 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 977 So. 2d 1144, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 151 (Miss. 2008).

Expert was admitted as an expert in the field of molecular biology, forensic DNA analysis and DNA hair analysis, and she was allowed to testify as to the results of her DNA analysis without a specific objection from the defense, and the specific arguments made by defendant on appeal were not presented to the trial court; further, Miss. Code Ann. § 93-9-27, regarding the presumption of paternity genetic tests, did not provide the standard for admission of DNA evidence here, and the trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing in the statistical results of the DNA tests. Rankin v. State, 963 So. 2d 1255 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Admission of defendant's shirt and gun were relevant to the issue of identity and were not too remote in space nor time; the shirt and gun were similar to the description given by the victims and defendant admittedly wore the shirt and possessed the gun during the time in question. Jackson v. State, 969 So. 2d 124 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Trial court did not err by admitting the photographs of the deceased; the crime scene photograph aided in describing the circumstances surrounding the crime and the location of the victims, and the autopsy photographs helped the jury understand the location of the wounds. Lewis v. State, 905 So. 2d 729 (Miss. Ct. App. Nov. 16, 2004).

Crime scene photograph was relevant within the meaning of Miss. R. Evid. 401, Miss. R. Evid. 402, and Miss. R. Evid. 403, as it was not prejudicial to defendant in any way. Bradley v. State, 948 So. 2d 506 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Admission of photographs of the victim in a murder case was not an abuse of discretion because they were not overly gruesome and they were relevant to show that defendant killed the victim, as they depicted the circumstances of the shooting, the location of the body, and the cause of death, and they supplemented and clarified testimony regarding the location of the wounds, the trajectory of the bullets, the number of the bullets, and the cause and manner of death. Cotton v. State, 933 So. 2d 1048 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In an aggravated assault case, a trial court did not err by failing to exclude a victim's identification of a gun under Miss. R. Evid. 401 and Miss. R. Evid. 402 because whether the victim was able to identify it was a question for the jury; the victim testified that she saw this particular gun earlier in the night and when she was shot with it. Parks v. State, 950 So. 2d 184 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Defendants' conspiracy convictions were proper where the trial court did not err in admitting a letter to the first defendant, pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 401 and 402, because the critical fact at issue was whether the first defendant was engaged in a conspiracy, and that letter was evidence that tended to make that fact more probable or less probable than without the evidence. Farris v. State, 906 So. 2d 113 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Under Miss. R. Evid. 402, all relevant evidence is generally admissible; where the investigating officer was asked about her investigation of the accident and the construction area where the accident had occurred, the information would definitely enable the jury to find the existence of more or less probable material facts, and was therefore relevant under Rule 402. Estate of Carter v. Phillips & Phillips Constr. Co., 860 So. 2d 332 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

— Accomplice acquittal.

Trial court did not err in excluding evidence of defendant's accomplice's acquittal because, had defendant's accomplice been convicted, that information could not have been introduced by the State at defendant's trial; therefore, the reverse proposition also applied. Garner v. State, 856 So. 2d 729 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

— Controlled substances.

In defendant's trial for possession of cocaine, evidence that someone else drove the car in which the cocaine was found and was known to use drugs was not, without more, sufficient to show that defendant did not know about the presence of the cocaine. In the absence of other proof, the evidence was not relevant, and therefore, not admissible. Magee v. State, 912 So. 2d 1044 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

— Criminal history.

Appellant asserted that because the circuit court allowed the introduction of her possession of marijuana and her subsequent conviction which resulted from the previous trial, the circuit court opened the door to the introduction of evidence that the first trial resulted in a mistrial as to the cocaine charge; however, it was for the second jury to determine the credibility of all the evidence and testimony offered. Evidence that an earlier jury was unable to reach a decision was simply not relevant as it did not make it more or less likely that appellant knowingly possessed the drugs in question; instead, admission of this evidence would only frustrate or improperly influence the deliberations of the later jury. Field v. State, 28 So. 3d 697 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Past criminal history, or drug use, of witness and her husband were not relevant, since witness and her husband were not on trial. Johnston v. State, 618 So. 2d 90 (Miss. 1993).

Trial court erred in preventing defendant, on relevance grounds, from questioning assailant and other witnesses about assailant's prior drug arrest, and specifically that assailant blamed his arrest on defendant, since these facts substantiated defendant's fear and the need for defendant to arm himself. Owens v. State, 609 So. 2d 410 (Miss. 1992).

— Discrimination.

In an action for breach of contract and fraud arising from the purchase by the defendant of insurance for the plaintiff's car after she allowed her own policy to lapse, it was reversible error for the court to allow the plaintiff to introduce irrelevant evidence that the defendant's insurance program disproportionately impacted racial minorities. GMAC v. Baymon, 732 So. 2d 262 (Miss. 1999).

— Money.

Evidence of bank bag and its contents was relevant in that it had a great impact upon credibility of murder defendant's story that he had been robbed, and probative value of evidence substantially outweighed any legally cognizable prejudice. Jackson v. State, 551 So. 2d 132 (Miss. 1989).

— Photographs.

In an aggravated assault case under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-7(2), the trial court did not abuse its discretion by finding that the probative value of the photographs of the victim's injury outweighed any danger of unfair prejudice as they were relevant to prove that defendant used means likely to produce death or serious bodily harm, and they were small and blurry and not particularly gruesome. Ford v. State, 975 So. 2d 859 (Miss. 2008).

In a prosecution for murder, there was no error in the introduction into evidence of photographs of the murder victim where (1) there was nothing in the record to indicate that the admission of the photographs was simply a ploy on the part of the prosecutor to arouse the passion and prejudice of the jury, (2) the photographs established that the victim was dead as a result of a criminal act, and the extent, position, and nature of the wounds the victim sustained, and (3) the photographs assisted the jury in visualizing the crime scene and corroborated the testimony of the investigators of the crime scene. Humphrey v. State, 759 So. 2d 368 (Miss. 2000).

— Res gestae.

In defendant's capital murder case, defendant's right to a fair trial was not violated by the trial court's admission of testimony about the sexual assault of the victim, which defendant was not charged with, that occurred in the moments preceding her murder, where sexual molestation was integrally so related to her murder that one could not coherently present the facts of her demise without reference to it, and the testimony described part of the res gestae of the crime charged and helped shed light on defendant's motive. McGowen v. State, 859 So. 2d 320 (Miss. 2003).

— State of mind.

In a case in which defendant was convicted on two counts of capital murder, in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-19(2)(e), the trial court did not erred when it excluded evidence that he attempted to commit suicide after he shot the two murder victims because evidence of his attempted suicide was not relevant. Defendant argued that his attempted suicide was relevant to his state of mind and bolstered his argument that he acted in the heat of passion; while his attempted suicide could arguably be viewed as evidence that he regretted his actions, under the circumstances, it did not tend to make it more probable that he acted in the heat of passion when he killed the two victims. Williams v. State, 29 So. 3d 53 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 29 So. 3d 774, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 116 (Miss. 2010).

— Tax preparations.

Trial court erred in admitting expert testimony on subject of tax preparations and calculations, and loss of use of income; chancellor did not need assistance understanding such evidence and testimony was instead offered to help chancellor determine amount of damages suffered, but this was not relevant since it was not a fact at issue, and therefore testimony should not have been admitted. Century 21 Deep S. Properties, Ltd. v. Corson, 612 So. 2d 359 (Miss. 1992).

— Videotapes.

In a possession of marijuana case, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in sustaining the state's objection to defendants' cross-examination of the chief narcotics officer regarding whether he had been instructed not to videotape interviews, as the issue of videotaping the interviews was irrelevant under Miss. R. Evid. 401 and Miss. R. Evid. 402 to guilt or innocence where there was no dispute regarding the substance of either defendants' interviews or written statements. Juarez v. State, 965 So. 2d 1061 (Miss. 2007).

The judge did not abuse his discretion in permitting the introduction into evidence of a videotape of drug transactions where the defendant himself testified that he was the individual shown in the videotapes orchestrating the sales; to the extent that the videotapes were inaudible and obscure in places, that was only a factor for the jury to weigh in determining whether the state proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant participated in the sales. Flowers v. State, 726 So. 2d 185 (Ct. App. 1998).

A trial court did not err in excluding collateral-source evidence and in refusing to allow a partnership to use evidence to impeach an injured party when the injured party's testimony about medical bills and nonmedical evidence was not unduly prejudicial. Robinson Prop. Group, L.P. v. Mitchell, 7 So. 3d 240 (Miss. 2009).

While a witness's use of a victim's bank card possessed a tendency to establish a motive or intent for his involvement in the crime, for purposes of Miss. R. Evid. 401, the exact number of withdrawals and/or the exact amount actually withdrawn by the witness was not a fact of consequence to the determination of the case, and even if determined relevant, the evidence would have been properly excluded under Miss. R. Evid. 403, and this evidence was properly excluded under Miss. R. Evid. 402. Williams v. State, 994 So. 2d 808 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 998 So. 2d 1010, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 665 (Miss. 2008).

Former employee witness had no legitimate purpose in testifying about his alleged injury at the corporation's plant as this alleged injury was unrelated to the claims asserted by the resident at trial, and this testimony unfairly prejudiced the jury against the corporation. E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Co. v. Strong, 968 So. 2d 410 (Miss. 2007).

Exclusion of the mortgage company representative's deposition from evidence at trial was proper in the couple's fraud and misrepresentation claims because the testimony did not make any fact or consequence to the fraud claim more or less probable. Johnson v. Bay City South Mortg. Co., 928 So. 2d 888 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 929 So. 2d 923, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 272 (Miss. 2006).

Defendant's conviction for murdering her husband was proper where an informant's identity was not relevant to any issues regarding whether defendant had committed the crime charged. Thus, the trial court was correct in refusing to disclose the identity of the informant. Stephens v. State, 911 So. 2d 424 (Miss. 2005).

Illustrative cases.

In defendant's trial on a charge of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, a circuit court properly determined a defense witness's testimony was inadmissible, pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 402, because the witness could neither verify nor deny that defendant had been transferring narcotics before he was arrested, and the witness had not seen whether defendant had discarded any narcotics while police attempted to apprehend him; thus, the witness's testimony was irrelevant. Hosey v. State, 77 So. 3d 507 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011), writ of certiorari denied by 78 So. 3d 906, 2012 Miss. LEXIS 19 (Miss. 2012).

Evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for common law DUI under Miss. Code Ann. § 63-11-30(1)(a) (Rev. 2004) as it showed that defendant admitted to the officer who stopped his vehicle that he had drunk two beers while he was driving, that he also admitted that he had drunk liquor and beer earlier in the day, that the officer smelled a strong odor of alcohol coming from defendant and observed defendant's glassy eyes, and that defendant refused to field sobriety test and the chemical test. Evidence that defendant refused the chemical test was admissible pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 63-11-41 (Rev. 2004) and Miss. R. Evid. 402. Ellis v. State, 77 So. 3d 1119 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 78 So. 3d 906, 2012 Miss. LEXIS 25 (Miss. 2012).

Defendant's manslaughter conviction was proper because a witness's testimony that the victim had cursed the witness's father and that the victim had a bad temper and was overbearing was correctly deemed not admissible. The hearsay testimony was not only too remote in time to be admissible, it was also irrelevant, and its probative value was outweighed by its prejudicial effect. Booker v. State, 64 So. 3d 988 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), affirmed by 64 So. 3d 965, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 316 (Miss. 2011).

Finding in favor of a trucking company and truck driver in a wrongful-death action brought by the decedent's widow was proper because the trial court did not err by excluding evidence of the trucking company's carrier rating; the carrier rating was not relevant to the litigation that arose from the decedent's death because the widow's main contention was that the tractor-trailer did not have any reflective tape on the back panel. The carrier rating at issue was for violations occurring after the date of the decedent's wreck, and none of the violations involved a violation for non-use of reflective tape. Utz v. Running & Rolling Trucking, Inc., 32 So. 3d 450 (Miss. 2010).

During defendant's trial for DUI, the court did not err in considering defendant's refusal to submit to a breathalyzer test because the evidence was admissible and relevant. Knight v. State, 14 So. 3d 76 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In defendant's murder trial for killing a man whom his ex-wife was dating, the trial court did not err in permitting defendant's ex-wife to testify that defendant threatened to kill her and any man with whom he caught her. According to the ex-wife's testimony, on the same day that someone killed the victim, defendant told his ex-wife, who had been dating the victim, that he would kill any man she dated; this testimony tended to reveal defendant's state of mind and his motive, and because this testimony tended to make it more probable that defendant killed the victim, the testimony was relevant and admissible. Parker v. State, 20 So. 3d 702 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 20 So. 3d 680, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 544 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in sustaining State's relevancy objection because there was no relevancy connection between a jail assault of defendant and the aggravated assault of a defendant's victim. Because they were separate incidents, disconnected both temporally and by location, the evidence was irrelevant under Miss. R. Evid. 401 and thus, inadmissible under Miss. R. Evid. 402. Miller v. State, 996 So. 2d 752 (Miss. 2008).

In a dispute over insurance coverage, the trial court did not abuse its discretion by redacting a prior carpet cleaning receipt and disallowing evidence of flood insurance because the jury would have had to infer that the similarity in cleaning services in 2003 and 2004 was an indication that the damage in both years resulted from the same cause. Additionally, the jury would have had to infer from the fact that the insured made a successful flood insurance claim with a different company in 2004 that the damage in 2004 resulted entirely from a flood and not in part from sewer or drain backup. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Martin, 998 So. 2d 956 (Miss. 2008).

Trial court did not violate defendant's Sixth Amendment right to confrontation by excluding testimony that his victims were smoking marijuana at the time he assaulted them by limiting his ability to cross-examine one victim regarding the intoxication; the evidence was properly excluded under Miss. R. Evid. 401 and 402 because defendant presented no evidence that smoking marijuana increased a person's propensity for violence generally or that smoking marijuana increased the victim's propensity for violence. Since defendant did not meet the threshold for establishing the probative value of the evidence, the testimony on whether the victim had been smoking marijuana the morning of the assault was irrelevant. Rouster v. State, 981 So. 2d 314 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In defendant's murder case, the court did not err by not allowing defendant to introduce evidence of a witness's status as an informant because no impeaching material was concealed; moreover, the witness's status as a confidential informant to the Hinds County Sheriff's Department was irrelevant to the case because the department had no involvement with the case. Brown v. State, 965 So. 2d 1023 (Miss. 2007).

Evidence that a child victim had allegedly caused injuries to his own rectum by sticking objects there was properly excluded in a sexual battery case because it was irrelevant under Miss. R. Evid. 401 and highly prejudicial under Miss. R. Evid. 403, and it was also a collateral issue that was too remote in time to rebut the charges based on the fact that it was a year before the charges in an indictment; case law under Miss. R. Evid. 412 was helpful in making this determination, despite the fact that the victim's actions did not constitute clear sexual activity. Mason v. State, 971 So. 2d 618 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 973 So. 2d 244, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 701 (Miss. 2007).

Where defendant was convicted for killing his former girlfriend, given his testimony that her male friend had previously threatened him with a gun, whether or not the male friend owned a gun at the time of the alleged threats was relevant because it tended to increase or decrease, however minimally, the probability of the truth of defendant's testimony supporting his defense of self-defense. Therefore, the trial court abused its discretion when it prohibited the question on the male friend's prior gun ownership, even though same was ultimately found to constitute harmless error in the case at bar. Raiford v. State, 907 So. 2d 998 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In a murder case, the court properly admitted evidence of an ongoing family feud between defendant's family and the victim's family because whether or not defendant was directly involved in each individual altercation, the evidence was relevant and was not so prejudicial as to constitute reversible error because the testimony had the tendency of making the action more or less probable; defendant obviously knew of the ongoing feud and had participated in several altercations with members of the victim's family. Morris v. State, 963 So. 2d 1170 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 964 So. 2d 508, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 502 (Miss. 2007).

In a business burglary case, defendant's motion in limine to preclude introduction of evidence regarding cartons of cigarettes found in defendant's vehicle was properly denied because the cartons were clearly relevant to defendant's burglary of the store, because the primary items taken were the dozens of cartons of cigarettes, and the evidence was highly probative of defendant's burglary of the store. Cridiso v. State, 956 So. 2d 281 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 957 So. 2d 1004, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 285 (Miss. 2007).

Finding in favor of the husband and wife in their action against the city for personal injuries and loss of consortium under the Mississippi Tort Claims Act, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-1 et seq., was proper pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 401 and Miss. R. Evid. 402 because an expert's testimony tended to make the fact that the city negligently repaired and maintained the grate and sidewalk more probable than that without his proffered evidence. City of Natchez v. Jackson, 941 So. 2d 865 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In a case where the decedent was struck and killed by a train, the trial court clearly did not abuse its discretion in granting the order precluding evidence or testimony regarding the sufficiency of the warning device at the crossing because the evidence was not relevant to any of the administratrix's theories of recovery. Clark v. Ill. Cent. R.R., 872 So. 2d 773 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court's ruling to exclude material depicting a small child in a rearward facing passenger seat from a wrongful death lawsuit following the death of a 10-year-old child when a car air bag deployed on the ground that the material was not similar enough to the subject case was an abuse of the trial court's discretion. Palmer v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 905 So. 2d 564 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, remanded, 904 So. 2d 1077 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court's relevancy ruling in a wrongful death action, in which the court denied the admission into evidence of a letter from the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) to auto manufacturers that contained an opinion that efforts to inform and educate the public about the dangers of air bags were not reaching parents and recommending a media campaign, on the grounds that the NTSB lacked regulatory authority over automobile manufacturers, constituted an abuse of discretion. Palmer v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 905 So. 2d 564 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, remanded, 904 So. 2d 1077 (Miss. 2005).

In a capital murder case where defendant was indicted separately for each of four murders, the trial court committed reversible error and denied defendant a fair trial because it admitted irrelevant evidence regarding the other three victims; throughout the trial, the prosecution referred continually to all four individuals who had been killed, through the testimony of its witnesses and the evidence it introduced. Flowers v. State, 842 So. 2d 531 (Miss. 2003).

Although the trial court abused its discretion when it denied submission of a defense witness's testimony regarding a murder defendant's state of mind, the error was harmless in light of the overwhelming evidence of defendant's guilt. Jefferson v. State, 818 So. 2d 1099 (Miss. 2002).

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, there was no violation of the rule where (1) the victim testified, in an uninvited and unresponsive manner, that she was one week pregnant at the time she was shot, and (2) the court then determined that the jury should be informed that the unborn child was not harmed by the gunshot so as to avoid any undue bias against the defendant. Williams v. State, 784 So. 2d 230 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Evidence that murder defendant subsequently purchased and used cocaine with proceeds of stolen guns did not make it any more likely that he committed murder, and thus this evidence was irrelevant should not have been admitted. Snelson v. State, 704 So. 2d 452 (Miss. 1997).

Trial court erred in excluding witness's testimony as irrelevant, since issue was not the collateral matter of whether subject of her testimony had a character trait for being truthful, but the central issue of whether he, rather than defendant, was responsible for assault in question. Clark v. State, 514 So. 2d 1221 (Miss. 1987).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. Admissibility of results of presumptive tests indicating presence of blood on object. 82 A.L.R.5th 67.

Admissibility of computer-generated animation. 111 A.L.R.5th 529.

Admissibility and Effect of Evidence or Comment on Party's Military Service or Lack Thereof. 24 A.L.R. 6th 747.

Rule 403. Exclusion of relevant evidence on grounds of prejudice, confusion, or waste of time.

Although relevant, evidence may be excluded if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion of the issues, or misleading the jury, or by considerations of undue delay, waste of time, or needless presentation of cumulative evidence.

COMMENT

Relevant evidence may be inadmissible when its probative value is outweighed by its tendency to mislead, to confuse, or to prejudice the jury. If the introduction of the evidence would waste more time than its probative value was worth, then a trial judge may rightly exclude such otherwise relevant evidence. By providing for the exclusion of evidence whose probativeness is outweighed by prejudice, Mississippi is following existing federal and state practice. U.S. v. Renfro, 620 F.2d 497 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied 449 U.S. 921, 101 S. Ct. 321, 66 L.Ed.2d 149 (1980). Such a rule also keeps collateral issues from being injected into the case. Hannah v. State, 336 So.2d 1317 (Miss. 1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1101, 97 S. Ct. 1126, 51 L.Ed.2d 551 (1977); Coleman v. State, 198 Miss. 519, 23 So.2d 404 (1945). This rule also gives the trial judge the discretion to exclude evidence which is merely cumulative. Carr v. State, 208 So.2d 886 (Miss. 1968).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Audiotapes.
Autopsy photographs.
Ballistics evidence.
Cautionary instructions.
Collateral-source payments.
Confusion.
Course of conduct.
Cumulative evidence.
Depositions.
Discrimination.
DNA evidence.
Drug offenses.
— Written documents.
Flight.
Gang activity.
Insurance.
Money.
Other crimes.
Other lawsuits.
Photographs.
Prejudice found.
Prejudice not found.
Preservation for review.
Prior accidents.
Prior charges.
Prior conviction.
Prior incarceration.
Prior indictments.
Prior sexual relations.
Profane language.
Rebuttal evidence.
Relationship with Miss. R. Evid. 404(b).
Sanity.
Sexual orientation.
Suspensions.
Tape recordings.
Testimony.
Videotapes.
Written documents.
Illustrative cases.

In general.

While a trial judge did not make a lengthy analysis of the arguments presented, the judge held that the probative value of the evidence outweighed its prejudicial effect, and any error in the judge's failure to make a more detailed record of the analysis under Miss. R. Evid. 403 was harmless. Liddell v. State, 33 So. 3d 524 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

To the extent that Mississippi courts have held that evidence of collateral-source payments may not be introduced for the purpose of impeaching false or misleading testimony, those decisions are expressly overruled. Permitting evidence of collateral-source payments for the narrow purpose of impeaching false or misleading testimony is consistent with the Mississippi Rules of Evidence. Robinson Prop. Group, L.P. v. Mitchell, 7 So. 3d 240 (Miss. 2009).

In a former client's assault and mental anguish claim against his former attorney, his child support delinquency prior to the assault contradicted the client's claim for emotional distress damages and was admissible. Walker v. Benz, 914 So. 2d 1262 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

While a trial court certainly had to balance probative value and prejudice when evaluating evidence, a trial court's failure to articulate the balancing on the record did not require reversal. Jones v. State, 937 So. 2d 455 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 937 So. 2d 450, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 572 (Miss. 2006).

In a capital murder case, a trial court did not err by failing to determine whether or not prior bad acts evidence was admissible by conducting a balancing test to determine if the probative value was outweighed by the prejudicial effect because the State never sought to introduce the evidence at trial. Le v. State, 913 So. 2d 913 (Miss. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 546 U.S. 1004, 126 S. Ct. 622, 163 L. Ed. 2d 508, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 8254, 74 U.S.L.W. 3288 (2005).

Trial court did not err by admitting the photographs of the deceased; the crime scene photograph aided in describing the circumstances surrounding the crime and the location of the victims, and the autopsy photographs helped the jury understand the location of the wounds. Lewis v. State, 905 So. 2d 729 (Miss. Ct. App. Nov. 16, 2004).

Defendant was not entitled to a Miss. R. Evid. 403 hearing on whether evidence of a drug sale that took place the day before a cocaine transaction was admissible, as defense counsel had opened the door about how the officer knew defendant was the one who sold him the drugs, and the officer used the evidence of the prior drug sale as his basis for knowing defendant was the seller. McIntyre v. State, 900 So. 2d 380 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 898 So. 2d 679 (Miss. 2005).

In defendant's trial on charges of violating Miss. Code Ann. § 97-11-53, inducement to influence a public official to approve a property owner's construction project, the trial court did not violate defendant's Sixth Amendment right to confront witnesses by limiting his cross-examination of the property owner because defendant sought to inquire about other lawsuits in which the property owner was involved and the trial court had determined that the property owner had not been convicted of any of the wrongdoings for which defense counsel wished to impeach his testimony, thus the trial court ruled that the testimony sought to be elicited from the property owner would not have been allowed by Miss. R. Evid. 609 and that it would have been unduly prejudicial, in violation of Miss. R. Evid. 403. Because the trial court's ruling was in accordance with the Mississippi Rules of Evidence, no abuse of discretion was present. Edmonson v. State, 906 So. 2d 73 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a capital murder case, the trial court did not err in allowing codefendant and witnesses to testify that defendant had stated he needed money to pay his probation officer, as any prejudice from admitting the testimony did not substantially outweigh the probative value of allowing the testimony to establish defendant's motive and intent for the murder. Howell v. State, 860 So. 2d 704 (Miss. 2003), cert. dismissed, 543 U.S. 440, 125 S. Ct. 856, 160 L. Ed. 2d 873 (2005).

When the defendant objects to the admission of character evidence, the trial court must balance its probative value against the danger of unfair prejudice, pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 105, 403, 609(a), and the court finds that the rule envisions an objection contemporaneous with the admission of the testimony; as the prior bad acts evidence was introduced by one defendant, any objection thereto by that defendant was waived, and because none of defendants objected to the closing argument that referred to the prior bad acts evidence, which was not unduly prejudicial in the first place, the court found that error was not preserved on appeal and the issue had no merit. Harris v. State, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 80 (Miss. Feb. 20, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 861 So. 2d 1003, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 872 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court did not err in excluding evidence that the victim had been attacked by a person in a sport utility vehicle two years before the murder, as there was no evidence that the person had continued to stalk her and the event was too remote in time to the actual crime. Anthony v. State, 843 So. 2d 51 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002), cert. denied, 842 So. 2d 578 (Miss. 2003).

If an accused objects to Rule 404(b) evidence and the trial court, after conducting a Rule 403 analysis, finds that the probative value of the evidence outweighs the prejudicial effect, the trial court must treat the objection to the admissibility of Rule 404(b) evidence as a request for a limiting instruction. Webster v. State, 754 So. 2d 1232 (Miss. 2000).

Even when other-crimes evidence is admissible under Rule 404(b), it must pass through the ultimate filter of this rule. Jasper v. State, 759 So. 2d 1136 (Miss. 1999).

A trial court presented with a Rule 403 objection to relevant evidence must engage in a balancing process; the more probative the evidence is, the less likely it is that a Rule 403 factor will be of sufficient consequence to substantially outweigh the probative value; on the other hand, the less probative value the evidence has, the less significant the Rule 403 factor would have to be to justify exclusion. Brown v. State, 749 So. 2d 204 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

If one or more of the Rule 403 considerations slightly outweigh probative value, the evidence still must be admitted; the Rule 403 factors must substantially outweigh the probative value before the evidence may be excluded, and the trial court is afforded broad discretion in weighing these interests. Brown v. State, 749 So. 2d 204 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

The determination of "prior bad acts" testimony is a dual test encompassing both Rule 404(b) and the prejudice test of Rule 403. Kelly v. State, 735 So. 2d 1071 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

When a party seeks to cross-examine a witness about specific instances of past conduct probative of veracity under M.R.E. Rule 608 (b), trial judge should make specific findings of record under Rule 403. Brent v. State, 632 So. 2d 936 (Miss. 1994).

Even if exception under M.R.E. Rule 404(b) is invoked, trial court is still required to conduct balancing analysis under Rule 403, to determine whether probative value of evidence is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. Lockett v. State, 517 So. 2d 1317 (Miss. 1987).

Audiotapes.

In defendant's trial for statutory rape, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in admitting taped conversations between defendant and his girlfriend's children; the audiotapes demonstrated that defendant had sexual contact with his girlfriend's daughter. Fisackerly v. State, 880 So. 2d 368 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Autopsy photographs.

Defendant's convictions for murder and kidnapping were proper because autopsy photographs were admissible. The photographs either showed the crime scene and location of the bodies of the victims, or they were used by the State's expert witness to supplement and clarify his testimony; the photographs also had probative value because they aided in describing the circumstances of the killings, showed the location of the bodies and causes of death, and clarified testimony of the expert witness and other law enforcement officers. Lipsey v. State, 50 So. 3d 341 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 50 So. 3d 1003, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 13 (Miss. 2011).

During defendant's trial for capital murder, the trial court did not abuse its discretion by allowing the photographs of the victim's body into evidence to aid the testimony of the forensic pathologist; the body had been cleaned, the photographs showed the location of the body, and only close-up photographs of bruises and cuts were shown. The trial court asked defendant's family and friends to leave the courtroom before the photographs were shown so as not to elicit an emotional response which might prejudice defendant. Woods v. State, 14 So. 3d 767 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In defendant's trial for capital murder of defendant's five-year-old child, autopsy photographs were properly admitted because the photographs were of significant probative value when the photographs showed the severity of the beatings, which defendant denied, and corroborating the testimony of defendant's daughter and the findings of the coroner. The photographs' probative value clearly outweighed their prejudicial effect, and the trial court did not err in admitting them. Broadhead v. State, 981 So. 2d 320 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 981 So. 2d 298, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 210 (Miss. 2008).

Autopsy photographs were properly admitted in defendant's capital murder trial under Miss. R. Evid. 403 because they aided in describing the circumstances of the killing and the cause of death, they were used to corroborate and aid the testimony of the expert. Further, the photographs were not overly gruesome, prejudicial or inflammatory, and they accurately depicted the nature of the victim's injuries and were probative to showing how he was murdered. Walker v. State, 913 So. 2d 198 (Miss. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 546 U.S. 1038, 126 S. Ct. 743, 163 L. Ed. 2d 581, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 8688, 74 U.S.L.W. 3322 (2005), remanded by 2006 Miss. LEXIS 156 (Miss. Mar. 9, 2006).

Autopsy photographs were properly admitted into evidence since (1) they were neither inordinately gruesome nor inflammatory because no medical instruments protruded from the victim's wounds, no blood surrounded the wounds, and there was no decomposition of the body, and (2) they illustrated the proximity of the entrance gunshot wounds, the size of the wounds according to the calibrated ruler, and the relation of the chest wound to the shoulder and the chest wall; the photos assisted the jurors in their comprehension of the locations and proportions of the wounds which were described in the testimony of a forensic pathologist. Skinner v. State, 751 So. 2d 1060 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Ballistics evidence.

Where defendant admitted throughout his brief that he had a gun at the time of the shooting, and witnesses testified that defendant had a gun, the trial judge weighed the probative value of admitting a spent shell casing against its prejudicial effect and determined that indeed its probative value was greater than its prejudicial effect. Hope v. State, 840 So. 2d 747 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Admission into evidence of .22 caliber handgun and testimony of State's ballistics expert relative to weapon was not prejudicial, where an eyewitness testified that gun was the same as used during robbery, and expert testified that three of the four projectiles taken from victim's body could have been fired in the gun, thus partially corroborating eyewitness's testimony. Brown v. State, 682 So. 2d 340 (Miss. 1996), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1127, 117 S. Ct. 1271, 137 L. Ed. 2d 348 (1997).

Cautionary instructions.

Defendant moved for a mistrial after the improper testimony of a police officer during defendant's trial for sale of cocaine; however, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the mistrial because after defendant's counsel objected, the trial court quickly admonished the jury, and the prosecutor did not intentionally elicit the witness' testimony. Yarbrough v. State, 911 So. 2d 951 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court need not issue a sua sponte limiting instruction when other bad acts evidence is admitted under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) and 403; Miss. R. Evid. 105 clearly places the burden of requesting a limiting instruction under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) on the party objecting to the evidence. Brown v. State, 890 So. 2d 901 (Miss. 2004), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 125 S. Ct. 1842, 161 L. Ed. 2d 735 (2005).

Before a party may introduce for impeachment purposes an unsworn pretrial inconsistent statement of his own witness, he must show surprise or unexpected hostility, and such statement can never be used as substantive evidence; under provisions of M.R.E. Rule 403, trial judge should consider whether a cautionary instruction to jury will be sufficient to keep jury from treating the unsworn pretrial inconsistent statement as substantive evidence, and if not, the statement should not be introduced. Wilkins v. State, 603 So. 2d 309 (Miss. 1992).

Collateral-source payments.

A trial court did not err in excluding collateral-source evidence and in refusing to allow a partnership to use evidence to impeach an injured party when the injured party's testimony about medical bills and nonmedical evidence was not unduly prejudicial. Robinson Prop. Group, L.P. v. Mitchell, 7 So. 3d 240 (Miss. 2009).

Confusion.

Defendant's manslaughter conviction was proper because, assuming for the sake of discussion that a witness's testimony was not irrelevant, it would have been confusing and misleading to the jury; the jury would have been led to believe that because the victim was verbally aggressive with the witness approximately four years earlier, he was more likely to have been the initial aggressor for the current series of events. Accordingly, the nonexistent probative value of the witness's testimony would have been outweighed by the massive prejudicial effect that would have stemmed from misleading the jury. Booker v. State, 64 So. 3d 988 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), affirmed by 64 So. 3d 965, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 316 (Miss. 2011).

Trial court did not err in disallowing testimony of defendant's bad childhood and relationship with her mother, as her defense of entrapment was whether she was predisposed to commit the crime and was induced by law enforcement to do so; defendant testified to everything that she claimed her mother would have testified, and the jury was able to hear the effect of the mother's illness on defendant, plus other testimony concerning an alleged grudge by one agent would have been irrelevant and confusing and misleading to the jury, plus that agent turned over the information to another agent, who made the decision to proceed with the buy. Pittman v. State, 987 So. 2d 1010 (Miss. Ct.

App. 2007), writ of certiorari dismissed en banc by 2008 Miss. LEXIS 368 (Miss. July 31, 2008).

In a premises liability case in which a customer used a stepladder present in a retailer's store to retrieve an item from a top shelf and fell, evidence that it was the retailer's practice to leave defective stepladders returned by customers on the sales floor was not admissible under Miss. R. Evid. 403 because it would have left the jury to speculate that the ladder from which the customer fell was such a defective ladder. Gaines v. K-Mart Corp., 860 So. 2d 1214 (Miss. 2003).

In a prosecution for simple assault, the trial court did not err when it refused to allow the introduction into evidence of a complaint for divorce filed by the victim, notwithstanding the defendant's assertion that such complaint alleged cruel and inhumane treatment and showed a motive for the victim to lie about the assault, since the actual divorce complaint would have unnecessarily confused the jury as the victim denied having claimed cruel and inhumane treatment as the grounds for his divorce complaint, there were problems with his attorney, and the information regarding the alleged grounds for divorce was already before the jury. Gribble v. State, 760 So. 2d 790 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Course of conduct.

Trial court erred when it found that evidence of mere drinking, without sufficient proof of intoxication, was so prejudicial as to outweigh its probative value, rendering the evidence inadmissible under Miss. R. Evid. 403. This analysis incorrectly evaluated a prior inconsistent statement for the truth of the matter it asserted rather than evaluating the probative value of a prior inconsistent statement used to impeach the credibility of the accuser pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 613. Mendenhall v. State, 18 So. 3d 915 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In defendant's capital murder case, defendant's right to a fair trial was not violated by the trial court's admission of testimony about the sexual assault of the victim, which defendant was not charged with, that occurred in the moments preceding her murder, where sexual molestation was integrally so related to her murder that one could not coherently present the facts of her demise without reference to it, and the testimony described part of the res gestae of the crime charged and helped shed light on defendant's motive. McGowen v. State, 859 So. 2d 320 (Miss. 2003).

Course of conduct evidence introduced by plaintiff was relevant and was not substantially more prejudicial than probative; as defendants were sued for punitive damages based on an allegedly bad faith failure to pay, evidence which tended to prove defendants had a routine practice of bad faith dealings with other companies became important and relevant. Hans Constr. Co. v. Drummond, 653 So. 2d 253 (Miss. 1995).

Cumulative evidence.

In a suit brought against a water park for injuries a patron sustained while on a water slide, while testimony by the patron's mother regarding the condition of the slides the day after the patron's accident was improperly excluded under Miss. R. Evid. 403 on the basis that it was unfairly prejudicial, the circuit court did not err in excluding the mother's testimony because, not only was it irrelevant, it was also cumulative and could have been excluded under Rule 403 on that basis. Boyd v. Magic Golf, 52 So. 3d 455 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

In a medical malpractice case, plaintiff's theory behind his assignment of error was that because the physician testified, as an expert witness, that he was not negligent, the physician's expert's testimony to the same effect should have been excluded as cumulative. However, the fact that the physician was able to testify as an occurrence witness did not change the fact that he was also qualified to testify as an expert witness; moreover, the fact that a defendant who was able to testify as an expert offered the same testimony as his separate expert witness did not render the testimonial evidence needlessly cumulative. Brumfield v. Langston, 906 So. 2d 48 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Only things provided to the State were the proposed witness's name (defendant's husband), address and telephone number. Defendant chose not to provide anything else to the State and thus violated the discovery process by not disclosing what the witness would have testified about at trial; in any event, the record showed the proffered testimony was cumulative of other testimony on defendant's character, and the trial judge did not abuse his discretion in excluding same. Montgomery v. State, 891 So. 2d 179 (Miss. 2004).

In defendant's case, evidence of his prior drug activity was admissible under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) because defendant presented an entrapment defense, but the trial court erred in not conducting a Miss. R. Evid. 403 inquiry before admitting the convictions into evidence. However, the trial court's error was harmless because (1) the trial court gave a limiting instruction to the jury regarding the purpose for which those convictions could be considered, and specifically instructed the jury it could not consider the convictions in determining whether defendant was guilty of the crime for which he was on trial; and (2) overwhelming evidence of defendant's guilt was presented at trial. Tate v. State, 912 So. 2d 919 (Miss. 2005).

In a robbery and assault case, the trial court did not err in refusing to permit defendant to elicit from the victim testimony concerning complaints she made at a hospital regarding hallucinations she suffered due to narcotics abuse, as the issues of the victim's extensive drug abuse history was fully developed for the jury, and further development of that aspect of the victim's character would not have assisted the jury. Woods v. State, 883 So. 2d 583 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Ruling by the trial court to exclude from evidence diagrams of an adult person with arrows drawn to show the parts of the body where the decedent was injured on the ground that the diagrams would not assist the jury because of a doctor's thorough description of the decedent's injuries in the autopsy report was within the trial court's discretion. Palmer v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 905 So. 2d 564 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, remanded, 904 So. 2d 1077 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court was within its discretion in excluding an accident reconstructionist's testimony from evidence because it was cumulative and the reconstructionist's conclusions were the same as those in another expert's earlier testimony. Palmer v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 905 So. 2d 564 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, remanded, 904 So. 2d 1077 (Miss. 2005).

Cumulative evidence of photographs, the autopsy diagrams, and the testimony regarding the other individual victims were neither relevant nor necessary to the case sub judice, and were, therefore, highly prejudicial to defendant. The State's pattern of continuously referring to the killing of the other three victims throughout the entire guilt phase denied defendant his fundamental right to a fair trial. Flowers v. State, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. Feb. 20, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 842 So. 2d 531, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 149 (Miss. 2003).

Reversal of defendant's capital murder conviction was required in a case where defendant was indicted separately for each of four murders, because cumulative evidence of photographs, autopsy diagrams, and testimony regarding the other individual victims was neither relevant nor necessary to the case being tried, and was, therefore, highly prejudicial to defendant. Flowers v. State, 842 So. 2d 531 (Miss. 2003).

Where defendant argued that failure to admit documentary evidence of a murder indictment against the codefendant, who testified against defendant, was improper, defendant's claim failed; although evidence tending to show bias was admissible pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 616, the evidence was needlessly cumulative under Miss. R. Evid. 403, as this evidence was already admitted by defense counsel, who read from the plea hearing transcript related to the codefendant's murder charge and ably cross-examined the codefendant about the codefendant's motive to lie. Smith v. State, 848 So. 2d 195 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where defense counsel voiced his intention to call victim's mother as an adverse witness, questioning of mother's friend regarding mother's arrest was clearly cumulative and was properly excluded by trial court. Evans v. State, 725 So. 2d 613 (Miss. 1997), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1133, 119 S. Ct. 1097, 143 L. Ed. 2d 34 (1999).

Videotape depicting site where murder defendant buried victim, as well as exhumation of victim's body, should have been excluded on grounds of repetition, redundancy and cumulativeness; due to lack of prejudicial effect, however, video's erroneous admission did not warrant reversal. Holland v. State, 587 So. 2d 848 (Miss. 1991).

Any error from admission of photographs of murder victim due to cumulativeness or repetitiveness was harmless error, and did not requiring reversal, because photographs were not particularly gory and did not have a highly inflammatory effect on the jury. Willie v. State, 585 So. 2d 660 (Miss. 1991).

Court at murder trial erroneously excluded evidence that same color paint was used on all General Motors cars; trial judge made no finding that evidence was cumulative, and evidence was not in fact cumulative. Edlin v. State, 533 So. 2d 403 (Miss. 1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1086, 109 S. Ct. 1547, 103 L. Ed. 2d 851 (1989).

Depositions.

It was not error for the court to allow the introduction into evidence of a portion of a videotaped deposition of a physician in which the attorney for a defendant, which was dismissed prior to trial, questioned the physician where the trial court redacted the portion of the deposition that identified the defendant as well as the name of its attorney. Hageney v. Jackson Furn. of Danville, Inc., 746 So. 2d 912 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Discrimination.

In an action for breach of contract and fraud arising from the purchase by the defendant of insurance for the plaintiff's car after she allowed her own policy to lapse, it was reversible error for the court to allow the plaintiff to introduce prejudicial evidence that the defendant's insurance program disproportionately impacted racial minorities. GMAC v. Baymon, 732 So. 2d 262 (Miss. 1999).

DNA evidence.

Expert was admitted as an expert in the field of molecular biology, forensic DNA analysis and DNA hair analysis, and she was allowed to testify as to the results of her DNA analysis without a specific objection from the defense, and the specific arguments made by defendant on appeal were not presented to the trial court; further, Miss. Code Ann. § 93-9-27, regarding the presumption of paternity genetic tests, did not provide the standard for admission of DNA evidence here, and the trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing in the statistical results of the DNA tests. Rankin v. State, 963 So. 2d 1255 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Drug offenses.

In a prosecution for the sale of drugs, evidence of defendant's prior drug convictions was improperly admitted, as the evidence was prejudicial and the jury heard continual references to defendant's prior convictions before defendant had any opportunity to present a defense. Hargett v. State, 62 So. 3d 950 (Miss. 2011).

Testimony of defendant's prior cocaine sales was properly admitted as the trial court did a Miss. R. Evid. 403 balancing test and gave the jury a limiting instruction. Long v. State, 33 So. 3d 1122 (Miss. 2010).

In convictions including the possession of, and conspiracy to possess illegal amounts of pseudoephedrine intending to use them in an unlawful manner, an officer's testimony regarding the purchase of cold medicine from pharmacies in a certain area, and his reference to that area as "crystal alley" was not highly prejudicial under Miss. R. Evid. 403. Gales v. State, 29 So. 3d 65 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In defendant's trial on charges of felony possession of cocaine with the intent to sell, transfer, or deliver and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, the trial court did not err in permitting the State to introduce evidence that a bag containing 6.7 grams of cocaine was retrieved from the backseat of defendant's car at the time of his arrest because the evidence painted a complete picture of the events surrounding defendant's arrest and was relevant to show defendant's motive, intent, and plan. Williams v. State, 20 So. 3d 722 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 27 So. 3d 404, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 86 (Miss. 2010).

In defendant's sale of cocaine case, the court properly admitted a buyer's testimony concerning her prior transactions with defendant for the limited purpose of showing intent to distribute because the trial court conducted a balancing test and the court gave a proper limiting instruction to the jury; defendant's intent was a necessary element of his conviction. Phinizee v. State, 983 So. 2d 322 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Officer's testimony about tools of the drug trade found at defendant's residence during the execution of a search warrant was properly admitted because the record showed that a trial court conducted a balancing test to determine if the probative value was substantially outweighed by the prejudicial effect. Stubbs v. State, 878 So. 2d 130 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

In a case involving the manufacturing of methamphetamine, defendant's motion in limine was properly denied because nothing in the record indicated that the admission of photographs, items, and testimony regarding methamphetamine and methamphetamine residue prejudiced the defense or substantially affected defendant's rights; rather, the evidence was properly used to show intent. Halderman v. State, 964 So. 2d 1163 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 964 So. 2d 508, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 527 (Miss. 2007).

Defendant's convictions for two counts of the sale of methadone and one count of the sale of morphine were appropriate under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) and Miss. R. Evid. 403 because testimony from a witness about his prior narcotics dealings with defendant was admissible for purposes of proving intent, motive, and in completing the story of the charged crime. Palmer v. State, 939 So. 2d 792 (Miss. 2006).

In a case involving possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, defendants did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel based on a failure to object to testimony regarding the value and packaging of cocaine and the failure to request a balancing under Miss. R. Evid. 403 regarding evidence of an undercover drug sale; a different result would not have likely resulted based upon the evidence against defendants. Dixon v. State, 953 So. 2d 1117 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), affirmed by 953 So. 2d 1108, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 210 (Miss. 2007).

Defendant's conviction for possession with intent to distribute marijuana was upheld, because the trial court did not err in admitting defendant's prior conviction for sale of cocaine as proof of an intent to distribute under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b), and the trial court correctly gave a limiting instruction in an effort to minimize any prejudice. Clarke v. State, 859 So. 2d 1021 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 404(b), 403, the trial court did not err in admitting the passenger's testimony that the passenger had known defendant for a long time, that defendant regularly dealt drugs, that passenger knew defendant would sell the drugs that the trooper found in the truck, and that the passenger testified about prior drug sales. Smith v. State, 839 So. 2d 489 (Miss. 2003).

In light of the overwhelming weight of evidence in support of the verdict finding defendant guilty of selling cocaine, any error which occurred as a result of an officer's statement about defendant's past criminal history, possibly in violation of Miss. R. Evid. 403, was harmless; also, defendant voluntarily referred to defendant's own past convictions for selling cocaine. Green v. State, 856 So. 2d 396 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Previous involvement with drugs can be admitted on the issue of intent to distribute; thus, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion in limine regarding the exclusion of statements discussing prior bad acts and it properly instructed the jury as to the limits on its consideration of such acts. White v. State, — So. 2d —, 2002 Miss. LEXIS 311 (Miss. Oct. 24, 2002), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 2003 Miss. LEXIS 208 (Miss. Apr. 10, 2003).

The introduction into evidence of a photocopy of money used to buy cocaine was not more prejudicial than probative, notwithstanding the assertion that there was nothing that connected the defendant to the money because it was not found on him when he was arrested, where the state admitted that the money was not on the defendant's person when he was taken into custody and defense counsel more than adequately emphasized this fact in closing argument. Gilley v. State, 748 So. 2d 123 (Miss. 1999).

In a prosecution for possession of marijuana arising from the discovery of marijuana in the defendant's vehicle after a traffic stop in which the defendant asserted that an employee at a car wash that he owned sometimes used his car and might have placed the marijuana there, the trial court did not err in ruling that the probative value of the employee's prior possession of cocaine with intent to distribute was outweighed by its potential for prejudice since, given the toll that cocaine has taken upon society, it was possible that the jury might have been prejudiced to blame a great many crimes upon anyone who profited from this drug. Collins v. State, 734 So. 2d 247 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Evidence of prior sales of drugs, offered to show intent to distribute, is properly admissible if trial court finds its probative value outweighs its prejudicial effect, and if evidence is accompanied by a proper limiting instruction. Smith v. State, 656 So. 2d 95 (Miss. 1995), criticized in Lambert v. State, 1998 Miss. App. LEXIS 673 (Ct. App. Aug. 18, 1998).

— Written documents.

Simple consideration and discussion by a power company of the possible underground installation of power lines was of no moment to the issue of whether the company violated the appropriate standard of care in the overhead installation of its power lines that may have caused a wrongful death by electrocution; an internal memorandum indicating the power company was willing to install lines underground could clearly mislead the jury as to the company's legal obligations under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-27-43, and thus any probative value of this supposed relevant evidence would be outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion of the issues, and misleading the jury. It was proper to exclude that memorandum in a motion in limine. Ware v. Entergy Miss., Inc., 887 So. 2d 763 (Miss. 2003).

Flight.

Given the record in the case, a circuit court did not abuse its discretion by admitting testimony regarding defendant's out-of-state flight because defendant jumped bond in Mississippi and fled to Florida; when authorities in Mississippi learned of defendant's location through, they contacted authorities in Florida only to learn that defendant had posted a cash bond and been released, and defendant was subsequently arrested again in Texas. Dison v. State, 61 So. 3d 975 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Defendant's objection to the admission of evidence that he had jumped bond after being arrested on the ground that it was irrelevant and prejudicial was insufficient to preserve the issue for appeal because defendant's counsel never articulated in his objection that any probative value of the flight evidence was substantially outweighed by its prejudicial effect; while defendant's attorney objected to an officer's testimony as irrelevant, the attorney failed to make any objection regarding Miss. R. Evid. 403 at trial. Dison v. State, 61 So. 3d 975 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Defendant's convictions for aggravated assault and murder were appropriate because the trial court did not err in giving a flight instruction. Defendant's proffered reasons were illogical and contradicted by the evidence and the circumstances surrounding defendant's flight had considerable probative value. Jackson v. State, 28 So. 3d 638 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 27 So. 3d 404, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 85 (Miss. 2010).

Trial court erred in admitting evidence of defendant's escape into defendant's trial for murder; however, this error was harmless because the evidence of flight paled in comparison to more direct evidence of guilt. Shaw v. State, 915 So. 2d 442 (Miss. 2005).

Gang activity.

Defendant's conviction for aggravated assault was appropriate because, although there was no evidence that the incident in the case was gang related, the issue of the admissibility of gang-affiliation evidence to show bias was presented and it was on that basis that the trial judge admitted the evidence of defendant's gang affiliation; that type of evidence was clearly permitted. Additionally, although the trial judge never said that he found the evidence more probative than prejudicial, his implicit determination was sufficient. Dao v. State, 984 So. 2d 352 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 984 So. 2d 277, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 281 (Miss. 2008).

In a murder case, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing the State to present evidence of defendant's involvement in gang activity. In view of the descriptions of behavior and activity by known gang members, it was not too attenuated to believe that there was a connection between the weapon of choice used to kill the victim, here a two-pronged meat fork, and the gang symbol, a pitchfork. Brooks v. State, 905 So. 2d 678 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a capital murder case, the trial judge allowed the statement from the lookout regarding gang membership into evidence after hearing arguments from the parties on the admissibility of the statement; although the trial judge did not state on the record that the testimony would be more probative than prejudicial, both parties were given the opportunity to argue their position. Hudson v. State, 977 So. 2d 344 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 977 So. 2d 1144, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 139 (Miss. 2008).

Insurance.

In a dispute over insurance coverage, the trial court did not abuse its discretion by redacting a prior carpet cleaning receipt and disallowing evidence of flood insurance because the jury would have had to infer that the similarity in cleaning services in 2003 and 2004 was an indication that the damage in both years resulted from the same cause. Additionally, the jury would have had to infer from the fact that the insured made a successful flood insurance claim with a different company in 2004 that the damage in 2004 resulted entirely from a flood and not in part from sewer or drain backup. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Martin, 998 So. 2d 956 (Miss. 2008).

In a medical malpractice action, evidence that a doctor's experts were all members of the same insurer was properly not admitted because the probative value of the evidence that the doctor's experts could incur a financial penalty of $ 136 if the patient was successful on her claim was substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice resulting from the admission of evidence concerning the existence of a liability insurance policy. Wells v. Tucker, 997 So. 2d 908 (Miss. 2008).

Finding against the life insurance company in the beneficiary's action after her claim was denied was proper in part because the training of agents who solicited answers from prospective insureds that might result in material misrepresentations was pertinent to the resolution of the issues of the case; thus, the trial judge did not abuse his discretion by allowing the testimony. United Am. Ins. Co. v. Merrill, 978 So. 2d 613 (Miss. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 552 U.S. 1185, 128 S. Ct. 1257, 170 L. Ed. 2d 68, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 1280, 76 U.S.L.W. 3439 (2008).

Circuit court abused its discretion when it applied the Miss. R. Evid. 403 balancing test where, if the circuit court believed that the jury knew about the presence of insurance for the physician, then there could be no prejudicial effect in placing it before the jury; the evidence that the physician and his experts all belonged to the same mutual insurance company had some probative value and there would have been no prejudice in allowing the jury to hear that the physician had insurance. Wells v. Tucker, 997 So. 2d 925 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), reversed by 997 So. 2d 908, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 480 (Miss. 2008).

Defendant's capital murder convictions were proper where testimony admitted by one of the decedent's sister involving an insurance scam with defendant was correctly admitted pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 403, 404(b), and 804(b)(5) because the declarant was unavailable and because the trial court analyzed the five requirements for admission of the hearsay pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 803(24) and determined that it was trustworthy and material to the case. Rubenstein v. State, — So. 2d —, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 789 (Miss. Dec. 1, 2005), opinion withdrawn by 2006 Miss. LEXIS 424 (Miss. Aug. 10, 2006), substituted opinion at, remanded by 941 So. 2d 735, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 411 (Miss. 2006).

In a medical malpractice action, the plaintiff was properly precluded, on the basis of undue prejudice, from eliciting during cross-examination that two defense experts both had their medical malpractice insurance coverage through the same company as the defendant and that the company operated as a mutual insurance company. Toche v. Killebrew, 734 So. 2d 276 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Money.

Sum of $2,700 in cash found at scene of arrest made it more likely that defendants were involved in drug-dealing, and evidence was therefore relevant; the evidence was not prejudicial, as defendants were not convicted of intent to transfer but only of possession. Haddox v. State, 636 So. 2d 1229 (Miss. 1994).

In a criminal trial for burglary and larceny of a dwelling, the complainant testified that currency was stolen from her house, including bills from the 1950's that once belonged to her grandmother; the trial court did not err by admitting photocopies of pre-1959 currency that defendant exchanged at the travel agency, and the evidence was more probative than prejudicial. Sandefer v. State, 952 So. 2d 281 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Evidence of bank bag and its contents was relevant in that it had a great impact upon credibility of murder defendant's story that he had been robbed, and probative value of evidence substantially outweighed any legally cognizable prejudice. Jackson v. State, 551 So. 2d 132 (Miss. 1989).

Other crimes.

Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) exceptions are, indeed, subject to a Miss. R. Evid. 403 balancing test. Pitchford v. State, 45 So. 3d 216 (Miss. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 131 S. Ct. 2098, 179 L. Ed. 2d 897, 2011 U.S. LEXIS 3058, 79 U.S.L.W. 3592 (U.S. 2011).

Defendant's conviction for burglary was inappropriate because the prosecutor impermissibly used defendant's prior conviction for attempted grand larceny as evidence of defendant's predisposition to steal to prove the element of intent of the indicted offense. Although the circuit court cited Miss. R. Evid. 609 as the basis for admitting evidence of the prior conviction, the record reflected no findings reflecting any consideration of the Peterson factors and without those findings, the appellate court was unable to discern that the circuit court found that the probative value of the prior conviction outweighed the R. 609 presumed prejudicial effect to defendant. Robinson v. State, 42 So. 3d 598 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Defendant's murder convictions were proper because testimony regarding his prior threats against one of the victim, his former girlfriend, and his previous arrest for domestic violence were properly admitted into evidence. The evidence was relevant for the impeachment of a prior statement made by defendant, as well as relevant evidence of defendant's motive, intent, knowledge, and preparation. Madden v. State, 42 So. 3d 566 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari dismissed by 49 So. 3d 106, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 460 (Miss. 2010).

Testimony by a narcotics agent and a confidential informant (CI) explained why petitioner state inmate was being investigated and how the state came to use the CI (one of her narcotics customers) against her; it was admissible under Miss. R. Evid. 403, 404(b), thus, counsel was not ineffective for objecting and habeas relief had been inappropriate. Brooks v. Kelly, 579 F.3d 521 (5th Cir. 2009).

In defendant's trial on charges of armed robbery, kidnapping, and possession of a firearm as a convicted felon, evidence that defendant was in a stolen vehicle when arrested was properly introduced to explain why he was arrested, how his picture came to be part of the photograph lineup, and how he ultimately was linked with the crimes charged. Furthermore, this evidence was essential to provide the jury with a complete story of the events that led to the identification of defendant as the person who perpetrated the crimes charged. Williams v. State, 991 So. 2d 593 (Miss. 2008).

While a witness's use of a victim's bank card possessed a tendency to establish a motive or intent for his involvement in the crime, for purposes of Miss. R. Evid. 401, the exact number of withdrawals and/or the exact amount actually withdrawn by the witness was not a fact of consequence to the determination of the case, and even if determined relevant, the evidence would have been properly excluded under Miss. R. Evid. 403, and this evidence was properly excluded under Miss. R. Evid. 402. Williams v. State, 994 So. 2d 808 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 998 So. 2d 1010, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 665 (Miss. 2008).

In defendant's aggravated assault case, a court properly allowed evidence of defendant's assault on the victim, which occurred the day before the charged incident, because his actions were relevant to his motive for tracking the victim down and assaulting her again the following day, they pertained to the continuing act of violence to the extent that defendant ultimately accomplished a series of interrelated criminal acts, and the evidence was not offered to show defendant's character, but was offered as part of the very actions for which he was indicted. In addition, the evidence of the prior incident was properly admitted as its probative value was not substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion of the issues, or misleading the jury. Jones v. State, 920 So. 2d 465 (Miss. 2006).

Where proof of other crimes or acts of a defendant is offered into evidence pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 404(b), it is still subject to the requirement that its probative value substantially outweigh the danger of unfair prejudice under Miss. R. Evid. 403. Jones v. State, 913 So. 2d 436 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Other lawsuits.

Tire manufacturer, in attacking the credibility of the plaintiff's tire expert in a products liability suit by referring to his testimony in previous defective tire cases, opened the door to testimony by the expert in other cases where the tire manufacturer had been sued for the manufacture of defective tires, from which testimony the jurors could draw inferences as to the tire manufacturer's fault in those cases. Cooper Tire & Rubber Co. v. Tuckier, 826 So. 2d 679 (Miss. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 820, 123 S. Ct. 97, 154 L. Ed. 2d 27 (2002).

Trial court in action arising from automobile accident did not err in permitting defendant to show that plaintiff had made the same claims against another driver with whom she was involved in an accident six months after collision with defendant. Brake v. Speed, 605 So. 2d 28 (Miss. 1992).

Photographs.

It was within the trial judge's discretion to determine that a photograph of handcuffs in defendant's car was relevant, and the trial judge did not abuse his discretion when he decided that the danger of unfair prejudice did not substantially outweigh that probative value because the photograph had probative value; the presence of the handcuffs in defendant's car was offered to show that on his trips to "look for women," defendant was not looking for consensual relationships, and the presence of handcuffs made it more probable that defendant grabbed the victim with the intent to kidnap her. Tucker v. State, 64 So. 3d 594 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Defendant's convictions for capital murder during the commission of a robbery were proper because the admission of autopsy photographs was not erroneous. A few of the photographs were introduced to show the initial state of the victims' bodies as received by the doctor, and the remainder depicted different parts of the victims' bodies to illustrate the various injuries they suffered; the photographs were not repetitive since each depicted different injuries and the probative value was substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. Gillett v. State, 56 So. 3d 469 (Miss. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 132 S. Ct. 844, 181 L. Ed. 2d 552, 2011 U.S. LEXIS 8944, 80 U.S.L.W. 3355 (U.S. 2011).

Photographs of victim's shooting wounds, which were used to help the jury better understand the testimony of the doctor and the circumstances and cause of the shooting, were relevant pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 403, as their probative value was not substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, and regardless, defendant failed to raise a contemporaneous objection and therefore couuld not raise his objection on appeal. Barfield v. State, 22 So. 3d 1175 (Miss. 2009).

Defendant's convictions for capital murder, aggravated assault, and conspiracy to commit aggravated assault were appropriate because the victim's autopsy photographs were admissible since their probative value was not outweighed by any danger of undue prejudice and since there was a meaningful evidentiary purpose. Williams v. State, 3 So. 3d 105 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court did not err in admitting photographs of the murder victims into evidence because (1) the photographs had probative value; (2) they aided in describing the circumstances of the killing, in describing the location of the body and cause of death, or in supplementing or clarifying the testimony of a witness; and (3) their probative value was not substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. Chamberlin v. State, 989 So. 2d 320 (Miss. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 555 U.S. 1106, 129 S. Ct. 908, 173 L. Ed. 2d 122, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 495, 77 U.S.L.W. 3397 (2009).

To convict a defendant of trafficking in stolen firearms, the State did not need to enter the actual firearms into evidence as (1) there was no best evidence rule with regard to physical evidence that was not writings, recordings, or photographs; (2) requiring the State to offer actual firearms into evidence would impose a high burden on prosecutors and the courts in cases where there were large quantities of physical evidence; and (3) the State satisfied the relevancy and authentication requirements permitting the photographs of the firearms to be introduced into evidence. Riley v. State, 1 So. 3d 877 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 999 So. 2d 1280, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 2009).

In an aggravated assault case under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-7(2), the trial court did not abuse its discretion by finding that the probative value of the photographs of the victim's injury outweighed any danger of unfair prejudice as they were relevant to prove that defendant used means likely to produce death or serious bodily harm, and they were small and blurry and not particularly gruesome. Ford v. State, 975 So. 2d 859 (Miss. 2008).

At defendant's trial for capital murder during the commission of a robbery, the circuit court did not abuse its discretion in admitting pictures of the crime scene. Applying the Miss. R. Evid. 403 test, the court found that the probative value of the photographs was not substantially outweighed by their prejudicial effect; each photograph had a meaningful evidentiary purpose. Dampier v. State, 973 So. 2d 221 (Miss. 2008).

Allowing a photograph taken of the sixth-month old victim while she was alive into evidence was not an error; the photograph was not intended to inflame the jury, but rather to identify the victim, and the purpose of identity fell under the categories of admissible photographs. Also, any error by the trial judge in failing to perform a Miss. R. Evid. 403 balancing test to determine if the evidence was admissible was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt because the probative value of the relevant evidence of the photograph was not substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. Havard v. State, 928 So. 2d 771 (Miss. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 549 U.S. 1119, 127 S. Ct. 931, 166 L. Ed. 2d 716, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 153, 75 U.S.L.W. 3350 (2007).

Crime scene photograph was relevant within the meaning of Miss. R. Evid. 401, Miss. R. Evid. 402, and Miss. R. Evid. 403, as it was not prejudicial to defendant in any way. Bradley v. State, 948 So. 2d 506 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a capital murder case, autopsy photographs of a victim who was shot multiple times in the head, neck, and shoulder were admissible because their probative value outweighed the prejudice; they were used to corroborate the testimony of an officer who found the body and to support the theory that the victim had been thrown from a vehicle after the shooting. Ramsey v. State, 959 So. 2d 15 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 958 So. 2d 1232, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 588 (Miss. 2007).

In a murder case, photographs of the victim lying in a doorway and closeups of the victim's head were properly admitted under Miss. R. Evid. 403; they were not cumulative, nor did the potential for prejudice outweigh the probative value where the pictures were at different angles, and it was not possible to get all the information in a single picture. Jones v. State, 938 So. 2d 312 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Admission of photographs of the victim in a murder case was not an abuse of discretion because they were not overly gruesome and they were relevant to show that defendant killed the victim, as they depicted the circumstances of the shooting, the location of the body, and the cause of death, and they supplemented and clarified testimony regarding the location of the wounds, the trajectory of the bullets, the number of the bullets, and the cause and manner of death. Cotton v. State, 933 So. 2d 1048 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In defendant's trial for the sale of cocaine and marijuana to an undercover officer, the trial court did not abuse its discretion under Miss. R. Evid. 401 and 403 in excluding photographs that showed defendant with long braided hair because the photographs were untimely in relation to the drug sale. Defendant's mother testified that defendant could have changed his hairstyle between the months when the photographs were taken and the drug transaction. Johnson v. State, 908 So. 2d 100 (Miss. 2005).

In a capital murder case, a trial court did not abuse its discretion by allowing the admission of photographs depicting victims of a homicide by beating because they were used by an expert to demonstrate what was found at the crime scene, the types of injuries involved, and to explain a diagram; moreover, defendant failed to show that any prejudice resulted therefrom. Le v. State, 913 So. 2d 913 (Miss. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 546 U.S. 1004, 126 S. Ct. 622, 163 L. Ed. 2d 508, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 8254, 74 U.S.L.W. 3288 (2005).

In defendant's criminal prosecution for murdering his wife's ex-boyfriend, the trial court did not err in admitting photographs of the victim and crime scene, regardless of their gruesome nature. The photographs were probative and relevant, because they revealed the position and location of the victim's body. Roland v. State, 882 So. 2d 262 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Defendant's conviction for capital murder was proper where the trial court properly balanced the probative value and prejudice of photographs of the victim's body and the crime-scene videotape as required by Miss. R. Evid. 403. Brink v. State, 888 So. 2d 437 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 888 So. 2d 1177 (Miss. 2004), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 125 S. Ct. 1858, 161 L. Ed. 2d 744 (2005).

Defense counsel's failure to object to the admission of autopsy photographs did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel; the evidence showed that the pictures were not particularly gruesome, and their probative value outweighed any prejudicial effect that they might have had. Johnson v. State, 876 So. 2d 387 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 66 (Miss. 2004).

Because the photographs of the crime scene objected to at trial concerned the angle of the projectile, a crucial element of the State's proof regarding who had shot the victims, the prejudicial value or prejudicial effect of the photographs was outweighed by their probative value as evidence. Anderson v. State, 856 So. 2d 650 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial court did not err in admitting into evidence a gruesome photograph of the crime scene because it was admitted to corroborate the testimony of the State's witnesses and it depicted the criminal agency used to effect the death of the decedent; the prejudicial effect did not outweigh the probative nature of the photograph. Martin v. State, 854 So. 2d 1004 (Miss. 2003).

Photograph of the victim's exhumed body was properly admitted where the trial court conducted a Miss. R. Evid. 403 balancing on the record, and did not abuse its discretion in finding that the photograph possessed probative value, and that such value outweighed any potential prejudice; defendant's argument that the admission of the photograph through the victim's girlfriend was intended to arouse the passions and sympathies of the jury was rejected as the State had attempted to introduce the photograph through a police investigator, to which defendant had objected, and the girlfriend was a proper witness to identify the distinguishing tattoos depicted in the photograph. Roy v. State, 878 So. 2d 84 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

In admitting photographs of the victim's injuries which, although unpleasant, were not gruesome, and demonstrated the severity of the victim's injuries on the night of the assault, trial judge did not abuse his discretion. Smith v. State, 792 So. 2d 343 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Photographs of a murder victim were properly introduced into evidence, notwithstanding the contention that they were gruesome and that their prejudicial effect outweighed their probative value, since (1) the photographs were unpleasant, but not so gruesome, and (2) the photographs had considerable probative value. Jackson v. State, 784 So. 2d 180 (Miss. 2001), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1139, 122 S. Ct. 1088, 151 L. Ed. 2d 987 (2002).

In a prosecution for armed robbery and possession of a concealed weapon by a convicted felon, it was not error for the court to permit the introduction of a photograph of the defendant holding a gun similar to the gun wielded in the robbery where (1) the defendant did not possess the gun when the police apprehended him, (2) the gun that the police recovered in close proximity to the place where they apprehended him did not bear his fingerprints, and (3) the court cut from the photographs two other individuals, one of whom was making a gesture associated with a certain gang. Grant v. State, 762 So. 2d 800 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

In a prosecution for the sale of cocaine in which the core of the defense was the issue of mistaken identity, the court erred when it refused to allow the introduction into evidence of two photographs of the defendant taken about 16 months after the crime and 3 1/2 months before trial; the photographs were straight-forward chest-up photographs clearly depicting the defendant's facial characteristics at close range in a well-lighted setting, and the photographs could not have any tendency to confuse the jury as it deliberated the central issue of the case. Bennett v. State, 757 So. 2d 1074 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

In a prosecution for murder, there was no error in the introduction into evidence of photographs of the murder victim where (1) there was nothing in the record to indicate that the admission of the photographs was simply a ploy on the part of the prosecutor to arouse the passion and prejudice of the jury, (2) the photographs established that the victim was dead as a result of a criminal act, and the extent, position, and nature of the wounds the victim sustained, and (3) the photographs assisted the jury in visualizing the crime scene and corroborated the testimony of the investigators of the crime scene. Humphrey v. State, 759 So. 2d 368 (Miss. 2000).

Two photographs of a murder victim taken at the scene of the crime were properly admitted into evidence, notwithstanding the contention that their probative value was substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, where the pathologist who performed the autopsy used both of the pictures to describe the victim's injuries to the jury and to explain the position of the victim's body at the time the shots were fired and since this was a perfectly acceptable method of presenting evidence to the jury concerning the manner in which the victim met her death and was entirely pertinent to the issues of fact that the jury was expected to resolve. Williams v. State, 738 So. 2d 308 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Photographs of a murder victim's body formed the sequence in which the police recovery team uncovered her body, and as such, formed a progressive view of the crime scene and the investigation into the cause and circumstance of her death; thus, taking these photos as a whole, it was clear that they were not so gruesome and devoid of probative value as to demonstrate an abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court judge in admitting them. Hughes v. State, 735 So. 2d 238 (Miss. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1083, 120 S. Ct. 807, 145 L. Ed. 2d 680, (2000).

In a prosecution for murder, it was not error for the court to permit the introduction of photographs of the victim, including autopsy pictures, since (1) while there was nothing pleasant about the pictures, they were neither gruesome nor inflammatory, nor were they overdramatized by their enlargement, and (2) all of the photographs complained of had significant evidentiary value, whose probative value was increased by enlargement. Watts v. State, 733 So. 2d 214 (Miss. 1999).

Photographs of the two murder victims were properly admitted into evidence, despite the contention that they were unduly prejudicial, where (1) the trial judge closely reviewed the evidence and carefully weighed the probative value of the evidence against its potential of prejudicing the defendant by inflaming minds of the jury, and (2) the photographs were deemed necessary evidence to corroborate the testimony of the witnesses and were not offered as a "ploy" on the part of the prosecutor to arouse the passion and prejudice of the jury. Jordan v. State, 728 So. 2d 1088 (Miss. 1998), cert. denied, 527 U.S. 1026, 119 S. Ct. 2375, 144 L. Ed. 2d 778 (1999).

Based on numerous prior cases permitting introduction of photographs, and almost unlimited discretion afforded trial judge in Mississippi, judge did not abuse his discretion in admitting photographs of murder victim. Doss v. State, 709 So. 2d 369 (Miss. 1996), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1111, 118 S. Ct. 1684, 140 L. Ed. 2d 821 (1998).

The court did not abuse its discretion when it permitted the admission of several photographs of the murder victim since the photographs were necessary to illustrate the position of the body, wounds, and the relation to other fixtures at the scene where evidence was found. Doss v. State, 709 So. 2d 369 (Miss. 1996), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1111, 118 S. Ct. 1684, 140 L. Ed. 2d 821 (1998).

It was not error for the court in a murder prosecution to permit the introduction of photographs of the victim since the pictures were not particularly gruesome or inflammatory so as to shock or prejudice the jury and since the photographs were all relevant to show the victim's injuries and to help the jury visualize the crime and crime scene, corroborating the testimony of the investigators and partially corroborating the defendant's confession. Underwood v. State, 708 So. 2d 18 (Miss. 1998).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in admitting six 4″ x 6″ color photographs depicting fatal stab wounds to murder victims; photographs were neither gruesome nor inflammatory, and showed only immediate areas of wounds. Jackson v. State, 684 So. 2d 1213 (Miss. 1996), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1215, 117 S. Ct. 1703, 137 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1997).

Defendant's murder conviction was proper where the admission of photographs of the victim served both to show the location of the remains and to supplement witness testimony concerning the location of the remains; the photographs were not so repetitive as to lose their probative value and the trial judge clearly considered the potential danger of prejudice but found that it was outweighed by the probative value of the photographs. Savell v. State, 928 So. 2d 961 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Prejudice found.

It was improper to allow testimony lumping the corporation, based on its size, into a hypothetical with other large companies that may have a history of intimidating and deceiving regulatory agencies; from the expert's line of testimony, the jury easily could have been misled into believing that the corporation was guilty of covering up alleged regulatory violations, and under a Miss. R. Evid. 403 balancing test, the expert's testimony was more prejudicial to the corporation than probative; there existed a real danger that the testimony would unfairly prejudice the corporation and mislead the jury with the accusations of hypothetical regulatory violations by the corporation. E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Co. v. Strong, 968 So. 2d 410 (Miss. 2007).

Evidence that a child victim had allegedly caused injuries to his own rectum by sticking objects there was properly excluded in a sexual battery case because it was irrelevant under Miss. R. Evid. 401 and highly prejudicial under Miss. R. Evid. 403, and it was also a collateral issue that was too remote in time to rebut the charges based on the fact that it was a year before the charges in an indictment; case law under Miss. R. Evid. 412 was helpful in making this determination, despite the fact that the victim's actions did not constitute clear sexual activity. Mason v. State, 971 So. 2d 618 (Miss. Ct. App.

2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 973 So. 2d 244, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 701 (Miss. 2007).

Defendant's sole reason for attempting to present to the jury evidence of a witness's mental condition — schizophrenia and bipolar illness — was for impeachment purposes; however, the facts of the case supported a finding that, if the trial court had allowed defendant's attorney to cross-examine the witness before the jury about the witness's mental condition, the evidence would not have supported defendant's theory that the witness hallucinated. Thus, the trial court was within its discretion to exclude the evidence because the prejudicial value of the evidence outweighed the probative value. Jackson v. State, 924 So. 2d 531 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 927 So. 2d 750, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 175 (Miss. 2006).

Trial court erred in ruling that defendant's prior aggravated assault conviction could be admitted in his trial for aggravated assault if he testified; the evidence was more prejudicial than probative, but defendant never proffered what he would testify to if he testified, and as a result, the error was harmless in light of the overwhelming weight of the evidence against defendant. Walker v. State, 936 So. 2d 424 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Admission of a towel allegedly stained with defendant's semen was improper in a statutory rape case because, although the evidence was admissible under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b), it was not authenticated or conclusively linked to defendant through biological testing. Walker v. State, 878 So. 2d 913 (Miss. 2004).

While trial court erred in admitting evidence of defendant's prior convictions due to the similarity of those offenses to the crime for which he was being tried and the prejudice that would likely make the jury infer present guilt from past convictions for a similar offense, the error was harmless given other evidence including defendant's confession to the crime. Triplett v. State, 881 So. 2d 303 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Defendant's conviction for burglary was reversed, and the matter was remanded for a new trial; while evidence of defendant's other convictions of burglary and burglary-related crimes could be admissible to show his intent, simply allowing the circuit clerk to read the convictions was improper as the jury could rely on the evidence to determine that defendant should be convicted because he had a character trait or propensity to commit burglary. Jones v. State, 905 So. 2d 644 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a prosecution for murder in which there was evidence of three confessions made by the defendant around the time of the crime, evidence of other later confessions made to police in another state was more prejudicial than probative and should have been excluded as such later confessions would permit the jury to believe that the defendant was at some time in another state under circumstances requiring his arrest. Odom v. State, 769 So. 2d 189 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Trial court erroneously permitted witness to testify that he was offered money to kill victim for purpose of preventing victim from testifying against defendant's eventual co-conspirator; existence of conspiracy between defendant and his co-conspirator had not yet been established, and neither witness nor co-conspirator were on trial, and thus this blatantly irrelevant evidence served to unduly prejudice defendant and confuse issues put before the jury. Stewart v. State, 662 So. 2d 552 (Miss. 1995).

Amount plaintiff received in settlement for injury in prior automobile accident was totally unconnected with injury sustained in accident being tried, and trial court erroneously admitted testimony regarding other settlement, since such evidence was substantially outweighed by danger of unfair prejudice. Jones v. Wiese, 652 So. 2d 175 (Miss. 1995).

Admission of officer's testimony that reason he was first suspicious of defendant's car was that a car fitting that description had recently been stolen, and that shooting had taken place at residence where defendant's car was first observed, constituted reversible error; his testimony was unduly prejudicial, and there was no reason for him to explain his presence on public roads in a position to observe defendant's car, and his subsequent investigation after learning that the car had an improper tag. Sample v. State, 643 So. 2d 524 (Miss. 1994).

Officer's testimony that description on radio dispatch alerted him to look for defendant and his truck had substantial probative value, and risk of undue prejudice— that jury would assume officer suspected defendant because of his involvement in other crimes— was purely speculative. Ellis v. State, 667 So. 2d 599 (Miss. 1995).

Detailed testimony of State's pathologist, on condition of victim's body at the time of autopsy and on the cause of death, was relevant to several aspects of State's case, and was not more prejudicial than probative. Walker v. State, 671 So. 2d 581 (Miss. 1995), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1011, 117 S. Ct. 518, 136 L. Ed. 2d 406 (1996).

Defendant's statement that victim would have to be killed and her house burned was probative to show defendant was involved in robbery and she feared discovery, and prejudicial effect of this testimony did not outweigh its probative value. Ballenger v. State, 667 So. 2d 1242 (Miss. 1995), cert. denied, 518 U.S. 1025, 116 S. Ct. 2565, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1082 (1996), reh'g denied, 518 U.S. 1048, 117 S. Ct. 26, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1119 (1996).

Prejudice not found.

Defendant's conviction for robbery by use of a deadly weapon was appropriate because the sparse reference by the State to defendant's possible gang membership was not part of the State's case-in-chief; the evidence had some probative weight; its probative value substantially outweighed the danger of unfair prejudice; and limited statements about gang membership went to show possible motive, opportunity, intent, or preparation. Pritchett v. State, 32 So. 3d 545 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

In a case in which defendant appealed his conviction for violating Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-7(2)(a), he unsuccessfully argued that the trial court erred in allowing the victim's wife to testify about an encounter she and defendant had months after the incident. Defendant contended that the wife's testimony was not relevant, and its prejudicial effect outweighed its probative value in violation of Miss. R. Evid. 403, but the evidence was offered to show defendant's state of mind on the day of the assault; the trial court weighed the probative value of the evidence against the potential for undue prejudice. David v. State, 29 So. 3d 129 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Finding in favor of a trucking company and truck driver in a wrongful-death action brought by the decedent's widow was proper because the trial court did not err in not excluding the testimony of the decedent's friend concerning the decedent's alleged making, using, or selling methamphetamine before the accident since the testimony was relevant and concerned the type of activity that the decedent was involved in prior to the accident and what impact that activity might have had on the decedent's alertness at the time of the accident. The probative value outweighed the prejudicial effect because it concerned the issue of proximate cause and potential fault. Utz v. Running & Rolling Trucking, Inc., 32 So. 3d 450 (Miss. 2010).

In defendant's trial for false pretenses, the introduction into evidence of bank statements properly fell under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) exceptions of knowledge and intent, and under Miss. R. Evid. 403, the evidence was not overly prejudicial as the bank record did not include any information regarding other indictments, it was accompanied by a limiting instruction and the prosecutor did not emphasize any other bounced checks. Lyles v. State, 12 So. 3d 532 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

During defendant's trial for possession of cocaine, a defense witness testified that she did not see defendant throw any drugs on the ground; during cross-examination, the prosecutor questioned the witness about her son's murder conviction, eliciting testimony that he himself had been the prosecutor at her son's murder trial. The trial court correctly permitted the State's cross-examination because it was relevant to show the defense witness's possible bias against the State; admission of the testimony did not violate Miss. R. Evid. 403, because the jury was given a limiting instruction. Butler v. State, 19 So. 3d 111 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 19 So. 3d 82, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 490 (Miss. 2009).

In a prosecution for selling cocaine to an undercover informant, defendant's prior conviction for possessing cocaine within 1,500 feet of a school was admissible in accordance with Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) with respect to intent as well as Miss. R. Evid. 609 to impeach defendant's claim of a set-up and law enforcement conspiracy. The trial judge conducted a Peterson analysis and a Miss. R. Evid. 403 balancing test on the record. Young v. State, 13 So. 3d 339 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Trial court properly employed the two-part analysis for admissibility under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) and the balancing test required by Miss. R. Evid. 403 in admitting evidence of defendant's acts prior to the murder; the challenged testimony was relevant and probative, establishing that defendant and the victim were together less than half an hour before the victim's body was discovered and placing the murder weapon in defendant's hands shortly before the shooting. Welde v. State, 3 So. 3d 113 (Miss. 2009).

In a capital murder trial, the trial court did not err in admitting the expert testimony of a forensic pathologist because his opinion testimony was based upon his observations of the victim's body, facts made known to him, and his observations of anatomical drawings and photographs at trial. Because the pathologist testified that he had reviewed the victim's medical records and was able to reach an opinion with a reasonable degree of medical certainty as to the cause and manner of the victim's death, his testimony was relevant and was not unfairly prejudicial or confusing. Dixon v. State, 17 So. 3d 1099 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 17 So. 3d 99, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 451 (Miss. 2009).

Evidence offered against defendant made the State's case more probable than it would have been without the evidence, and the probative value of the evidence outweighed any prejudice to defendant; the semen evidence corroborated the victim's testimony that she had sex with defendant the day before being taken to the hospital, and that same testimony of the victim connected the semen recovered to defendant, and as such, the trial judge did not abuse his discretion in allowing the State to present the semen evidence. Stevenson v. State, 13 So. 3d 314 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 14 So. 3d 731, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 360 (Miss. 2009).

In an embezzlement case, the trial court did not err in allowing the testimonies of three witnesses who testified that they gave defendant money with the understanding that defendant would procure a vehicle for them; the testimonies regarding defendant's prior bad acts were not so prejudicial as to outweigh the probative value. Wilson v. State, 12 So. 3d 8 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 14 So. 3d 731, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 306 (Miss. 2009).

At a trial for burglary of a dwelling and attempted rape, testimony that defendant was seen masturbating in a public place two to three hours before the incident in question was admissible because the evidence: (1) went to establish defendant's motive, state of mind, intent, and plan; and (2) was not unduly prejudicial in light of all the evidence produced at trial. Johnson v. State, 994 So. 2d 831 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 998 So. 2d 1010, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 632 (Miss. 2008).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by allowing the prosecution to display the injured child to the jury because: (1) under Miss. Const. Art. 3, § 26A and Miss. Code Ann. § 99-43-21 (Rev. 2007), the victim had the right to be present and be heard during the criminal proceedings; (2) the State was required to offer proof of serious bodily injury in order to convict defendant of aggravated assault; and (3) the probative value of the jury's viewing the child's injuries was not substantially outweighed by unfair prejudice to defendant. Harris v. State, 979 So. 2d 721 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

When considering "other crime" evidence concerning drug activity and drugs being found in the possession of defendant, as well as the fact that the police were familiar with defendant because of past juvenile matters, the probative value of this relevant evidence was not substantially outweighed by danger of unfair prejudice, and thus the trial judge did not abuse her discretion in allowing it. Givens v. State, 967 So. 2d 1 (Miss. 2007).

When the state introduced evidence of a struggle between defendant and police officers in a pool hall, where a bag of marijuana fell out of defendant's sleeve, the evidence was admissible under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) because the evidence showed intent, motive, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, absence of mistake or accident, or opportunity, and the evidence was not more prejudicial than probative, under Miss. R. Evid. 403. Williams v. State, 962 So. 2d 129 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Admission of defendant's shirt and gun were relevant to the issue of identity and were not too remote in space nor time; the shirt and gun were similar to the description given by the victims and defendant admittedly wore the shirt and possessed the gun during the time in question. Jackson v. State, 969 So. 2d 124 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Information regarding the decedent's condition prior to the alleged negligence by the nursing home would certainly be relevant to determine whether or not the decedent had indeed suffered new and distinct injuries at the hand of either of the owners; thus, it was proper for defense counsel to question the similarities of these damages to determine whether or not they were actually caused by a third party. Beverly Enters. v. Reed, 961 So. 2d 40 (Miss. 2007).

Theft evidence, though not linked to any specific materials and, therefore insufficient to defeat the seller's proof of delivery, was probative of whether the seller had over-billed the seller for materials purchases. Given the broad discretion afforded to the trial court in conducting a Miss. R. Evid. 403 balancing test, the appellate court found that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that the theft evidence was not substantially prejudicial to warrant its exclusion. Natchez Elec. & Supply Co. v. Johnson, 968 So. 2d 444 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), reversed by 2007 Miss. LEXIS 20 (Miss. Jan. 18, 2007).

In trying appellant for attempted burglary, a trial court did not err in instructing the jury that it could consider appellant's prior felony convictions as motive when they had not been introduced for that purpose, as the instruction that was given was a correct statement of law, and pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 404(b), evidence of appellant's prior felony convictions, while not admissible to prove his character, was admissible to show his intent or motive; moreover, as the trial court had already made a Miss. R. Evid. 403 analysis and admitted the evidence, it could not be fairly argued that appellant was prejudiced by the trial court's silence to support the additional exception granted by the very same evidentiary rule, and thus any perceived error was harmless. Carter v. State, 953 So. 2d 224 (Miss. 2007).

In a trial for statutory rape, evidence that defendant had asked the victim to don a white t-shirt, and nothing else, on other occasions was inadmissible to prove defendant guilty of the charge; however, the trial court properly ruled that the evidence was more probative than prejudicial. Miley v. State, 935 So. 2d 998 (Miss. 2006).

In a capital murder case, a court properly admitted photographs of defendant's tattooed body where part of the defense was that he killed the victim in self-defense; however, had defendant been engaged in self-defense, it would likely have resulted in injuries greater than the bruise he suffered on his hand, and therefore, the photographs were relevant. Further, they were not prejudicial because they did not depict gruesome images that would inflame the mind of the jury. Spicer v. State, 921 So. 2d 292 (Miss. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 549 U.S. 993, 127 S. Ct. 493, 166 L. Ed. 2d 364, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 8022, 75 U.S.L.W. 3233 (2006).

As to evidence of proof of another crime under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b),the trial court was not required to issue a limiting instruction sua sponte.Further, where the evidence against defendant was overwhelming in the subject assault case, the trial court's failure to have conducted an on the record balancing test was harmless error. Richardson v. State, 911 So. 2d 1026 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in admitting a witness's testimony that defendant was present at a drug transaction in which the witness pawned her car to and purchased crack cocaine from a person who then asked defendant to drive the witness home, which he did, but instead of returning with the car, defendant kept it for himself. The evidence was necessary to establish defendant's dominion and control over the car and counter his testimony that he had just borrowed the car and had no knowledge of what was in it, and was admissible under Miss. R. Evid. 403 because its probative value outweighed any potential for prejudice. Nelson v. State, 914 So. 2d 265 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In an appeal of a manslaughter conviction, the judgment was affirmed because the trial judge did not commit reversible error in admitting photographs into evidence without first conducting an on-the-record balancing test under Miss. R. Evid. 403 as a trial court's failure to perform a Rule 403 balancing test on the record was harmless error. Sheppard v. State, 910 So. 2d 1182 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Admission of the evidence of the anchorperson's subsequent job performance was appropriate in her breach of contract claim pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 401 and 403 because that evidence was relevant to disprove the corporation's contention that the anchorperson was fired for cause. Morris Newspaper Corp. v. Allen, — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 1189 (Miss. Ct. App. Oct. 12, 2004).

State credibly presented the evidence regarding race to show defendant's intent to commit the crime of embezzlement and the testimony was critical to establishing the witness's credibility, and for showing how defendant induced that witness into conducting business outside the car dealership where he worked. There were no loathsome, inflammatory racial slurs and in reviewing the complete testimony in context, the probative value of the evidence outweighed any potential prejudice, and did not exhibit a tendency to move the jury to decide the case on an improper basis; the testimony was properly admitted as relevant as it showed the existence of a plan, helped to present the complete picture of defendant's conduct to the jury, and did not unduly prejudice defendant. Bell v. State, 910 So. 2d 640 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Finding in favor of the patient in his medical malpractice action was improper where the trial court erred in preventing the words "curse" and "witchcraft" from being used at trial because the probative value of exploring the origin and/or source, cause, and extent of his emotional distress, mental anguish, and psychological injury, outweighed the danger of unfair prejudice. Blake v. Clein, 903 So. 2d 710 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court did not err in allowing the limited possession evidence into evidence at defendant's trial for charges of distribution of cocaine, as the trial court balanced the weight of the evidence under Miss. R. Evid. 403 and found that it was relevant to show the existence of a plan, and the jury was given a limiting instruction to minimize any prejudice to defendant. Nobles v. State, 879 So. 2d 1067 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in admitting a statement that defendant had used the money from the robbery to buy crack cocaine as the testimony went to motive and it was not prejudicial. Mayo v. State, 886 So. 2d 734 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 887 So. 2d 183 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court did not err in admitting evidence that defendant planned an attempted robbery at another restaurant; the trial judge properly followed the required procedure, found that the evidence was more probative than prejudicial, and instructed the jury not to consider the testimony as a substitute for proof that defendant committed the robbery. Powell v. State, 878 So. 2d 144 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

In a prosecution for aggravated assault under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-7, the trial court did not err in allowing evidence regarding an altercation between defendant and the victim prior to the assault; the altercation, allegedly a prior bad act, was properly admitted to establish motive pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 404(b), and the probative value of the evidence outweighed the prejudice caused under Miss. R. Evid. 403. Brown v. State, 864 So. 2d 1009 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court, in order to make a well-informed decision regarding defendant's guilt, had to let the jury understand the circumstances surrounding the search that discovered the cocaine, and information regarding the existing warrant was necessary to achieve this end; the jury was made aware of a warrant for defendant's arrest, but jurors were not informed of the specific reason for the warrant, which was an appropriate balancing of the probative value of the information and the unfair prejudice that could result from it. Burnett v. State, 876 So. 2d 409 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 66 (Miss. 2004).

In a burglary case, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in admitting gloves that the victim found in a closet, because the victim's testimony that she found the gloves in her closet a week after the burglary and the gloves did not belong to her, while not connecting the gloves to defendant, was sufficient to suggest it was more probable than not that a burglary had occurred. Cortez v. State, 876 So. 2d 1026 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 66 (Miss. 2004).

Circuit court did not abuse its discretion in allowing a witness to testify concerning an incident with the victim where the incident was just one more incident fitting the pattern of defendant's behavior, was not unduly prejudicial to defendant, and did not confuse the issues. Cox v. State, 849 So. 2d 1257 (Miss. 2003).

Shortly after defendant's arrest, and while sitting in the back of the patrol car, defendant was heard by one of the investigating officers to loudly remark something to the effect that defendant had shot the (expletive), and would shoot the victim again. It was certainly not reversible error to let the jury know of defendant's spontaneous statements, and defendant's alleged intoxication bore only on the probative value of the evidence. Moore v. State, 837 So. 2d 794 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in holding that prior bad acts evidence was admissible in order to show motive, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge and absence of mistake or accident, because the trial court made a finding that the probative value of the evidence outweighed any possible unfair prejudice to defendant and gave an instruction to the jury on the limited purpose for which the evidence was being allowed. Adams v. State, 851 So. 2d 366 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002), cert. denied, 849 So. 2d 899 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Evidence that defendant charged with raping a 104-year-old victim had been at the victim's home on prior occasions was not impermissible "bad act" evidence under Miss. R. Evid. 403b. Ward v. State, 821 So. 2d 894 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in admitting evidence regarding defendant's filing of a false police report showing that the gun used in the murder had previously been stolen as admission of that evidence was not unfairly prejudicial because it was not used to show defendant's character, but rather, admitted to show defendant's knowledge and the absence of mistake or accident. Montana v. State, 822 So. 2d 954 (Miss. 2002).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing the State to use the testimony of a defense witness in defendant's trial for armed robbery and taking a motor vehicle, given in a related federal case, to impeach the witness; probative value of the witness's statements outweighed the prejudice to defendant. Edwards v. State, 838 So. 2d 990 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002), cert. denied, 837 So. 2d 771 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing testimony from a forensic scientist about gunpowder residue testing to be admitted into evidence; the appellate court rejected defendant's claims that the test results were inconclusive, speculative and unfairly prejudicial to the defense in violation of Miss. Rule Evid. 403 where the expert never testified that the test established that defendant had fired a weapon. Simmons v. State, 813 So. 2d 710 (Miss. 2002).

Testimony of the murder victim's mother about a prior altercation between defendant and the victim was properly admitted as probative as to defendant's state of mind and motive; the probative value of the evidence was found to outweigh the prejudicial effect of admitting the evidence. The prejudicial effect of this testimony did not outweigh its probative value. Therefore, the evidence was properly admitted. Simmons v. State, 813 So. 2d 710 (Miss. 2002).

Evidence of the purchase price the property owner had paid for a tract of land containing pine trees that were partially destroyed by fire was admissible as the evidence was relevant to show the actual damages compared to the reasonableness of the damages sought; moreover, the property-owner failed to show how he was unfairly prejudiced by the admission of such evidence. Redhead v. Entergy Miss., Inc., 828 So. 2d 801 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

In a murder prosecution, it was not error for the court to permit the introduction into evidence of the contents of the victim's wallet, notwithstanding the contention that the probative value was substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, since (1) a police officer testified that it was the defendant who informed him of the location of the contents and actually took him to that location and, therefore, the proper foundation for admitting the evidence was laid, and (2) the contents of the wallet were probative in proving that the wallet did in fact belong to the victim. Fair v. State, 766 So. 2d 787 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

In an action for, inter alia, assault and battery arising from an incident in which the defendant detained the plaintiffs after they attempted to cross his property, it was not error for the court to permit the introduction of evidence that the defendant, who was a municipal judge, told the plaintiffs that a "nigger judge" would not be able to help them; the statement was relevant and its probative value was not substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. Whitten v. Cox, 799 So. 2d 1 (Miss. 2000).

In a prosecution for murder in which there was evidence of three confessions made by the defendant around the time of the crime, evidence of other later confessions made to police in another state was more prejudicial than probative and should have been excluded as such later confessions would permit the jury to believe that the defendant was at some time in another state under circumstances requiring his arrest. Odom v. State, 769 So. 2d 189 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Trial judge did not abuse his discretion in admitting color photographs taken prior to autopsy and showing wounds on body of deceased; although not pleasant to look at, photographs were not comparable to those described in precedent relied upon by defendant, and they served to clarify and supplement testimony and to describe the cause of victim's death. Brown v. State, 682 So. 2d 340 (Miss. 1996), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1127, 117 S. Ct. 1271, 137 L. Ed. 2d 348 (1997).

Trial court did not err in admitting photograph of burned body of murder victim for use in sentencing; photograph illustrated extent of defendant's efforts to cover his tracks, and was therefore probative on the avoidance-of-arrest aggravator. Walker v. State, 671 So. 2d 581 (Miss. 1995), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1011, 117 S. Ct. 518, 136 L. Ed. 2d 406 (1996).

There was no error in admission of photographs depicting defendant on night of murder, where photographs were used simply to support testimony of witness, and were descriptive of events that happened as testified to by witnesses. Walker v. State, 671 So. 2d 581 (Miss. 1995), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1011, 117 S. Ct. 518, 136 L. Ed. 2d 406 (1996).

There was no merit to defendant's argument that photograph of murder victim, taken while she was alive, was used to evoke sympathy. Walker v. State, 671 So. 2d 581 (Miss. 1995), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1011, 117 S. Ct. 518, 136 L. Ed. 2d 406 (1996).

Trial judge did not abuse his discretion in admitting three 4″ x 6″ color photographs of murder victim; although not pleasant to look at, photographs were not comparable to those described in case upon which defendant relied, and they served to clarify and supplement coroner's testimony and to describe the cause of victim's death. Holly v. State, 671 So. 2d 32 (Miss. 1996), cert. denied, 518 U.S. 1025, 116 S. Ct. 2565, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1082 (1996).

Photographs contain probative value when they supplement or add clarity to a witness's testimony, and when they document the cause of death and location of a victim. Gossett v. State, 660 So. 2d 1285 (Miss. 1995).

Color photographs of murder victim taken during pathologist's postmortem examination had probative value to show location, angulation, and trajectory of gunshot wounds, and probative value was not outweighed by any prejudicial effect. Hart v. State, 637 So. 2d 1329 (Miss. 1994).

Autopsy photograph of murder victim's head with the skin pulled back and the skull cap removed was properly submitted to the jury as probative of cause of death. Hurns v. State, 616 So. 2d 313 (Miss. 1993).

Although defendant did not deny victim's death, cause of death was part of the State's case-in-chief, and autopsy photograph of victim's opened skull was more probative than prejudicial, where it depicted bruising to the brain and established cause of death as a severe beating about the head, temple and ear with a blunt instrument. Alexander v. State, 610 So. 2d 320 (Miss. 1992).

Photographs of victims' charred bodies depicted them as they were upon being viewed at scene of accident by medical examiner, and thus photographs supplemented and clarified his testimony, and they were not so gruesome, hideous, and nauseating as to be inflammatory and appeal to passion and prejudice of jury. Hewlett v. State, 607 So. 2d 1097 (Miss. 1992).

Photograph of defendant taken after his arrest for vehicular manslaughter did not indicate any prior criminal activity, and therefore did not implicate rationale behind inadmissibility of mug-shot photographs. Hewlett v. State, 607 So. 2d 1097 (Miss. 1992).

Personal photographs showing 85-year-old decedent well, healthy and interacting with family shortly before his death were directly relevant to the issue of wrongful death damages, and were not unduly prejudicial. Motorola Communications & Elecs., Inc. v. Wilkerson, 555 So. 2d 713 (Miss. 1989).

Trial court erred in allowing introduction of photographs of murder victim which were so graphic and gruesome as to arouse passion and prejudice of jury; State could have shown angle and entry of bullet wound without full-color, close-up view of decomposed, maggot-infested skull, and photographs were therefore not needed in order to prove corpus delicti. McNeal v. State, 551 So. 2d 151 (Miss. 1989).

Photographs of murder victim showing fragments of her skull and brain on floor and on wall were not unduly prejudicial, and were probative of exact nature of injury and of force and violence a shotgun would cause, as opposed to a handgun. Stringer v. State, 548 So. 2d 125 (Miss. 1989).

Preservation for review.

When defendant introduced his record of prior convictions on his own initiative during direct examination, he effectively denied the trial court the opportunity to perform the appropriate balancing test under Miss. R. Evid. 609(a)(1)(B) and 403 so that it could determine whether the prior convictions constituted admissible evidence, plus when the State cross-examined defendant about his prior convictions, defense counsel failed to object; the trial judge did not abuse his discretion by allowing the State to question defendant about his prior convictions. Butler v. State, 16 So. 3d 751 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Defendant's conviction for burglary of a dwelling was proper where he argued that evidence of his drug use was inadmissible under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) or more prejudicial than probative under Miss. R. Evid. 403, but never objected to the admission of the evidence as required by Miss. R. Evid. 103. Therefore, the issue was not preserved for appellate review. Busick v. State, 906 So. 2d 846 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 2005 Miss. LEXIS 396 (Miss. June 23, 2005).

Prior accidents.

Plaintiff did not submit sufficient evidence of his own fall to enable the trial court to find that the proffered evidence of prior accidents was substantially similar under the provisions of Miss. R. Evid. 403, thus the trial court did not abuse its discretion in excluding the evidence of prior accidents. Yoste v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., — So. 2d —, 2002 Miss. LEXIS 145 (Miss. Apr. 18, 2002), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 822 So. 2d 935, 2002 Miss. LEXIS 219 (Miss. 2002).

Prior charges.

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to allow a defendant on trial for capital murder to attempt to impeach a former police detective, who had been arrested for but not convicted of bribery, with evidence of the arrest, because the arrest was irrelevant to the credibility of the detective and the acts were too far removed to be of probative value; trial court's action did not deprive defendant of his right to confront the witness. Ellis v. State, 856 So. 2d 561 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 860 So. 2d 1223 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by allowing the prosecutor to introduce into evidence four separate instances in which the girlfriend had filed domestic violence charges against defendant because the evidence was admitted to rebut defendant's allegation that the incident was an accident and as evidence of motive; the evidence was highly relevant to show motive and absence of accident. Taylor v. State, 954 So. 2d 944 (Miss. 2007).

It was not an error for the trial court to refuse to allow defendant to cross-examine the victim's estranged husband on his arrest record during defendant's murder trial because it contained only assault charges filed by the victim that had been dismissed and therefore would have been more prejudicial than probative. Brown v. State, 936 So. 2d 447 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

It was reversible error for a district attorney to offer impeachment evidence regarding a previous charge for which the defendant had been acquitted. McFarland v. State, 735 So. 2d 1007 (Miss. 1999).

Prior conviction.

In convictions including the possession of, and conspiracy to possess illegal amounts of pseudoephedrine intending to use them in an unlawful manner, evidence of defendant's prior drug-related conviction was not prejudicial under Miss. R. Evid. 403, but was properly admitted to show knowledge, intent, and motive under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b). Gales v. State, 29 So. 3d 65 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Where a co-indictee testified against defendant at his capital murder trial, the trial court violated Miss. R. Evid. 609(b) by excluding the co-indictee's prior felony convictions that were more than ten years old without conducting the balancing test under Miss. R. Evid. 403; however, this was harmless error. The trial judge allowed the co-indictee's most recent conviction for burglary and larceny to be introduced into evidence, which had more probative value than the older convictions. Spurlock v. State, 13 So. 3d 301 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 14 So. 3d 731, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 343 (Miss. 2009).

Defendant's conviction for the possession of cocaine, more then 10 grams, but less than 30 grams, was proper because the trial court correctly concluded that defendant had opened the door on his prior convictions. It was within the trial judge's discretion to allow the cross-examination regarding the prior convictions because defendant sufficiently opened the door by claiming that he did not smoke drugs. Williams v. State, 5 So. 3d 496 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 11 So. 3d 1250, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 135 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court abused its discretion in not allowing defendant to stipulate to prior convictions for armed robbery after defendant was charged with armed robbery and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon because the probative value of the prior convictions was substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice; the jury would use the prior convictions as evidence in considering Count I. Sawyer v. State, 2 So. 3d 655 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 999 So. 2d 1280, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 92 (Miss. 2009).

In an aggravated assault case, a court erred by admitting evidence of defendant's prior aggravated assault conviction because the State's argument was that defendant did not act in self-defense in the current instance because his prior conviction for assault evidenced a lack of intent to act in self-defense. That line of logic represented precisely the sort of unfair prejudice prohibited by Miss. R. Evid. 404 and Miss. R. Evid. 609. Walker v. State, — So. 2d —, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 728 (Miss. Ct. App. Oct. 11, 2005), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 936 So. 2d 424, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 550 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

While prior convictions which have been found relevant under Miss. R. Evid. 401, and which satisfy Miss. R. Evid.

404(b) may be potentially admissible to prove disposition, they may be allowed into evidence only after passing a Miss. R. Evid. 403 balancing test, which must be conducted on the record. Tate v. State, 912 So. 2d 919 (Miss. 2005).

Defendant argued that the only reason he was at the victim's house was to obtain help after his vehicle broke down; however, defendant's prior convictions for burglary and attempted burglary tended to prove, along with other facts, that defendant's intent was to burglarize the house, not to obtain help. But, the underlying facts of the six prior convictions were irrelevant to the issue of intent, and the trial court would have erred if it had admitted such evidence; thus, under Miss. R. Evid. 403 and 404, the trial court did not err in admitting defendant's prior convictions to show intent and in not introducing the particulars of each prior conviction into evidence. Jones v. State, 904 So. 2d 149 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in admitting the evidence of prior convictions for domestic abuse and evidence of other prior bad acts because the evidence was not introduced to prove the character of defendant, but to show a continuing pattern of violence against the victim which resulted in her death, going towards defendant's motive and intent. Additionally, although the evidence of prior domestic abuse convictions and other bad acts was prejudicial, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that the probative value of the evidence outweighed the possible prejudicial effect. Moses v. State, 893 So. 2d 258 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a depraved-heart murder case, as the prior bad acts evidence was introduced by defendant himself through his direct examination, any objection he may have had concerning its entry into evidence was waived. Further, defendant did not object to the admissibility of this conviction until the State cross-examined him and there was nothing unduly prejudicial with the way the prosecutor cross-examined defendant . Harris v. State, 861 So. 2d 1003 (Miss. 2003).

In a prosecution for driving under the influence (DUI) in which the jury was fully aware that the defendant was being tried for his third DUI offense, testimony as to specific incidents involving his past arrests for DUI was not substantially prejudicial to the defendant. Strickland v. State, 784 So. 2d 957 (Miss. 2001).

The admission of defendant's prior felony conviction and the trial court's failure to instruct the jury sua sponte were reversible error in violation of M.R.E. 403 and 404 and the holding in Smith v. State, 656 So. 2d 95, 99 (Miss. 1995). Jasper v. State, 759 So. 2d 1136 (Miss. 1999).

In a prosecution for aggravated assault and kidnapping arising from an incident in which the defendant went to the victim's apartment, found his fiancee there with the victim, engaged in a fight with the victim, seriously injured him, and then dumped him in a wooded area, and in which the defendant testified on direct that he did not take the victim to the hospital because he panicked when he realized that he had a felony conviction, the state was properly permitted to question the defendant as to whether he had a felony conviction and how long he was in jail for the conviction. Brown v. State, 749 So. 2d 204 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Prior incarceration.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault and kidnapping arising from an incident in which the defendant went to the victim's apartment, found his fiancee there with the victim, engaged in a fight with the victim, seriously injured him, and then dumped him in a wooded area, and in which the defendant testified on direct, as an explanation for why he acted as he did, that he had experienced only two women in his life, the state was properly permitted to question the defendant as to when he went to prison, when he got out, and how long he stayed in jail in order to determine the facts surrounding his claim of inexperience with women. Brown v. State, 749 So. 2d 204 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Prior indictments.

Trial judge did not abuse his discretion in finding that probative value of aggravated assault indictment outweighed any prejudicial effect, where judge reasoned it was the only way jury could understand defendant's previously admitted guilty plea to aggravated assault charge. Blue v. State, 674 So. 2d 1184 (Miss. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1030, 117 S. Ct. 588, 136 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1996).

Prior sexual relations.

Defendant's conviction for capital murder and arson was proper, since the trial court's exclusion of the evidence of prior sexual relations between defendant and the victim was not an abuse of discretion. Even if the instances of prior sex had been relevant, the trial court could have excluded the evidence as overly prejudicial under Miss. R. Evid. 403. Fuqua v. State, 938 So. 2d 277 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 937 So. 2d 450, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 541 (Miss. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 549 U.S. 1344, 127 S. Ct. 2037, 167 L. Ed. 2d 774, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 4043, 75 U.S.L.W. 3554 (2007).

Profane language.

In a prosecution for assault on a police officer, the court properly permitted the introduction of an audio tape made in the vehicle in which the defendant was driven to jail, in which the defendant was belligerent and uttered a stream of profanities, notwithstanding the contention that its probative value was substantially outweighed by its prejudicial effect, since it was probative, as it illustrated the defendant's continuing conduct and established his mental state from the time he was stopped by police up until the assault on the police officer. Oatis v. State, 726 So. 2d 1230 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998).

Rebuttal evidence.

In a case where defendant father and defendant adopted son were convicted of conspiracy to commit sexual battery, sexual battery, and contributing to the delinquency of a minor, because defendant son testified that he had never engaged in any sexual act with defendant father, pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 403 and 404(b), the testimony from a correctional nurse regarding a sexual act was probative and a proper subject for rebuttal. King v. State, 857 So. 2d 702 (Miss. 2003).

Defendant adopted son testified that he had never engaged in any kind of homosexual conduct with defendant father; thus, pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 404(b), evidence that he and and defendant father engaged in homosexual activities while incarcerated was admissible to impeach his testimony and the probative value of this testimony was not substantially outweighed by the dangers espoused in Miss. R. Evid. 403. Moreover, the jury was specifically instructed that it could consider the witness's testimony for the limited purpose of determining the truth and veracity of the defendant son's testimony. King v. State, 857 So. 2d 702 (Miss. 2003).

In a capital murder prosecution, evidence of the child victim's vaginal abrasions and unexplained bruising after defendant moved into her home was properly admitted to rebut his theory that the death was accidental. Kolberg v. State, 829 So. 2d 29 (Miss. 2002), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 981, 123 S. Ct. 1787, 155 L. Ed. 2d 672 (2003).

Where the defendant in a murder prosecution testified that he was a peaceful, law-abiding citizen and that he was scared of the victim and his gang, the prosecution was properly permitted to introduce evidence of the defendant's prior acts to rebut such testimony. Riddley v. State, — So. 2d —, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 541 (Miss. Ct. App. Aug. 24, 1999), affirmed by 777 So. 2d 31, 2000 Miss. LEXIS 167 (Miss. 2000).

Relationship with Miss. R. Evid. 404(b).

In a case in which defendant was convicted of capital murder and the defense had sought to exclude evidence that defendant had previously committed acts of violence against the victim's mother, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing the testimony. The court allowed the prosecution to ask questions about defendant's prior conduct, and, in his trial testimony, defendant admitted that he had taken some aggression out on the mother, including hitting her. Logan v. State, 42 So. 3d 594 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 49 So. 3d 106, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 458 (Miss. 2010).

Evidence of a sexual offense, other than the one charged, which involves a victim other than the victim of the charged offense for which an accused is on trial, if properly admitted under Miss. R. Evid.

404(b), filtered through Miss. R. Evid. 403, and accompanied by an appropriately-drafted limiting or cautionary instruction to the jury, should not be considered a per se error. Derouen v. State, 994 So. 2d 748 (Miss. 2008).

Trial court does not abuse its discretion in admitting testimony under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b), even where the judge fails to balance whether the prejudicial effect outweighed its probative value under Miss. R. Evid. 403, because, where the testimony is evidence of plan and preparation and aids in telling a complete story, the prejudicial effect, if any, is minimal; therefore, a trial court did not err by admitting evidence of other inappropriate sexual conduct of defendant in a statutory rape case. Price v. State, 898 So. 2d 641 (Miss. 2005).

Defendant's conviction for two counts of selling a controlled substance was affirmed as the trial court did not abuse its discretion by allowing an officer testify as to a prior drug sale as it went to motive and intent as required by Miss. R. Evid. 404(b), was accompanied by a limiting instruction and passed muster under Miss. R. Evid. 403. Pena v. State, 932 So. 2d 89 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Testimony that one of defendant's victims was involved in an insurance scam with defendant was properly admitted under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) because the trial court conducted an appropriate Miss. R. Evid. 403 balancing analysis, and the trial court was not obligated to give a sua sponte limiting instruction on evidence pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 404(b). Rubenstein v. State, 941 So. 2d 735 (Miss. 2006).

Sanity.

The trial court in a murder prosecution did not commit reversible error in refusing to allow the defendant to call a court-appointed psychologist to testify as to his sanity at the time of the killing where no evidence had been presented whatsoever that the defendant was not sane at the time of the killing. Winters v. State, 773 So. 2d 973 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Sexual orientation.

In a prosecution for armed robbery of a convenience store in which the defendant asserted that the store clerk concocted the robbery story in order to cover up the fact that he had taken money from the cash register in order to purchase drugs and sex, whether the store clerk was homosexual was not relevant and also was prejudicial, potentially to the clerk and more certainly to the state. Hughey v. State, 729 So. 2d 828 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998).

Suspensions.

In an action by a police officer against an insurance company for actual and punitive damages arising out of the failure to pay a claim for theft, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in excluding evidence that the officer had been suspended from his police work pending a review of a shooting incident since the evidence had a great potential to unduly prejudice the jury while having little probative value. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Grimes, 722 So. 2d 637 (Miss. 1998).

Tape recordings.

Defendant's conviction for the sale of cocaine and his enhanced 40-year sentence were both proper where the trial court's opening remarks on voir dire did not constitute reversible error and where defendant never objected at trial; further, the tape recording in question was offered to show motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, or absence of mistake or accident, and under Miss. R. Evid. 403, the tape was certainly relevant and more probative than prejudicial. Easter v. State, 878 So. 2d 10 (Miss. 2004).

Testimony.

Denial of defendant's motion for judgment of acquittal notwithstanding the verdict and, in the alternative, motion for a new trial, after he had been convicted of sexual battery was appropriate because the defense failed to make a sufficient proffer after the trial court excluded a doctor's testimony. Further, even finding that the doctor's testimony would have been relevant, the record was insufficient for the supreme court to determine whether it could have survived under the Miss. R. Evid. 403 balancing test for admissibility. Abernathy v. State, 30 So. 3d 320 (Miss. 2010).

Trial judge did not err in not allowing defendant to question arresting police officers regarding their termination from the police department because the testimony was not relevant as defendant's assertions were general in nature, and defense counsel never established with certainty why the two officers were terminated and what effect that had on defendant's case; the probative value of the testimony was substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. Betts v. State, 10 So. 3d 519 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Testimony regarding a prior incident when defendant allegedly threw a beer bottle at his victim was admissible under Miss. R. Evid. 403 because, even though the trial court did not conduct the Rule 403 balancing test after defendant objected to the admission of the incident, the failure to conduct the test did not affect defendant's rights; the probative value of the evidence was extremely significant, as it gave meaning to what would have otherwise been a random act of violence. Given the overwhelming weight of the evidence against defendant, any error in admitting the victim's testimony about the prior incident was harmless. West v. State, 969 So. 2d 147 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Male suspect's testimony about shoplifting plan related to acts and conduct that occurred during the course and in furtherance of a conspiracy at a time when the defendant, based upon the evidence and reasonable inferences drawn from the evidence, could be deemed to be a co-conspirator, and was thus not hearsay under Miss. R. Evid. 801(a)(1) or (2) and was both relevant and admissible under Miss. R. Evid. 401, 402, and 403. Wilson v. State, 967 So. 2d 32 (Miss. 2007).

In a simple assault on a law enforcement officer case, where defendant's parole officer was called to testify about what took place on the night defendant was involved in the altercation with the deputy, after the officer was called to testify and identified himself, the defense objected to the officer being identified as a parole officer; the trial judge excused the jury and heard arguments from both the prosecution and defense and determined that the officer could testify about what took place on the night defendant was involved in the altercation with the deputy because the testimony did not indicate that defendant and the officer had any relationship, and thus pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 403, the trial judge did not abuse his discretion in allowing the officer to testify. Keys v. State, 963 So. 2d 1193 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 973 So. 2d 245, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 703 (Miss. 2007).

Denial of the inmate's petition for post-conviction relief was proper where inmate was not denied any constitutional or fundamental rights when testimony of the victim's children was admitted since their testimony corroborated portions of the victim's husband's testimony, Miss. R. Evid. 403, 401; the inmate also offered no proof that defense counsel had been ineffective. Puckett v. State, 879 So. 2d 920 (Miss. 2004), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 125 S. Ct. 1638, 161 L. Ed. 2d 483 (2005).

Videotapes.

Trial court did not err in admitting a portion of a surveillance videotape that showed defendant passing a bag to an undercover agent, who examined it and passed it to a confidential informant, because while there might have been some possibility of confusion had the video been shown to the jury absent any elaboration, the agent clearly explained on both direct and cross-examination that the sale of cocaine occurred off-camera, later on the video. Watson v. State, 19 So. 3d 747 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 19 So. 3d 82, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 503 (Miss. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 130 S. Ct. 1708, 176 L. Ed. 2d 195, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 2141, 78 U.S.L.W. 3499 (U.S. 2010).

In a negligence case, a trial court abused its discretion by failing to admit a videotape of an injured party into evidence, which showed her riding roller coasters at an amusement park, because the evidence was relevant under Miss. R. Evid. 401; a reasonable juror could have concluded that it casted doubt on the severity of her injuries and her medical expenses, even though she claimed to not be seeking damages after the date of a second epidural injection. Further, the evidence was not subject to exclusion under

Miss. R. Evid. 403 because its probative value was not substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. James v. Carawan, 995 So. 2d 69 (Miss. 2008).

In defendant's trial for capital murder of his sister's husband, with the sister also charged for the same murder, a video of the appearance of the sister and her husband on a television talk show was improperly excluded under Miss. R. Evid. 403 as unfairly prejudicial because the sister and defendant were not tried together and the video was highly relevant in defendant's trial to show the sister's motive to kill her husband. Edmonds v. State, 955 So. 2d 787 (Miss. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 552 U.S. 1064, 128 S. Ct. 708, 169 L. Ed. 2d 557, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 12868, 76 U.S.L.W. 3287 (2007).

Trial court improperly admitted two-day-in-the-life videos. The first video included prejudicial photos of the decedent's wedding and the decedent's stepson, who was not a party; the second video showed the decedent's mother sobbing, and it was redundant. Eckman v. Moore, 876 So. 2d 975 (Miss. 2004).

Where defendant confessed to participating in the wife's plan to murder her husband, the circuit court erred by excluding a videotape showing the couple on a talk show discussing their tumultuous marriage; the videotape was relevant to the wife's motive to kill, and the probative value of the evidence was not substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion of the issues and misleading the jury. Edmonds v. State, — So. 2d —, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 7 (Miss. Jan. 4, 2007), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 955 So. 2d 787, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 349 (Miss. 2007).

A videotape which depicted the crime scene and the murder victims was properly admitted into evidence because (1) it accurately depicted the location of the bodies and the scene at the crime, (2) it assisted an officer and a physician with their respective testimony; (3) it identified the victims for the jury, showed the effect on the victims from the blows delivered with the baseball bats, corroborated various aspects of the defendant's confession and aided the prosecution in identifying him as the guilty party; (4) it was instrumental in helping the jury visualize the bloody crime scene, the victims' injuries and the force necessary to inflict them; (5) it showed blood smears on the wall, which created the impression that someone had attempted to clean up the crime scene, and (6) it aided the jury in determining the heinous, atrocious, and cruel nature of the crime; although photographs of the crime scene were admitted that depicted essentially the same evidence, the video's probative value still substantially outweighed any unfair prejudicial effect on the defendant. McGilberry v. State, 741 So. 2d 894 (Miss. 1999), cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1006, 120 S. Ct. 1273, 146 L. Ed. 2d 222 (2000).

The trial court erred in sua sponte excluding a color videotape which showed the state's expert performing a direct comparison test of the defendant's teeth and bite marks on the murder victim since the videotape was more useful that available still photographs and background sounds were not significant to the extent that it would have been error to exclude them or admit them; however, the error was harmless. Brewer v. State, 725 So. 2d 106 (Miss. 1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1027, 119 S. Ct. 1270, 143 L. Ed. 2d 365 (1999).

The trial court did not err by admitting into evidence a videotape of the crime scene and the victim's body, notwithstanding the grotesque nature of the videotape, because, due to a lack of still photographs (all had been overexposed) depicting the crime scene and the condition in which the victim's body was found, the probative value outweighed any prejudicial effect. Walters v. State, 720 So. 2d 856 (Miss. 1998).

Trial court did not err in admitting videotape and photographs of crime scene and murder victim's body; videotape was not cumulative and was necessary in helping jury visualize crime scene when hearing testimony regarding victim's injuries, and although photographs were subsequently admitted and revealed essentially the same evidence, the photographs were clearer than the video and also aided the jury. Blue v. State, 674 So. 2d 1184 (Miss. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1030, 117 S. Ct. 588, 136 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1996).

Videotape taken at booking of defendant charged with assaulting police officers was properly admitted for impeachment purposes; tape was not collateral or too remote in time, probative value of tape substantially outweighed its prejudicial value, and tape was relevant to credibility of defendant's brother, whose recollection of events wavered significantly. Johnson v. State, 655 So. 2d 37 (Miss. 1995).

Written documents.

In a rape and simple assault case, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in admitting letters that defendant had apparently written to the victim, because, although their introduction may have had little probative value as to the pivotal issues of the case, it seemed likewise true that there was no real prejudice to the defense in permitting the jury to discover defendant's apparently strong, perhaps even excessively strong, emotional ties to his estranged wife. Williams v. State, 868 So. 2d 346 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Chancellor did not abuse his discretion in admitting letter, written by mother, which was critical of doctor engaged to evaluate children in connection with custody dispute; prejudice from admission of letter was outweighed by letter's probative value. Bredemeier v. Jackson, 689 So. 2d 770 (Miss. 1997).

Illustrative cases.

Defendant's manslaughter conviction was proper because a witness's testimony that the victim had cursed the witness's father and that the victim had a bad temper and was overbearing was correctly deemed not admissible. The hearsay testimony was not only too remote in time to be admissible, it was also irrelevant, and its probative value was outweighed by its prejudicial effect. Booker v. State, 64 So. 3d 988 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), affirmed by 64 So. 3d 965, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 316 (Miss. 2011).

Because Miss. R. Evid. 403 does not mandate exclusion but rather provides that the evidence may be excluded and the determination of admissibility is highly discretionary, an appellate court does not conduct a de novo review of evidence under Rule 403. Logan v. State, 42 So. 3d 594 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 49 So. 3d 106, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 458 (Miss. 2010).

Trial court did not err in allowing evidence related to a homeowner's letter to her insurance company, which placed the blame of the damage to the homeowner's real and personal property upon the insurance company because the evidence was admissible under Miss. R. Evid. 801(d)(2) as an admission by party-opponent; the evidence was offered for a purpose other than to allow a carpet cleaning company to mitigate its damages, and the statement's probative value outweighed the possibility of prejudice. Wright v. Royal Carpet Servs., 29 So. 3d 109 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Finding in favor of a trucking company and truck driver in a wrongful-death action brought by the decedent's widow was proper because the trial court did not err in excluding the truck driver's driving record. The record was not relevant to the issue of the wrongful-death case and was too remote in time to have had any relevance to the case; further, the number and severity of the violations did not demonstrate a routine or practice sufficient to support the widow's arguments. Utz v. Running & Rolling Trucking, Inc., 32 So. 3d 450 (Miss. 2010).

Finding in favor of a trucking company and truck driver in a wrongful-death action brought by the decedent's widow was proper because issue of visibility, or lack thereof, of the trailer was presented to the jury for consideration. The testimony on visibility was not expressed in terms of the decedent's actual ability to see the truck on the night of the accident; however, without the decedent's testimony, which unfortunately was not possible in the case, any testimony concerning that issue was properly excluded. Utz v. Running & Rolling Trucking, Inc., 32 So. 3d 450 (Miss. 2010).

In defendant's trial on charges of sexual batttery and child fondling, the trial court did not err in permitting the State to introduce prior statements of the victim's mother in cross-examining her. Because the victim's mother testified that her daughter was lying about the abuse and because, by the time of trial, the mother had abandoned her child and resumed her residence with defendant, the mother's prior statements—including the affidavit that she signed under oath charging defendant with the child molestation of her daughter and her statement that defendant promised her that he would not touch her daughter again—were relevant and admissible. Tate v. State, 20 So. 3d 623 (Miss. 2009).

Defendants' murder convictions were appropriate because an officer's testimony about one defendant's admission was not hearsay, Miss. R. Evid. 801(d)(2)(A); extrajudicial statements by a criminal defendant, so long as the statements were relevant to the matter being tried, were admissible in evidence. Further, the probative evidence of the officer's testimony was not outweighed by its prejudice. Sneed v. State, 31 So. 3d 33 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 2010 Miss. LEXIS 150 (Miss. Mar. 25, 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 29 So. 3d 774, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 152 (Miss. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 131 S. Ct. 931, 178 L. Ed. 2d 775, 2011 U.S. LEXIS 350, 79 U.S.L.W. 3400 (U.S. 2011).

Trial court did not violate Miss. R. Evid. 613 by denying the defense's request to call defendant's girlfriend on surrebuttal after a police investigator testified as a rebuttal witness about a phone conversation she had with the girlfriend because it was very likely that the girlfriend's testimony would not have changed from her original testimony. Fraise v. State, 17 So. 3d 160 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Defendant's convictions for capital murder, aggravated assault, and conspiracy to commit aggravated assault were appropriate because counsel was not ineffective in failing to object to testimony in which the weapon used during the incident was connected to defendant since the probative value of that evidence, connecting defendant and the murder weapons, was not substantially outweighed by any prejudicial effect given the totality of the evidence. As such, trial counsel's failure to object did not constitute deficient performance. Williams v. State, 3 So. 3d 105 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court did not violate defendant's Sixth Amendment right to confrontation by excluding testimony that his victims were smoking marijuana at the time he assaulted them by limiting his ability to cross-examine one victim regarding the intoxication. The trial court properly balanced the probative and prejudicial effects of the evidence under Miss. R. Evid. 403, and found that the proposed testimony would have had no probative value because the possible testimony of marijuana usage was not linked to a propensity for violence; also, the prejudicial fact that the possible intoxication was of an illegal substance—marijuana—and not mere alcohol, further outweighed any probative effect. Rouster v. State, 981 So. 2d 314 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by admitting into evidence misdemeanor charge affidavits of the victim against defendant because the prosecutor argued that the evidence was offered to establish motive for the victim's murder, and the trial court concluded that the prejudicial effect of the testimony did not outweigh its probative value. Jones v. State, 962 So. 2d 1263 (Miss. 2007).

In a negligence case, a trial court erred by excluding a post-accident eye doctor visit from evidence, as although this was a subsequent remedial measure covered by Miss. R. Evid. 407, an exception for impeachment existed; moreover, Miss. R. Evid. 403 did not warrant the exclusion of the evidence either since a driver's credibility was paramount since he was the only person who remembered what had occurred. Alexander v. Greer, 959 So. 2d 586 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a capital murder case, the trial court did not abuse its discretion pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 401 and Miss. R. Evid. 403 in admitting .22 caliber pistol into evidence, and while the pistol was not directly connected to defendant through any forensic evidence, other evidence in the case demonstrated that it was of the same caliber as the one that killed the victim and that defendant had access to the weapon; further, the forensic scientist called by the state did not state that the pistol introduced into evidence could have been the weapon used in the victim's murder, but he was careful to note only that the weapon had the same caliber, and that both the weapon in evidence and the murder weapon lacked distinguishing characteristics that would allow a positive identification, and therefore the state's witness did not impermissibly speculate whether the pistol had been used in the crime. Ross v. State, 954 So. 2d 968 (Miss. 2007).

Where defendant was taken to a hospital after a two-car collision, the search warrant for a blood draw was invalid because: (1) the officer who requested the search warrant falsely stated in his affidavit that defendant had (a) refused to submit to an "analysis of his breath" after having been offered an opportunity to submit, and (b) been placed under arrest for driving while under the influence, although at that time he had not yet been arrested; and (2) there were no exigent circumstances present at the hospital that would have justified a blood test since defendant was not fleeing, and the officer obviously had time to secure a warrant, albeit an invalid one. As to the admissibility of defendant's statements about having consumed several beers, made to police at the scene of the accident, defendant did not claim that he was in custody at the time, and his statements clearly had probative value, thus the trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing the statements to be admitted into evidence despite the defendant's argument that he was disoriented, confused, and suffering from shock and retrograde amnesia when he made the statements and they were therefore not reliable. Shaw v. State, 938 So. 2d 853 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 937 So. 2d 450, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 602 (Miss. 2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by excluding evidence of the husband's conduct prior to and after his marriage to his wife during the husband's alienation of affection action against the wife's boyfriend because the key time frame for the action was that of the marriage, and the evidence fell outside that time frame. Fitch v. Valentine, 959 So. 2d 1012 (Miss. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 552 U.S. 1100, 128 S. Ct. 911, 169 L. Ed. 2d 730, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 127, 76 U.S.L.W. 3345 (2008).

Appellant was properly sentenced pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 99-19-81 as a habitual offender following an attempted burglary conviction pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 97-17-23 because the trial court did not err, after analyzing them under Miss. R. Evid. 403, in admitting his prior felony convictions; they were allowed by Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) as appellant's intent was greatly in issue. Carter v. State, 953 So. 2d 224 (Miss. 2007).

In a murder case, the court properly admitted evidence of an ongoing family feud between defendant's family and the victim's family because whether or not defendant was directly involved in each individual altercation, the evidence was relevant and was not so prejudicial as to constitute reversible error because the testimony had the tendency of making the action more or less probable; defendant obviously knew of the ongoing feud and had participated in several altercations with members of the victim's family. Morris v. State, 963 So. 2d 1170 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 964 So. 2d 508, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 502 (Miss. 2007).

Defendant's conviction for aggravated domestic violence against his girlfriend was appropriate because defendant's statements in which he alluded to prior domestic violence were admissible under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) to show the absence of an accident; additionally, the circuit court did not abuse its discretion when it found that the evidence was more probative then prejudicial. Fugate v. State, 951 So. 2d 604 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Trial court properly ruled that an animation that driver attempted to introduce into evidence in a trial arising out of a car accident was more prejudicial than probative, and it was irrelevant. Etheridge v. Harold Case & Co., 960 So. 2d 474 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 959 So. 2d 1051, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 383 (Miss. 2007).

It was implicit in the trial court's statements that it found evidence that defendant had not paid a customer for several loads of timber cut from his land more probative than prejudicial, and the court could not find that the trial court had abused its discretion in admitting the evidence during defendant's trial for larceny of lumber. Pollard v. State, 932 So. 2d 82 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In a former client's assault claim against his former attorney, arguably, evidence was prejudicial, however, in light of its impeachment value, the appellate court could not say that the circuit court abused its discretion in admitting the evidence. Walker v. Benz, 914 So. 2d 1262 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Defendant's convictions for kidnapping and sexual battery were proper where the handcuffs were properly admitted during trial pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 401 and 403 because they tended to lend credence to the testimony of the victim and of an investigator that defendant masqueraded as a police officer in order to carry out the crimes in question. Winding v. State, 908 So. 2d 163 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Court did not abuse its discretion in overruling defendant's objection to the prosecution's questioning of its witness because the witness, defendant's girlfriend, became hostile during questioning; questioning was not repetitive, no abusive language was used, and it was over in a matter of seconds. Questioning was not irrelevant under Miss. R. Evid. 403 because it was used to impeach the witness. Brassfield v. State, 905 So. 2d 754 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In his murder trial, defendant's defense was that he had accidentally shot his wife. Defendant's son's testimony regarding defendant's and his wife's history of domestic violence contradicted defendant's defense by showing no accident and a common scheme of physical violence; as such, there was no error in admitting the son's testimony as the value of the evidence was not substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. Marbra v. State, 904 So. 2d 1169 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Court did not err in admitting a vibrator into evidence during defendant's trial for sexual battery of a child because the prejudicial effect of admittiing the vibrator into evidence did not outweigh its probative value. Physician had testified that the vibrator was consistent with the child's injuries, and the child's mother had testified that defendant had tried to use the vibrator during sex with the mother the night before the child was injured. Renfrow v. State, 882 So. 2d 800 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a breach of contract case, evidence that a television station employee performed well before and after her termination was relevant to show continuity in the high quality of her job performance, and it was not unduly prejudicial because its weight and credibility could be thoroughly attacked on cross-examination. Morris Newspaper Corp. v. Allen, — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 981 (Miss. Ct. App. Oct. 12, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 932 So. 2d 810, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 765 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In a breach of contract case, evidence of the employee's manager's sexual and romantic conduct was relevant where a fact question existed as to the manager's level of involvement in the termination decision, the evidence of his sexual and romantic conduct was relevant to show his possible wrongful motive for firing the employee. The evidence was probative because it tended to show the manager's motive for the wrongful termination, and the main thrust of the employee's case was that she was fired for reasons other than those stated by the employer. Morris Newspaper Corp. v. Allen, — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 981 (Miss. Ct. App. Oct. 12, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 932 So. 2d 810, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 765 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Testimony that defendant threatened a witness with a gun at the scene of a murder and told him he would kill him if he talked about the crime was properly admitted under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) and 403 as it was part of the "single transaction" of the murder. Brown v. State, 890 So. 2d 901 (Miss. 2004), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 125 S. Ct. 1842, 161 L. Ed. 2d 735 (2005).

In defendant's trial for unlawfully taking possession of a motor vehicle, the trial court was acting within its discretion in finding: (1) that the knife on defendant's person had evidentiary value in helping the jury understand how defendant might have been able to start the vehicle, and (2) that its probative value was not outweighed by prejudice from the jury learning that defendant was armed with a knife. Parks v. State, 859 So. 2d 1084 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

In a wrongful death case, a court properly granted plaintiff's motion in limine regarding accidental death benefits where any reference to the accidental insurance death benefit claim was more prejudicial than probative. Eckman v. Moore, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 552 (Miss. Oct. 23, 2003), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. LEXIS 310 (Miss. Mar. 25, 2004), substituted opinion at 876 So. 2d 975, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 287 (Miss. 2004).

In a wrongful death case, a court did not abuse its discretion by excluding defendant's expert's testimony where the testimony of the expert would have been cumulative to defendant's other expert testimony. Eckman v. Moore, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 552 (Miss. Oct. 23, 2003), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. LEXIS 310 (Miss. Mar. 25, 2004), substituted opinion at 876 So. 2d 975, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 287 (Miss. 2004).

In a wrongful death case, a court did not abuse its discretion by admitting photographs of the decedent and two "day in the life" videos where the photographs were relevant to show plaintiff's loss, and the videos were relevant to proving plaintiff's case. The footage showed the type of person the decedent was prior to his injuries, the type of care decedent required subsequently, and his drastically diminished capacity to interact with his wife, child and family, among other things. Eckman v. Moore, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 552 (Miss. Oct. 23, 2003), opinion withdrawn by 2004 Miss. LEXIS 310 (Miss. Mar. 25, 2004), substituted opinion at 876 So. 2d 975, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 287 (Miss. 2004).

In a case where defendant father and defendant adopted son were convicted of conspiracy to commit sexual battery, sexual battery, and contributing to the delinquency of a minor, the evidence of pornography was admissible in toto due to the nature of the charges against defendant father, one of which was of contributing to the delinquency of a minor, and had the evidence consisted of child pornography, then Miss. R. Evid. 403 might have warranted its exclusion, but the bulk of the evidence admitted was garden variety homosexual material; thus, there was no danger that the jury would convict defendant father for molesting the victim based solely on his possession of child pornography. King v. State, 857 So. 2d 702 (Miss. 2003).

Driver successfully argued that the testimony of the injured person's proposed additional witnesses, all family members, would have been cumulative, that it was unbelievable that the injured person did not know the family members did not have discoverable knowledge until 17 days before trial, and that the injured person was allowed to testify to the injured person's alleged injuries and introduce medical evidence; reversal was not appropriate, as Miss. R. Evid. 401 and 403 were properly used by the trial court to determine that the proposed testimony was not relevant, and was cumulative. Busick v. St. John, 856 So. 2d 304 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court acted within its discretion in finding that evidence, in a medical malpractice case, that a doctor was admitted for inpatient alcohol treatment, and of subsequent incidents involving his attempted treatment of patients while under the influence of alcohol, would mislead the jury by inviting it to speculate from the doctor's subsequent acts that he had acted improperly in the plaintiff's treatment. Griffin v. McKenney, 877 So. 2d 425 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court's ruling to exclude material depicting a small child in a rearward facing passenger seat from a wrongful death lawsuit following the death of a 10-year-old child when a car air bag deployed on the ground that the material was not similar enough to the subject case was an abuse of the trial court's discretion. Palmer v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 905 So. 2d 564 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, remanded, 904 So. 2d 1077 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing the admission of a whiskey bottle into evidence in a driving while impaired trial; the court properly balanced the probative value of the bottle and its contents against the prejudicial effect; moreover, defendant was unable to show how the ruling prejudiced the defense. Watson v. State, 835 So. 2d 112 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

In a strict products liability action, the evidence supported the manufacturer's theory, and established a causal connection, that the accidental firing of the rifle was a result of a full-cocked discharge, and not an accidental bump on the headrest as alleged; for the injured person was in the cab of a compact pick-up with a loaded deer rifle, admitted to having been illegally spotlighting deer, and the rifle's safety was disengaged. Such evidence, including that the injured person smelled of alcohol, was very relevant under Miss. R. Evid. 401, and its probative value was not outweighed by unfair prejudice. Abrams v. Marlin Firearms Co., 838 So. 2d 975 (Miss. 2003).

In a murder prosecution, the trial court properly admitted testimony that defendant had stood outside the victim's home with a gun, as this was just one of several incidents that fit the pattern of defendant's behavior, was not unduly prejudicial to defendant, and did not confuse the issues. Cox v. State, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 103 (Miss. Mar. 13, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 849 So. 2d 1257, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 337 (Miss. 2003).

Defendant opened the door to questioning of defendant regarding the existence of a restraining order prohibiting defendant from having contact with a 15-year old statutory rape victim by denying contact with the victim; trial court did not err in admitting evidence regarding the order and defendant's violations thereof despite having previously ruled such evidence inadmissible. Farrish v. State, 840 So. 2d 820 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

In a prosecution for possession of more than one ounce of marijuana with the intent to distribute, evidence of defendant's prior misdemeanor conviction for possession of marijuana and witnesses' accounts of his prior marijuana sales to them were properly admitted under Miss. R. Evid. 404 and 403 to show his intent to distribute, and the trial court gave a proper limiting instruction, albeit not the one defendant requested. White v. State, 842 So. 2d 565 (Miss. 2003).

The defendant was not entitled to reversal of his conviction for armed robbery where (1) the defendant's coperpetrator testified that the defendant threatened him while they were in jail awaiting trial, (2) the defendant's objection to this testimony was sustained, and (3) the jury was instructed to disregard the statement. Hall v. State, 785 So. 2d 302 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, there was no violation of the rule where (1) the victim testified, in an uninvited and unresponsive manner, that she was one week pregnant at the time she was shot, and (2) the court then determined that the jury should be informed that the unborn child was not harmed by the gunshot so as to avoid any undue bias against the defendant. Williams v. State, 784 So. 2d 230 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

In an action for assault, battery, and false imprisonment arising from an incident in which the plaintiffs drove their pickup truck across property owned by the defendant and the defendant, who was a municipal judge, stopped the truck by firing several shots in the air and then shooting out one of the tires, it was not error for the trial court to permit testimony that the defendant told the plaintiffs they could pursue a legal claim and put it in front of the local "nigger judge," but that nothing would come of it, notwithstanding the defendant's statement that he did not use the word "nigger" and that the probative value of the evidence was substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. Whitten v. Cox, 799 So. 2d 1 (Miss. 2000).

In a prosecution for murder, the victim's girlfriend was properly permitted to testify that, on the morning of the crime, the victim told her that he was going to pick up "Jerry," the defendant, on his way to work, notwithstanding the defendant's contention that the statement was unfairly prejudicial because it implied a possible conspiracy with the victim and placed him at the scene of the crime. Bogan v. State, 754 So. 2d 1289 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

In a prosecution for a murder which occurred during a burglary, it was not an abuse of discretion for the court to permit the introduction of evidence that the defendant had a pistol in his possession two days prior to the murder, which he allegedly said he was going to use should anything go wrong during the burglary. Humphrey v. State, 759 So. 2d 368 (Miss. 2000).

In a prosecution for defrauding the state government and uttering forgery, the court improperly allowed the introduction into evidence of extensive records of forged receipts for repaired vehicles that the police seized from the defendant's house since such receipts were not the basis of the charges against the defendant and were highly prejudicial. Logan v. State, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 182 (Miss. Ct. App. Apr. 20, 1999), subst. op., 773 So. 2d 338 (Miss. 2000).

In an action arising from the failure to pay an insurance claim for theft, the trial judge did not err in disallowing evidence that the plaintiff insured had been suspended from his police work pending a review of a shooting incident, given that the evidence had a great potential to unduly prejudice the jury while having little probative value. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Grimes, 722 So. 2d 637 (Miss. 1998).

In a prosecution for embezzlement, the court erred when it refused to allow the defendant to present evidence that a third person committed the crime; the defendant was entitled to present her theory of the case and have the jury determine whether someone else could have taken the money, and any fears of confusion the trial judge may have harbored could have been resolved by giving limiting instructions to the jury. Terry v. State, 718 So. 2d 1115 (Miss. 1998).

Judge at trial for possession of illegal drugs with intent to distribute did not err in excluding evidence of judgment in civil forfeiture proceeding declaring money found in defendant's car to be nonforfeitable, since its admission into evidence would add no probative value on issue of defendant's guilt or innocence of possession with intent to distribute, and there was danger of confusing the issues or misleading the jury. Sample v. State, 643 So. 2d 524 (Miss. 1994).

Circuit court did not err in striking designation and testimony of expert witness originally hired but later withdrawn by plaintiffs in product liability action, since allowing manufacturer to call expert as a trial witness and to allude to fact that he had been retained and later dismissed by plaintiffs would be highly prejudicial. GMC v. Jackson, 636 So. 2d 310 (Miss. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 928, 115 S. Ct. 317, 130 L. Ed. 2d 279 (1994).

Probative value of undercover agent's statement, relating to defendant's offer to sell her cocaine in future at a lower price, outweighed danger of unfair prejudice, and was properly admitted in drug prosecution. Bradley v. State, 562 So. 2d 1276 (Miss. 1990).

Circuit court correctly allowed police officer to describe defendant's reenactment of murder for the jury's benefit, since reenactment was an admission and the proper predicate had been laid. Jackson v. State, 551 So. 2d 132 (Miss. 1989).

Cited in: Washington v. State, 912 So. 2d 996 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. Admissibility, in Rape Case, of Evidence that Accused Raped, or Attempted to Rape Person Other than Prosecutrix — Prior Offenses. 86 A.L.R.5th 59.

Admissibility, in rape case, of evidence that accused raped, or attempted to rape, person other than prosecutrix — offenses unspecified as to time. 88 A.L.R.5th 429.

Admissibility of computer-generated animation. 111 A.L.R.5th 529.

Admissibility in state criminal case of results of polygraph (lie detector) test — Post-Daubert cases. 10 A.L.R.6th 463.

Admissibility and Effect of Evidence or Comment on Party's Military Service or Lack Thereof. 24 A.L.R. 6th 747.

Law Reviews — Recent Trends in Mississippi Judicial Rule Making: Court Power, Judicial Recusals, and Expert Testimony, 23 Miss. C. L. Rev. 1, Fall, 2003.

Rule 404. Character evidence not admissible to prove conduct; exceptions; other crimes.

(a) Character evidence generally. Evidence of a person's character or a trait of his character is not admissible for the purpose of proving that he acted in conformity therewith on a particular occasion, except:

(1) Character of Accused. Evidence of a pertinent trait of his character offered by an accused, or by the prosecution to rebut the same;

(2) Character of Victim. Evidence of a pertinent trait of character of the victim of the crime offered by an accused, or by the prosecution to rebut the same, or evidence of a character trait of peacefulness of the victim offered by the prosecution to rebut evidence that the victim was the first aggressor;

(3) Character of Witness. Evidence of the character of a witness, as provided in Rules 607, 608, and 609.

(b) Other crimes, wrongs, or acts. Evidence of other crimes, wrongs, or acts is not admissible to prove the character of a person in order to show that he acted in conformity therewith. It may, however, be admissible for other purposes such as proof of motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, or absence of mistake or accident.

COMMENT

(a) — Character evidence may arise in three different ways: (1) when character is an issue in a case; (2) when the character of a witness is impugned for lack of veracity; and (3) when the character of a party is being used as the basis for an inference that he behaved in the instant case as he did on prior occasions.

Character is straightforwardly introduced into evidence when it is a direct issue in the case. A defamation case exemplifies when character is a direct issue. New Orleans Great Northern R. v. Frazer, 158 Miss. 407, 130 So. 493 (1930).

With regard to character evidence relating to the veracity of witnesses, Rule 404 refers one to Rules 607, 608, and 609.

The difficulty surrounding character evidence is with regard to its inferential use. When a party attempts to prove that a person has a certain character trait and that he acted in accordance with it, the court will exclude the testimony. To do otherwise is to prejudice the person, to render him in the eyes of jurors liable, not because of what he did or did not do in the instant case, but because of what he has done or failed to do in the past. Floyd v. State, 166 Miss. 15, 148 So. 226 (1933); Eubanks v. State, 419 So.2d 1330 (Miss. 1972); Riley v. State, 254 Miss. 86, 180 So.2d 321 (1965). This particular kind of circumstantial evidence most often appears in criminal cases. The general rule serves as a bar to the introduction of the inferential evidence. U.S. v. Cochran, 546 F.2d 27 (5th Cir. 1977); Davis v. State, 431 So.2d 468 (Miss. 1983).

Ordinarily a victim's character is irrelevant. The fact that a "bad" man rather than a "good" man was murdered or beaten is inconsequential. Spivey v. State, 58 Miss. 858 (1881). Under specific circumstances, however, the character of a victim may be relevant. This would most likely arise in instances where the defendant claims that the victim was the initial aggressor and that the defendant's actions were in the nature of self-defense. In order to prove this the defendant must offer evidence of an overt act perpetrated against him by the victim. Freeman v. State, 204 So.2d 842 (Miss. 1967). Having proved the act, the defendant may then offer proof of the victim's character. Shinall v. State, 199 So.2d 251 (Miss. 1967), cert. denied 389 U.S. 1014 [88 S. Ct. 590, 19 L.Ed.2d 660] (1967), outlined the permissible exceptions which would still be applicable under this rule. The recognized exceptions are: "(A) when, from the circumstances of the case, it is a part of the res gestae; . . . (B) where the evidence of the homicide is wholly circumstantial . . .; (C) where it is doubtful as to who the aggressor was at the time of the homicide . . .; or (D) where the immediate circumstances of the killing render it doubtful as to whether or not the act was justifiable."

(b) — Against the general prohibition of producing evidence of prior offenses or actions to show that the party acted in conformity with past behavior, is posited a list of exceptions. These past acts introduced into evidence may be ones for which the person in question was either convicted or not convicted. All of the exceptions in Rule 404(b) have been recognized and applied on numerous occasions by the Mississippi Supreme Court. Evidence of another crime, for instance, is admissible where the offense in the instant case and in the past offense are so inter-connected as to be considered part of the same transaction. Neal v. State, 451 So.2d 743 (Miss. 1984). The court has consistently recognized that evidence of a prior crime or act may be admitted to show identity, knowledge, intent, or motive. Carter v. State, 450 So.2d 67 (Miss. 1984).

It should be noted that the exceptions listed in Subsection (b) are not exclusive.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Bad acts.
Bias and veracity.
Cautionary instructions.
Character of victim.
Confession.
Construction.
Drug offenses.
Drug transactions.
Failure to consider Miss. R. Evid. 403.
Flight or escape.
Gang affiliation.
Harmless error.
Identity.
Intent.
Intimidation of witnesses.
Knowledge.
Limiting instruction.
Motive.
Negating claim of accident or mistake.
Other crimes.
Preservation for review.
Prior arrest.
Prior assault.
Prior drug sales.
Prior drug use.
Prior sexual offenses.
Prior similar convictions.
Prior violence.
Rebuttal of assertions of good character.
Remoteness.
Series of transactions.
Sex offenses.
Subsequent conduct.
Videotapes.

Illustrative cases.

In general.

Trial court erred in admitting evidence of defendant's escape into defendant's trial for murder; however, this error was harmless because the evidence of flight paled in comparison to more direct evidence of guilt. Shaw v. State, 915 So. 2d 442 (Miss. 2005).

While prior convictions which have been found relevant under Miss. R. Evid. 401, and which satisfy Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) may be potentially admissible to prove disposition, they may be allowed into evidence only after passing a Miss. R. Evid. 403 balancing test, which must be conducted on the record. Tate v. State, 912 So. 2d 919 (Miss. 2005).

In a capital murder case, a trial court did not err by failing to determine whether or not prior bad acts evidence was admissible by conducting a balancing test to determine if the probative value was outweighed by the prejudicial effect because the State never sought to introduce the evidence at trial. Le v. State, 913 So. 2d 913 (Miss. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 546 U.S. 1004, 126 S. Ct. 622, 163 L. Ed. 2d 508, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 8254, 74 U.S.L.W. 3288 (2005).

Trial court did not err in admitting evidence that defendant planned an attempted robbery at another restaurant; the trial judge properly followed the required procedure, found that the evidence was more probative than prejudicial, and instructed the jury not to consider the testimony as a substitute for proof that defendant committed the robbery. Powell v. State, 878 So. 2d 144 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

Court rejected defendant's contention that the State violated Miss. R. Evid. 404(b) in asking the girlfriend whether defendant had coerced her to lie on the stand; given the change in the girlfriend's testimony from what she said in a previous statement, the State was permitted to present evidence under Miss. R. Evid. 616, and the question was not so inflammatory as to have constituted prosecutorial misconduct. Pipkins v. State, 878 So. 2d 119 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

